This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at `http://books.google.com/`

I. NATURE AND ESSENTIALS.

IN GENERAL, § 1.
PROPERTY WHICH MAY BE SOLD, § 2.
RIGHT TO HAVE PROPERTY RENTED, INSTEAD OF SOLD, § 3.
INJUNCTION AGAINST SALE, § 4.

[a] (U. S. 1881) A sale under a decree of court is judicial.—Chew v. Hyman (C. C.) 7 Fed. 7.

[b] (Ga. 1871) A sale under an agreement of the parties, which is made the judgment of the court, is not a judicial sale.—Doyle v. Trustees of African Methodist Church, 43 Ga. 400.

[c] (N. Y. 1877) A conveyance by a religious corporation in pursuance of an order of court, obtained on its application, is not a judicial sale.—Christie v. Gage, 71 N. Y. 189.

[d] (Pa. 1850) A sale of lands under a decree of the orphans' court is a judicial sale.—Moore v. Shultz, 13 Pa. (1 Harris) 98, 53 Am. Dec. 446; Vandever v. Baker, 13 Pa. (1 Harris) 121.

[e] (Va. 1885) A sale by a debtor in his own name is not a judicial sale, though bonds for the purchase money were made payable to commissioners appointed to make sale of the property, and the sale was approved by the court.—Ware v. Starkey, 80 Va. 191.

§ 2. Property which may be sold.

[a] (Ala. 1848) A bond in the penal sum of $10,000, by which A. bound himself, on condition that B. would establish the claim of A. to a right of entry under the pre-emption laws of the United States, and pay to the United States the purchase money thereof, to deliver to B., his heirs and assigns, a good and sufficient deed of all his right and title to one-half of said lands, does not transfer such an estate or interest in land to B., though he had performed his part of the condition of the bond, as can be sold by order of the orphans' court, at the instance of his representatives, so as to vest in the purchaser the title of D., or to enable the commissioners appointed by the orphans' court to assign the bond to the purchaser.—Brown v. Chambers, 12 Ala. 697.

[b] (Ky. 1893) A sale of a defeasible fee in proceedings instituted by the holder of such title and her husband, conforming to the requirements of Gen. St. c. 63, art. 6, is valid.—Newman v. Ecton, 21 S. W. 526.

[c] (Va. 1835) It is a general rule that a court of equity ought not to decree a sale of an equitable title in land; but, if a decree for sale of the land be proper, it should first direct the legal title to be perfected, and then decree a sale of that.—Goare v. Beuhring, 6 Leigh, 585.

[d] (Va. 1889) The sale, to satisfy certain liens, of defendant's undivided interest in land before it was partitioned, is not erroneous, where no objection thereto is offered either at the sale or at the time the decree was entered, and nothing appears indicating that defendant was prejudiced thereby.—Thomas v. Farmers' Nat. Bank, 86 Va. 291, 9 S. E. 1122.

Ordering property to be rented pending sale, see post, § 5 [a].
Right of officer to rent property pending sale, see post, § 20 [e].
Setting aside decree to rent property and ordering sale thereof, see post, § 5 [f].

[a] In order to justify the sale of land to pay judgment liens, it should appear affirmatively that the rents and profits would not discharge the liens in five years.
—(Va. 1883) Muse v. Friedenwald, 77 Va. 57; (W. Va. 1867) Conaway v. Odbert, 2 W. Va. 25.

[b] (W. Va. 1877) Under the rule that a judicial sale should not be ordered, if the rents and profits of the land will satisfy the liens charged against it in a reasonable time, the question of what is a reasonable time is a matter of discretion with the court.—Rose v. Brown, 11 W. Va. 122.

Digitized by Google

[c] (Va. 1894) Where there is no allegation in a bill that the rents for property will not discharge the liens against it in five years, and no evidence upon this question, there can be no decree for its sale.—Etter v. Scott, 90 Va. 762, 19 S. E. 776.

[d] (W. Va. 1869) It is error to order the sale of land to satisfy a judgment, when there is a junior trust deed of the premises, without ascertaining whether the rents and profits would be sufficient to pay the judgment within five years, if there are no averments in the pleadings touching the question, and no proof that the rents would not be sufficient.—Coal River Nav. Co. v. Webb, 3 W. Va. 438.

[e] (W. Va. 1877) Under the law, to have the real estate rented, rather than sold, is a privilege accorded to the debtor and others interested, and they must exercise it in the inferior court; and the decree must show that they asked a rental of the property, and it was refused, before the decree for that reason will be reviewed in the appellate court.—Rose v. Brown, 11 W. Va. 122.

[f] (W. Va. 1877) The discretion resting in a court to determine whether the rents and profits of the land sought to be sold will satisfy the liens charged against it in a reasonable time is not an arbitrary one, but a sound one, to be exercised in the interest of justice and prudence toward all the parties interested.—Rose v. Brown, 11 W. Va. 122.

[g] (W. Va. 1877) The court of appeals will not reverse a decree for a sale of lands to discharge judgment liens, on the ground that the liens might have been discharged by the rents and profits within five years, unless it appears that the court below was asked to determine this, and that it erred in the exercise of this discretion.—Rose v. Brown, 11 W. Va. 122.

[h] (W. Va. 1882) Where a creditors' bill is filed to subject the land of the debtor to the satisfaction of the judgments, his right to demand that the land be rented, rather than sold, cannot be asserted for the first time in the supreme court upon appeal. The demand must be made in the first instance to the inferior court, and the exercise of the discretion of that court will be reviewed only in case of its abuse.—Hill v. Morehead, 20 W. Va. 429.

Injunction against resale, see post, § 53.

Value of property as affecting jurisdiction on appeal in proceedings to enjoin sale, see "Appeal and Error," vol. 2, cc. 906, 907, § 212.

[a] (Ill. 1848) The circuit court, sitting as a court of chancery, may restrain by injunction a special commissioner in chancery from executing a decree of sale.—People v. Gilmer, 10 Ill. (5 Gilman) 242.

[b] (N. Y. 1815) A sale by a master under a decree, after an order staying the sale, but without notice of the order, is regular, and will carry a valid title to a bona fide purchaser.—Monell v. Lawrence, 12 Johns. 521.

[c] (Tenn. 1871) A purchase made pending an injunction upon the sale is void against the complainant's interest, but valid as to the vendor.—Greenwald v. Roberts, 51 Tenn. (4 Heisk.) 494.

[d] (Tex. 1885) Where by an order of sale the sheriff is to sell certain specific property, an injunction suspends the operation of process until the questions raised by the action in which it was issued are determined.—Seligson v. Collins, 64 Tex. 314.

[e] (Va. 1889) Equity will not stay the sale of land under a decree on a petition by the judgment debtor alleging that one H. had taken possession of a portion of the land, and that an action of unlawful detainer was pending concerning it, and that such possession would cause the sale to be made at a sacrifice, where the suit seems to be a mere contrivance for delay; the petition also alleging that the debtor was in a position to effect a desirable private sale, in spite of the possession of H.—Brown v. Lawson, 86 Va. 284, 9 S. E. 1014.

[f] (Va. 1891) In a suit to enjoin a sale of land under a decree, a contention that there is a defect in the title will not be considered, where the original case was fully investigated by a referee, and his report confirmed by the circuit court, and an appeal to the supreme court dismissed.—Hudson v. Yost, 88 Va. 347, 13 S. E. 436.

[g] (W. Va. 1869) That land is about to be sold at forced sale for cash at a time when money is scarce, and at a season when the inclemency of the weather would cause loss, is not ground for enjoining the sale.—Caperton v. Landcraft, 3 W. Va. 540.

II. JUDGMENT, ORDER, OR DECREE.

IN GENERAL, § 5.
POWER TO ORDER OR DECREE SALE, § 6.
—— TO RECALL ORDER, § 7.
INTERLOCUTORY ORDER, § 8.
FORM, REQUISITES, AND VALIDITY, § 9.
—— CONFORMITY TO PLEADINGS, § 10.
DETERMINATION OF DEBTS AND LIENS AND PRIORITIES THEREOF, § 11.
DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY TO BE SOLD, § 12.
COLLATERAL ATTACK ON JUDGMENT OR DECREE, § 13.

Appealability of decree ordering sale, see "Appeal and Error," vol. 2, c. 1366, § 786 [g].

Appeal and review, see "Appeal and Error," vol. 2, c. 1095, § 445; cc. 1129, 1130, § 479; c. 2655, § 2257 [m]; vol. 3, c. 1273, § 3556½.

Liability of sureties on appeal bond for rents, see "Appeal and Error," vol. 3, cc. 2749, 2750, § 4767.

Orders for sale under attachment, see "Attachment," vol. 5, cc. 917, 918, § 743.

Sufficiency of assignment of error on appeal from decree ordering sale, see "Appeal and Error," vol. 3, c. 899, § 3074 [s].

[a] (Iowa, 1879) Where a judicial sale of farm lands is to be made, and the season is too far advanced to give sufficient time to advertise and sell them to advantage in the present spring, the court may order them to be leased for the cropping season of the current year, and the rent to be applied to payment of the debts.—Roe v. Wilmot, 51 Iowa, 689, 2 N. W. 539.

[b] (Ky. 1866) An order for the sale of real estate before the requisite affidavit is filed is premature and illegal.—Anderson v. Sutton, 63 Ky. (2 Duv.) 480.

[c] (Ky. 1887) Under Civ. Code, § 696, providing that every sale under an order of court must be public, and shall be made after such notice of time, place, and terms of sale as the order may direct, held, that a judgment directing a commissioner, before making sale, "to post notices of the time, place, and terms of sale, as sheriffs are required to do before selling land under execution," is sufficient; the duties of the sheriff in selling land under execution being specifically prescribed by statute.—Barnes v. Jackson's Adm'r, 85 Ky. 407, 3 S. W. 601.

[cc] (Ky. 1888) By Act April 9, 1878 (Gen. St. p. 972), before land is sold under any order or judgment, a valuation shall be made in writing, and, if the sale does not bring two-thirds of the valuation, defendant may redeem within a year, during which time he may remain in possession. A judgment of sale provided that the purchaser should be immediately put in possession. Held, that the judgment was improper.—Graves v. Long Ass'n, 87 Ky. 441, 9 S. W. 297.

[d] (Md. 1825) In the case of a decree against two joint and several obligors and for the sale of their land to satisfy the decree, it should direct a sale of sufficient of the land of each to satisfy one-half of the decree, if practicable, with power to sell sufficient afterwards to make up any deficiency, or to sell the whole in the first instance, if it appears to be absolutely necessary.—Hoye v. Penn, 1 Bland, 28.

[e] (Miss. 1896) In a suit to subject land conveyed by a debtor with intent to defraud his creditors to the payment of such creditors' claim, a decree ordering a sale of the land by the commissioner, and providing that the purchaser be put in possession on sale, instead of after confirmation of the sale by the court, is erroneous.—Adler v. Meyer, 73 Miss. 863, 19 South. 893.

[f] (Va. 1887) In proceedings to subject land to the payment of judgment liens a decree was entered directing the land to be rented; but subsequently, it appearing that the rents would be inadequate to pay all the judgment liens in five years, the decree was set aside, and an order of sale entered in its stead. Held no error.—Kennerly v. Swartz, 83 Va. 704, 3 S. E. 348.

[g] (W. Va. 1879) It is not proper, in a decree of sale of land, to direct that such sale shall be made "on some day fixed by law for judicial sales"; there being no such days fixed by law. But perhaps this may not be fatal to the decree.—McClaskey v. O'Brien, 16 W. Va. 791.

[h] (W. Va. 1886) Where, in a suit to sell a debtor's land, it appears that one of the tracts of land charged with the liens of the several judgments against such debtor is also charged with a specific lien exceeding in amount the value thereof, having priority over all other liens thereon, the court may properly decree the sale of other lands of the debtor, without decreeing a sale of the tract charged with such specific lien.—McCleary v. Grantham, 29 W. Va. 301, 11 S. E. 949.

[i] (W. Va. 1895) It was not error that a decree of sale omitted to provide for a sale on a court day.—Long v. Perine, 41 W. Va. 314, 23 S. E. 611.

[j] (Wis. 1854) A court of equity may decree a sale of lands without the intervention of a commissioner to decide upon the best method of selling, provided they have obtained the required information from other sources.—Tallman v. Truesdell, 3 Wis. 443.

[a] (Conn. 1891) Gen. St. § 1307, which provides that "courts of equitable jurisdiction may, upon complaint of any person interested, order the sale of any estate owned by two or more persons when in the opinion of the court a sale will better promote the interests of the owners," does not authorize courts to order the sale of property owned solely by a defendant for the purpose of paying a debt due from him to the plaintiff.—Vail v. Hammond, 60 Conn. 374, 22 Atl. 954, 25 Am. St. Rep. 330.

[b] (N. Y. 1824) The court of chancery has power to sell the subject of litigation, though no sale is prayed in the bill, whenever a sale becomes necessary to preserve the interests of the parties.—Crane v. Ford, Hopk. Ch. 114.

[c] (Pa. 1838) Want of jurisdiction of the orphans' court to order a sale of real estate must be established to invalidate the sale.—Gallaher v. Collins, 7 Watts, 552.

[d] (S. C. 1845) Chancery has power to order a sale of the fee simple of land against the will of a party interested.—Baker v. Baker, 1 Rich. Eq. 392.

Failure to describe all the property ordered to be sold as ground for recalling order, see post, § 12 [d].

Vacating or setting aside, see "Judgments," vol. 30, cc. 895–1038, §§ 664–763.

[a] (Neb. 1896) The district court may recall an order of sale issued under a decree in a case still on the docket, in term time, without notice, and set aside an appraisement of property made thereunder.—Beatrice Paper Co. v. Beloit Iron Works, 46 Neb. 900, 65 N. W. 1059.

Decree in equity for sale, whether final or interlocutory, see "Equity," vol. 19, cc. 1508–1511, § 947.

[a] (Md. 1869) Under Code, art. 16, § 129, providing that where a suit is instituted for the sale of real or personal property, or where from the nature of the case a sale is the proper mode of relief, the court may order a sale of the property before final decree, if satisfied by proof at the final hearing that a sale will be ordered, when a case comes within the provisions of the section, the power is conferred on the court, upon satisfactory proof as therein prescribed, to pass an order of sale at any time after the bill has been filed, without waiting for the appearance or answers of the defendants.—Dorsey v. Garey, 30 Md. 489; Dorsey v. Dorsey, Id. 522, 96 Am. Dec. 633.

[b] (Md. 1872) The power to order a sale of real or personal property before final decree, conferred upon courts of equity by Code, art. 16, § 129, is one of an extraordinary character, and should never be exercised except in very plain and unexceptional cases. It should appear beyond reasonable doubt, either by proof or from the very nature of the case itself, that a sale must inevitably be decreed on final hearing, to justify the passing of the interlocutory order, especially if applied for by the complainant only, and before the appearance and answer of the defendants, who may be affected by the sale.—Cornell v. McCann, 37 Md. 89.

[c] (Va. 1855) In an interlocutory decree in a proceeding for the sale of real estate, it is not necessary to decree security from the plaintiff for performing the future orders and decrees of the court. It is sufficient, if done in the final decree.—Brockenbrough v. James River & K. Co., 1 Pat. & H. 94.

Propriety of judgment ordering purchaser to be put into immediate possession, see post, § 5 [cc].

Report of officer as curing defect in judgment, see post, § 57 [a].

Rights of purchaser under sale based on erroneous, defective, or invalid decree, see post, § 105.

[a] (Ind.) A judgment, valid upon its face, is prima facie sufficient to support a judicial sale.—(1881) Woolen v. Rockafeller, 81 Ind. 208. CONTRA, see (1866) Glidewell v. Spaugh, 26 Ind. 319.

[b] (Iowa, 1894) The fact that pending a suit to subject land to the payment of a judgment the judgment is satisfied of record does not deprive the court of further jurisdiction, so as to render a decree of sale void.—Oliver v. Riley, 92 Iowa, 23, 60 N. W. 180.

[c] (Neb. 1890) In the decree divorcing E. from her husband there was a provision conveying certain land possessed by him to her. Afterwards the decree was modified, and an order made for permanent alimony, and thereafter the husband conveyed the land to a third person. E. sued to have said conveyance declared fraudulent and void. Service was had by publication. There was no appearance by the third person, and a decree was rendered setting the conveyance aside, and the land was ordered sold to satisfy E.'s lien for alimony. There was no attempt to modify this decree. The sale was made and confirmed, and a deed ordered and made. Held, that the purchaser acquired title.—Reno v. Hale, 28 Neb. 646, 44 N. W. 996.

[d] (N. C. 1836) A justice's trial docket, with a memorandum of "order of sale" subscribed, is not such a judgment as will authorize a sale of land and pass a good title to the purchaser. —Ingram v. Kirby, 19 N. C. 21.

[e] (N. C. 1889) The statute requiring an order of sale to be signed by the clerk is only directory, and an order wanting his signature is valid.—Spencer v. Credle, 102 N. C. 68, 8 S. E. 901.

[f] (S. C. 1893) A decree in equity for the sale of land need not explicitly direct the execution of a conveyance by the master, as a direction to sell the land, and to take a bond and mortgage from the purchaser for part of the selling price, implies the duty of conveying. —Peake v. Young, 40 S. C. 41, 18 S. E. 237.

[g] (Tenn. 1858) Where the court possesses jurisdiction of the subject-matter and of the parties in proceedings for a judicial sale of property, its decree cannot be held void as to a purchaser at such sale.—Winchester v. Winchester, 88 Tenn. (1 Head) 460.

[a] (Tenn. 1890) A sale of real estate barring the equity of redemption cannot be decreed when the bill contains no application to bar redemption.—Turner v. Argo, 89 Tenn. 443, 14 S. W. 930.

Right to have liens and incumbrances discharged out of purchase money, see post, § 93.

—(Va. 1874) Moran v. Brent, 25 Grat. 104; (1884) Effinger v. Kenney, 79 Va. 551; (1887) Adkins v. Edwards, 83 Va. 300, 2 S. E. 435; (W. Va. 1876) White v. Drew, 9 W. Va. 695; (1877) Wiley v. Mahood, 10 W. Va. 206; (1878) Scott v. Ludington, 14 W. Va. 387; (1881) Beard v. Arbuckle, 19 W. Va. 135.

[b] (Ala. 1887) A decree ordering the register to ascertain amount due plaintiffs on a note, and at same time directing that, upon failure to pay amount so ascertained, defendants' land shall be sold therefor, will not be reversed, as having prematurely ordered a sale before amount due had been ascertained, where it appears that, after the report of the register, another decree was made, ordering the register to sell the land as directed in the former decree.—Simmons v. Jones, 84 Ala. 354, 3 South. 895.

[c] (Ga. 1873) Where there are conflicting claims to property, and the equities of the respective parties necessarily depend upon the facts which may be proven on the trial, it is right and proper that the same should be definitely settled by the decree of the court before the property is sold, so that it may bring its full value, and that the purchaser may know what he purchases at the sale.—Hall v. English, 47 Ga. 511.

[d] (Tenn. 1858) Where a reference has been made to state an account between the parties, it is error to order a sale of the debtor's property before the return of the referee's report. —Lewis v. Baker, 38 Tenn. (1 Head) 385.

[e] (Tenn. 1858) When it becomes necessary to order a sale of land to pay a debt, the exact amount due must be ascertained and stated in the decree, and a reasonable time given the defendant to pay the amount into the office of the master.—Lewis v. Baker, 38 Tenn. (1 Head) 385.

[f] (Va. 1887) Where a resale of property is ordered because of the purchaser's failure to comply with his bid, it is no objection that no account of liens on the property is taken before the order of resale, since such question was waived by the first sale, and the second sale was simply an enforcement of the first.— Redd v. Dyer, 83 Va. 331, 2 S. E. 283, 5 Am. St. Rep. 272.

[g] (W. Va. 1876) A debtor, part of whose lands are sold under a decree with his consent, has no right to object that the liens and priorities on each parcel of the land were not determined by the commissioner as directed by the decree.—White v. Drew, 9 W. Va. 695.

[h] (W. Va. 1876) It being necessary to sell all of one's lands to meet his debts, he is not prejudiced by the manner in which the debts and liens have been stated by the commissioners to whom the cause has been referred.— White v. Drew, 9 W. Va. 695.

[i] (W. Va. 1880) While the general rule requires that, when the court directs the sale of real property, it shall first ascertain the amounts of the lien debts and their respective priorities, and give a day for payment in the decree, still parties to the cause may waive compliance therewith, and cannot afterwards complain of that omission in the decree.—Parsons v. Thornburg, 17 W. Va. 356.

[j] (W. Va. 1884) A judicial sale of land cannot be decreed, without the amounts and priorities of the liens being definitely fixed, and, although so fixed before an original sale, a resale should not be ordered without determining the amounts and priorities of other liens not embraced in the prior determination.—Payne v. Webb, 23 W. Va. 558.

[jj] (W. Va. 1886) Where, in a suit to sell a debtor's land, there has been a commissioner's report, showing the lands owned by the debtor, the nature and priorities of the liens thereon, which has been confirmed, and there is entered a decree that "the lands of said debtor, in said report named, shall all be severally sold to pay the liens on the same in the order of their priority, as set out in said report," without any further statement specifying the sums to be paid to the several creditors, the parcels of land on which they are chargeable, and the order of priority in which the proceeds of the sales of the several parcels of land shall be applied, such decree is erroneous, and will be reversed, unless, from the commissioner's report, and the face of the decree, it can be safely amended, in which case it will be so amended in the appellate court, and, when so amended, will be affirmed.—McCleary v. Grantham, 29 W. Va. 301, 11 S. E. 949.

[k] (W. Va. 1891) A decree which simply confirms a commissioner's report of debts, and directs a sale of lands therefor in default of payment, though that report specifies the debts and priorities, is erroneous, because the decree does not itself adjudicate and declare what debts are to be paid, and fix their order and priority as to the lands to be sold therefor.—Hull's Adm'r v. Hull's Heirs, 13 S. E. 49, 35 W. Va. 155, 29 Am. St. Rep. 800; Dudley v. Same, Id.

[l] (W. Va. 1893) Under Code, c. 139, § 7, which provides that, before the judicial sale of real estate is decreed, all lienholders shall be convened, and the priorities of their liens ascertained, it is error to decree such sale where there is an outstanding and undetermined claim, unless some good reason is expressly given or plainly appears.—Lough v. Michael, 37 W. Va. 679, 17 S. E. 181; Id., 17 S. E. 470.

Effect of confirmation as curing error of description in decree, see post, § 66 [e].

Sufficiency of description of property in notice or advertisement of sale, see post, § 27.

[a] (Cal. 1854) Where a decree of sale refers to and describes a lease, and directs the leasehold interest to be sold, the nature of the interest to be sold is sufficiently ascertained.—Gaskill v. Moore, 4 Cal. 233.

[b] (Iowa, 1893) Where the petition in an action to set aside a fraudulent conveyance, and subject the land to a judgment rendered in an action aided by attachment of the land, misdescribes the land, though it states the facts of the attachment and judgment ordering a sale, and the sheriff's return to the writ of attachment and the incumbrance book contain a correct description, a decree subjecting the land, which follows the erroneous description in the petition, does not affect the title to the land, nor warrant a sale.—Boggs v. Douglass, 89 Iowa, 150, 56 N. W. 412.

[c] (Ky. 1877) A judgment directing a sale of land should be so certain and specific in the description of the land, as well as in the duties to be performed by the court's officer, as to enable the latter to perform such duties without reference to or inspection of any other paper or pleading in the cause.—Ross v. Adams, 76 Ky. (13 Bush) 370.

[d] (Neb. 1896) The fact that all the property made liable by a decree is not described in the order of sale issued thereunder is sufficient reason for the district court to recall the order and set aside the appraisement.—Beatrice Paper Co. v. Beloit Iron Works, 46 Neb. 900, 65 N. W. 1059.

[e] (Tex. 1881) An order for the sale of land spoke of the land as in a different county from what it really was, but the mistake did not render it impossible to ascertain its locality through the description given. Held, that the order was not void.—Lindsay v. Jaffray, 55 Tex. 626.

Collateral attack on sale, see post, § 89.

Requisites and validity of judgment or decree in general, see ante, §§ 9, 10.

[a] (U. S. 1883) After the lapse of more than 10 years a judgment of a probate court, where the record shows jurisdiction, will not, in an action to rescind a judicial sale made thereunder, be treated as a nullity.—Boyd v. Wyley (C. C.) 18 Fed. 355.

[b] (U. S. 1883) A purchaser at judicial sale, in Louisiana, need not look beyond the jurisdiction and decree of the court ordering the sale. The truth of the record concerning matters within its jurisdiction cannot be disputed collaterally.—Boyd v. Wyley (C. C.) 18 Fed. 355.

[c] (Ala. 1875) A decree ordering the sale of the defendant's lands, under Rev. Code, §§ 2224, 2225, rendered by a court having jurisdiction of the parties and the subject-matter, cannot be avoided, except on direct attack on appeal, because of irregularities in determining that certain depositions as to the necessity of the sale were taken as to chancery proceedings, or that they proved the necessity of the sale.—Bland v. Bowie, 53 Ala. 152.

[e] (Ky. 1893) A judgment in proceedings against nonresidents for the sale of land cannot be collaterally attacked on the ground that there was no affidavit for the warning order, where the record shows that the warning order was made.—Sears' Heirs v. Sears' Heirs, 95 Ky. 173, 25 S. W. 600.

[f] (N. Y. 1847) Where a purchaser at a master's sale under a decree is himself a party to the suit in which the decree was entered, he cannot in a collateral proceeding raise a question as to the regularity of the decree; but if the decree is irregular, so that such purchaser will not get a good title to the premises purchased by him, his remedy is to apply to the court directly to set aside the decree on that ground.—Concklin v. Hall, 2 Barb. Ch. 136.

[g] (N. C. 1888) A judgment in a special proceeding for the sale of land cannot be attacked for fraud in a collateral action, but only in an independent action to set it aside.—Spivey v. Harrell, 101 N. C. 48, 7 S. E. 693.

[h] (W. Va. 1876) A decree for sale of lands, and an order confirming such sale, made without jurisdiction, may be treated as nullities, even in a collateral proceeding.—Camden v. Haymond, 9 W. Va. 680.

[a] (Md. 1827) The court of chancery may appoint an agent or trustee to make a sale under its decree.—In re Gibson, 1 Bland, 138, 17 Am. Dec. 257.

[b] (Ohio, 1861) Under Code, §§ 611, 612, the court of common pleas has authority to appoint master commissioners, who by section 395 can convey real estate. By Swan & C. St. pp. 383, 384, § 23, it is provided that all laws granting powers to courts and judges thereof under the former constitution, not inconsistent with the Code of Civil Procedure, shall remain in full force. Held that, as sales by special commissioners had been held legal prior to the adoption of the Code, a special master can be appointed to sell and convey real estate after adoption of the Code.—Wick v. Mayer, 2 Ohio Dec. 579.

[a] (La. 1893) Under Code Prac. art. 130, which provides that all judges possess the powers necessary for the exercise of their respective jurisdictions, though the same be not expressly given by law, and under Rev. Civ. Code, art. 21, which provides that, in all civil matters where there is no express law, the judge must proceed equitably, and an appeal is to be made to natural law and reason or received usage, where an auctioneer who has been appointed to make a judicial sale has made the adjudication, and executed his procès verbal of sale, and has died before passing the act of sale, the court may appoint a new auctioneer to complete the execution of its decree.—Covas v. Bertoulin, 45 La. Ann. 160, 11 South. 874.

Sale by attorney obtaining judgment, in connection with inadequacy of price, as justifying setting aside sale, see post, § 78 [k].

[a] (Md. 1827) A female or other competent person may be appointed trustee to make sale under a chancery decree, on the recommendation of the parties in interest; but a person under disability, or a nonresident, will not be appointed, or one whose interest or office is incompatible with the trust.—In re Gibson, 1 Bland, 138, 17 Am. Dec. 257.

[b] (N. Y. 1891) The fact, undisclosed to bidders, that the auctioneer officiating at a judicial sale is a party to the action, and interested in the property sold, renders the sale voidable, at the option of the purchaser, though no actual fraud or bad faith is shown, and though the auctioneer's interest was only that of tenant by the curtesy.—Smith v. Harrigan (Sup.) 15 N. Y. Supp. 852, 27 Abb. N. C. 322.

[c] (S. C. 1885) Sales made under order of court in counties where there is no master may be ordered made by the sheriff.—Childs v. Alexander, 22 S. C. 169.

[d] (Va. 1873) It is no objection to a judicial sale that one of the commissioners to sell was a plaintiff in the original suit, and also had an interest in the land, both in his own right, and as trustee of another, and as next friend of infants.—Teel v. Yancey, 23 Grat. 691.

[e] (Va. 1894) It is error to direct a sale of property by a commissioner who is assignee and owner of one-half of the debt for which the sale is made.—Etter v. Scott, 90 Va. 762, 19 S. E. 776.

Failure to give bond as affecting validity of sale, see post, § 68 [ww, x, y].

—— as ground for vacating confirmation of sale, see post, § 73 [o, z].

Liability on administration bond arising on sales by order of court, see "Executors and Administrators," vol. 22, cc. 3365–3368, §§ 2381, 2382.

[a] (Ky. 1891) Gen. St. p. 941, § 10, provides that the parties may be permitted to select a special commissioner to perform the duties of the master commissioner, and section 11 that such commissioner shall be sworn and shall give bond, as is required of a master commissioner. Held, that the provisions of section 11 applied to all special commissioners, whether selected by the parties or not.—Phelps v. Jones, 91 Ky. 244, 15 S. W. 668.

[b] (Md. 1863) The office of a trustee's bond, under a decree for sale of real estate, is not for the benefit or protection of the purchaser as such. The qualification and sufficiency of sureties is matter for the court or officer authorized to approve, which being done, it is not competent for the purchaser to review the action of the court.—Bolgiano v. Cooke, 19 Md. 375.

[c] (Va. 1888) Where the decree ordering sale of land directs the commissioner to give bond and fixes the penalty of the bond, failure to require security is not reversible error, though Acts 1883–84, p. 213, provide that the commissioner shall give bond and personal security to be approved by the clerk.—Cooper v. Daugherty, 85 Va. 343, 7 S. E. 387.

[e] (W. Va. 1885) Acts 1882, c. 142, provides that a special commissioner, appointed to make a sale, shall give bond before making such sale, and that every notice of such sale shall have annexed to it the certificate of the clerk that bond has been given by the commissioner. Such statute also provides that such commissioner shall not receive money under a decree or order until he gives bond, and that any commissioner receiving money without executing a bond will be deemed guilty of contempt. Held, that a decree appointing a commissioner to make a sale which in terms dispenses with such bond is erroneous.—Neeley v. Ruleys, 26 W. Va. 686.

[f] (W. Va. 1885) The plaintiff in the suit in which a commissioner is appointed to make a sale of land cannot waive the bond of such commissioner, as required by Acts 1882, c. 142.—Neeley v. Ruleys, 26 W. Va. 686.

Right to appeal from order fixing compensation, see "Appeal and Error," vol. 2, c. 1453, § 919 [a].

[a] (Ky. 1895) A court commissioner is not entitled to a commission for selling lands where the property was sold to the person from whom the debt was due, the commissioner not having received the purchase money or disbursed it.—Roundtree v. England, 32 S. W. 744.

[b] (La. 1896) Under Rev. St. § 160, fixing the commission of the auctioneer on the sale of succession property at 1 per cent. on all sums under $2,500, and, on all sums over that, one-half of 1 per cent., in case of the sale of succession property in several lots, the auctioneer is entitled to 1 per cent. on the first $2,500 and one-half of 1 per cent. on the excess of the amount of the entire sales over $2,500.—Succession of Von Hoven, 48 La. Ann. 620, 19 South. 766.

[c] (La. 1896) In the sale of succession property, advertised to be sold under an order of court, in the matter of the succession of a certain person, bids being offered and accepted on the faith that the sale is of the character represented by the advertisement, the fact that the heirs stipulated as to the manner in which the advertisement of the sale should be made does not render the sale a conventional sale, as distinguished from a judicial sale, for the purpose of determining the fees of the auctioneer.—Succession of Von Hoven, 48 La. Ann. 620, 19 South. 766.

[d] (Md. 1827) A trustee appointed to sell property under a chancery decree is entitled to compensation for his services in the shape of fees; but the general established rule in respect to them may be departed from according to the circumstances.—In re Gibson, 1 Bland, 138, 17 Am. Dec. 257.

[e] (Md. 1855) On a resale in chancery, the trustee is not allowed increase of commissions or any counsel fee; otherwise when, instead of resale, the purchase money is collected by suits at law.—Farmers' & Planters' Bank v. Martin, 7 Md. 342, 61 Am. Dec. 350.

[f] (N. Y. 1881) A referee appointed "to sell real property, pursuant to a judgment in an action" other than a foreclosure suit upon a mortgage, is entitled to sheriff's fees; that is, 2½ per cent. of the proceeds not exceeding $250, and 1 per cent. upon the residue. He is further entitled, upon distribution, to one-half of an executor's commissions upon proceeds actually distributed or applied.—Maher v. O'Conner, 61 How. Prac. 103.

[g] (Va. 1887) Under Code c. 174, § 6, providing that court officers, under any decree or order of sale, shall be allowed 5 per cent. on the first $300 received by them, and 2 per cent. on all sums above that amount, full commissions will not be allowed on a sale of land for $14,000 where the sum received was only $1,400, nor $150 additional for extraordinary efforts made in effecting the sale.—Womack v. Glasgow, 84 Va. 9, 5 S. E. 550.

[a] (W. Va. 1892) Where special commissioners are appointed to sell lands, and an unusual delay occurs on their part in carrying out the decree, and making their report, the court will ordinarily award a rule against them, requiring them to account for the delay, before removing them and appointing other commissioners to execute the decree.—Connell v. Wilhelm, 36 W. Va. 598, 15 S. E. 245.

§ 20. Powers, duties, and liabilities.

Authority of commissioner to receive Confederate money in payment of bid, see post, § 47.

Discretion of officer to sell in parcels or in gross, see post, § 37 [a].

Liability of officer and his sureties for proceeds of sale and enforcement thereof, see post, § 125.

[a] Trustees appointed by decrees of a court of equity to sell real estate are agents of the court. Sales so made are transactions between the court and the purchaser, and as such are regulated by all the principles of equity applicable to judicial sales.
—(Md. 1847) Gibbs v. Cunningham, 1 Md. Ch. 44; (1848) Sewall v. Costigan, 1 Md. Ch. 208; (1848) Harrison v. Harrison, 1 Md. Ch. 331; (1851) Hurt v. Stull, 4 Md. Ch. 391; (1863) Bolgiano v. Cooke, 19 Md. 375; (Neb. 1878) Parrat v. Neligh, 7 Neb. 456.

[b] (U. S. 1831) Where a decree directs an officer of the court to sell property and empowers him to sell on credit, and where the bonds for deferred portions of the purchase money are made payable to such officer, he has a right to collect them and will be considered, as a trustee for the parties, entitled to the proceeds of the sale; but he has no right to discount legal interest and receive only a part of the money in discharge of the debt.—Wallis v. Thornton, Fed. Cas. No. 17,111 [2 Brock. 422].

[c] (Ky. 1859) Where a sale of land by commissioners in satisfaction of a judgment is decreed in equity, the commissioner has discretionary power, subject to revision by the court, to determine what part of the land shall be sold to satisfy the judgment, where the whole is not needed.—Vanbussum v. Maloney, 59 Ky. (2 Metc.) 550.

[d] (Md. 1831) Where a judicial sale has been confirmed, and a note taken for the purchase price, it is not within the authority of the trustee making the sale to release the purchaser from liability on the ground of a total failure of consideration.—Wampler v. Shipley, 3 Bland, 182.

[e] (Md. 1831) Where land has been decreed to be sold, the trustee appointed to make the sale may be authorized to lease or rent the property until a sale can be effected.—In re Williams, 3 Bland, 186.

[f] (Neb. 1878) A decree for the sale of property is a sufficient warrant of authority to the officer to sell.—Parrat v. Neligh, 7 Neb. 456.

[g] (N. Y. 1857) A sheriff, master, or other officer, selling property under a process, decree, or judgment of the court, cannot make a valid agreement with a purchaser to convey any other estate than such as the decree or judgment will warrant.—Ryan v. Dox, 25 Barb. 440.

[h] (Ohio, 1859) A decree in the supreme court that the sheriff sell certain lands upon receiving an order for that purpose, which is sent by mandate to the common pleas for execution, gives the sheriff no authority to sell merely upon receiving from the clerk a certified copy of this decree without any order thereon.—Rhonemus v. Corwin, 9 Ohio St. 366.

rections as to terms and security, and took a bond of the purchaser, and a mortgage of the land sold, it was held that he was not liable for a loss by the insolvency of the purchaser and a depreciation of the land.—Fenwicke v. Gibbes, 2 Desaus. 629.

[j] (S. C. 1824) On a rule against the master to show cause why he had not sold certain property, the court refused to examine the regularity of a prior sale of the land by the master.—Ex parte Stanyarne's Creditors, 1 Harp. Eq. 20.

[k] (S. C. 1830) A commissioner in equity is entitled to complete, after the expiration of his term, sales ordered by the court and advertised by the commissioner during his term.—Hunt v. Elliott, 1 Bailey, Eq. 90.

[m] (S. C. 1858) Commissioners have a discretionary right, subject to the control of the court, to withdraw property temporarily from sale when they see that it would result in a sacrifice of the property.—Miller v. Law, 10 Rich. Eq. 320, 73 Am. Dec. 92.

[n] (S. C. 1868) A chancellor ordered a sale by a master of testator's realty, on the terms one-third cash, residue in one, two, and three years. It was further ordered that testator's debts should be paid out of the proceeds of that sale, and that the residue of said proceeds should abide the future order of the court. Held, that an additional order was not necessary to give the master power to receive payment of the bonds given for the purchase money under the original order.—McPherson v. Lynah, 14 Rich. Eq. 121.

[p] (W. Va. 1874) An order that a sheriff sell personal property, and, in case that prove insufficient to satisfy a judgment, then to sell real estate, but with a condition that the plaintiff is not to have the benefit of the order until he shall give bond, without evidence that the personal property was sold or was insufficient to satisfy the judgment, or that the bond was given, does not prove authority to the sheriff to sell the real estate, or at all sustain such a sale.—Houston v. McCluney, 8 W. Va. 135.

IV. APPRAISAL OF PROPERTY.

IN GENERAL, § 21.
PERSONS WHO MAY ACT AS APPRAISERS, § 22.
OATH OF APPRAISERS, § 23.
SETTING ASIDE APPRAISEMENT, § 24.

Erroneous appraisal as ground for setting aside sale, see post, § 73 [11].
Validity of sale under statute without appraisement, see post, § 68 [1].
Impairment of obligation of contract by statutes relating to appraisal of land sold at judicial sale, see "Constitutional Law," vol. 10, cc. 1920, 1921, § 496.

[a] (Ind. 1859) A judgment and sale without appraisement was made upon an agreement waiving the benefit of the appraisement laws. It was presumed on appeal that the agreement was made under Act 1843, §§ 3, 4, authorizing such agreements.—Lemasters v. Johnson, 12 Ind. 385.

[b] (Iowa, 1875) Judicial sales made under judgments rendered since the Code must, in accordance with its provisions, be made without appraisement.—Babcock v. Gurney, 42 Iowa, 154.

[c] (Ky.) The statute requiring land sold under an execution to be valued does not apply to land sold by a commissioner under a decree in chancery.—(1833) Blakey v. Abert, 31 Ky. (1 Dana) 185; (1849) Haggin's Heirs v. Peck, 49 Ky. (10 B. Mon.) 210.

[d] (Ky. 1891) Gen. St. c. 63, art. 8, provides for an appraisal of land sold under judgment or order of court, and that, if it sells for less than two-thirds of its valuation, there shall be the same right to redeem as from sales on execution. Held, that when a defendant bids in land sold under judgment against him, but fails to pay the purchase money, and the land is resold under order of court, there is no right to redeem from the second sale, and hence no appraisement is necessary.—McKee v. Stein's Guardian, 15 S. W. 519; Id., 91 Ky. 240, 16 S. W. 583.

[e] (Neb. 1879) Where the sheriff causes real estate to be appraised under an order of sale, he should forthwith deposit a copy of the appraisement with the clerk of the district court. He must do so before the sale.—Jones v. Null, 9 Neb. 254, 2 N. W. 350.

[f] (Neb. 1880) The appraisers must appraise the property at its value in money, and deduct the liens therefrom, specifically enumerating each lien and the amount due thereon. It is not sufficient to appraise the interest of the debtor therein.—Rosenfield v. Chada, 10 Neb. 421, 6 N. W. 630.

[g] (Ohio, 1824) Lands decreed by a court of chancery to be sold must be valued as upon executions at law.—Wiles v. Baylor, 1 Ohio (1 Ham.) 509.

[a] (Ky. 1891) The appraisement of land sold under a decree showing that the appraisers were sworn by the commissioner, the supreme court cannot presume that he swore them as an examiner from a statement to that effect in his amended reports.—Phelps v. Jones, 91 Ky. 244, 15 S. W. 668.

[b] (Ky. 1891) Under Act April 9, 1878, providing that, on a sale of land under any decree, the commissioner shall cause it to be valued under oath of any two householders, the appraisers cannot make a valid appraisement unless sworn, and, if they can be sworn by the commissioner at all, this cannot be done by a commissioner who has not himself taken the prescribed oath.—Phelps v. Jones, 91 Ky. 244, 15 S. W. 668.

[a] (Ohio, 1879) Where the appraisers, in appraising a certain house, failed to go through it, and afterwards the testimony of persons who have gone through the building establishes a higher value, the first appraisement will be set aside.—Mills v. Life Ass'n of America, 6 Ohio Dec. 827.

[b] (Va. 1808) A valuation by commissioners of property to be sold ought not to be set aside merely because they afterwards become dissatisfied with their valuation, unless it appears that they acted under some mistake.—Spencer v. Carter, 4 Hen. & M. 402.

V. NOTICE.

IN GENERAL, § 25.
SUFFICIENCY IN GENERAL, § 26.
DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY TO BE SOLD, § 27.
TIME OR DURATION OF NOTICE, § 28.
EFFECT OF FAILURE TO GIVE NOTICE, § 29.
DEFECTS AND OBJECTIONS AND CURE THEREOF, § 30.

Effect of confirmation as curing irregularity in publication of notice, see post, § 66 [m].

Necessity for giving notice of postponement, see post, § 35.

Notice of resale, see post, § 50 [t].

Provision in judgment as to notice, see ante, § 5 [c].

Want or insufficiency of notice as ground for refusal to confirm sale, see post, § 64.

[a] (U. S. 1870) Act Cong. March 2, 1867, § 7 (14 Stat. 466), prescribing the manner in which the advertising for the departments of the United States government shall be done, applies only to such advertisements as are published in behalf of the government and paid for out of the federal treasury, and does not affect advertisements for sale of lands under judicial process in suits between individuals.—Moncure v. Zunts, 78 U. S. (11 Wall.) 416, 20 L. Ed. 181.

[b] (Pa. 1888) Act April 18, 1853, providing that the orphans' court may order the sale of land of an owner who has been absent and unheard from for seven years, under circumstances from which the law presumes his death, and further prescribing that all parties in being, having any interest in the land, shall have notice, either personal or by publication, does not authorize the sale without notice of any kind, and a sale so made conveys no title, as against the owner, who afterwards returns.—Taylor v. Hoyt, 15 Atl. 892.

Defective or insufficient notice as ground for setting aside sale, see post, § 73 [k, vvv].

[a] (U. S. 1892) On the expiration of a mining company's charter, a party of the stockholders desired to organize a new company, while another party desired a sale of the mine and a division of the proceeds. The controversy was carried to the courts, and after seven years' litigation an order of sale was affirmed by the United States supreme court. The date of sale was fixed at about nine months thereafter, but was twice postponed, and the sale was finally made more than a year after the affirmance, and after ample advertisement. Held, that there could be no pretense of lack of personal and general notice.—Pewabic Min. Co. v. Mason, 145 U. S. 349, 12 Sup. Ct. 887, 36 L. Ed. 732.

[b] (Ala. 1846) The remark of the president of an incorporated bank to a master in chancery, who informed him that the sale of certain property in which the corporation was interested had been postponed, that he had acted properly, amounts to nothing more than the approbation of what the master had done; but it cannot be inferred that he was informed when the property would be again offered, or that he regarded the master's communication as a notice, or approved a subsequent sale, even conceding that the president, in virtue of his general powers, was authorized to act in the premises.—Branch Bank of State v. Hunt, 8 Ala. 876.

[c, d] (Ky. 1859) The commissioner was directed to advertise the sale of land at the court house door and two other places in the county of Henderson. He posted notices at the court house door and at two other places in the city of Henderson, which is in the county of Henderson. This was held not to be a compliance with the spirit and meaning of the directions.—Vanbussum v. Maloney, 59 Ky. (2 Metc.) 550.

[e, f] (Md. 1868) A decree for the sale of land to pay debts directed the trustees appointed therefor to give at least three weeks' previous notice of the sale by advertisement in the newspapers printed in a certain place, "and such other notice as they should think proper." The trustees offered the land for sale by advertisement in various places besides the one specified, but failed to receive a bid. It was then offered a second time, and sold; but no notice was given, except in the newspapers before mentioned. Held, that the notice was sufficient, and the sale valid.—Farmers' Bank v. Clarke, 28 Md. 145.

[g] (Neb. 1878) Where the officer appointed to conduct a judicial sale has caused public notice of the time and place of the sale to be given for at least 30 days before the day of the sale by advertisement in a newspaper printed in the county, it is unnecessary for him also to post notices of the time and place of sale.—Parrat v. Neligh, 7 Neb. 456.

[h] (Pa. 1883) An advertisement of the sale of land in a newspaper and by handbills, made by an assignee, unknown to a party claiming an interest therein, does not amount to notice to him.—Weaver v. Craighead, 104 Pa. 288.

Description of property to be sold in decree or judgment, see ante, § 12.

Insufficient description in connection with inadequacy of price as ground for setting aside, see post, § 78 [m, o].

[a] (U. S. 1880) Where the notice of sale referred to papers on file in the office of the court for a more certain and full description of the interest advertised for sale, such interest passes, notwithstanding an otherwise erroneous description.—In re King (D. C.) 3 Fed. 839.

[b] (Ind. 1862) In the advertisement of lands to be sold at judicial sale, the description of the land as "the w hf of the n w qr of sec. 25, in t 23 n, of r 4 w, containing 80 acres, in T. county, and mortgaged to L. F.," is sufficient.—Bansemer v. Mace, 18 Ind. 27, 81 Am. Dec. 344.

[c] (Md. 1856) The following advertisement of a trustee to make a judicial sale of property: "All that lot, etc., situate on the south side of Lombard street, in the city of Baltimore, at the distance of 391 feet or thereabouts from the southwest corner or intersection of Lombard and Canal streets," etc., does not sufficiently indicate the property.—Kauffman v. Walker, 9 Md. 229.

[d] (Mich. 1876) Under a decree authorizing a sale of land by a commissioner on public notice "according to the course and practice" of the court, a sale on a notice which fails to give any description of the lands is unwarranted.—Griswold v. Fuller, 33 Mich. 268.

[e] (Ohio, 1878) Where the advertisement of a master's sale correctly gives the lot number and the map, plat, and subdivision, but incorrectly describes the lot by metes and bounds, a motion to set aside the sale by the debtor, with no affidavit, will be overruled, where there is no difficulty in ascertaining the land to be sold from the description as correctly given, nor in ascertaining from the advertisement itself that the boundaries were correctly stated. —Kotch v. Sieplein, 4 Ohio Dec. 88, 1 Cleve. Law Rep. 17.

§ 28. Time or duration of notice.

[a] (La. 1848) Civ. Code, § 2584, provides that in all cases of judicial sales, if the purchaser does not pay the price at the time required, the seller may at the end of 10 days, after the customary notice, again expose the property for sale. Held, that the 10 days refer exclusively to the duration of the advertisement, and not to the period at which it is commenced; and hence the fact that the advertisement of resale was published more than 10 days cannot affect the sale.—Duncan v. Armant, 3 La. Ann. 84.

[b] (La. 1848) Under Civ. Code, art. 2589, providing that, if the purchaser at a sale does not pay the price at the time required, the seller may at the end of 10 days again expose the property to public sale, the second sale need not be advertised more than 10 days, provided the customary notice is given within that time. —Duncan v. Armant, 3 La. Ann. 84.

[cc] (Md. 1848) A decree required the trustees to give "at least three weeks' previous notice, inserted in some newspaper or papers, and such other notice as they might think proper, of the time, place, manner, and terms of sale." Held, that an advertisement of this sale, inserted once a week for three weeks, and once on the day of sale, in two daily newspapers, was sufficient notice, and that the trustees were not bound to advertise the property daily for three weeks previous to the sale.—Johnson v. Dorsey, 7 Gill, 269.

[d] (Miss. 1843) In case of a decree of sale of property, the court will allow counsel to designate the time of notice, without limiting it, taking care that it be reasonable and fair. —Guise v. Middleton, 1 Smedes & M. Ch. 89.

[e] (Neb.) Where the required time for notice of a judicial sale intervenes between the date of the first publication and the date of sale, the notice is sufficient.—(1890) Carlow v. C. Aultman & Co., 28 Neb. 672, 44 N. W. 873; (1894) Von Dorn v. Mengedoht, 41 Neb. 525, 59 N. W. 800.

—(Miss. 1870) Hanks v. Neal, 44 Miss. 212;

(Tex. 1873) Thulemeyer v. Jones, 37 Tex. 560.

[b] (Ky. 1836) Where a commissioner was directed to sell land after advertising, but neither his report nor the record showed that any advertisement was made, it was held that the report and sale should be set aside.—Clark v. Bell, 34 Ky. (4 Dana) 15.

[c] (Md. 1851) A decree directed the trustee to give three weeks' notice by publication in a newspaper, and such other notice as he might think proper, of the time, place, and terms of the sale. On the day appointed the trustee postponed the sale for a subsequent date, without advertising the sale as directed by the decree. Held, that the failure to give the notice prescribed by the decree was a fatal objection to the validity of the sale.—Glenn v. Wootten, 3 Md. Ch. 514.

[d] (Miss. 1870) The validity of a sale made by an officer of court under a decree is not affected by a failure to give the notice required by statute.—Hanks v. Neal, 44 Miss. 212.

[e] (S. C. 1857) Where a commissioner sells land without having advertised it for sale for the time prescribed by the order, the sale is invalid and will be set aside.—Baily v. Baily, 9 Rich. Eq. 392.

Effect of confirmation as curing defective notice of sale, see post, § 66.

[a] (La. 1877) By appointing an appraiser, the debtor cures any defect in the advertisement of a judicial sale.—Howard v. Schmidt, 29 La. Ann. 129.

[b] (Minn. 1860) Error in a notice of a judicial sale, to be fatal, must be one in a material particular, and of a character to produce injury.—Dana v. Farrington, 4 Minn. 433 (Gil. 335).

[c] (Ohio, 1875) A defective notice of a statutory sale published in one paper does not vitiate a regular and sufficient notice in another, where the statute requires but one notice, and there is no proof that any one was misled by the defective notice.—Sealing v. Lawrence, 27 Ohio St. 441.

[d] (S. C. 1892) Gen. St. § 2424, puts a sale of land by order of the court on the same footing as a sale under execution, so that a failure to comply strictly with the statutes regulating the time and mode of advertising such a sale is a mere irregularity, and does not vitiate the sale.—Alexander v. Messervey, 35 S. C. 409, 14 S. E. 854.

[e] (Tenn. 1878) Objection to the master's mode of advertising a sale of land, if the mode was conformable to the statute and the decree, cannot be made by exception.—Goddard v. Cox, 69 Tenn. (1 Lea) 112.

[f] (Va. 1892) The fact that land was not advertised to be sold free from dower, as provided by the decree for sale, does not affect the validity of the sale where the land does not appear to have been sold for less than its value.—Strayer v. Long's Ex'r, 89 Va. 471, 16 S. E. 357.

[a] (Ky. 1842) Where a party to whom land has been fraudulently conveyed forbids a sale made under a decree of court, it does not absolve either the commissioner or complainant's counsel from conducting the sale fairly.—Busey v. Hardin, 41 Ky. (2 B. Mon.) 407.

[b] (N. Y. 1850) A purchaser at a judicial sale must have the property separated and delivered to him by the officer, or at least pointed out to him, so that it can be distinguished from the residue of the owner's property, or he will acquire no title by virtue of the sale.—Stevens v. Eno, 10 Barb. 95.

[c] (Ohio, 1847) A sale of land under a decree may be made by the sheriff or his deputy.—Craig v. Fox, 16 Ohio, 563.

Ratification of sale made in mode different from that prescribed in decree, see post, § 70.

[a] (U. S. 1894) Act Cong. March 3, 1893, regulating manner in which property shall be sold under decree of the court, is prospective in its operation.—Central Trust Co. of New York v. Sheffield & Birmingham Coal, Iron & Ry. Co. (C. C.) 60 Fed. 9; Alabama Iron & Ry. Co. v. Anniston Loan & Trust Co., Id.

[b, c] (Iowa, 1872) If property which should have been sold at public judicial sale is irregularly sold at private sale instead, with the acquiescence of one interested, he will thereby be estopped from questioning the validity of the proceeding.—City of Maquoketa v. Willey, 35 Iowa, 323.

[d] (Ky. 1869) A sale of land under a judgment must be made in the manner prescribed in the judgment.—Bethel v. Bethel, 69 Ky. (6 Bush) 65, 99 Am. Dec. 655.

[e] (Md. 1827) Where a trustee has brought the property into the market by advertisement as prescribed by the decree, without effecting a sale, he may sell at private sale or otherwise, in his discretion.—In re Gibson, 1 Bland, 138, 17 Am. Dec. 257.

[f] (Md. 1847) In Andrews v. Scotton (1830) 2 Bland, 629, it was decided "that, if a trustee directed to sell by decree at a public sale sell at private sale, the sale will be confirmed, if satisfactory reasons are given for so doing, and no objection is made." These latter words mean objections of sufficient force to outweigh the reasons given for deviating from the terms of the decree.—Cunningham v. Schley, 6 Gill, 207.

[g] (Md. 1847) Where a trustee did not undertake to sell at private sale until a fruitless effort had been made at public sale, according to the terms of the decree, and even after such failure kept the property in the market by advertisements offering it at private sale, and procured a greater price than he had been offered at public sale, the court will not consider his conduct a substantial deviation from the decree, but only one offered from necessity.—Cunningham v. Schley, 6 Gill, 207.

[gg] (Md. 1847) A communication by a trustee appointed to make a judicial sale to the auctioneer employed by him of his limit as to price, and a direction, if he got no bid above such limit, to strike it off to A., does not make the sale a private one, since it does not prevent any person from bidding a larger amount.—Cohen v. Wagner, 6 Gill, 236.

[h] (Mo. 1870) When a statute requires that a sale of land by the sheriff under an order of court shall be made "at public vendue to the highest bidder," a sale made privately is invalid; and it is immaterial that the order of court did not require a public sale.—Hutchinson v. Cassidy, 46 Mo. 431.

[i] (Pa. 1841) A statute authorizing a sale of real estate by a trustee to be appointed by the orphans' court, the court to prescribe the time, place, and manner of sale, contemplates a future public sale; and a private sale made before the passage of the statute is invalid, although approved by the orphans' court.—Ellet v. Paxson, 2 Watts & S. 418.

[j] (Va. 1895) The court has power to authorize a commissioner to sell at private or public sale.—Cox v. Price, 22 S. E. 512.

[k] (W. Va. 1888) Where a decree requires land to be sold at public sale, a private sale by the commissioner is void.—Hutson v. Sadler, 31 W. Va. 358, 6 S. E. 920.

Sale at different place than that specified in advertisement as ground for refusing confirmation, see post, § 64 [d].

[a] (U. S. 1814) Where it appears to be for the interest of all the parties that the property should be sold in another district, and the parties agree thereto, the court will consent to such removal and sale, but will protect the marshal in his right to his fees.—The San Jose Indiano, Fed. Cas. No. 12,323 [2 Gall. 311].

[b] (Ala. 1877) A sale of land at the court house door by a register, pursuant to a decree of sale, is not invalid by reason of the failure of the decree to designate the place of sale.—Hooper v. Young, 58 Ala. 585.

[c] (N. Y. 1846) Where a sale was decreed to be made by a master in New York City, and it was made by a master in Kings county, the sale was set aside after the purchaser had received his deed.—Yates v. Woodruff, 4 Edw. Ch. 700.

[d] (Tex. 1873) Where the place of a judicial sale is prescribed by law, and the sheriff sells at a different place, the sale is void.—Grace v. Garnett, 38 Tex. 156.

[e] (Va. 1819) If a tract of land, advertised to be sold on the premises, be sold, not immediately on the premises, but within 80 yards of the dwelling house, within full view of it, and 15 or 20 steps from the boundary line (it being believed by some present that they were on the premises), such sale will not be set aside, if it is regular in other respects, and no fraud appears.—Ferguson v. Franklins, 6 Munf. 305.

[f] (Va. 1849) Where a decree for the sale of land directs the commissioners to make the sale upon the premises, it is irregular for them to make it elsewhere, especially after advertisement that it is to be made there.—Talley v. Starke's Adm'x, 6 Grat. 339.

[g] (Va. 1849) Where a commissioner appointed to sell property has conducted the sale at a different place from that specified in the decree, the purchasers will not be compelled to complete their purchases.—Talley v. Starke's Adm'x, 6 Grat. 339.

Provision in decree as to time of sale, see ante, § 5 [g, i].

[a] A judicial sale of property is not void because made on election day; and it is not the business of a court, within the meaning of the statute prohibiting the opening or transaction of business by any court on the day of election in any city or town.

[c] (U. S. 1892) On the expiration of a mining company's charter a party of the stockholders desired to organize a new company, while another party desired a sale of the mine and a division of the proceeds. The purpose of the complaining party was to convey the mine to their proposed new corporation for $50,000, and the decrees ordering the sale contained the provision that no sale should be made for less than $50,000 in excess of the company's debts at the time of the sale, and also directed that the cause should be referred to a master to report upon the amount of assets and debts before making the sale. Held, that the purpose of the reference was merely to ascertain the debts in order to fix the upset price, and, it appearing that all the debts due up to the expiration of the charter had been paid, it was not necessary to delay the report and sale until various claims arising afterwards, and which were in course of litigation, were determined. The sale having been made for an amount far in excess of $50,000 above all pending claims, no complaint could be made on this ground.—Pewabic Min. Co. v. Mason, 145 U. S. 349, 12 Sup. Ct. 887, 36 L. Ed. 732; Marcus v. Same, Id.

[d] (Cal. 1892) Code Civ. Proc. §§ 681, 683, provide that a person in whose favor judgment is given may have a writ of execution for its enforcement, returnable at any time not less than 10 nor more than 60 days. Section 684 provides that, when a judgment requires the sale of property, the same may be enforced by a writ reciting such judgment, and directing the sale. Held, that a writ issued under said section 684 is not an execution, and the sale, therefore, is not invalidated by being made after the time limited for the return.—Southern California Lumber Co. v. Ocean Beach Hotel Co., 94 Cal. 217, 29 Pac. 627, 28 Am. St. Rep. 115.

[e] (Ill. 1842) It is not irregular to appoint a commissioner with power to sell land in vacation, unless the money decreed to be paid shall have been paid.—Grubb v. Crane, 5 Ill. (4 Scam.) 153; Delahay v. McConnel, 5 Ill. (4 Scam.) 156.

[f] (Ill. 1889) A second sale of land under judicial process will not be permitted within the time allowed for redemption from a previous sale.—Herdman v. Cooper, 29 Ill. App. 589.

[g] (Ky. 1865) The court should fix the time for a decretal sale, instead of leaving it to the commissioner to appoint.—Perry v. Seitz, 63 Ky. (2 Duv.) 122.

[h] (Md. 1847) Where property is offered for sale under a decree on a Saturday, the Sabbath of a party interested, and who is thereby prevented from making arrangements to purchase the same, and he knew of the day fixed for the sale several weeks before it took place, it was his duty to have applied to the trustee to change the day. Omitting to do this, his failure must be regarded as a waiver of all objection to the day of sale as being his Sabbath, and he must abide the consequences of his omission.—Cohen v. Wagner, 6 Gill, 236.

[i] (Mo. 1893) Where, under an order of sale in an equitable proceeding to construe a will, declare a trust, and to convert the real estate of deceased into money, the sheriff sold part of the land, and reported such sale to the court, and afterwards sold the remainder of the land within five years from the date of the order, such sale was not void because there was no renewal of the order to sell.—Hamer v. Cook, 118 Mo. 476, 24 S. W. 180.

[j] (S. C. 1893) Where the decretal order for a sale of land fixes the date thereof, a sale made at any other time is unauthorized and void.—Tompkins v. Tompkins, 39 S. C. 537, 18 S. E. 233.

[k] (Tenn. 1880) The discretion of the clerk in fixing the day on which a decree for the sale of lands shall be executed can be controlled by the court only in case of a clear abuse of discretion.—Myers v. James, 72 Tenn. (4 Lea) 370.

[l] (Tex. 1873) Where the time of a public sale is prescribed by law, and the sheriff sells at a different time, the sale is void.—Grace v. Garnett, 38 Tex. 156.

Necessity of showing postponement in officer's return, see post, § 57 [g].

[a] (Ill. 1863) Where a judicial sale is adjourned, the same notice thereof must be given as was originally required.—Thornton v. Boyden, 31 Ill. 200.

[b] (Ill. 1863) It is the right and duty of an officer appointed to conduct a judicial sale to adjourn the sale, whenever from any cause a reasonably advantageous price cannot be had, and when it is necessary to prevent a sacrifice of the property.—Thornton v. Boyden, 31 Ill. 200.

[c] (Md. 1859) A trustee has no power to agree to delay the sale authorized by the decree, and such an agreement cannot be enforced on behalf of the defendants.—Ward v. Hollius, 14 Md. 158.

[d] (N. J. 1874) It is not necessary to advertise in the newspapers an adjournment of a sale of realty under a public statute for any period not exceeding one week; a formal adjournment of the sale from week to week being sufficient.—Hewitt v. Montclair Ry. Co., 25 N. J. Eq. (10 C. E. Green) 392.

[e] (S. C. 1824) Where a sale of land was decreed upon a bill taken pro confesso, the sale was postponed until the expiration of the time allowed by law for the defendant to come in and make defense.—Magwood v. Butler, 1 Harp. Eq. 265.

[f] (Va. 1842) Where a sale of land of a defendant is decreed to be made in case he shall fail to pay the amount decreed against him, and after the sale is made, but before it is confirmed, the defendant dies, and the suit is revived against his administrator, the sale of the land ought to be suspended until an account of the assets of the deceased has been taken, to ascertain if the land may be relieved by the application of the assets to satisfy the decree.—Cocke's Adm'r v. Gilpin, 1 Rob. 20.

[a] (Ill. 1873) A decree for the payment of a sum of money was made a charge on two tracts of land, either one of which was sufficient to satisfy the decree. After such decree was entered, and before sale, the debtor conveyed one of the tracts to A., who failed to give any notice of his purchase, and the master in chancery sold the same tract in satisfaction of the decree. Held, on a bill by the heirs of A. to set aside the sale and to redeem, that the objection that the other tract of land was not sold first came too late after confirmation.—Watt v. McGalliard, 67 Ill. 513.

[b] (Tenn. 1866) Where a particular order for selling is indicated in a decree for the sale of land, a departure from such order by the commissioner, not excepted to before confirmation, will not render such sale invalid as to bona fide purchasers, in the absence of fraud.—McGavock v. Bell, 43 Tenn. (3 Cold.) 512.

§ 37. Sale in parcels or in gross.

Discretion of officer to determine quantity to be sold, see ante, § 20 [c].

Failure to sell in parcels in connection with inadequacy of price as ground for setting aside, see post, § 78 [j].

Setting aside sale without indemnity because made in mass to the prejudice of debtor, see post, § 84 [d].

Constitutional provision for subdivision of lands sold, not self-executing, see "Constitutional Law," vol. 10, c. 1268, § 32 [n, o].

Subdivision of land and lots, retrospective operation of constitutional provisions, see "Constitutional Law," vol. 10, c. 1242, § 20 [qq].

[a] Where the premises consist of a single property, bought together, and always controlled by a single person, all lying together, contiguous, and adjoining, and no part in any wise separated from any other part, it is in the discretion of the referee to sell together or in parcels.

(N. Y. 1862) Whitbeck v. Rowe, 25 How. Prac. 403;

[b] (U. S. 1872) A judicial sale of land lying in the outer part of a town may be made in lump, and not in parcels, although it be known to the commissioner for the sale that a company had been formed for its purchase in lump, which might prevent competition between bidders.—Johns v. Slack, Fed. Cas. No. 7,363 [2 Hughes, 467].

[c] (U. S. 1894) A sale of property as a whole instead of in parcels will be confirmed, where no objection was made to the decree directing that it be sold as a whole, and there is no offer to pay higher price in case the bidding be reopened.—Central Trust Co. of New York v. Sheffield & Birmingham Coal, Iron & Ry. Co. (C. C.) 60 Fed. 9; Alabama Iron & Ry. Co. v. Anniston Loan & Trust Co., Id.

[d] (Ark. 1892) Where the decree condemns land to be sold as one tract, and no objection is made by defendant, he cannot, after sale, insist that it should have been sold in subdivisions.—Nix v. Draughon, 56 Ark. 240, 19 S. W. 669.

[e] (Ill. 1868) Where contiguous parcels of land are sold under an order of court, and no bids are made for the lands when offered in separate parcels, they may be sold together.—Martin v. Hargardine, 46 Ill. 322.

[f] (Ill. 1868) The court refused to set aside a sale made under Rev. St. p. 302, § 10, which requires that, "if the property be susceptible of division, it shall be sold in such quantities as may be necessary to satisfy the debt," on complaint that the property was not properly divided, where it did not appear that the debtor made any request for a division, or that a different mode of sale from that pursued would have brought a better price.—McMullen v. Gable, 47 Ill. 67.

[g] (Ill. 1872) An officer, failing to find any bidders for land put up in separate parcels, may properly sell the land en masse.—Van Valkenburg v. Trustees of Schools, 66 Ill. 103.

[h] (Ill. 1889) It is improper to offer three several tracts in gross, after a failure to sell them separately, without first attempting to sell two of them together.—Cohen v. Menard, 31 Ill. App. 503, affirmed (1890) 136 Ill. 130, 24 N. E. 604.

[i] (Ind. 1868) To warrant a court in setting aside a heavy sale of real property upon the ground that it was not sold in parcels, as required by 2 Gav. & H. St. p. 249, § 466, it must be made to appear that the action of the officer was fraudulent.—Wright v. Yetts, 30 Ind. 185.

[j] (Ky. 1868) A commissioner at a decretal sale must pursue the advertisement, if it is announced that the land will be sold in gross, and a sale in parcels in such case will be ground for setting aside the sale.—Jarboe v. Colvin, 67 Ky. (4 Bush) 70.

[k] (Ky. 1890) Where land sold under a judgment could have been sold in parcels, the sale of the whole tract, without an attempt to make less of the land pay the debt, was erroneous.—McLaughlin v. Schmied, 12 S. W. 1061.

[l] (Ky. 1890) Where land sold under a judgment could have been sold in parcels, a sale of the whole tract, without an attempt to make less of the land pay the debt, will be set aside on appeal from the order confirming the commissioner's report of the sale.—McLaughlin v. Schmied, 12 S. W. 1061.

[m] (Ky. 1890) A judgment which directs the sale en masse of a considerable tract of land to satisfy a lien for an amount less than half the value of the land, when there is nothing to show that the land is not susceptible of division, is erroneous.—Skaggs v. Hill, 14 S. W. 363.

[n] (Ky. 1893) Where, in an action to enforce a lien on two tracts of land, judgment is rendered directing a sale of the land, such land should, if susceptible of advantageous division, be divided, and sold in lots.—Sebree v. Coleman, 22 S. W. 852.

[o] (La. 1833) The rule that a debt cannot be divided without the consent of both debtor and creditor applies to a sale of a debt under legal process.—Kelso v. Beaman, 6 La. 87.

[p] (La. 1876) A sale of two lots of land in one parcel was held not irregular, where they adjoined, and had been described together, and there was proof that the mode of sale adopted was advantageous.—Succession of McCall, 28 La. Ann. 713.

[q] (Mich. 1876) Under a decree authorizing a sale of lands by a commissioner "in such convenient and reasonable parcels" as in his opinion shall be most conducive to the interest of all the parties, a sale by putting up and striking off numerous distinct tracts on one offer and bid is unwarranted.—Griswold v. Fuller, 33 Mich. 268.

[r] (Mo. 1881) The mere fact that property at public sale is sold in gross is not per se sufficient to avoid the sale. There must be some attendant fraud, unfair dealing, or abuse of confidence, in order to obtain the aid of a court of equity to devest title so acquired.—Chase v. Williams, 74 Mo. 429.

[s] (N. J. 1869) There is no rule which requires that at judicial sales each article of personal property should in all cases be sold separately. The general rule is that unless the value of the articles, or a considerable part of it, consists in their constituting one establishment, and where there would naturally be purchasers to bid on them separately, they should be sold separately; but where their value, as constituting a whole establishment, is greater than if separated, and the articles when separated would not excite competition, they should be sold as a whole.—National Bank of Metropolis v. Sprague, 20 N. J. Eq. (5 C. E. Green) 159.

[t] (N. J. 1889) Where a master in chancery has recommended, on sufficient proof, that land be sold in parcels, and a decree has been entered confirming such report, without objection, the sale will not be set aside on the ground that the land should have been sold as an entirety.—Morrisse v. Inglis, 46 N. J. Eq. (1 Dick.) 306, 19 Atl. 16.

[u] (N. Y. 1841) Where land to be sold under a decree consists of several distinct parcels, it is the duty of the master to sell the parcels separately, unless it is evident that the land will be much more valuable in one parcel than in several.—American Ins. Co. v. Oakley, 9 Paige, 259.

[v] (N. Y. 1850) Upon judicial sales of real estate, it is the duty of the officer conducting them to sell the property in such parcels as will be best calculated to produce the highest aggregate price.—Delaplaine v. Lawrence, 3 N. Y. (3 Comst.) 301.

[vv] (N. Y. 1887) The purchaser at a judicial sale of real property cannot raise the question that two lots were sold together as a defense to a motion to compel him to take title.—Duer v. Dowdney, 11 N. Y. St. Rep. 301.

[w] (N. Y. 1887) The irregular sale of two lots together, instead of separately, is cured by an order directing the purchaser to complete the sale.—Duer v. Dowdney, 11 N. Y. St. Rep. 301.

[ww] (N. Y. 1891) Where a referee sold certain lots in one parcel under a judgment which did not direct a sale in that manner, and the court is satisfied that the property would have produced a much greater sum if the sale had been in lots, the same will be set aside, and a resale ordered.—Larkin v. Brouty, 60 Hun, 585, 15 N. Y. Supp. 509.

[xx] (Pa. 1851) That a creditor has purchased houses sold together at a judicial sale does not estop her from objecting to a resale of the houses in lump.—Connell v. Hughes, 1 Phila. 225.

[y] (Tenn. 1869) Where land and slaves are sold by the master in a collective mass, and no exception is presented to his report of the sale on that ground, its confirmation will not be disturbed.—Lasell v. Powell, 47 Tenn. (7 Cold.) 277.

[yy] (Tex. 1876) Const. 1869, art. 12, § 40, providing that all sales of landed property made under decrees of court shall be offered to bidders in lots of not less than 10 nor more than 40 acres, except in towns, etc., did not render void a sale not actually made in lots of 40 acres or less, or a decree not directing the sale to be so made.—Cook v. Brown, 45 Tex. 73.

[z] (Tex. 1879) Disregard of the statutory direction that a judicial sale of lands be in parcels of 40 acres is no ground for setting aside the sale, where the defendant, although present, did not demand compliance therewith, and no greater price could have been obtained.—Atcheson v. Hutchison, 51 Tex. 223.

[zz] (Va. 1877) Whether a whole or only a part of the land should be sold, or whether as a whole or in parcels, must be referred to the discretion of the chancellor who orders the sale, and his act will not be disturbed by the court, unless plainly erroneous.—Long v. Weller's Ex'r, 29 Grat. 347.

Authority of court to change terms of sale where resale is ordered, see post, § 50 [vv, zz].
Violation of terms of sale as to credit as ground for setting aside, see post, § 73 [l].

[a] (Ark. 1876) A judicial sale must be on a credit of not less than three, nor more than six, months.—Williams v. Ewing, 31 Ark. 229.

[b] (Ark. 1881) Where a decree ordered real property to be sold, without saying on credit, held, that a sale for cash was meant, and that the decree was therefore erroneous.—Fry v. Street, 37 Ark. 39.

[c] (Ark. 1889) The confirmation of a sale under a decree will not be disturbed, where it appears that there has been due and legal notice of time, terms, and place of sale, though it was made on a credit of three months, instead of four, as the decree directed; the defendant showing no injury resulting from the departure from the direction, and the trial court being satisfied that none had resulted therefrom.—Johnson v. Campbell, 52 Ark. 316, 12 S. W. 578.

[d] (Ky. 1869) A sale of land under a judgment must be made on the terms prescribed in the judgment.—Bethel v. Bethel, 69 Ky. (6 Bush) 65, 99 Am. Dec. 655.

[e] (La. 1852) The law will not permit judicial sales to be made lotteries at the bidding, and sources of confusion and strife afterwards, as where purchasers are required in substance by the terms of a sale to take the property subject to so much of the antichresis as might be due, and such of the recorded mortgages as, on investigation, should turn out to be bona fide.—Pickersgill v. Brown, 7 La. Ann. 297.

[f] (La. 1866) The terms announced at a judicial sale bind the purchaser.—Backen v. Hamilton, 18 La. Ann. 553; Trichel v. Myers, Id. 567.

[g] (Minn. 1888) The conditions of a sale announced at the opening affect a purchaser, though he did not come on the ground until after the announcement, and though the sale had been suspended for a short time.—Cable v. Byrne, 38 Minn. 534, 38 N. W. 620, 8 Am. St. Rep. 696.

[h] (Miss. 1850) Where a sale is to be made by statute on a credit of six months, it is an error in a decree to direct a sale for cash, though it can be made for cash or on a longer credit if all the parties consent thereto.—Morse v. Clayton, 21 Miss. (13 Smedes & M.) 373.

[i] (Neb. 1894) A judicial sale must be made in accordance with the decree of court, the terms of which cannot be changed by agreement of parties or counsel unless incorporated into the record.—Nebraska Loan & Trust Co. v. Hamer, 40 Neb. 281, 58 N. W. 695.

[j] (Neb. 1894) The officer conducting a sale is not required to entertain any bids coupled with conditions not in conformity with the terms of the decree.—Nebraska Loan & Trust Co. v. Hamer, 40 Neb. 281, 58 N. W. 695.

[k] (N. J. 1869) A master, charged with the conduct of a judicial sale, has a considerable latitude of discretion in prescribing such terms of sale as will exclude puffers and fraudulent bidders, and secure the confidence of real purchasers in offering their bids.—National Bank of Metropolis v. Sprague, 20 N. J. Eq. (5 C. E. Green) 159.

[l] (N. C. 1835) A master in possession of property under a decree must dispose of it according to the terms of the decree, and cannot notice the claims of strangers to the decree.—Arnold v. Arnold, 21 N. C. 111.

[m] (S. C. 1836) Where the commissioner, under an order of court to sell and take a bond and mortgage for the price, neglected to take the mortgage, it was held that the party entitled, by receiving the bond, waived his right to claim a mortgage.—McCauley v. Heriot, Riley, Eq. 19.

[n] (Va. 1882) The court may change the terms of the sale of property to be made under its decree at any time while the property and the sale remain under control of the court and the sale itself remains unconfirmed.—Tebbs v. Lee, 76 Va. 744.

§ 39. Bond or other security of purchaser.

[a] (Ky. 1851) Where a deputy sheriff was appointed by a decree in chancery to sell certain property and take a bond for the purchase money, and the bond so taken ran to him as deputy sheriff, it was held to be no ground for quashing the bond.—Leavitt v. Goggin, 50 Ky. (11 B. Mon.) 229.

[b] (Ky. 1870) A purchaser at a decretal sale cannot be compelled to execute his bond for the consideration bid by him until defects in the title have been supplied.—Ormsby v. Terry, 69 Ky. (6 Bush) 553.

[c] (Ky. 1877) After the marshal of the court of chancery, on making a sale, has accepted and attested the purchaser's bond for the payment of his bid, he has no power to demand another bond with additional security in lieu of the one thus accepted.—Reamer v. Judah, 76 Ky. (13 Bush) 206.

[d] (Ky. 1877) Where a purchaser at a judicial sale executes a bond with insufficient surety, the court may, on suggestion of that fact, refuse to confirm the bid until further security is given.—Reamer v. Judah, 76 Ky. (13 Bush) 206.

[e] (Ky. 1877) Where a marshal of the court of chancery, on making a sale, has accepted and attested the purchaser's bond for the performance of his bid, a resale of the property cannot be ordered for the purchaser's refusal to give another bond, even though the first surety is deemed insufficient.—Reamer v. Judah, 76 Ky. (13 Bush) 206.

[f] (Ky. 1888) A bond given for the whole purchase price of lands sold in parcels, under order of court, is sufficient.—Preston v. Breckinridge, 86 Ky. 619, 6 S. W. 641.

[g] (Ky. 1888) A purchaser of mortgaged lands at judicial sale gave bonds for a price sufficient to satisfy the mortgage and accrued taxes. Being unable to pay the bonds, he and his surety surrendered the lands into court to be resold. On the second sale, the amount realized was insufficient to pay the mortgage and taxes. Held, that the mortgagee's failure to issue execution upon the bonds for the deficiency within one year after maturity did not release the surety; the delay having been at the latter's instance, to enable him to contest the claim for taxes, and he having agreed in writing to remain bound.—City of Louisville v. Kaye, 8 S. W. 869.

[h] (Ky. 1888) The court may order a purchaser at commissioner's sale under a decree in equity to execute a bond for the price, the purchaser having been summoned to show cause why such rule should not issue, and having failed to present any excuse or defense.—Brassfield v. Burgess, 10 S. W. 122.

[i] (Md. 1892) Where two trustees appointed to sell lands could not agree, after sale, as to the security to be given by the purchaser, and each reported, and the matter in question between them was submitted to the court on such reports and the answer of the purchaser, it was not an abuse of discretion for the court to order the purchaser to give security satisfactory to, and to be approved by, only one of the trustees.—Hopper v. Williams, 75 Md. 191, 23 Atl. 352.

[j] (N. C. 1879) A refusal of the court to order the cancellation of the bond of a purchaser at a judicial sale, without giving reasonable time to perfect the pleadings and bring in necessary parties, was not an error of which the purchaser can justly complain under Code, § 207.—Capel v. Peebles, 80 N. C. 90.

[k] (S. C. 1810) A master in chancery is not bound to take security upon a sale of land, unless security is required by the decree of sale; and his advertising that security will be required does not preclude him from dispensing with it.—Thompson v. Wagner, 3 Desaus. 94.

Co. v. Mason, 145 U. S. 349, 12 Sup. Ct. 887, 36 L. Ed. 732; Marcus v. Same, Id.

[e] (Ky. 1867) An attorney who becomes a purchaser at a judicial sale made for the benefit of his client is not a bona fide purchaser without notice.—Salter v. Dunn, 64 Ky. (1 Bush) 311.

[f] (Mich. 1842) Where a sale of real estate was ordered by a judge of probate, and it appeared that he himself became interested in the purchase, the sale was set aside, and a resale was ordered to be made under the direction of the court.—Walton v. Torrey, Har. 259.

[g] (Pa. 1857) Where, in trespass for the sale of property in transitu against a sheriff, the goods are sold pending the suit, the parties agreeing it should not affect their right, the plaintiff has as good a right to purchase as any person, and is like a stranger to the transaction.—Eby v. Schumacher, 29 Pa. (5 Casey) 40.

[h] (S. C. 1876) A purchase at a judicial sale, made by a solicitor in the cause for the benefit of himself and the commissioner making the sale, will be set aside without asking for proof of fraud, on the ground that the parties have a position and duties at the sale which forbid their becoming purchasers.—McCelvey v. Thomson, 7 S. C. (7 Rich.) 185.

[i] (W. Va. 1885) If a person selling land as a commissioner of a court becomes himself the purchaser, or has any understanding at the time of the sale that he is to have any interest in the purchase of the sale, the sale will be set aside at the instance of any party interested in the land.—Ayers v. Blair, 26 W. Va. 558.

VII. BIDS.

(A) IN GENERAL, §§ 41-48.
(B) FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH BID, §§ 49-56.

(A) IN GENERAL.

PUFFING, § 42.
AGREEMENTS TO STIFLE BIDDING OR DISCOURAGE COMPETITION, § 43.
ACCEPTANCE OR REJECTION, § 44.
ASSIGNMENT OF BIDS, § 45.
WITHDRAWAL OF BID, § 46.
PAYMENT, § 47.
—— PURCHASE BY CREDITOR, § 48.

Price received at judicial sale as evidence of value, see "Evidence," vol. 20, cc. 390–392, § 280.
Refusal to accept security offered by bidder, survival of cause of action, see "Abatement and Revival," vol. 1, c. 192, § 257 [e].

[a] (Ill. 1880) Where one empowered to make a public sale of land received by letter a bid of a certain amount, for which the land was struck off to such bidder, the bid being openly announced, and the sale in all respects regularly and fairly conducted, held, that no ground was shown for setting aside the sale.—Wenner v. Thornton, 98 Ill. 156.

[b] (Ky. 1875) Public sales are governed by the same law as private contracts. The parties thereto must assent or agree, and the agreement must be obligatory and mutual.—Grotenkemper v. Achtermeyer, 74 Ky. (11 Bush) 222.

[c] (Ky. 1889) At a decretal sale, H. and C., contestants for the property to be sold, made the same bid at the same time. The commissioner making the sale heard only the bid of H. and after crying it the hammer fell, and the commissioner announced that the property was sold to H., and the latter's name was written down as the purchaser. C. then claimed that he was the purchaser. Held, that it was proper for the commissioner while both parties were present, to again offer the property for sale.—Head v. Clark, 88 Ky. 362, 11 S. W. 203.

[d] (La. 1852) The debtor has a legal right to have his property sold for a certain price, and when the price is uncertain, as when the bid is not for so much over the mortgages stated in the certificate, but for so much, subject to the amounts which might be actually due under them, the sale is null.—Pickersgill v. Brown, 7 La. Ann. 297.

[e] (Md. 1847) A stranger called on the trustee of a court, about to offer property at public sale, and inquired what was his limit of sale, and was informed from $12,000 to $15,000, and the stranger said he would give $13,000, or find a purchaser at that sum; and the auctioneer, the agent of the trustee, casually heard, in a conversation between bystanders, that either A. or the trustee remarked that A. would give $13,000 for the property. The auctioneer then said to his clerk, who was in fact conducting the biddings, "You have a bid for $13,000," the purchaser's name not being announced, and the clerk, after crying the property for some time, receiving no advance upon the bid from the company, struck off the property to A., who agreed thereto. Held, that whether the bid was made by A. or some other person acting for him was immaterial; it not being necessary or usual to announce the name of the bidder, or necessary to be known.—Cohen v. Wagner, 6 Gill, 236.

[f] (Tenn. 1883) An offer to bid at a judicial sale, if an assurance of a good title can be given, cannot be entertained.—Irby v. Irby, 79 Tenn. (11 Lea) 165.

[g] (Va. 1888) Refusal to allow one not a party to the creditors' suit to file his petition, offering for the land to be sold $800—$125 cash, balance in one, two, and three years, without interest,—is not error; the master having reported it to be worth $900, and it having cost $1,200 without improvements.—Cooper v. Daugherty, 85 Va. 343, 7 S. E. 387.

Puffing at auction sale, see "Auctions and Auctioneers," vol. 5, cc. 2058–2060, § 22.

[a] (N. J. 1869) In the case of a judicial sale, for creditors in whose behalf the sale is made to employ puffers, for the purpose of increasing the price by fictitious bids, is a fraud upon honest bidders; and a buyer whose bid immediately followed one made by a puffer may be relieved from his purchase.—National Bank of Metropolis v. Sprague, 20 N. J. Eq. (5 C. E. Green) 159.

[b] (S. C. 1818) The employment of a person to bid at a public sale on the part of the vendor, so as to run the price up, does not vitiate the sale.—Jenkins v. Hogg, 2 Tread. Const. 821.

Act of hiring another not to bid against purchaser as ground for vacating sale, see post, § 78 [e].

Right of one who has entered into agreement to stifle bidding to have the sale set aside on the ground that he was thus prevented from bidding, see post, § 73 [u].

Agreements to stifle bidding at auction sale, see "Auctions and Auctioneers," vol. 5, cc. 2060–2062, § 23.

Forbearance from bidding at judicial sale as consideration for contract, see "Contracts," vol. 11, c. 283, § 323.

Validity of contracts to stifle bidding at public sales in general, see "Contracts," vol. 11, cc. 620–622, § 655.

[a] A combination to prevent bidding at a sale of real estate is fraudulent, and will raise a constructive trust.

—(Ill. 1886) Devine v. Harkness, 117 Ill. 145, 7 N. E. 52;

(Mo. 1879) Baier v. Berberich, 6 Mo. App. 537, affirmed (1883) 77 Mo. 413;

(Va. 1873) Underwood v. McVeigh, 23 Grat. 409.

[b] The doctrine that it is illegal for persons intending to purchase at a judicial sale to combine not to bid against each other does not apply to cases where several creditors, no one of whom would be willing to purchase a property of so large value as that offered, unite to purchase, since such a union is calculated to enhance the price, and not to depreciate it.

(S. C. 1850) Holmes v. Holmes, 3 Rich. Eq. 61.

[c] (Ill. 1867) A person is not entitled to protection as a bona fide purchaser at a judicial sale who, after falsely representing to the party in interest that it has been postponed, combines with the sheriff to forestall competition by selling as secretly as possible, and bids off the property at a very inadequate price, in this case, one-thirtieth of the actual value.—Dutcher v. Leake, 44 Ill. 398.

[d] (Ill. 1894) While a sale was in progress, one of the bidders made arrangements with the others, whereby, in consideration of various agreements made by him, they ceased to bid, and he obtained the property for less than its market value. Held, that the sale was voidable.—Ingalls v. Rowell, 149 Ill. 163, 36 N. E. 1016.

[e] (Miss. 1875) Where lands were sold under a decree of chancery by a commissioner, and a portion of the distributees combined and agreed not to bid against each other, and they prevented competition at the sale by promising to divide their purchase with other bidders, if they would not bid, and thereby prevented bidding, and became the purchasers of the land at a price far below its value, held, that the sale should not be confirmed.—Swefford v. Garmon, 51 Miss. 348.

[f] (Pa. 1885) Where a lien creditor agreed to bid for and purchase his debtor's property, at a sale by order of the orphans' court, at a sum sufficient to cover prior liens, in satisfaction of his claim, a stipulation that the debtor should not compete in the bidding is not contrary to the rule of public policy which avoids agreements to abstain from bidding at a public sale.—Neely v. McClure (Com. Pl.) 1 Atl. 719.

[g] (S. C. 1845) Any agreement or combination, the object and effect of which is to chill a judicial sale and stifle competition, is illegal, and no party to the agreement or combination can derive any benefit from the sale.—Hamilton v. Hamilton, 2 Rich. Eq. 355, 46 Am. Dec. 58.

[h] (S. C. 1845) Property was about to be sold at judicial sale. A. had determined to bid at the sale. B. proposed that A. should not bid, and that B. should purchase the property with a view to a resale for the benefit of A. and B., who were sureties of the judgment debtor, thereby to indemnify them for their liabilities. B. also bought a judgment against the execution debtor to prevent the creditor from being present at the sale. On the application of creditors, the agreement between A. and B. was held illegal, and the sale set aside.—Hamilton v. Hamilton, 2 Rich. Eq. 355, 46 Am. Dec. 58.

[i] (S. C. 1850) To render a purchase at a public sale under a decree in chancery void, because the biddings were joint or there was a partnership among the bidders, it must appear that there was a fraudulent intent to depress and chill the sale, to get the property at an undervalue, or to obtain other undue advantages.—Holmes v. Holmes, 3 Rich. Eq. 61.

[j] (S. C. 1886) Land belonging to a decedent was sold and bid in by M., the decedent's son, payment to be made in two annual installments. The bond for the price was signed by M. and his three sisters, who were all living on the land. Most of the payments were made by the sisters, but they were entered as for M., and the deed was made to him individually. The brother and sisters continued to live together until two of the sisters had married. M. died, leaving a widow and children. The widow administered on his estate, and a debt was recovered against her as administratrix. On M.'s death the sisters commenced suit in probate court for partition, claiming that they and M. had equally paid for it. The probate court ruled against the sisters, and, pending their appeal to the court of common pleas, the judgment obtained against M.'s administratrix was levied on the whole land, and it was sold as M.'s land. It was bid in by one of the sisters, and the sheriff's deed made to all of them. At such sale, the attorney for the sisters gave notice of their claim. Afterwards M.'s widow died, and his children brought this action for the land, claiming that the whole land was M.'s; that the sheriff's sale should be set aside as void, on the ground that the sisters combined to chill the bidding, etc. Held, that the notice by their attorney at the sale was made in good faith, and was not sufficient to avoid the sale on the ground of an attempt to chill the bidding.—Reagan v. Bishop, 25 S. C. 585.

[k] (S. C. 1886) The combination by the sisters to purchase the property jointly was not unlawful, there being no intention to prevent free competition.—Reagan v. Bishop, 25 S. C. 585.

[l] (Tenn. 1855) Where several parties desire different parts of land to be sold at a chancery sale, neither of them desiring the whole, an agreement to purchase it jointly and make division is not a fraudulent combination to avoid competition, and will not vitiate the sale.—McMinn's Legatees v. Phipps, 35 Tenn. (3 Sneed) 196.

[a] (U. S. 1889) The acceptance or rejection of a bid at a sale under a chancery decree is within the sound discretion of the court, to be exercised with due regard to the special circumstances of the case.—Camden v. Mayhew, 129 U. S. 73, 9 Sup. Ct. 246, 32 L. Ed. 608.

[b] (U. S. 1885) The purchaser at a judicial sale cannot be compelled to complete his purchase until his bid has been in some form accepted by the court, which stands in place of a vendor, using the master merely to receive and report bids.—Mayhew v. West Virginia Oil & Oil Land Co. (C. C.) 24 Fed. 205.

[c] (U. S. 1894) Where, at a sale for cash, the purchaser gives a check for less amount than the price, offering to pay the balance next day, he cannot complain where his bid is rejected, and a sale made to the next lowest bidder.—United States v. The Haytian Republic (D. C.) 64 Fed. 214.

[d] (Ky. 1859) Bids for property sold by order of the chancellor are mere propositions, to be rejected by him in the exercise of a reasonable discretion, if the sale has not been perfectly fair, or if an unconscientious advantage has been obtained by the purchaser.—Vanbussum v. Maloney, 59 Ky. (2 Metc.) 550.

[e] (Ky. 1888) The commissioner refused to accept the bid of the debtor, but subsequently the chancellor granted him the privilege of giving bond, and taking the property at his bid, which he failed to do. Held, that exceptions to the commissioner's report were properly overruled, as the debtor had the full benefit of his offer.—Creutz v. Knecht, 6 S. W. 717.

[f] (Md. 1830) To prevent a person from baffling the court by becoming the highest bidder at a sale under a decree when he is wholly unable to comply with his contract, the court may direct that the bid of such person shall not be received, and that the trustee report the two highest bidders, so that, in case the highest bidder fails to comply with the terms of sale, the next highest bidder shall be received and considered as the purchaser.—In re Murdock, 2 Bland, 461, 20 Am. Dec. 381.

[g] (Pa. 1881) The bid of the highest bidder at a master's sale in chancery is but an offer to purchase, subject to the approval of the court, and the court may or may not accept it, in its discretion.—Church v. Bailee, 2 Leg. Rec. Rep. 169, 29 Pittsb. Leg. J. 20.

Champertous nature of assignment of bid after sale is set aside, see "Champerty and Maintenance," vol. 9, c. 2055, § 84 [i].

[a] A bidder at a sale of a clerk and master in equity may assign his bid, and a deed to such assignee passes the title.
—(N. Y. 1836) Proctor v. Farnam, 5 Paige, 614; (N. C. 1858) Campbell v. Baker, 51 N. C. (6 Jones, Law) 255.

[b] (N. Y. 1836) Where the purchaser at a master's sale assigns his bid before receiving a deed, the court will, on application by the assignee, direct the execution of a conveyance directly to him.—Proctor v. Farnam, 5 Paige, 614.

[c] (N. Y. 1890) Where the purchaser at a referee's sale makes the cash payment, and assigns his bid with the understanding that his assignee is to procure a loan to complete the purchase, which he fails to do, the assignee acquires no title to the cash payment.—Flint v. George, 55 Hun, 604, 8 N. Y. Supp. 221.

[e] (S. C. 1876) Where a purchaser at a sale under the decree of an ordinary transfers his bid to a third party, the fact that the ordinary takes security from such transferee does not discharge the bidder.—Reynolds v. Timmons, 7 S. C. (7 Rich.) 486.

[f] (Tenn. 1870) The assignment of a bid by the bidders to whom property was sold at a judicial sale, after the sale has been set aside and other bids opened and a sale had, is a sale of a pretended claim, and is illegal.—Newland v. Gaines, 48 Tenn. (1 Heisk.) 720.

[a] (Neb. 1894) After the acceptance of a bid, it cannot be withdrawn or changed, except under such circumstances as would justify the rescission or reformation of other contracts.—Nebraska Loan & Trust Co. v. Hamer, 40 Neb. 281, 58 N. W. 695.

[b] (N. J. 1869) When a bidder at a master's sale discloses to the master that he is not prepared to comply with the terms of sale, it is not improper for the master to refuse his application for leave to withdraw his bid, and to direct the property to be struck off to him, and thereby compel him to announce openly that he cannot comply.—National Bank of Metropolis v. Sprague, 20 N. J. Eq. (5 C. E. Green) 159.

Authority of master to receive payment of bonds given for purchase price, see ante, § 20 [n].
Necessity for payment of bid before conveyance, see post, § 119 [l].

[a] Where a purchaser at judicial sale pays the price to the commissioner before the commissioner has given and the clerk has approved the bond required by the decree, he pays at his own risk, and, if the commissioner misappropriates the money, the land continues liable for the price; and this though the purchaser made inquiry of the clerk, who misinformed him that the bond had been given.

(N. C. 1867) McNeill v. Shaw, 62 N. C. 91.

[c] (U. S. 1889) Where a decree required that a judicial sale should be made for cash on the day of the sale, payment in cash on that day is a condition precedent to the right of the purchaser to demand a confirmation.—Camden v. Mayhew, 129 U. S. 73, 9 Sup. Ct. 246, 32 L. Ed. 608.

[d] (Ala. 1883) A delay by register for two days to collect the money bid on a sale under a decree will not avoid the sale if no injury resulted from the delay.—Chilton v. Alabama Gold Life Ins. Co., 74 Ala. 290.

[e] (Ark. 1859) In case of a sale of lands under a decree ordering a sale thereof to satisfy liens thereon for cash, though the plaintiff is entitled, stricti juris, to payment in specie, still, since in ordinary business transactions it is not usually required, payment should be allowed by certified check or other means recognized in ordinary business transactions.—Penn's Adm'r v. Tolleson, 20 Ark. 652.

[f] (Ark. 1876) A purchaser of lands under a decree requiring them to be sold for cash acquires no title thereto until payment by him of the amount of his bid.—Phelps v. Jackson, 31 Ark. 272.

[g] (Ky. 1835) Where a decree directed a sale to be made for bank notes, and the commissioner reported that he had sold for a certain number of dollars, and the report referred directly to the decree, and stated that the sale was made in pursuance of the decree, it was held that there was sufficient evidence to show that the words were used to express a sum in bank notes, and not in specie.—Riley v. Wiley, 33 Ky. (3 Dana) 75.

[h] (Ky. 1870) A payment by the purchaser at a decretal sale does not discharge him from his liability unless the court has by its order directed the collection and receipt of the funds. But if payment is made to one to whom the court might have ordered it to be paid, such payment may be afterward recognized and sanctioned.—Herndon v. Lancaster's Adm'rs, 69 Ky. (6 Bush) 483.

[i] (N. Y. 1835) A resale of premises sold by a master was decreed, provided a certain sum should be bid therefor; and in pursuance of the order the premises were put up at auction and struck off to the petitioner for the sum specified in the order, whereupon the master, for the first time, in compliance with the direction of a party interested in the sale, informed the petitioner that the purchase money must be paid in specie; and though the petitioner offered to pay the amount of his bid in current bank bills, or by a draft upon the bank in which the money was to be deposited by the master, the premises were again put up to sale on the terms of immediate payment in specie, and, no one being able to comply with those terms, the master declared the sale closed, and reported that the condition of the resale had not been complied with. Held, that the conduct of the master was unjustifiable and oppressive; and his report was set aside, and he was ordered to convey to the petitioner on payment by him of the amount of his bid.—Baring v. Moore, 5 Paige, 48.

[j] (Tenn. 1883) When a judicial sale is made by a master, and he has reason to doubt the good faith of a bidder, he may demand an immediate compliance with the terms of sale.—Irby v. Irby, 79 Tenn. (11 Lea) 165.

[k] (Va. 1871) Where a judicial sale of land was made in 1863, an order authorizing the commissioner to collect the purchase money presumptively authorized the collection thereof in Confederate currency.—Dixon v. McCue's Adm'x, 21 Grat. 373.

[l] (Va. 1873) Where the terms of a judicial sale provided that a portion of the purchase money should be on credit to be paid in the currency in use when the payment fell due, and at the time the bond of the purchaser given therefor fell due, the currency of the United States was in use, held that it must be paid in the latter money, although Confederate currency was in use at the time of the sale and execution of the bond.—Teel v. Yancey, 23 Grat. 691.

[m] (Va. 1874) In August, 1860, D., as commissioner, sold to M. certain land on a credit of one, two, and three years, taking his bonds for the purchase money. In October, 1861, M., under authority of court, deposited in a bank the amount of his first and second bonds. Subsequently D. collected the third bond, depositing the money in the same bank, and reporting his action to the court, which report was confirmed. Held, that it must be presumed that the court upon confirmation of this report knew that the deposits were made in Confederate money, and therefore neither M. nor D. was bound to repay the amount.—Mead v. Jones, 24 Grat. 347.

[n] (Va. 1875) M. bought land at a judicial sale in 1859, and gave his bonds payable annually down to 1863. He paid all but the last bond, and paid on that $2,000 in Confederate money; and a few days afterwards offered to pay the balance to the commissioner in Confederate money, who refused to receive it. M. then filed his petition, stating that he owed this balance, and that the commissioner refused to receive it; that he was ready to pay it, and asking that he might be authorized to pay it, and that the commissioner might be directed to convey the land to him. The court decreed that M. be authorized to pay to the general receiver the balance due, stating the amount, and upon its payment a commissioner named should convey the land to M. Held, that the decree did not authorize M. to pay in Confederate money, and a payment to the receiver in that money was not a discharge of M.'s debt.—Myers v. Nelson, 26 Grat. 729.

[o] (Va. 1880) During the Rebellion, a purchaser gave to a commissioner at a sale under an order of court, in part payment of the purchase price, a check upon a party who admitted his indebtedness to the drawer, but did not pay it, of which the purchaser had notice. Held, that this was not a valid payment, and that the purchaser must account for such part of the price, at the scaled value thereof at the day of sale, with interest from the end of the six months' credit allowed by the commissioner at the sale.—Finney v. Edwards, 75 Va. 44.

[p] (Va. 1885) Where, under a judicial sale, the purchaser's liability is to pay money, it cannot be discharged in any other thing, against the wish of any party in interest.—Frazier v. Hendren, 80 Va. 265.

[q] (Va. 1888) A purchaser at judicial sale who pays the price to a receiver before the latter has given bond, as ordered by the court, may be made to pay again, on the receiver's failure to account for the money, though the latter afterwards gave bond.—Woods v. Ellis, 85 Va. 471, 7 S. E. 852.

[r] (Va. 1895) Where the purchaser at a judicial sale pays the purchase money to the commissioner before the latter has given bond as required by the order of sale, he is not exonerated from liability to pay a second time by reason of the fact that the commissioner was attorney for the judgment creditor.—Shumate v. Williams, 22 S. E. 808.

[a] (U. S. 1889) Where a judicial sale is directed to be for cash, and the property is purchased by a trustee of part of the creditors, the court is not bound to depart from the terms of the sale and apply their claims in payment of the purchase money.—Camden v. Mayhew, 129 U. S. 73, 9 Sup. Ct. 246, 32 L. Ed. 608.

[b] (La. 1884) On a judicial sale of real estate of a succession, a judgment creditor of the heir becoming the purchaser must pay to the sheriff as much of the amount of adjudication as may be required to meet judicial mortgages registered previous to his own, if such mortgagees have, by third opposition, duly claimed preference. In default thereof the sheriff must immediately resell; otherwise, he will be held responsible for consequent loss.—Dobard v. Bayhi, 36 La. Ann. 134.

[a] (Ky. 1891) Land was sold at decretal sale at a stated sum per acre. The master commissioner told the purchaser that he would have the land surveyed the next day, at which time the purchaser could give bond for the price. The next day, the surveyor having made a mistake, the commissioner deferred taking the bond until a resurvey could be had. He told the purchaser that this would be done in 8 or 10 days, and that he would then notify the purchaser, so that the bond could be given. The notice was not given until 52 days thereafter. Held, that the delay was unreasonable, and justified a refusal to complete the purchase.—Arnett v. Anderson's Adm'r, 15 S. W. 855.

[b] (La. 1858) If the purchaser at a judicial sale refuses to comply with the terms, he is considered as never having been owner; saving to the vendor his right to compel a specific performance of the contract.—Washburn v. Green, 13 La. Ann. 332.

[c] (La. 1888) The failure of the adjudicatee at a judicial sale to pay the price gives the vendor the right to demand the rescission of the sale, though the property may have passed from the possession of the adjudicatee.—McKenzie v. Bacon, 40 La. Ann. 157, 4 South. 65.

[d] (Miss. 1843) Where a purchaser at a judicial sale fails to comply with the conditions, the property remains in the hands of the commissioner unsold, and he cannot receive from a third person a bond for the amount bid by the purchaser, and convey to him.—Vanneerson v. Cord, 1 Smedes & M. Ch. 345.

[e] (S. C. 1844) The neglect of the purchaser for cash, at an official sale, to pay the purchase money for any considerable time (two months in this case) is a forfeiture of his right to enforce the sale.—Seymour v. Preston, Speers, Eq. 481.

[f] (Va. 1877) Where a purchaser at a judicial sale relies on a mistake as ground for failure to complete his purchase, the objection to the sale should be made to the court as soon as the mistake is discovered by the purchaser.—Long v. Weller's Ex'r, 29 Grat. 347.

deficiency resulting therefrom.—Camden v. Mayhew, 129 U. S. 73, 9 Sup. Ct. 246, 32 L. Ed. 608.

[e] (U. S. 1827) If the purchaser of lots at a sale under a decree of court neglects to pay the purchase money, and suffers them to be sold for taxes, the court will, upon the petition of the trustee, order so much of the property to be resold as will pay the taxes and redeem the residue.—Hearne v. Barry, Fed. Cas. No. 6,303 [3 Cranch, C. C. 168].

[f] (Ga. 1878) The commissioner of the superior court offered certain land, which was in litigation, for sale in parcels. A. bid off the first parcel, and B. the second. A. failed to pay in cash, and the whole land was resold at a higher price. The court sustained the sale, but offered to order a resale if B. would petition for it, but he would not, and excepted. Held, that the decision should be sustained.—Walters v. Hargrove, 61 Ga. 267.

[g] (Ind. 1843) Commissioners appointed by the court to sell land, who sell the same, and take a note of the purchaser for a part of the price, cannot file a bill to have the land sold to pay such note.—West v. Thornburgh, 6 Blackf. 542.

[h] (Ky. 1848) Where land was sold under a decree in equity and bonds given for the purchase money, and the conditions of the bonds were broken, and an order of resale made after great delay caused by the purchaser, but the order for the resale did not specify the exact sum due, there having been several payments, it was held that the court had full power to make an order of resale, but that it ought to specify the balance due.—Page v. Hughes, 48 Ky. (9 B. Mon.) 115.

[i] (Ky. 1889) Where a judicial sale was rightly set aside, the court resumed absolute control of the property, and had the power, by a supplemental order, to direct a resale.—Johnson v. Johnson, 88 Ky. 275, 11 S. W. 5.

[j] (Ky. 1890) In the absence of notice to the purchaser that the sale bond given by him would be quashed because of the insolvency of the surety, a second sale of the property is invalid.—Butts v. Alderson, 14 S. W. 493.

[k] (Ky. 1891) Where a purchaser at a sale of land by a commissioner in equity refuses to pay the purchase money, and an execution issued against him on the purchase-money bonds is returned, "No property found," the chancellor may direct a resale of the land as the land of the purchaser.—Dean v. Gritton, 15 S. W. 1061.

[l] (Md. 1828) Where property has been sold under a decree of the court of chancery, the court, as vendor for those interested, retains an equitable lien thereon for the purchase money, which may be enforced by a resale.—Anderson v. Foulke, 2 Har. & G. 346.

[m] (Md. 1869) Where a party purchased real estate under the decree of a court of equity, and having made the cash payment, gave to the trustee his bond, with approved security, for the payment of the balance of the purchase money, held that, upon default in making the credit payments as they became due, the court might, upon petition by the trustee, order a resale of the property at the risk of the purchaser.—Stephens v. Magruder, 31 Md. 168.

[n] (Md. 1881) Where property is sold under order of court in an equity suit, and afterwards resold because of the failure of the purchaser to make the deferred payments, although he is not entitled to demand that the cash installment paid by him be refunded, such installment is not forfeited because it is allowed as a credit.—Brundige v. Morrison, 56 Md. 407.

[o] (Md. 1881) Where one bids off property at a sale under order of court in an equity suit, and, after paying one installment of the purchase money, dies, his administrator is properly ordered to pay the balance into court upon a petition filed for that purpose, and after failure to make such payment accordingly, an order of resale at the risk of the estate of the deceased purchaser is properly granted.—Brundige v. Morrison, 56 Md. 407.

[p] (Miss. 1843) Where the purchaser at a judicial sale fails to comply with his bid, the commissioner may advertise and sell again, and continue to do so until a sale is effected, unless prohibited by the decree on its face, or his authority is limited in time.—Vannerson v. Cord, 1 Smedes & M. Ch. 345.

[q] (Neb. 1879) Where a purchaser at a judicial sale refuses to comply with his bid, the officer may at once resell the property, but he cannot wait until the sale is closed, and the bidders have departed, before again offering the property for sale.—Jones v. Null, 9 Neb. 254, 2 N. W. 350.

[r] (N. Y. 1839) Upon a sale by a master, if the bidder to whom the property is struck off refuses to complete the purchase, the master should not allow another person to take the property at the former bid, but should order a resale.—Thompson v. Dimond, 3 Edw. Ch. 298.

[s] (N. Y. 1839) By the conditions of a master's sale the biddings were to remain open until the deposit was paid. The bidder to whom the property was struck off refused to complete the sale, and his name was not booked by the auctioneer, and he did not sign the memorandum of sale. Held, that no order was necessary to authorize a resale.—Hewlett v. Davis, 3 Edw. Ch 338.

[t] (N. Y. 1842) An order for a resale of premises sold by a master, made without notice to a defendant who has appeared in the suit, and who has an interest in the property, is irregular.—Robinson v. Meigs, 10 Paige, 41.

[u] (N. C. 1862) Where a court of equity is resorted to for the sale of land, after the sale is ordered to be confirmed (by which the bid becomes accepted), if the master informs the court that the bidder refuses to comply with the terms of the sale, no order prejudicing the rights of the bidder can be made until he is made a party to the proceedings by the service of a rule upon him to show cause.—In re Yates, 59 N. C. 306.

[uu] (N. C. 1879) A surety upon a note for the purchase money of land sold under a decree of court has the right, on default of his principal, to require a resale in exoneration of his liability.—Ex parte Pettillo, 80 N. C. 50.

[v] (Pa. 1850) Where defendant suffered a resale of property to go on without notice to him of proceedings to set aside the original sale, he could have no relief on account of the irregularity.—Ingersol v. Sherry, 1 Phila. 68.

[vv] (Pa. 1858) Where a judicial sale falls through because of the default of the buyer, and there is ground for believing that the purchase was made without any intention to pay for it, in pursuance of a preconcerted scheme, it is within the power of the court to make the terms of the second sale cash (though the terms of the first had been credit), and to require the whole or part of the price to be paid down at the time of the bid.—Whilden v. Singerly, 3 Phila. 218.

[w] (S. C. 1832) The terms of a commissioner's sale of negroes were a credit of one, two, and three years, the purchaser giving a bond and mortgage, "the titles to be made, but not delivered until the payment of the first installment, and on nonpayment the commissioner shall resell for cash at the risk of the former purchaser." The purchaser, though taking possession, gave neither bond nor mortgage. Shortly after the sale he sold the negroes to plaintiff, with notice of the incumbrance, in whose possession they were afterwards seized and resold by the commissioner, under the terms of the order requiring a resale on nonpayment of the first installment. On trover brought by plaintiff against the commissioner, held that he could not recover, as the commissioner, by permitting the negroes to go into the possession of the purchaser, had not waived the right to resell on nonpayment of the first installment.—Singleton v. Heriott, 3 Rich. Law, 321.

[ww] (Tenn. 1872) On default of a purchaser at a judicial sale to pay the balance due, the chancellor may, on motion, and without notice, render decree against him, directing the land to be advertised and resold for cash, and without the right of redemption, if the balance due is not paid within 60 days from the rendition of the decree.—Munson v. Payne, 56 Tenn. (9 Heisk.) 672; Mosby v. Hunt, Id. 675.

[x] (Tenn. 1890) Where a purchaser at master's sale refuses to pay his bid, and the court thereupon refuses to release him and orders a resale at his risk and expense, he is not entitled to any benefit from the resale in case the property brings a larger price than before.—Chase v. Joiner, 88 Tenn. (4 Pickle) 761, 14 S. W. 331.

[xx] (Va. 1857) Where there has been a sale of land under a decree of a court of chancery, and the purchaser has complied with the terms of the sale, and there is no necessity for a speedy collection of the purchase money, and no proof of the insolvency of the purchaser or his sureties, the court will not order a resale.—Gross v. Pearcy, 2 Pat. & H. 483.

[y] (Va. 1859) A decree ordered land to be sold to be paid for by installments, the title to be retained by the commissioner as security until all was paid; upon nonpayment the purchaser was ruled to show cause why the land should not be sold for payment, and therefore a sale be decreed.—Clarkson v. Read, 15 Grat. 288.

[yy] (Va. 1877) Where a judicial sale of land is made upon a credit, and the title retained as a security, upon a rule against the purchaser to show cause why the land should not be resold for his failure to pay the purchase money, before making a decree for the sale, the court should ascertain how much of the purchase money is due, and should, in the decree, give him a day in which to pay it; and, if not paid in that time, the commissioner to sell.—Long v. Weller's Ex'r, 29 Grat. 347.

[z] (Va. 1885) The court may order a resale for a default in payment, without first exhausting collaterals deposited with the commissioner by the purchaser, especially when the collaterals cannot be made available without a suit.—Mosby v. Withers' Ex'rs, 80 Va. 82.

[zz] (Va. 1890) Under Code 1887, § 3397, providing that a court may order the sale of property upon such terms as it may deem best, an order of resale of land which shortens the terms of credit from one, two, and three years, allowed in the first sale, to six, twelve, and eighteen months, is neither harsh nor inequitable, where it appears that the judgment debtor bought in the land at the first sale, and has made default in payment of the purchase money, thus rendering a resale necessary.—Dickinson v. Clement, 87 Va. 41, 12 S. E. 105.

[a] (La. 1858) Where the refusal of a purchaser at a judicial sale to comply with the contract is recognized by a final judgment ordering the property to be resold at the risk of the purchaser, it is a complete divestiture of any right under the first adjudication, and this effect will be produced even if the purchaser be a mortgagee or privileged creditor of the succession.—Washburn v. Green, 13 La. Ann. 332.

[b] (S. C. 1888) On the failure of the purchaser at a judicial sale to comply with its terms, the court made an order requiring him to show cause. The purchaser failed to do so, but filed with the master his written consent that the lands should be resold at his risk, and during the pendency of the proceeding to compel the purchaser to comply with said terms, and without any new order of sale, the master resold the lands for an inadequate price. Held, that the master had no power to make the latter sale, and that it was invalid and must be set aside.—Paulk v. Paulk, 28 S. C. 481, 6 S. E. 330.

§ 52. —— Liability of purchaser for deficiency on resale and enforcement thereof.

Right of purchaser to be compensated for deficiency on account of defects in title, see post, § 100.

Waiver of claim for deficiency, see post, § 103 [a, b].

[a] Where a resale of property is ordered because of the purchaser's failure to comply with his bid, he will be charged with any deficiency which may arise.

—(Ga. 1885) Sproull v. Seay, 74 Ga. 676;
(Ky. 1896) Tyler v. Guthrie, 33 S. W. 934;
(N. C. 1879) In re Pettillo, 80 N. C. 50;
(Tenn. 1871) Fulton v. Davidson, 50 Tenn. (3 Heisk.) 614.

[b] In order to hold an adjudicatee, who refuses to comply with his bid, responsible for a deficiency, under a sale à la folle enchère, the property offered at the second offering must be identical in substance and in description, and the conditions must be the same and on the same terms as they were at the first offering.

—(La. 1882) Labauve v. McCabe, 34 La. Ann. 183;
(N. J. 1845) Shinn v. Roberts, 20 N. J. Law (Spencer) 435, 43 Am. Dec. 636;
(Pa. 1882) Weast v. Derrick, 100 Pa. 509.

[c] (U. S. 1889) It is not necessary that a judicial sale should have been confirmed in order to render a purchaser liable for a deficiency arising on a resale because of his failure to comply with his bid.—Camden v. Mayhew, 129 U. S. 73, 9 Sup. Ct. 246, 32 L. Ed. 608.

[d] (U. S. 1889) At a sale under order of court for the benefit of creditors, the sale to be for "cash in hand," C.'s bid was accepted, but, instead of paying cash, he offered a contract between himself and certain of the creditors, whereby he was to buy the land, apply their claims in payment of the price, and hold the land as trustee. The sale was reported, and the court offered to confirm it, provided C. would pay the amount of his bid in cash. This he refused to do, relying upon his contract with the creditors, whereupon the court ordered a resale, and subsequently entered a decree against C. for the deficiency between his bid and the proceeds of the resale, and for the extra costs. Held, that a formal confirmation of the sale to C. was not necessary in order to fix his liability for the deficiency.—Camden v. Mayhew, 129 U. S. 73, 9 Sup. Ct. 246, 32 L. Ed. 608, affirming Mayhew v. West Virginia Oil & Oil Land Co. (C. C. 1885) 24 Fed. 205.

[dd] (Ark. 1895) Relief under Mansf. Dig. §§ 3058, 3059, providing that, if any person refuses to pay the amount bid for any property struck off to him, the officer may resell the same and recover the loss by summary proceedings, is obtainable, if at all, in a court of law.—Harder v. Sayle-Stegall Commission Co., 61 Ark. 66, 31 S. W. 979.

[e] (Ga. 1875) A purchaser of property at judicial sale, who fails to comply with the terms of sale, and is sued for the "deficiency of the proceeds of a second sale," cannot set up as a reason for his noncompliance that the property (a city lot) was sold by the front foot, and that he made a mental mistake as to what his bid would amount to.—Alexander v. Herring, 54 Ga. 200.

[f] (Ga. 1885) The liability of a debtor who fails to comply with his bid for a deficiency on resale is not affected by the fact that there was an intermediate sale which was ineffective.—Sproull v. Seay, 74 Ga. 676.

[g] (Ga. 1885) A bidder who fails to comply with his bid is not relieved from liability for a deficiency arising on resale because of a delay in making the resale, where such delay was caused by his request or agreement.—Sproull v. Seay, 74 Ga. 676.

[h] (Ga. 1885) In an action against a debtor for a deficiency arising on resale of the property because of his failure to comply with his bid, it is not necessary to make one who was a bidder at an intermediate sale, which was ineffective, a party.—Sproull v. Seay, 74 Ga. 676.

[i] (Ga. 1893) To render the successful bidder on land at a sale liable for the difference between his bid and what the land brought at a subsequent sale, made necessary by his refusal to comply with his bid, he must have had notice, before the second sale, of the owner's election to resell.—Green v. Ansley, 92 Ga. 647, 19 S. E. 53, 44 Am. St. Rep. 110.

[j] (Ky. 1866) One who has purchased land at a commissioner's sale, and afterwards refused to take it, and induced the court to declare the sale void under the statute of frauds, is estopped from setting up the validity of that sale in answer to a judgment for the difference between his bid and the price brought by the land upon a resale.—Watson's Adm'r v. Violett, 63 Ky. (2 Duv.) 332.

[k] (Ky. 1896) In an action against a purchaser of land at a decretal sale for the difference between his bid and the price received on a resale, the purchaser cannot claim that the sale was invalid because there was no appraisement, as such objection, if available, should have been made on exceptions to the sale.—Tyler v. Guthrie, 33 S. W. 934.

[l] (Md. 1825) Where a person allowed himself to be reported by the trustee appointed to make a sale under a decree as the highest bidder, but without any design to delay or baffle the proceedings, and afterwards declared his inability to comply with the terms of the sale, he was discharged, on payment of costs, from his liability in case of a loss by a resale.—Deaver v. Reynolds, 1 Bland, 50.

[m] (Miss. 1890) Where one who bids in land at a public judicial sale refuses to comply with his bid, on which the officer appointed by the court to make the sale, without reporting the sale to the court for confirmation, resells, at public vendue, for a less price than that bid at the first sale, and the second sale is confirmed by the court on a report showing all the facts, the purchaser at the first sale is not liable for the difference in price, as the first sale was not completed until confirmation, and the purchaser was not in default.—Campe v. Saucier, 68 Miss. 278, 8 South. 846, 24 Am. St. Rep. 273.

[n] (N. J. 1845) Where commissioners have sold land under a decree of the orphans' court, and owing to the failure of the purchaser to comply with his contract the property has been resold, the proceedings in the orphans' court and the report of the commissioners are not competent evidence of the number of acres sold, in an action against the purchaser to enforce his liability for a deficiency on resale.—Shinn v. Roberts, 20 N. J. Law (Spencer) 435, 43 Am. Dec. 636.

[o] (Pa. 1856) Where, in a suit against a purchaser at judicial sale for loss on resale of the property, the difference in price and the legal costs of the second sale is under $100, the district court has no jurisdiction.—Lelar v. Gault, 2 Phila. 78.

[p] (Pa. 1858) Where a judicial sale falls through because of the default of the buyer, and there is ground for believing that the purchase was made without any intention to pay for it, in pursuance of a preconcerted scheme, the fact that the court in ordering a resale changed the terms from credit to cash, and required a part of the price to be paid down, does not release the first purchaser from liability for the deficiency on such resale.—Whilden v. Singerly, 3 Phila. 218.

[q] (Pa. 1873) Where a purchaser at judicial sale pays a part of the price and then abandons the sale, the measure of damages for his failure to comply with his bid is the difference between his bid and the bid obtained at the sale.—Appeal of Tindle, 77 Pa. (27 P. F. Smith) 201.

[r] (S. C. 1787) Where the purchaser at a master's sale under a decree refused to comply with the terms of sale, he was ordered to show cause why the property should not be resold; holding such purchaser answerable for the deficiency.—Haig v. Commissioners of Confiscated Estates, 1 Desaus. 144.

[s] (Va. 1887) The liability of the surety on a bond for the price of land sold under a decree of court cannot be enforced, on default of payment, by a rule to show cause why decree should not be entered for the difference between such price and the amount it brought under a subsequent sale; and a decree so entered is void.—Anthony v. Kasey, 83 Va. 338, 5 S. E. 176, 5 Am. St. Rep. 277.

[t] (W. Va. 1895) A purchaser at judicial sale, to be held liable for the difference between his bid and the amount for which the property was sold to another on his refusal to purchase, must be served with a rule, awarded after the sale is reported, to show cause why he should not complete his purchase, or, in default, the property be sold at his expense and risk.—Stout v. Philippi Mfg. & Mercantile Co., 41 W. Va. 339, 23 S. E. 571, 56 Am. St. Rep. 843.

[a] (Ala. 1876) Where lands are sold by the register in chancery, the purchaser's remedy to prevent a resale is by petition for a confirmation of the original sale, and not by an original bill to enjoin.—Haralson v. George's Ex'r, 56 Ala. 295.

[b] (La. 1872) Where a purchaser of real estate at a judicial sale has failed to pay the price bid by him, he cannot maintain an injunction to restrain another sale of the property, on the ground that he is the owner.—Losee v. Santon, 24 La. Ann. 370.

[c] (La. 1894) One who has failed to comply with his bid at judicial sale, which has been declared forfeited by a judgment of court not suspensively appealed from, is without interest to enjoin the subsequent sale made necessary by such failure.—Boyer v. Cannon, 46 La. Ann. 767, 15 South. 86.

[c] (Ky. 1873) A purchaser at a judicial sale is not excused from compliance with his purchase by the fact that between the date of sale and its confirmation the property was partially destroyed by fire.—Vance's Adm'r v. Foster, 72 Ky. (9 Bush) 389.

[d] (La.) The surety of a purchaser at a judicial sale is not bound in solido with the principal.—(1847) Dees v. Tildon, 2 La. Ann. 412; (1854) Tildon v. Dees, 9 La. Ann. 250.

[e] (N. Y.) A purchaser at a master's sale will not be compelled to complete the purchase in case it would not be perfectly just and conscientious in an individual to insist upon specific performance, if the sale had been made by him.—(1832) Veeder v. Fonda, 3 Paige, 94; (1833) Laight v. Pell, 1 Edw. Ch. 577.

[f] (N. Y. 1845) An announcement by the master, after the property has been struck off at a sale made by him, that if the purchaser does not comply with the terms of the sale it will be resold at his expense, does not discharge the purchaser from his bid.—National Fire Ins. Co. v. Loomis, 11 Paige, 431.

[g] (S. C. 1881) One who buys property at a judicial sale is liable for interest on the unpaid portion of the amount that was required by the order of sale to be paid in cash.—Childs v. Frazee, 16 S. C. 612.

Enforcement of liability for deficiency on resale, see ante, § 52.

[a] A purchaser under a decree submits himself to the jurisdiction of the court as to all matters connected with the purchase so that he may be proceeded against by motion in the cause, without the institution of original proceedings.

(N. Y. 1817) Brasher v. Cortlandt, 2 Johns. Ch. 505;

(S. C. 1784) Haig v. Commissioners of Confiscated Estates, 1 Desaus. 112.

[c] (U. S. 1838) In the case of a covenant with surety to pay the purchase money given by the purchaser on a sale under a decretal order, a court of equity will by attachment compel performance as against both principal and surety.—Wood v. Mann, Fed. Cas. No. 17,954 [3 Sumn. 318].

[d] (Ala. 1875) The chancery court has no jurisdiction to render a decree against one not a party to the suit, and connected with it merely as prochein ami, for the amount bid by the complainants for lands sold under order of the court and reported as paid by the register, who, under agreement of parties, had accepted the draft of the prochein ami in satisfaction of the bid. Execution issued on such a decree is void.—Moore v. Randolph, 52 Ala. 530.

[e, f] (Ky. 1882) A purchaser at a decretal sale failing to sue out injunction, or to deposit the amount of his sale bond in court, had no right to retain the money until another suit was decided, and was therefore properly ruled to pay the same into court.—Greer v. M. M. Sav. Bank Ass'n of Newport, 3 Ky. Law Rep. 539.

[g] (Md. 1828) Land was sold under a decree, and the sale ratified after opposition by the purchaser, but neither notes nor bonds for the purchase money were received by the trustee, and the period for payment having expired, the chancellor ordered the purchaser to pay to the trustee, or to bring into court, the purchase money, and interest, before a given day, or to show good cause to the contrary. The purchaser having failed to comply, the chancellor ordered an attachment against him to enforce obedience to his first order. Held, on appeal, that under the circumstances of the case, this power was properly exercised.—Anderson v. Foulke, 2 Har. & G. 346.

[h] (Md. 1831) Where a sale has been made under a decree in chancery and no bond or security is given for the purchase money, the purchaser may, after confirmation, be compelled to complete his purchase by an order on him, in a summary way, to pay the money into court, since the order of confirmation amounts to a decree for the payment of the purchase money, and like other decrees may be summarily enforced in equity.—Richardson v. Jones, 3 Gill & J. 163, 22 Am. Dec. 293.

[i] (Md. 1831) Where a sale has been made under a decree in chancery and a bond given for the purchase price, the liability of the purchaser cannot be enforced by summary judgment against him, since there is a full and perfect remedy at law on the bond.—Richardson v. Jones, 3 Gill & J. 163, 22 Am. Dec. 293.

[j] (Miss. 1845) Since a bill of sale is not necessary to convey title to the purchaser of personal property at a judicial sale, the fact that a bill of sale in such case is defective is not cause for enjoining execution on the sale bond.—Conger v. Robinson, 12 Miss. (4 Smedes & M.) 210.

[k] (N. C. 1867) A court ordering a judicial sale has power to make a decree for the money, after 10 days' notice thereof.—Ex parte Cotten, 62 N. C. 79.

[l] (N. C. 1876) Under Rev. Code, c. 31, § 129, a summary judgment may be rendered against the purchaser of land at a judicial sale, and his sureties only upon the order of the court.—Mauney v. Pemberton, 75 N. C. 219.

[m] (N. C. 1878) The only remedy for the collection of notes for the purchase money of land sold under a decree of the probate court, the notes being secured by mortgage on the land, is by motion in such court, and not by an independent action on the notes.—Hoff v. Crafton, 79 N. C. 592.

[n] (Tenn. 1849) The jurisdiction of the court to summarily enforce payment of the purchase money paid at a judicial sale continues until there has been a final disposition of the original cause.—Vanbibber v. Sawyers, 29 Tenn. (10 Humph.) 81, 51 Am. Dec. 694.

[o] (Tenn. 1849) Where property is sold on credit under a decree, the purchaser becomes a party to the suit, and the court may enforce payment of the purchase money.—Vanbibber v. Sawyers, 29 Tenn. (10 Humph.) 81, 51 Am. Dec. 694.

[q] (Tenn. 1865) A. bought land at a sale made by a decree of the circuit court, and gave B. and C. as sureties on the note for the purchase money. A. died before the notes were paid. Held, that the clerk or commissioner could, by motion, obtain judgment against B. and C. without notice, as by becoming sureties they became subject to all orders of court, and were in court.—Whiteside v. Latham, 42 Tenn. (2 Cold.) 91.

[r] (Tenn. 1866) Though a scire facias is the more regular proceeding against a personal representative of the purchaser at judicial sale to compel payment of the purchase money, a notice which informs the party of the nature of his liability, and the time and place at which, and manner in which, the plaintiff seeks to enforce it, is sufficient.—Dibrell v. Williams, 43 Tenn. (3 Cold.) 528.

[s] (Tenn. 1866) Though a purchaser at a master's sale is not a party to a cause in such a way as to make it necessary on his death to revive against his personal representatives, a motion for judgment on the purchase money note cannot be prosecuted against his personal representatives without notice or scire facias.—Dibrell v. Williams, 43 Tenn. (3 Cold.) 528.

[t] (Tenn. 1866) A purchaser at a master's sale is not a party to the cause so as to make it necessary at his death to revive against his personal representatives, but a judgment for the purchase money may be had by motion.—Dibrell v. Williams, 43 Tenn. (3 Cold.) 528.

[u] (Tenn. 1866) The death of the purchaser at a judicial sale, or of one of the parties to the note given for the purchase money, does not defeat the power of the court to summarily enforce payment of the purchase money.—Dibrell v. Williams, 43 Tenn. (3 Cold.) 528.

[v] (Utah, 1889) A purchaser at a sale under a decree of court becomes a quasi party to the suit, and the sale need not be confirmed before proceeding against him to compel him to make good his bid.—Kershaw v. Dyer, 21 Pac. 1000.

[w] (Va. 1857) A purchaser of land at a sale ordered by the court of chancery may be compelled to comply with the terms of sale and complete his purchase by paying cash, if it be a cash sale, or giving bond and security, if it be on time, either by process of contempt, or by a rule to show cause why the land should not be resold.—Gross v. Pearcy, 2 Pat. & H. 483.

[x] (Va. 1882) The purchaser of land at a judicial sale may be proceeded against by rule to compel the payment of an unpaid installment of the purchase money; and it makes no difference that, by fraud or mistake, he has obtained a deed of the land.—Williams v. Blakey, 76 Va. 254.

[a] (Ky. 1886) The purchaser at a judicial sale buys at his peril, and, after confirmation of sale, cannot set up want of title as a defense for nonpayment of the purchase money.—Humphrey's Ex'r v. Wade, 84 Ky. 391, 1 S. W. 648.

[b] (La. 1869) A party having purchased property at probate sale during the war cannot set up in defense to the payment of his obligations that the sale was made on the basis of the value of Confederate notes at the time of the sale, and obtain a reduction of the price to that extent.—Bordelon v. Coco, 21 La. Ann. 671.

[c] (Neb. 1879) Where a purchaser at a judicial sale refuses to comply with his bid, the officer may bring an action for the purchase money.—Jones v. Null, 9 Neb. 254, 2 N. W. 350.

[d] (N. J. 1845) Commissioners who have sold lands under a decree of the orphans' court may bring an action in their own names against a purchaser who has failed to comply with the conditions of sale.—Shinn v. Roberts, 20 N. J. Law (Spencer) 435, 43 Am. Dec. 636.

[e] (Ohio, 1877) In an action to recover the price bid by a purchaser at a master's sale, the buyer cannot set up fraud practiced by co-lien holders by which he was induced to bid more than the property was worth, where the sale has been confirmed, and no effort was made to have it set aside or its confirmation refused.—White v. Raymond, 4 Ohio Dec. 79, 1 Cleve. Law Rep. 6.

[f] (S. C. 1894) A purchaser of property at judicial sale, not made under compulsory process, can set up eviction by paramount title as a defense to an action for the purchase money.—Latimer v. Wharton, 41 S. C. 508, 19 S. E. 855, 44 Am. St. Rep. 739.

[g] (W. Va. 1887) Where a commissioner who made sale of land under decree brings suit, and avers in his bill that the sale had been confirmed, and that he had been appointed commissioner to collect the sale bonds, and exhibits with his bill a decree, which, though not in express terms, authorizes him to collect the sale bonds, the bill and decree will be treated as sufficient to sustain the suit.—Blair v. Core, 29 W. Va. 477, 2 S. E. 826.

VIII. REPORT OR RETURN.

IN GENERAL, § 57.
ERRORS IN REPORT, AND AMENDMENT OR CORRECTION THEREOF, § 58.

[a] (Ky. 1867) The report of a commissioner authorized to make a sale that the sale was made at the court house on a county court day, after sufficient notice, cures a defect in the judgment in not prescribing the time and place of sale, if such omission can be deemed an error.—Doughty v. Moss, 64 Ky. (1 Bush) 161.

[b] (Ky. 1889) A commissioner's report, which does not show for what price the land sold, or that he offered to sell less than the whole tract to pay the debts for which it was liable, will be set aside.—Haney v. McClure, 88 Ky. 146, 10 S. W. 427.

[c] (Ky. 1893) Though Civ. Code, § 696, provides that every "notice" of sale made under an order of court must state for what sum of money the sale is to be made, the "report" of the sale need not contain such statement. —Vissman v. Bryant, 21 S. W. 759.

[d] (La. 1821) The procès verbal of a sale by the parish judge is valid, though in French, as the sale might have been made by any other auctioneer, as which, merely, the parish judge, in such case, is to be regarded.—Melancon's Heirs v. Duhamel, 10 Mart. (O. S.) 225.

[e] (La. 1850) A recital in a procès verbal that the land sold belonged to a succession, referring directly to the adjudication, forms against all parties to it a presumption juris et de jure.—Blanchard v. Allain, 5 La. Ann. 367, 52 Am. Dec. 594.

[f] (La. 1854) A purchaser cannot be compelled to complete a sale in conformity to a procès verbal, which differs from the advertisement and order of sale.—Burke v. His Creditors, 9 La. Ann. 1.

[g] (Me. 1880) When the sale of an equity of redemption is postponed, it should appear in the officer's return that he deems it for the interest of all concerned to postpone the sale, and that he has given notice of the time of such adjournment by public proclamation, as required by Rev. St. c. 76, § 34.—Wilson v. Bucknam, 71 Me. 545.

[h] (Md. 1825) The report of a sale by the trustee appointed to sell property being ratified by the court is conclusive of the terms of sale, in the absence of fraud or mistake.—Brown v. Wallace, 2 Bland, 585.

[i] (Md. 1848) The report of a sale by the trustee is not absolutely necessary to perfect the title of the purchaser.—Harrison v. Harrison, 1 Md. Ch. 331.

[j] (N. Y. 1895) Where a purchaser at a judgment sale is, on motion of his counsel, permitted by an order of the court to pay off taxes on the land and take assignments of the tax leases, the referee's report stating that money for such purpose had been paid to the purchaser, and containing the voucher showing the payment of the taxes, is, in the absence of all contradiction, evidence that the money was paid by such purchaser, as provided in the order.—Oliphant v. Burns, 146 N. Y. 218, 40 N. E. 980.

[k] (Va. 1877) The decree in an action at equity directed the commissioner to sell the land mentioned in the bill, or such a part thereof as might be necessary to satisfy the purposes of the decree. The commissioners reported the sale of a tract which was described in the bill and lying partly in two different counties, but did not show whether the whole of such tract, or only a part lying in one of the counties, was sold. Held, that the sale should be set aside for uncertainty in the report.—Barger v. Buckland, 28 Grat. 850.

[l] (Va. 1877) A commissioner appointed by the court to make a sale of property must make a report of his proceedings, under the decree by which he is appointed, to the court from which he derives his authority, as a basis for the further action of the court.—Crockett v. Sexton, 29 Grat. 46.

[m] (Va. 1893) Where it appears that both commissioners made the second sale, after failure of the bidder at the first sale to comply with its terms, the validity of the second sale cannot be affected by the fact that one of the commissioners declines to join in the report thereof, and himself makes a report asking that the sale to the bidder at the first sale be confirmed, and also for a rule against such bidder to show cause why it should not be done.—Hildreth v. Turner, 89 Va. 858, 17 S. E. 471.

§ 58. Errors in report, and amendment or correction thereof.

[a] (Ohio, 1880) The title of a purchaser at a judicial sale, as a general rule, cannot be impeached, in equity, for errors or irregularities in the proceedings; but where a tract of land not in fact sold, and for which no consideration was paid, or intended to be paid, is, by mistake, included in the report of sales, such mistake may be corrected, in equity, as against the purchaser or his heirs, even after confirmation and deed in pursuance thereof. Such mistake may be proved by parol.—Stites v. Wiedner, 35 Ohio St. 555.

[b] (Va. 1877) Where the report of a commissioner appointed to make the sale of property is incomplete, insufficient, or in any way imperfect, he may be required to make a further report, and if, after he has made such report, and it has been received and accepted, at any time before final action on it, he discovers any material mistake, omission, or ambiguity, he may by leave of the court (and it will be his duty to) file an amended, conditional, or supplemental report, correcting the mistake, supplying the omission, or explaining the ambiguity.—Crockett v. Sexton, 29 Grat. 46.

[d] (Ark. 1892) A decree awarded to the plaintiff a specific sum of money, declared the amount a lien on certain land, and directed that the land be sold in satisfaction thereof. A sale was made by a commissioner, in accordance with the decree, but the sale was never confirmed. Held, that the land might be sold under a general execution issued on such decree.—Stotts v. Brookfield, 55 Ark. 307, 18 S. W. 179.

[e] (Ky. 1853) If a chancellor authorizes land to be sold at private sale, the deed of the commissioner is not valid until approved by the court.—Dickerson's Heirs v. Talbot's Ex'rs, 53 Ky. (14 B. Mon.) 60.

[f] (Ky. 1861) The confirmation of a judicial sale depends on the sound equitable discretion of the court.—Taylor v. Gilpin, 60 Ky. (3 Metc.) 544.

[ff] (Md.) Where a trustee has once offered the property for sale in the mode prescribed by the decree, and, having been unable to sell it, disposes of it in a different mode, it is within the discretion of the court to affirm or disaffirm such sale.—(1828) Anderson v. Foulke, 2 Har. & G. 346; (1851) Glenn v. Wootten, 3 Md. Ch. 514.

[g] (Md. 1830) A trustee, in the year 1795, under a decree of the court of chancery, sold certain real estate, and returned a report of the sale and proceedings, upon which the chancellor passed the usual order of confirmation, nisi. In 1803 the trustee executed a deed to the purchaser, which recited the sale, its ratification, and the payment of the purchase money. It did not appear, from the proceedings in chancery, that the sale had been finally ratified. The deed of the trustee being relied upon as evidence of title, in 1826, it was held that the jury might, and ought to, presume that the return of the sale as reported by the trustee had been finally ratified and confirmed.—Shilknecht v. Eastburn's Heirs, 2 Gill & J. 114.

[h] (Md. 1863) Before the ratification of a sale made by authority of a court of equity, it must appear to be in all respects fair and proper, or it cannot receive the sanction of the court.—Bolgiano v. Cooke, 19 Md. 375.

[i] (Miss. 1848) Great lapse of time may be equivalent to confirmation of a judicial sale.—Gowan v. Jones, 18 Miss. (10 Smedes & M.) 164.

[j] (Miss. 1852) Although a sale made by a commissioner under a decree of court has not been confirmed by the court, yet the parties to the sale may act so as to give it validity without confirmation.—Henderson v. Herrod, 23 Miss. (1 Cushm.) 434.

[k] (N. Y. 1838) Where an order of sale authorized the trustee to sell, or to mortgage, or to convey the premises in satisfaction of any debt owing by him, requiring that every sale, and mortgage, and conveyance in satisfaction should be approved by a master, and a sale for cash took place, and a deed was executed without the approval of the master obtained, it was held that the approval of the master was necessary only in the third alternative, and that a deed executed on a sale for cash was valid without such approval.—Cochran v. Van Surlay, 20 Wend. 365, 32 Am. Dec. 570.

[l] (Ohio, 1860) The court may confirm or set aside a judicial sale, but cannot modify its terms or the price bid, and then affirm it.—Ohio Life Ins. & Trust Co. v. Goodin, 10 Ohio St. 557.

[m] (Tenn. 1867) A sale of real estate under order of a court of chancery is not complete until the confirmation of the master's report, and the purchaser at such sale derives no benefit from his bid until such confirmation. The same rule applies where it is sought to compel a purchaser to complete his purchase, or where the latter seeks to enforce the contract.—Eakin v. Herbert, 44 Tenn. (4 Cold.) 116.

[n] (Va. 1889) After the commissioner's report ascertaining liens had been confirmed without exception, and a sale ordered to satisfy the same, a further account of outstanding liens was directed. The report of the sale, afterwards made, showed that the land sold for an unusually high price, and was confirmed without objection from any creditor, but no distribution was ordered. The amount of liens reported greatly exceeded the price for which the land sold. Held, that the sale was properly confirmed without a further account of liens.—Utterback v. Mehlinger, 86 Va. 62, 9 S. E. 479.

[o] (W. Va. 1876) The re-entry of an order of confirmation, after the granting of plaintiff's motion, made without notice, to set aside the order as first entered, and allow the commissioner's report to be amended as to the name of the security in the bond of the purchaser at a judicial sale, is void as to the rights of the parties.—McKinney v. Kirk, 9 W. Va. 26.

[p] (W. Va. 1882) A judicial sale will be affirmed or not, upon a due consideration of all the circumstances of the case.—Hughes v. Hamilton, 19 W. Va. 366.

[q] (W. Va. 1883) That a release from persons interested in land to a commissioner who has purchased such land at his own sale may operate as a confirmation of the purchase, it must be shown that such release was obtained without fraud, and given with the full knowledge of all the facts rendering the sale voidable.—Winans v. Winans, 22 W. Va. 678.

[a] (Ark. 1887) An order confirming a commissioner's sale of land, made by a person acting, by agreement of parties, as special judge, is utterly void.—Trotter v. Neal, 50 Ark. 340, 7 S. W. 384.

[b] (Ky. 1887) Before the creation of the Louisville law and equity court, the vice chancellor having had jurisdiction of such matters as the chancellor of the Louisville chancery court submitted to him, an order of the chancellor, confirming a sale decreed by the vice chancellor, is not void as coram non judice.—Dunn v. German Sec. Bank, 3 S. W. 425.

[c] (Pa. 1894) A sale by the sheriff on process issued out of the orphans' court cannot be confirmed in the common pleas, or in any other court but the orphans' court which awarded the writ.—In re Oviatt's Estate (Orph. Ct.) 3 Pa. Dist. R. 620.

§ 61. Proceedings for confirmation.

Payment of bid as condition precedent to right to demand confirmation, see ante, § 47 [c].

[a] (Ala. 1846) Confirmation of a judicial sale can be regularly made only after notice to the parties adversely interested.—Branch Bank of State v. Hunt, 8 Ala. 876.

[b] (D. C. 1888) All parties interested in property sold by a trustee appointed by a court of equity are entitled to a hearing before the sale is confirmed.—Edwards v. Maupin, 7 Mackey, 39.

[c] (La. 1838) The monition law of 1834, giving purchasers at judicial sales the right to apply for confirmation thereof, is a remedial statute, intended to prevent the mass of litigation growing out of invalid judicial sales, and hence applies as well to sales made before as since its passage.—State v. Bermudez, 12 La. 352.

[d] (La. 1838) In proceedings for the confirmation of a judicial sale, a petitory action cannot be interposed as a reconventional demand.—Pannell's Heirs v. Overton, 12 La. 555.

[e] (La. 1843) Where, on application by the purchaser at a sheriff's sale for confirmation of his title, it was alleged by the opposing party that the advertisements required by law were not made, the burden of proof was on the petitioner.—Ex parte Murray, 6 Rob. 74.

[f] (La. 1845) The benefit of Act March 10, 1834, enabling purchasers at judicial sales to protect themselves from the results of informalities by moving for a confirmation of the sale, was extended to their vendees by Act March 11, 1837.—Beale v. Walden, 11 Rob. 67.

[g] (La. 1848) Where one applies for a monition, he must bring himself within the act of 1834, and show that proper notice was given to all parties by publication.—In re Johnson, 3 La. Ann. 656.

[h] (La. 1854) Where a party publishes a monition, under the act of 1834, for the assurance of titles acquired at judicial sale, and an opposition is filed to the homologation of the sale, plaintiff in monition cannot discontinue or dismiss the suit.—McDonough v. Copeland, 9 La. 308.

[i] (N. Y. 1849) A court of chancery, when applied to to confirm a sale of real estate made by order of a surrogate who had jurisdiction of the matter, must confine itself, under 2 Rev. St. p. 111, § 65, to the investigation of the fairness and good faith of the sale, and it cannot inquire into the regularity of the proceedings anterior to it.—Bostwick v. Atkins, 3 N. Y. (3 Comst.) 53.

[j] (N. Y. 1849) Where an application is made to confirm a judicial sale of real estate, and a decree is made favorable to the applicant, it should confirm the sale only in respect to the defect or irregularity, to cure which the proceeding is had, and the parties interested adversely to the sale should not be precluded by the decree from contesting it on other grounds. —Bostwick v. Atkins, 3 N. Y. (3 Comst.) 53.

[k] (Va. 1893) Where a bidder fails to comply with the terms of sale, and is a nonresident, the court has no jurisdiction to compel her to show cause why the sale should not be confirmed to her.—Hildreth v. Turner, 89 Va. 858, 17 S. E. 471.

[l] (W. Va. 1873) A sale of slaves having been made by a commissioner of the court, but no report of said sale made and returned to the court until after a period of between four and five years thereafter, during which period the papers in the cause are absent from the clerk's office, precluding the purchasers from knowing what was done, or what it was proposed to do in the cause, and the order directing the sale not authorizing the delivery of the slaves to the purchasers,—it was error to make an order confirming said sale, without notice to the purchasers.—Boner v. Boner, 6 W. Va. 377.

[a] (Va. 1896) The denial of a petition to suspend proceedings, and postpone confirmation of a sale of land, until certain matters in controversy set up in the petition are adjudicated in other pending suits, should be without prejudice.—Houghton v. Mountain Lake Land Co., 93 Va. 149, 24 S. E. 920.

[b] (Va. 1896) Where a petition is sought to be filed, asking that proceedings be suspended, and the confirmation of the sale of land be postponed, until certain matters of controversy set up by the petition are adjudicated in other pending suits, the proper practice is to permit the petition to be filed, and then, after rule against the other party, and the taking of evidence, to hear the petition on its merits.—Houghton v. Mountain Lake Land Co., 93 Va. 149, 24 S. E. 920.

Effect of confirmation as curing objections, see post, § 66.

[a] (U. S. 1892) Where, on the filing of a master's report of a sale, an order was entered on February 7th that, unless cause to the contrary was shown within eight days, the sale would be confirmed, and exceptions were filed on February 13th, and heard after due notice on March 2d, at which time the sale was confirmed, no objection could be made on the ground of undue haste.—Pewabic Min. Co. v. Mason, 145 U. S. 349, 12 Sup. Ct. 887, 36 L. Ed. 732.

[b] (U. S. 1892) General equity rule 83, allowing one month for filing exceptions to a master's report, applies only to matters heard and determined by the master, and not to a report of a sale under direction of the court.—Pewabic Min. Co. v. Mason, 145 U. S. 349, 12 Sup. Ct. 887, 36 L. Ed. 732; Marcus v. Same, Id.

[c] (Ala. 1886) Where a party to an action resulting in a judicial sale of property complained of fraud perpetrated at the sale whereby a less price was realized than might have been obtained, he may have relief by entering objections to the confirmation of the sale on that ground.—Phillips v. Benson, 82 Ala. 500, 2 South. 93.

[d] (Ala. 1888) Though affidavits stating that the interest of a decedent in land sold is only one-half are not the best evidence of the extent of his title, when received upon exceptions to a report of sale without objection, they will be considered.—Glennon v. Mittenight, 86 Ala. 455, 5 South. 772.

[e] (Ill. 1890) It is not reversible error to refuse to allow the introduction of oral testimony on the hearing of objections to the confirmation of a master's sale, where it is not shown that a fair presentation of the matter cannot be made in the usual way by affidavits, or that the proposed testimony is material.—Barling v. Peters, 134 Ill. 606, 25 N. E. 765.

[f] (Ky. 1889) A purchaser of land at judicial sale should not be allowed an attorney's fee as part of his costs, upon the overruling of exceptions to the report of sale, as after the filing of exceptions he occupies the same position respecting costs as any party litigant.—Van Meter v. Van Meter's Assignee, 88 Ky. 448, 11 S. W. 80, 289.

[g] (La. 1838) If the opponents to a monition set up title in the nature of a petitory action, and the other party chooses to join issue on the merits, the court will proceed to try the case on the titles as in a petitory action.—Pannell's Heirs v. Overton, 12 La. 555.

[h] (La. 1843) An opposition to the confirmation of a judicial sale, on the ground that it had not been regularly advertised, cannot be dismissed without proof that it had been properly advertised.—Fortier v. Zimpel, 5 Rob. 189.

[i] (La.) Where a debtor or other person interested opposes the homologation of a sale, the burden of proving a compliance with the formalities required by law is on the party who applies for its homologation.—(1843) Ex parte Murray, 6 Rob. 74; (1844) Lamorandier v. Meyer, 8 Rob. 152.

[j] (La. 1883) One opposing, in a monition proceeding, a confirmation of sale, need not make an antecedent tender.—In re Fazende, 35 La. Ann. 1145.

[k] (Md. 1847) Where a defendant whose title is decreed to be sold knows of any fact which would disperse a cloud on the title decreed to be sold, and omits to communicate it to the trustee in due time, it does not become him, when a sale has been made, to interpose it as an objection to the ratification of the sale against purchasers.—Cunningham v. Schley, 6 Gill, 207.

[l] (Md. 1863) The objection to the ratification of a sale of real estate under decree of court, of a want of due notice, like all others of fact, must be supported by preponderating evidence sufficient to set aside the report of the trustee; for this is made under the sanction of an oath, and is entitled to full faith and credit, unless contradicted by conclusive testimony.—Bolgiano v. Cooke, 19 Md. 375.

[m] (Md. 1876) Persons who are not parties to a judicial sale will not be heard to object to its ratification.—Griffith v. Hammond, 45 Md. 85.

[n] (Md. 1879) A purchaser at a judicial sale may avail himself as an objection to the ratification of the sale that the bill did not authorize the sale.—Fox v. Reynolds, 50 Md. 564.

[o] (Tenn. 1872) The burden is upon the party making exception to show the irregularity of a clerk and master's report of sale.—Childress v. Harrison, 60 Tenn. (1 Baxt.) 410.

[p] (Va. 1876) Where there is reason to believe that fraud or mistake has been committed in a sale by commissioners under a decree of court, to the detriment of the owner or purchaser, or that the officer conducting the sale has been guilty of any wrong or breach of duty, to the injury of the parties interested, the court will withhold a confirmation of the sale, upon the objection of either a party or the purchaser.—Brock v. Rice, 27 Grat. 812.

§ 64. Grounds for refusal to confirm.

Failure of purchaser to furnish sufficient security as ground for refusing to conform, see ante, § 39 [d].

Grounds for setting aside sale, see post, §§ 72-87.

[a] (Ky. 1859) Land was sold at a commissioner's sale at a great sacrifice, and the directions of the judgment were not pursued by the commissioner in advertising the time and place of sale. Held, that the sale was properly disaffirmed by the chancellor.—Vanbussum v. Maloney, 59 Ky. (2 Metc.) 550.

[b] (Ky. 1873) Only upon a clear showing of unfairness will the chancellor refuse to confirm the sale made by his commissioner.—Stump v. Martin, 72 Ky. (9 Bush) 285.

[c] (Ky. 1886) The commissioner conducting a decretal sale must be the judge of the length of time he will allow the purchaser for perfecting his bond, and his refusal to allow the time asked is not a sufficient reason against the confirmation of a purchase on a resale.—Hughes v. Swope, 88 Ky. 254, 1 S. W. 394.

[d] (Md. 1848) It will not always be a valid objection to the confirmation of a sale proved to have been well attended and fair in other respects that it was made on a different day and at a different place from those mentioned in the advertisement.—Harrison v. Harrison, 1 Md. Ch. 331.

[dd] (Md. 1851) A decree directed a trustee to sell land at public auction, after having given notice in a specified manner. One attempt to sell at such sale was made, which proved ineffectual, no one offering $17 per acre, the price then fixed upon by the trustee and the owner of a life estate in the land, who acted also as the next friend of his minor children, in whom was the estate in remainder. Shortly afterwards the trustee sold the land at private sale for $17 per acre; but it appeared that a better price could then have been had at a public sale, and that there was a misunderstanding between the trustee and the owner of the life estate, with whom the trustee had been in the habit of advising, as to the price to be put upon the land upon its being again offered for sale. It was held that the sale ought not to be ratified.—Latrobe v. Herbert, 3 Md. Ch. 375.

[e] (Md. 1863) It is no objection to the ratification of a sale made under a decree that a bill was depending at the time of the sale to vacate the decree, where the grounds for impeaching it are not stated, and it does not appear that any order was passed to restrain the proceedings of the trustee.—Bolgiano v. Cooke, 19 Md. 375.

[f] (Ohio, 1847) A court of equity may refuse to confirm a sale made under its decree, although its order, in respect to notice, has been literally complied with, where in fact sufficient notice has not been given.—Craig v. Fox, 16 Ohio, 563.

[g] (Va. 1883) That a purchaser at a judicial sale has made a good bargain is no ground for refusing to confirm the sale.—Langyher v. Patterson, 77 Va. 470.

[h] (Va. 1889) Where defendant's undivided interest in certain lands is sold to satisfy certain liens, and no upset bid is offered at the sale, and it does not appear that the price paid was inadequate, and no guaranty is given that a higher price would be realized by a resale, such sale is properly confirmed, notwithstanding a certificate filed by defendant that, in the opinion of the several affiants therein, defendant's interest in such land, if severed, would command a higher price, but without stating the facts on which such opinion is based.—Thomas v. Farmers' Nat. Bank, 86 Va. 291, 9 S. E. 1122.

[i] (Va. 1892) A special commissioner offered for sale one of two equal tracts of land, and then the other, neither to be sold until both were offered as a whole, and, if a higher price should thus be obtained, then to be sold as a whole. At the offering of the first tract the special commissioner, thinking those interested in the land would not sell it for less than $25 per acre, asked a by-stander to bid $20, telling him that the property would not be left on his hands. This was done, and the second tract was then put up, and $30 was offered, the bidder therefor being influenced by the price offered for the first tract. The whole land was then offered, the commissioner starting it at $25 per acre. While this price was being cried, the commissioner absented himself temporarily, and during his absence, without his permission, the estate as a whole was taken down, and the first tract offered at $20, and knocked off to the by-stander, who had bid at the commissioner's request. This bidder did not want the property, and at the reoffer of the first tract had paid no attention to the proceedings. The second tract was cried off to the bidder at $30. The commissioner made no report of a sale to the court, but continued the sale to a subsequent term of court. Held, that the court below properly refused to confirm the sales.—Carr v. Carr, 88 Va. 735, 14 S. E. 368.

[j] (W. Va. 1878) Where action on the report of the special commissioners making a judicial sale has been delayed an unreasonable time without any fault of the purchaser, and the property has depreciated in value, a court of equity will, at his instance, refuse to confirm the sale. So held where three years had intervened after the date of sale, and the sale had taken place five years after the decree of sale.—Hyman v. Smith, 13 W. Va. 744.

§ 65. Rights and liabilities of parties pending confirmation.

[a] If the purchaser has not assumed the responsibility of protecting property sold under a decree of the court of chancery, by taking possession of it, any loss that may be sustained by its injury or deterioration in the interval between the sale and the final ratification falls upon the vendor.

(Tenn. 1867) Eakin v. Herbert, 44 Tenn. (4 Cold.) 116.

(Tenn. 1871) Saunders v. Stallings, 52 Tenn. (5 Heisk.) 65.

[b] (Md. 1847) A party interested in the proceeds of property decreed to be sold, although his right in the property is merged in the decree, retains such an interest as will enable him to apply to the court which rendered the decree to protect and preserve the estate from injury and waste pending confirmation.—Wagner v. Cohen, 6 Gill, 97, 46 Am. Dec. 660.

—(La. 1838) Pannell v. Overton, 12 La. 555; (1841) Cordeville v. Hosmer, 16 La. 590; (N. Y. 1887) Duer v. Dowdney, 11 N. Y. St. Rep. 301.

[b] (U. S. 1880) An order of confirmation of a judicial sale may cure all irregularities in the course of the proceeding, but can add nothing to the authority of the officer to make it.—Wills v. Chandler (C. C.) 2 Fed. 273.

[c] (Ala. 1847) Where the report of a sale by a register in chancery is confirmed, the confirmation relates back to the time of the sale, so that an action instituted between the two periods, founded upon a contract by the complainant to make good what the sale failed to produce short of a certain sum, is not prematurely brought.—Brown v. Isbell, 11 Ala. 1009.

[d] (Ala. 1880) Objections which might be urged against the confirmation of a sale by a register in chancery, as that it was made at an improper time or place, are waived if not made before the confirmation of the sale, and cannot afterwards be set up in an action at law by the purchaser, or one claiming under him, to impeach the validity of the sale.—Cargile v. Ragan, 65 Ala. 287.

[e] (Ala. 1884) An error of the chancellor in substituting other numbers of land in his decree of sale from those contained in the petition without notice to defendant is cured by a subsequent consent decree of confirmation of the sale.—Kemp v. Lyon, 76 Ala. 212.

[f] (La.) St. 1834, enabling a purchaser at judicial sale to cure defects in his title resulting from informalities in the proceedings by requiring all persons concerned to show cause why the sale should not be confirmed, relates only to informalities in decrees ordering, or proceedings connected with, judicial sales, and extends to matters of form only.—(1838) Pannell's Heirs v. Overton, 12 La. 555; (1841) Cordeville v. Hosmer, 16 La. 590.

[g] (La. 1843) Where, after opposition to the confirmation of a judicial sale, on the ground that it was not properly advertised, has been dismissed, the sale is confirmed on a subsequent showing of proper advertisement, such confirmation cannot prejudice the opponent, whose opposition was thus improperly dismissed.—Fortier v. Zimpel, 5 Rob. 189.

[h] (La. 1845) The homologation of a monition sued out, before Act No. 64 of 1837, by one to whom the deed was executed, on an admission at the foot of the auctioneer's procès verbal by the adjudicatee that he bought as the former's agent, will not cure any irregularities in the sale.—Beale v. Walden, 11 Rob. 67.

[i] (Md. 1828) A trustee, appointed to sell lands by the court of chancery, made the sale and reported it to the court, where it was ratified, after objections by the purchaser, and the ratification on appeal was sanctioned by the appellate court. Held, that it was no longer competent for the purchaser to contest the propriety or validity of the sale, nor to object that he was not reported to the court in the usual way as the purchaser of the property sold.—Anderson v. Foulke, 2 Har. & G. 346.

[j] (Md. 1830) Where the purchaser of land at a sale under a decree filed his petition against the ratification of the sale by the court, which recited that he had contracted with the trustee appointed to make the sale for the purchase of certain land, and the trustee in his answer set out the contract of sale executed by both parties, which sale it appeared was ratified by the court, it was held that it was too late for the purchaser to object that the trustee did not report him to the court as the purchaser.—Andrews v. Scotton, 2 Bland, 629.

[k] (Md. 1848) It is the established doctrine that a sale made by a trustee under a decree of a court of chancery is a transaction between the court and the purchaser; and the report of the trustee, and the order of the court ratifying the sale, must be regarded as the evidence of the contract between the parties.—Goldsborough v. Ringgold, 1 Md. Ch. 239.

[l] (Md. 1855) The ratification of a judicial sale is final and conclusive, unless irregularly made by the court, or unless the purchaser was prevented by misrepresentation, surprise, or fraud, from making his objection to the ratification in due time; and it must further appear that such misrepresentation, surprise, or fraud resulted from some act or conduct on the part of the trustees, or on the part of those interested in the proceedings.—Brown v. Gilmor's Ex'rs, 8 Md. 322.

[m] (Neb. 1884) An irregularity in the publication of notice of a judicial sale is cured by the order of confirmation.—Neligh v. Keene, 16 Neb. 407, 20 N. W. 277.

[n] (Neb. 1886) The confirmation of a sale cures all irregularities in the proceedings.—McKeighan v. Hopkins, 19 Neb. 33, 26 N. W. 614.

[o] (Neb. 1891) The statute, to prevent a debtor's land from being sacrificed at judicial sales, provides for the appraisement of the debtor's interest therein, and that it shall not be sold at less than two-thirds of its appraised value. Held, that an order confirming a sale of land by a court having jurisdiction of the parties and subject-matter, in the absence of fraud, cures all defects and irregularities in the appraisement, and is conclusive upon all the parties to the suit, and those claiming under them, until reversed or set aside.—Watson v. Tromble, 33 Neb. 450, 50 N. W. 331.

[p] (Ohio, 1876) A decree ordering the sale of real estate by the sheriff or master commissioner of the county did not name the master. The sale was afterwards made by a master. Held, that after confirmation of the sale no objection could be made on account of uncertainty of the order.—Mechanics' Sav. & Bldg. Loan Ass'n v. O'Connor, 29 Ohio St. 651.

[q] (Tenn. 1855) The effect of confirming the report of a sale of real estate in chancery is nothing more than the completion of the contract, and does not pass the legal title.—Webster v. Hill, 35 Tenn. (3 Sneed) 333.

[r] (Tenn. 1873) Where a sale of land is confirmed without objection, and the proceeds thereof received, it will be considered as satisfactory to the parties, even though one of the parties has been induced to assent by the payment of an extra bonus.—Goodlett v. Campbell, 1 Tenn. Ch. 200.

[s] (Va. 1849) An interlocutory decree directed certain commissioners to sell a tract of land, but did not authorize them to execute a deed to the purchaser. But they did execute a deed after the sale, and several years later reported their proceedings to the court, when they were ratified and confirmed by final decree. Held, that the order of confirmation gave full effect and validity to the deed, and related back to the time of its date, so as to invest the grantee with the legal title to the land.—Evans v. Spurgin, 6 Grat. 107, 52 Am. Dec. 105.

[t] (Va. 1883) Confirmation of a judicial sale cures all errors except such as arise from want of jurisdiction.—Langyher v. Patterson, 77 Va. 470.

[u] (W. Va. 1889) After a commissioner's sale is confirmed it relates back to the date of the sale, and the purchaser is considered the owner from and after that date.—Cale's Adm'r v. Shaw, 33 W. Va. 299, 10 S. E. 637.

Appealability of order confirming sale, see "Appeal and Error," vol. 2, cc. 1041, 1042, § 381 [e, k]; c. 1259, § 638 [a]; cc. 1369, 1370, § 794 [a, c, i, n].

Appeal from decree confirming sale, review of decree ordering sale, see "Appeal and Error," vol. 3, c. 1274, § 3557.

Review, by certiorari, of order confirming sale, see "Certiorari," vol. 9, c. 1767, § 22 [i].

Sufficiency of assignment of error on appeal from decree confirming sale, see "Appeal and Error," vol. 3, c. 899, § 3074 [r].

[a] (U. S. 1880) Where a motion made five years after a judicial sale for a vacation of the order confirming the sale was denied, and no ground for denial appeared in the record, it would be presumed on appeal to have been denied because made too late.—Wills v. Chandler (C. C.) 2 Fed. 273, 1 McCrary, 276.

[b] (La. 1848) Where a record certified as containing all the evidence offered in proceedings for the confirmation of a judicial sale is silent as to the publication of notice of such proceedings, a judgment of dismissal will be affirmed.—In re Johnson, 3 La. Ann. 656.

[c] (Md. 1850) On affirmance of an order confirming a judicial sale, the appellate court may allow interest and damages for the detention of the property, payable out of the proceeds of the sale, without requiring the appellee to first proceed against the sureties on the appeal bond.—Barnum v. Raborg, 2 Md. Ch. 516.

[d] (Neb. 1878) A party, whose motion to refuse confirmation of a judicial sale has been overruled, may appeal to the supreme court.—Parrat v. Neligh, 7 Neb. 456.

[e] (Neb. 1890) An objection to a confirmation of sale that was not made in the lower court will not be considered in the supreme court.—Runge v. Brown, 29 Neb. 116, 45 N. W. 271.

[f] (Tenn. 1869) The purchaser of property at a master's sale, who executes his notes for the price bid, and does not except to the report of the master, or object to the confirmation of the sale, cannot be heard to complain of it on appeal.—Lasell v. Powell, 47 Tenn. (7 Cold.) 277.

[g] (Va. 1849) Where in a case of sale of lands under a decree, when there was an informality in the sale, there are several purchasers of distinct parcels, some of whom are willing to perfect the sale, and some not, and there are infants interested who may at any time avoid the sale, an appellate court will set aside the whole decree of the court below confirming the sales.—Talley v. Starke's Adm'r, 6 Grat. 339.

[h] (Va. 1887) On an appeal from the confirmation of a sale of land, on the ground that the court erred in refusing to accept the advanced bid, an objection that the record fails to show that any money was actually tendered the court for the cash payment cannot be made for the first time in the appellate court.—Withers v. Coles' Ex'r, 83 Va. 525, 5 S. E. 673.

[i] (Va. 1890) After the confirmation of a sale of an insolvent company's property pursuant to a decree rendered in a creditor's suit instituted by a lien claimant, an objection that the land had not been advertised for sale as prescribed in the lien, and that the sale had been made before the liens were ascertained, cannot be taken for the first time on appeal.—Karn v. Rorer Iron Co., 86 Va. 754, 11 S. E. 431.

[j] (W. Va. 1876) Upon a decree confirming a court commissioner's sale, an appeal and supersedeas will be dismissed by the appellate court, unless it appears that application was made to the circuit court to correct the same, as provided in Code, c. 134, § 5.—Hartley v. Roffe, 12 W. Va. 401.

[k] (W. Va.) A debtor who has taken no steps in the trial court, before confirmation, to review a decree ordering a sale of real estate, on the ground of error therein, is not entitled to have the decree of confirmation reversed.—(1881) Beard v. Arbuckle, 19 W. Va. 135; (1881) Dick v. Robinson, Id. 159; (1884) Park v. Petroleum Co., 25 W. Va. 108.

[l] (W. Va. 1882) A decree confirming the sale of the debtor's realty will not be reversed for errors in the decree ordering the sale, where the purchaser is a stranger.—Hughes v. Hamilton, 19 W. Va. 366.

[m] (W. Va. 1882) An objection that the name of the purchaser at a commissioner's sale was incorrectly given in the decree of confirmation cannot be raised for the first time on appeal.—McMullen v. Eagan, 21 W. Va. 233.

[a] It is the policy of the law to sustain judicial sales, and they should not be declared void or voidable for slight and minute defects in preparation.
—(Ky. 1847) Benningfield v. Reed, 47 Ky. (8 B Mon.) 102; (1864) Thornton v. McGrath, 62 Ky. (1 Duv.) 349; (1887) Scott's Ex'r v. Scott, 85 Ky. 385, 3 S. W. 598, 5 S. W. 423;

[b] (U. S. 1844) A sale ordered by a court in a case where it had not jurisdiction must be considered as inadvertently done, or as an unauthorized proceeding, and is a nullity.—Shriver's Lessee v. Lynn, 43 U. S. (2 How.) 43, 11 L. Ed. 172.

[c] (U. S. 1890) A judicial sale of the property of a corporation is not rendered invalid by the receiver's announcement at such sale that the purchaser would also have the right, at his election, to take certain land, not covered by the order of sale, and acquired by the receiver during his administration of the corporate property.—Lake Superior Iron Co. v. Brown, Bonnell & Co. (C. C.) 44 Fed. 539.

[d] (Ark. 1886) A sale by a sheriff, by order of a court of equity, of a cotton gin and condenser, together with the gin house, made at the court house door, is not void because the property was not present; the property being a fixture, is in the nature of real estate, and may be sold as such.—Morrow v. McGregor, 49 Ark. 67, 4 S. W. 49.

[e] (Ga. 1852) Sales made by order of courts of limited jurisdiction must show on their face that the prerequisites of the law have been strictly complied with.—Brooks v. Rooney, 11 Ga. 423, 56 Am. Dec. 436.

[f] (Ill. 1874) The fact that a sale under a decree of court is conducted by an agent of the commissioner authorized by the decree to make it, and in the absence of the commissioner, is not such an irregularity as impairs the jurisdiction of the court.—Chambers v. Jones, 72 Ill. 275.

[g] (Ill. 1874) After lapse of 20 years all intendments should be made to sustain a judicial sale.—Whitman v. Fisher, 74 Ill. 147.

[gg] (Ky. 1833) Where a commissioner directed to sell as much land as will be necessary to pay a certain debt sells the whole for an amount more than sufficient for that purpose, such sale is void.—Blakey v. Abert, 31 Ky. (1 Dana) 185.

[h] (Ky. 1856) Civ. Code, § 812, provides that in the sale of a small portion of real estate, under execution, if the defendant does not require less than the whole to be sold, where less will produce the debt, the officer making the sale may exercise his discretion and sell the whole. Held, that where a decree in chancery directed how much of the property should be sold, the commissioner had no authority to sell more than the amount specified in the decree, and where he did so the sale was void.—Gathwright v. Hazard, 56 Ky. (17 B. Mon.) 557.

[i] (Ky. 1859) That there were but two purchasers present does not prove fraud in the sale, if it was duly advertised, and there is no proof of any attempt to keep away purchasers.—Mitchell v. Berry, 58 Ky. (1 Metc.) 602.

[j, k] (Ky. 1873) A sale under a decree of court is a judicial act, the commissioner being but the agent of the court; and although he may exceed his authority by selling more land than is necessary, the sale, upon confirmation by the court, is voidable only, and not void.—Dawson v. Litsey, 73 Ky. (10 Bush) 408.

[l] (Ky. 1888) Under Act April 9, 1878 (Gen. St. p. 972), providing that land sold under an order or judgment shall be valued before sale, and that if it fails to bring two-thirds of the value the owner may redeem within a year, a sale without such valuation is void, though the price received may be more than two-thirds of the value of the property.—Graves v. Long Ass'n, 87 Ky. 441, 9 S. W. 297.

[m] (Ky. 1895) A commissioner's sale of lands in which there are remainder interests for reinvestment, under Civ. Code, § 491, is not invalid on the ground that some of the remainder interests are contingent, and that until the death of the life tenant it cannot be known who will be entitled to take in remainder, if the person in being in whom the remainder interest would have vested if the contingency had happened before the commencement of the action be properly before the court.—Luttrell v. Wells, 97 Ky. 84, 30 S. W. 10.

[n] (La. 1847) A sale under a judgment, in an action in which there is no defendant, is a nullity, without being pronounced so judicially.—Morris v. Covington, 2 La. Ann. 259.

[o] (Md. 1847) A communication of the trustee's limit as to price, made by him to the auctioneer employed to make a sale, and if he got no bid above that, to strike it off to A., is no objection to a sale.—Cohen v. Wagner, 6 Gill, 236.

[p] (Md. 1847) The validity or invalidity of a judicial sale must depend on the facts and circumstances existing at the time it was made.—Gibbs v. Cunningham, 1 Md. Ch. 44.

[q] (Miss. 1881) A commissioner's sale will be confirmed, if otherwise regular, although it was made by an auctioneer during the commissioner's absence from the state.—Swan v. Smith, 58 Miss. 875.

[r] (Mo. 1886) Where a decree directs the sale of separate tracts of land to pay stated portions of the judgment, said stated sums, amounting, in the agregate, to the whole of the judgment, and the order of sale and sheriff's deed recite simply the aggregate amount of the judgment, this is not such a variance as to render the sale void.—Lewis v. Morrow, 89 Mo. 174, 1 S. W. 93.

[s] (N. C. 1875) Lands devised to a husband were, after his death, assigned to his widow for dower, and were subsequently sold to pay the debts of the testator; the widow not being made a party to the petition. Held, that the sale was void as to her.—Simonton v. Brown, 72 N. C. 46.

[t] (Tenn. 1851) Where, during a suit in chancery, a sale is decreed, and one of the defendants interested therein dies, and there is no revivor against his heirs, the sale is not void, but communicates to the purchaser a good title to the interest of the other heirs.—Whitley v. Davis' Lessee, 31 Tenn. (1 Swan) 833.

[u] (Tenn. 1865) The confirmation and regularity of a sale of land made under a decree pronounced by a court of competent jurisdiction, in the absence of all countervailing proof, will be presumed; and this is especially so where the parties in interest at the time recognized its validity.—Tipton v. Powell, 42 Tenn. (2 Cold.) 19.

[v] (Tex. 1857) A sale appearing on the record to have been directed and sanctioned by a judge with probate authority (alcalde), will be presumed to be good, though the record does not show that all the requisites were complied with. Records at that time (1834) were not carefully kept, nor was that the purchaser's fault, and their silence will not rebut the presumption that the judge did his duty in the premises.—Baker v. Coe, 20 Tex. 429.

[w] (Tex. 1878) An order of sale directing a sale for gold, and for 10 per cent. interest, where the decree was for "dollars," and interest at 8 per cent., does not render the sale void.—Hughes v. Driver, 50 Tex. 175.

[ww] (Va. 1875) A decree appointing W. a commissioner to sell certain lands at public auction provided that he should not act under the decree until he had given bond for the performance of that and any future decrees made in the cause. Without executing the bond, he sold the land to H., and the sale was confirmed by the court. Held, a judicial sale binding the purchaser.—Hess v. Rader, 26 Grat. 746.

[x] (Va. 1892) Where a decree directing the sale of the debtor's real estate by three commissioners provided that the commissioners giving the bond might sell the land, and a sale by two commissioners, one of whom had given bonds, was made, it was immaterial that the third commissioner died prior to the day the advertisement of the sale first appeared.—Strayer v. Long's Ex'r, 89 Va. 471, 16 S. E. 357.

[y] (Va. 1892) Where a decree directing the sale of a debtor's real estate by three commissioners provides that the commissioners giving the bond might sell alone, a sale by two commissioners, one of whom gave the bond, is valid.—Strayer v. Long's Ex'r, 89 Va. 471, 16 S. E. 357.

[z] (W. Va. 1884) A sale of real estate under a decree of court by a commissioner, which has been confirmed without exception, is not void because the commissioner had no authority to make it.—Core v. Strickler, 24 W. Va. 689.

§ 69. Persons who may question validity.

Persons who may object to title under judicial sale, see post, § 102.

[a] (Ga. 1885) Purchasers at a commissioner's sale of exempt property, under the chancellor's order, cannot attack its validity or regularity.—Sirmans v. Sirmans, 74 Ga. 541.

[b] (La.) A judicial sale ought not to be disturbed, unless the party suing can show an injury resulting to him from the sale, as well as an interest in the result of the suit.—(1851) Stockton v. Downey, 6 La. Ann. 581; (1869) Gilmer v. Nicholson, 21 La. Ann. 589.

[c] (La. 1852) A party who procures a sale cannot complain of any ambiguity in its terms.—Gauche v. Trautman, 7 La. Ann. 610.

[d] (La. 1881) A mortgage creditor has no interest to contest the validity of a public sale when, if the sale were set aside, a prior mortgage would more than absorb the value of the property.—Dufour v. Leftwich, 33 La. Ann. 1471.

[e] (Md. 1832) Where a trustee, acting under a decree directing him to sell as much property as may be necessary to discharge debts due from A. to B., sells more than is actually necessary, a purchaser cannot object to the sale on that account.—Brown v. Wallace, 4 Gill & J. 479.

[f] (Md. 1868) A purchaser at a sale of real estate under the order of the probate court is not a proper party to inquire into the regularity of the proceedings under which the sale was ordered.—Shultz v. Houck, 29 Md. 24.

[g] (Neb. 1890) Though a judicial sale of land to one who acted as appraiser is void as against the judgment debtor, third persons who have no interest in the matter cannot object.—Reno v. Hale, 28 Neb. 646, 44 N. W. 996.

[h] (N. Y. 1845) Where a sale is to be had under a decree for the benefit of some of the defendants, as well as for the benefit of the complainant in the suit, and the complainant has no interest in the execution of the decree, or consents that the sale be made under the direction of the defendants, a stranger to the suit cannot object on the ground that the decree was delivered to the master by defendants' solicitor to be executed.—Watt v. Crawford, 11 Paige, 470.

[i] (Ohio, 1876) The original owner of lands sold under process of law cannot be heard to object that, by reason of defects in the proceedings, the purchaser will not get a good title, unless, perhaps, where the defect may have diminished the price bid.—Wilson v. Scott, 29 Ohio St. 636.

[j] (S. C. 1882) An acceptance of service of an irregular summons by adult defendants, who make no objection to further proceedings thereunder, estops them to deny the court's jurisdiction and the validity of the sale, as against a purchaser of lands at a judicial sale had in such proceedings.—Finley v. Robertson, 17 S. C. 435.

Dismissal of bill asking for annulment of sale and also for proceeds thereof, see post, § 83 [n].

[a] (Ky. 1886) In an equitable proceeding, under Civ. Code, § 491, by the owner of a life estate, against the owners of the remainder for sale of the land, it appeared that two tracts of land were directed to be sold, one of which was held by petitioner in fee simple, which the court had no power to sell. Held that, before setting aside the sale, the petitioner will be given a reasonable time within which to tender a deed to the purchaser.—Munnell v. Orear, 84 Ky. 452, 1 S. W. 725.

[b] (Ky. 1886) Where a title in fee simple is sold in an equitable proceeding, and it appears that the court had no power to direct such sale, if the owner elects to tender a conveyance to the purchaser, the sale will be ratified.—Nunnell v. Orear, 84 Ky. 452, 1 S. W. 725.

[d] (La. 1849) A want of title to land, arising from the fact that a sale thereof made by a probate judge while in office was authenticated by him after he ceased to hold office, cannot be cured by acts of the parties tending to show a ratification of the sale.—Bradford v. Cook, 4 La. Ann. 229.

[e, f] (La.) One who claims the proceeds of a sale judicially affirms the validity of the sale, and cannot afterwards attack the sale for nullity, unless it be shown that the judicial admission was made through an error of fact.—(1869) Tarleton v. Kennedy, 21 La. Ann. 500; (1877) Boubede v. Aymes, 29 La. Ann. 274; (1879) Factors' & Traders' Ins. Co. v. De Blanc, 31 La. Ann. 100; (1882) Mather v. Knox, 34 La. Ann. 410; (1889) Massie v. Brady, 41 La. Ann. 553, 6 South. 536.

[g] (Md. 1847) A trustee, after making fruitless efforts to sell lands according to the terms of the decree, sold them at private sale, at a price greatly exceeding the best offer he could get for them at public sale. Held, that upon the principle that chancery will ratify an act when done, which upon previous application would have been authorized to be done, the objection to the act of the trustee, founded upon the form of sale, could not prevail.—Gibbs v. Cunningham, 1 Md. Ch. 44.

[h] (Md. 1848) Though the trustee depart from the special directions of the decree, a subsequent ratification by the court will render it as binding as if he had pursued in all respects those directions.—Harrison v. Harrison, 1 Md. Ch. 331.

[i] (Md. 1848) The court in confirming the acts of its agents, who have not followed their authority, will see that no injustice is done to the parties interested, and that they have an opportunity to be heard before their rights are decided upon.—Harrison v. Harrison, 1 Md. Ch. 331.

[j] (Md. 1887) Complainants sought to set aside a sale of land under a decree, on the ground of inadequacy of price. At the time they insisted that the sale should be made it was ratified at their instance, and they received and gave releases for their share of the proceeds. Held, that it could not be set aside.—Presstman v. Mason, 68 Md. 78, 11 Atl. 764.

[a] (N. C. 1875) Lands devised to a husband were, after his death, assigned to his wife for dower, and subsequently sold to pay the debts of the husband; the widow not being a party to the petition. Held that, the sale being void as to her, it could not be validated by any subsequent amendment, making her a party.—Simonton v. Brown, 72 N. C. 46.

[b] (W. Va. 1881) Where a judicial sale of land is erroneously decreed before the amounts and priorities of the liens are determined, the error is not cured because the creditor whose lien was not ascertained assents to the sale.—Beard v. Arbuckle, 19 W. Va. 135.

[b] (Ky. 1887) Civ. Code, § 521 (Myers' Code, § 582), providing that a judgment shall not be vacated until it be adjudged that there is a valid defense to the action in which the judgment is rendered, is not intended to make the power of the court to vacate, after the expiration of the term, an order confirming a judicial sale dependent upon the existence of a valid defense to the cause of action or claim sued on. The judgment and order confirming the sale are distinct and independent of each other; the one may stand although the other is set aside.—Bean v. Hoffendorfer, 84 Ky. 685, 3 S. W. 138.

[c] (Ky. 1889) Plaintiffs failed to attend a sale of land on a judgment obtained by them, owing to the fact that they were not notified of the sale in time by the court commissioner, and the land, by reason of their absence, did not bring as much as their debt. Their attorney alleged that he was unable to appear and oppose the confirmation, owing to the sickness of his wife, but it appeared that the sale was confirmed by direction of another of plaintiffs' attorneys, and there was no evidence that this was the result of collusion. Held, that no "unavoidable casualty" preventing plaintiffs' counsel from appearing and opposing the confirmation was shown, within the meaning of Civ. Code, § 518, subsec. 7, prescribing that a judgment may be vacated after the term at which it was rendered, where a party was prevented from appearing by unavoidable casualty.—Kincaid v. Tutt, 88 Ky. 392, 11 S. W. 297.

[f] (Md. 1848) The English practice of opening biddings, as a matter of course, before the ratification of the master's report, has not been adopted in this state, and it is not expedient to introduce it.—Johnson v. Dorsey, 7 Gill, 269.

[g] (N. Y. 1886) The discretionary power of the court to vacate a sale should not be exercised when the rights of bona fide purchasers who are not made parties to the motion have intervened.—Prior v. Prior, 41 Hun, 613.

[h] (N. C. 1857) A court of equity has power to set aside a sale made under its order as well at the instance of the purchaser as of the owner of the property.—Clayton v. Glover, 56 N. C. 371.

[hh] (N. C. 1869) Where a judicial sale is set aside because of inadequacy of price, the court will not accept a higher bid made since the sale, and decree a sale to such advance bidder, but will order the bids to be reopened.—Wood v. Parker, 63 N. C. 379.

[i] (Pa. 1857) A judicial sale will not be set aside after a deed of the property is acknowledged and recorded, unless the case is one without a shade of doubt upon it.—Chadwick v. Patterson, 2 Phila. 275.

[j] (Tenn. 1844) Whether a judicial sale should be set aside rests in the discretion of the chancellor, and the discretion will not be controlled, except for palpable error.—Owen's Adm'r v. Owen, 24 Tenn. (5 Humph.) 352.

[k] (Tenn. 1876) Where, after a sale of a married woman's separate property to satisfy a decree, the purchaser allowed the married woman, through her next friend, to take the property on an advance sufficient to pay the decree, the court may, during the term, set aside a resale to a third person, after it has been confirmed.—Mayo v. Harding, 3 Tenn. Ch. 237.

[l] (Va. 1883) The discretion of the court to set aside a judicial sale is not an arbitrary one, but will be exercised only for good cause shown. —Langyher v. Patterson, 77 Va. 470.

[m] (Va. 1888) A sale of land to satisfy judgments was confirmed, half the purchase money paid, and a writ of possession awarded. Two sons of the former owner, 15 months after the sale, filed a bill claiming portions of the land under oral contracts with their father, accompanied by full payment and possession, and conveyances made during the proceedings under which the sale was made. The only direct testimony of the sale was complainant's own, which was materially contradicted by written evidence. They pretended to have paid part of the money to their father's assignee in bankruptcy, but neither the assignee's nor the father's testimony was taken. One son was a defendant to the suits in which the sale was had, and present at the sale, but never set up any claim to the land, and the father admitted ownership in his answer. Both complainants were in the vicinity pending these proceedings and must have known of them. Held, that this evidence would not sustain the bill.—McGee v. Johnson, 85 Va. 161, 7 S. E. 374.

§ 73. Grounds in general.

Failure to give notice of sale as ground for setting aside, see ante, § 29.

Grounds for refusal to confirm sale, see ante, § 64.

Purchase by improper party, ground for setting aside, see ante, § 40.

Setting aside sale because made in parcels instead of in gross, see ante, § 37.

Uncertainty in report as ground for setting aside sale, see ante, § 57 [k].

[c] (U. S. 1834) Md. Acts 1875, c. 72, § 8, authorizing a sale of real estate of deceased debtors, requires the sale to "be notified to and confirmed by the chancellor." Held, that where a decree directing such sale did not require a confirmation, and the sale thereunder was not in fact confirmed, it would be set aside.—United States Bank v. Ritchie, 33 U. S. (8 Pet.) 128, 8 L. Ed. 890.

[d] (Ala. 1882) Upon proper application, and proof that the applicant has with proper diligence resisted confirmation, a court of equity will set aside a sale of land under its process, if such sale is shown to be illegal, unconscionable, or inequitable.—Sayre v. Elyton Land Co., 73 Ala. 85.

[e] (Ga. 1892) A person wishing to purchase land at a judicial sale commits a fraud by hiring another not to bid against him, and, on discovery of the fraud after the sale has been consummated, the purchase money paid, and a conveyance executed, the sale will be set aside.—Barnes v. Mays, 88 Ga. 696, 16 S. E. 67.

[f] (Ill. 1853) A sale made under a decree will not be set aside on motion, as to innocent purchasers, because the commissioner named in the decree to sell the premises, who was also sheriff, sold upon execution issued with, and in conformity to, the decree, if the proceedings under such execution were in all respects regular and in compliance with the decree, if the return also shows that the officer sold under the authority of the decree as well as of the execution.—Lavender v. Latimer, 15 Ill. (5 Peck) 80.

[g] (Ill. 1873) Where the judgment under which a sale of land is made is reversed, the sale may be set aside, on motion, after the expiration of 12 months, when no deed has been taken out and the judgment debtor is still in possession.—Hays v. Cassell, 70 Ill. 669.

[h] (Ill. 1874) A decree setting aside a sale by a master in chancery, because the master made a deed prematurely, is erroneous, and must be reversed. The irregularity in making the deed does not impair the sale. The relief granted should have been confined to so much of the report as involved the deed.—Burke v. Weaver, 71 Ill. 359.

[i] (Ill. 1874) Where a sale under a decree of court is conducted by an agent of the commissioner authorized by the decree to make the sale, and in his absence, and a deed is made by the commissioner, this is an irregularity that vitiates the sale, and authorizes the parties interested to have it set aside, if no rights of an innocent purchaser have intervened.—Chambers v. Jones, 72 Ill. 275.

[j] (Ill. 1875) Where a purchaser at judicial sale has made valuable improvements on the premises, the sale will not be set aside for slight and trivial causes.—Wilson v. Kellogg, 77 Ill. 47.

[k] (Ill. 1878) A decree ordered the sale of property, and required the master to give notice by publication three successive weeks and by posting up written or printed notices in three public places. No notices were in fact posted, and publication was made for only two weeks. Held, that the sale would be set aside.—Augustine v. Doud, 1 Ill. App. (1 Bradw.) 588.

[kk] (Ky. 1866) The simple fact that a confirmation of a judicial sale would sacrifice the interests of those entitled to the protection of the court affords sufficient ground for setting aside the sale.—Egard v. Chearnly, 64 Ky. (1 Bush) 12.

[l] (Ky. 1871) Where a commissioner is ordered to sell land on credits of 6, 12, and 18 months, a sale by him on the credit of 1, 2, and 3 years will be set aside.—Cofer v. Miller, 70 Ky. (7 Bush) 545.

[ll] (Ky. 1888) A sale under decree cannot be set aside on the ground that the land was not appraised at its true value before the sale, where the appraisal is not attacked for fraud or unfairness.—Harris v. Gunnell, 9 S. W. 376.

[m] (Ky. 1888) Where a judgment, under which land in the hands of defendant's grantees has been sold to plaintiff, an insolvent, is reversed, and plaintiff found to be indebted to defendant, the sale will be set aside.—Baker v. Baker, 87 Ky. 461, 9 S. W. 382.

[mm] (Ky. 1889) Where a sale is confirmed after decision, on appeal, reversing the judgment, and directing that appellant's interest be protected in the sale, and the sale has been made, without securing appellant's rights, on 6 months' credit, instead of 12, as directed by the judgment, the order of confirmation will be set aside.—Musgrave v. Parrish, 12 S. W. 709.

[n] (Ky. 1893) The commissioner appointed to sell land of a judgment debtor agreed to accept from the debtor, who wished to purchase at the sale, certain persons as sureties on the sale bond; but he afterwards refused to do so, without giving the debtor sufficient time to procure other sureties before the sale, in consequence of which the land was sold to another. Held, that the sale should be set aside for misconduct of commissioner.—Passmore v. Moore, 22 S. W. 325.

[nn] (Ky. 1894) A sale under judgment in several consolidated actions will not be set aside after 10 years for the reason that the warning order in one case does not show proof of plaintiff's nonresidence, where it appears that such proof was made in one of the other cases.—Farris v. Perkins, 26 S. W. 188.

[o] (Md. 1846) Where the decree for a sale ordered the appointed trustee to give bond in the penalty of a prescribed sum, and he gave bond for a less sum, which was accepted by the court and approved, and he proceeded to make and report a sale, it was held that this was no ground to vacate an order of final ratification.—Dawes v. Thomas, 4 Gill, 333.

[oo] (Md. 1847) An advertisement for the sale of lands by a trustee stated that "by virtue of a decree of the high court of chancery there will be sold certain real estate," naming the tracts and giving their locality, "of which A. died seised and possessed," but did not state the names of the parties to the suit in which the decree passed, nor the several incumbrances upon the property. Held, that the sale would not on this account be vacated, in the absence of proof that competition in the purchase was prevented or the sale in any respect prejudiced thereby.—Cunningham v. Schley, 6 Gill, 207; Gibbs v. Cunningham, 1 Md. Ch. 44.

[ooo] (Md. 1847) Where a trustee's bond is not stamped, but is filed and approved by the chancellor, and the trustee proceeds to make the sale as decreed, this is not a ground for vacating the sale; but the chancellor, on application, will require the trustee to file the bond.—Cunningham v. Schley, 6 Gill, 207.

ed with the English language, called upon the trustee a few days before the sale, for information as to the day of the sale; that either the trustee incautiously misinformed him on the subject, or that he misunderstood the trustee, owing to his imperfect knowledge of the language; and that a bidder, who would have given nearly twice the amount for which the property was struck off, was kept from attending the sale by the information which he received from the defendant,—upon these circumstances, and the concurrence of the plaintiff in the application, the sale was set aside.—Hintze v. Stingel, 1 Md. Ch. 283.

[pp] (Md. 1848) Where the decree under which a judicial sale has been had is appealed from, and an approved appeal bond filed, of which the trustee had notice prior to the sale, the sale will be set aside.—Chesapeake Bank v. McClellan, 1 Md. Ch. 328.

[q] (Md. 1856) Judicial sales will not be set aside for causes that the parties in interest might, with a reasonable degree of diligence, have avoided.—Kauffman v. Walker, 9 Md. 229.

[qq] (Md. 1878) A sale made by a substituted trustee will not be set aside for the misconduct of his predecessor.—Dungan v. Vondersmith, 49 Md. 249.

[r] (Neb. 1894) The courts cannot interpose to set aside judicial sales to satisfy debts, because of depression in business or financial stringency.—Nebraska Loan & Trust Co. v. Hamer, 40 Neb. 281, 58 N. W. 695.

[rr] (N. J. 1880) A sale under a decree in chancery may be set aside, even after deed delivered, by an order made in the original cause, either for impropriety in the sale, or for the purpose of letting in a defense to the action.—Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Sturges, 33 N. J. Eq. (6 Stew.) 328.

[s] (N. J. 1881) A judicial sale made in violation of a promise to adjourn to a future day will be set aside, upon petition, if application is properly made, although the deed has been delivered.—Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Goddard, 33 N. J. Eq. (6 Stew.) 482.

[ss] (N. Y. 1866) The court will not set aside a judicial sale on the ground that the guardian of infants, who are interested, failed to attend the sale, unless it be shown that in consequence of such nonattendance the property sold at a less price than it would have brought if the guardian attended.—Stryker v. Storm, 1 Abb. Prac. (N. S.) 424.

[t] (N. Y. 1867) Where a judicial sale of property was made, against the defendant's remonstrance, on a day most unfavorable to a large gathering, and in an order which induces a reasonable belief that it was detrimental to his interests, and under circumstances giving rise to apprehension that free competition was interfered with, the court is justified in ordering a new sale.—King v. Platt, 37 N. Y. 155, 2 Abb. Dec. 527, 35 How. Prac. 23, 3 Abb. Prac. (N. S.) 174, 434.

[tt] (N. C. 1877) An allegation, on the part of a purchaser at a judicial sale, that the boundaries of the land cannot be furnished with any accuracy, may be ground for ordering a survey to locate and identify the land, but not for setting aside the sale, until some such attempt to locate the land has been made.—Shields v. Harrison, 77 N. C. 115.

[u] (N. C. 1891) Where two persons enter into a scheme to prevent competitive bidding at a judicial sale of land which others are interested in having sold for a fair price, and one of such persons purchases the land, and takes title in his own name, the sale will not be set aside at the instance of the other on the ground that he was prevented from bidding by the promises of the purchaser.—Harrell v. Wilson, 108 N. C. 97, 12 S. E. 889.

[uu] (Ohio, 1859) Where a decree, entered in the supreme court, that the sheriff sell certain land on receiving an order for that purpose, is sent by mandate to the common pleas for execution, and the sheriff sells on receiving a certified copy of this decree from the clerk, without any order to sell, the sale is so irregular that it may be set aside on motion.—Rhonemus v. Corwin, 9 Ohio St. 366.

[v] (Ohio, 1859) A judicial sale of the whole property will not be set aside on the opinion of witnesses that it would have brought more if parceled in lots, since such objection should have been made to the sheriff at the time of the sale.—Hartshorne v. Reeder, 3 Ohio Dec. 109.

[vv] (Ohio, 1874) Where a judicial sale has been made on void process, the court may, while the purchase money remains in the hands of the sheriff, on the application of the purchaser, set aside the sale and order the purchase money to be refunded.—Dowell v. Goode, 25 Ohio St. 390.

[vvv] (Pa. 1857) Failure of the advertisement for the sale of certain lots to describe an outlet on the alley, which was a very important advantage to such lots, is sufficient to justify setting aside the sale.—Chadwick v. Patterson, 2 Phila. 275.

[w] (Pa. 1879) A sale of land under order of court, advertised as free from incumbrances, may be set aside because of the existence of a right of way previously unknown to the purchaser.—In re Whiteman's Estate, 13 Phila. 249.

[ww] (S. C. 1830) A judicial sale will not be set aside, on the ground that the commissioner neglected to take a mortgage as required by the order of sale, where it appears that the purchaser was always ready and willing to execute the mortgage; but the court will require the purchaser to comply with this condition.—Young v. Teague, Bailey, Eq. 13.

[x] (Va. 1814) Where, at a commissioner's sale, they proclaimed that the time of bidding for certain land would be limited to 15 minutes, which time was several times extended, the court refused to set aside the sale because of such limitation.—Fairfax v. Muse's Ex'rs, 4 Munf. 124.

[xx] (Va. 1857) A sale of land by a commissioner, under a decree of the chancery court, was set aside because the day was so inclement as to deter several persons from attending who intended to be present, and only one bidder was present, and she lived at the place.—Roberts v. Roberts, 13 Grat. 639, 70 Am. Dec. 435.

[xxx] (Va. 1873) It is no just cause for vacating a judicial sale that only a few bidders were present.—Hudgins v. Lanier, 23 Grat. 494.

[y] (Va. 1889) A sale of land in which plaintiff was interested as tenant in common was ordered by the court, and a bid made by defendant was accepted, and the sale absolutely confirmed, the terms of the sale being part cash, and two deferred payments. Held, that a petition by plaintiff for the rescission of the sale should not be granted because the terms of the sale had not been complied with upon its confirmation, or because the value of the land had considerably increased before such compliance on account of the discovery of certain mineral deposits in adjacent land; no fraud being shown on the part of defendant, and the latter tendering, the day before the first deferred payment fell due, the cash payment, with interest from the date of the sale, and offering to comply with the requirements as to the deferred payments.—

Virginia Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Cottrell, 85 Va. 857, 9 S. E. 132, 17 Am. St. Rep. 108.

[yy] (Va. 1891) The fact that the attorney of the owner of land sold at a judicial sale died about two weeks before the confirmation of the sale, and that the owner had notice of motion for confirmation only from Saturday until Monday, are not sufficient grounds for vacating such confirmation, when the owner had several days' notice of the death of his attorney, and lived only three or four hours' ride from the place where the motion was made.—Allison v. Allison, 88 Va. 328, 13 S. E. 549.

[z] (W. Va. 1885) Under Code, c. 132, § 1, providing that a special commissioner appointed by the court to make a sale shall not receive any money under a decree or order until he gives bond before the court or its clerk, a sale made by such commissioner cannot be set aside merely because the commissioner failed to give the bond.—Sommerville v. Sommerville, 26 W. Va. 479.

Proceedings for relief, because of defects in or invalidity of judgment or decree, see post, § 107.

[a] (Ky. 1859) That a final judgment under which a sale of land is made by commissioner was erroneous is no ground for quashing the sale.—Vanbussum v. Maloney, 59 Ky. (2 Metc.) 550.

[b] (Ky. 1867) A commissioner's sale will not be set aside for a defect in the decree in not directing the commissioner to sell only so much as would satisfy the judgment, if the entire tract of land decreed to be sold did not sell for as much as the debt.—Doughty v. Moss, 64 Ky. (1 Bush) 161.

[c] (Ky. 1867) Where the court had jurisdiction to order a sale, such sale would not be set aside, however erroneous the judgment may be, unless the purchaser had obtained an unfair advantage.—Lusk v. Salter, 65 Ky. (2 Bush) 201.

[d] (Ky. 1889) The exception that no judgment should have been rendered against the debtor on the merits is no ground for invalidating the sale.—Vanmeter v. Vanmeter's Assignee, 88 Ky. 448, 11 S. W. 80, 289.

[e] (Tenn. 1871) If the transcript fails to show that the county court had jurisdiction to order a sale of a decedent's lands, which is sought to be set aside, the sale will be declared void.—Martin v. Turner, 49 Tenn. (2 Heisk.) 384.

§ 75. Fraud or misrepresentation.

[a] A judicial sale of land may be set aside, where fraud or misrepresentation has been practiced.

—(Md. 1828) Anderson v. Foulke, 2 Har. & G. 346;

(Neb. 1886) McKeighan v. Hopkins, 19 Neb. 33, 26 N. W. 614;

(N. Y. 1856) Le Fevre v. Laraway, 22 Barb. 167;

(Pa. 1838) Gallaher v. Collins, 7 Watts, 552.

[b] (Ala. 1886) A decree for the sale of complainant's land having been obtained, his attorney bought in the land for $500, and shortly afterwards resold it to B. for $600; but, with intent to defraud complainant, he induced the register to make a deed for the land to B. directly, and to report the sale as made to B. for $500. Held, that the collusion between the attorney and B. operated as a constructive fraud on the rights of the complainant, and was a sufficient ground to confer equity jurisdiction to set aside the sale.—Phillips v. Benson, 82 Ala. 500, 2 South. 93.

[d] (Md. 1851) If the trustee at a sale of land makes any promise or representation to the bidders that the estate shall be, or is, clear of all incumbrances, or that the title is better or different from that which would flow from the proceedings, and the promise or representation cannot be complied with, or turns out to be erroneous, the sale will be set aside.—Speed v. Smith, 4 Md. Ch. 299.

[e] (N. Y. 1843) False representations made at a master's sale by a defendant in the suit as to the situation of the property and the amount of the rental, although such representations were disavowed by the master, will, if the purchaser be deceived thereby, be a sufficient ground for his being discharged.—American Ins. Co. of New York v. Simers, 3 Chan. Sentinel, 70.

[g] (Va. 1881) In suit by a creditor, a sale of the debtor's real estate for a small sum was made by a commissioner; but the purchaser never complied with the terms of sale, and before the commissioner made any report to the court A. and B. offered him an advance bid of 10 per cent., which was accepted, and the sale confirmed by the court; but, before the purchase money was paid, creditors applied by petition to have the order confirming the sale set aside, on the ground that A. and B. had fraudulently concealed the fact that there was a cave under the tract which gave it great value. Held, that as the purchasers, having discovered the cave, used means to conceal it, and made false representations in relation to it, the order would be set aside.—Merchants' Bank v. Campbell, 75 Va. 455.

Mistake or accident in connection with inadequacy of price, see post, § 78 [q, t, u].

[a] A sale of land under an order of a court of chancery may be set aside, where some injurious mistake has been made.

(W. Va. 1881) Beard v. Arbuckle, 19 W. Va. 135.

[b] (U. S. 1837) The court that ordered a sale of real estate will set the sale aside, where it appears that from a misapprehension at the sale the persons present were induced not to bid for the property.—Bank of Alexandria v. Taylor, Fed. Cas. No. 854 [5 Cranch, C. C. 314].

[c] (Ala. 1846) Where a sale is made by the master in virtue of a decree, but under a misconception of the wishes and intentions of the parties in interest, the sale may be set aside, if it has not been subsequently assented to or acquiesced in for such a long time as to warrant the inference that it was assented to.—Branch Bank of State v. Hunt, 8 Ala. 876.

[d] (Ky. 1867) A sale by a commissioner will not be set aside for an error in computing interest, if it appears that the excess is too slight to justify the presumption that, had the true amount been adjudged, the debtor would have paid the amount and thereby prevented a sale, or if neither the debtor nor any one else at the sale offered as much as was due without such excess.—Doughty v. Moss, 64 Ky. (1 Bush) 161.

[e] (Ky. 1887) Error or mistake of judgment on the part of appraisers, appointed to fix the value of land to be sold at judicial sale, is no ground for setting aside the sale.—Kincheloe v. McCain's Ex'rs, 3 S. W. 3.

[f] (Md. 1848) A sale regularly conducted and fairly made under the authority of a court of chancery, where a third party, a stranger to the proceedings, becomes the purchaser, cannot be disturbed on the ground of mistake, unless such mistake has been caused by the conduct of the purchaser, or can be traced to the creditor for whose use the property was sold or to the trustee.—Johnson v. Dorsey, 7 Gill, 269.

[g] (Md. 1870) Where a purchaser at a judicial sale bought under the impression and belief that he was buying the property free of all incumbrances, except a ground rent, he is entitled to have the sale set aside on the discovery of a prior incumbrance on the property.—Hunting v. Walter, 33 Md. 60.

[h] (N. J. 1878) A purchaser at a judicial sale, who buys without examination or inquiry, will not be relieved from the sale because of a misapprehension as to the legal effect of the decree for sale and the character and extent of the title he will acquire; such mistake being a mistake of law, and due to the carelessness of the purchaser himself. While such contracts are made with the court itself, and therefore the court may exercise a greater power over them than over any other class of contracts, it cannot rescind them without an equitable or legal reason sufficient to justify such action.—Hayes v. Stiger, 29 N. J. Eq. (2 Stew.) 196.

[i] (N. J. 1886) Where confirmation of a master's sale is refused, by consent of parties, for admitted irregularity and surprise, and subsequently, on ex parte statements of counsel, the sale is confirmed, and a deed made, the court will, on an application of the party alleging irregularity and surprise, showing that she intended to resist confirmation on that ground, and that she had no notice of the confirmation, and that the sale operated as a fraud on her, set aside the order of confirmation, and declare the deed void.—Barker v. Richardson, 41 N. J. Eq. (14 Stew.) 656, 7 Atl. 637.

[j] (N. J. 1891) The fact that petitioner was present at the judicial sale, intending to bid, and failed to do so because he thought the bid made by another person was not bona fide, is not such a mistake as would justify setting aside the sale.—Fiske v. Weigel (Ch.) 21 Atl. 452.

[k] (N. Y. 1856) A judicial sale will be vacated where the conduct of the purchaser or of any other person interested in the sale has been such as to result in surprise or misapprehension affecting the sale.—La Fevre v. Laraway, 22 Barb. 167.

[l] (N. C. 1890) Though the purchase money for land ordered to be sold by a commissioner was not paid before the commissioner gave a deed, as required by the order, yet, as the court acted on the supposition that it had been paid, and gave judgment disposing of the funds, the error, if any, was fraud, and not a mistake which would authorize a motion to set aside the proceedings.—Smith v. Fort, 105 N. C. 446, 10 S. E. 914.

[m] (Ohio, 1883) Where a purchaser at a judicial sale has mistaken the identity of the property to be sold, supposing it to be the next-door house, and sends his agent to bid under that supposition, and receives the property, he will be released from his purchase on payment of costs.—Fallis v. Loughhead (Super. Ct. Cin.) 11 Wkly. Law Bul. 56, 9 Ohio Dec. 128.

[n] (S. C. 1830) It is not a sufficient ground for setting aside a judicial sale that one of the parties interested intended to bid higher, but was prevented by a mistake from doing so, if neither the commissioner nor purchaser contributed to the mistake, and the sale was fair and regularly conducted.—Young v. Teague, 1 Bailey, Eq. 13.

[o] (Tenn. 1869) Mere mistake or error in computing the amount of the purchase money of land sold under an order of court is not a ground for declaring the sale a nullity, in the absence of any allegation of fraud.—Cowan v. Anderson, 47 Tenn. (7 Cold.) 284.

Inadequacy of price in connection with other objections as ground for vacation of sale, see post, § 78.

Restraining purchaser from taking title to property on account of inadequacy of price, see post, § 119 [a].

[a] In the absence of any showing of fraud or irregularity, mere inadequacy of price will not justify the court in setting aside a judicial sale.

[b] (U. S. 1892) Where a sale has been made after prolonged litigation it will not be set aside on the ground that it was ordered at a time of financial depression in the particular industry, when it appears that it was once postponed on this ground at the instance of the complaining party, and there are controverting affidavits which render the fact of depression doubtful.—Pewabic Min. Co. v. Mason, 145 U. S. 349, 12 Sup. Ct. 887, 36 L. Ed. 732; Marcus v. Same, Id.

[d] (U. S. 1893) Expression of a well-founded opinion by a witness that property would, on resale, bring a much higher price, is not sufficient ground for setting aside a judicial sale.—Fidelity Trust & Safety Vault Co. v. Mobile St. Ry. Co. (C. C.) 54 Fed. 26.

[e] (Ala. 1852) A court will never permit its process to be improperly used to work injustice or oppression. If such use be made of it, the court will, by virtue of its power over its officers, suitors, and counsel, rectify the abuse. Thus, where property worth $1,000 was sold at judicial sale for $6, it was held to be the duty of the court to set aside the sale.—Lankford v. Jackson, 21 Ala. 650.

[f] (Ill. 1873) The fact that land worth $3,500 was sold for $385, subject to redemption, in the absence of any showing of unfairness in the sale or of bad faith in the purchaser, held to be insufficient ground for setting aside the sale.—Watt v. McGalliard, 67 Ill. 513.

[g] (Ind. 1861) The existence of subsequent judgment liens on land judicially sold is not a material circumstance to set aside the sale for inadequacy of price, for these liens are not constructive notice to the purchaser.—Sowle v. Champion, 16 Ind. 165.

[h] (Ky. 1890) Where land sold under a decree is appraised and sold for two-thirds of its value, and a report of the sale filed and confirmed, the sale will not be set aside upon a showing by affidavits that the land was sold for less than its actual value, where no advance bid, or offer to pay the debt, has been made.—Byrne v. Henderson, 13 S. W. 909.

[i] (Md. 1847) Where a sale reported was of a private sale, made for a much larger sum than could be obtained at an offer at public sale duly made by a trustee, inadequacy of price is no objection to the private sale.—Cunningham v. Schley, 6 Gill, 207.

[j] (Md. 1847) An event which happens subsequently to a reported sale, and which, in the opinion of many persons, has enhanced the value of the property sold, ought not to affect such reported sale.—Cunningham v. Schley, 6 Gill, 207.

[k] (Md. 1847) A fair sale of property for $13,000, alleged to be worth $15,000 or $20,000, will not be vacated.—Cohen v. Wagner, 6 Gill, 236.

[m] (Md. 1848) The land in this case sold for $12,422.25. Held, that the court would not be authorized to vacate the sale upon the single ground of inadequacy of price, even assuming the property to be worth $20,000, the estimate placed upon it by the exceptant.—Johnson v. Dorsey, 7 Gill, 269.

[n] (N. J. 1889) Where a judicial sale has been conducted in exact compliance with the law governing such sales, and the land has been sold to the highest bidder, without collusion, accident, or mistake, the sale will not be set aside on the ground that a greater price would be obtained by a resale, especially where the expected increase amounts to only about 10 per cent. of the price obtained.—Morrisse v. Inglis, 46 N. J. Eq. (1 Dick.) 306, 19 Atl. 16.

[o] (N. J. 1891) A judicial sale of property for $4,000 will not be set aside, on the ground of inadequacy of price, on the testimony of three persons that they valued it at $5,000 and were willing to pay that sum for it, where it appears that such persons were well acquainted with the property and knew it was to be in the market for sale, but failed to attend.—Fiske v. Weigel (Ch.) 21 Atl. 452.

[p] (N. Y. 1839) Where a purchase at a master's sale is fair and free from fraud, a resale will not be ordered because of inadequacy of price, or to allow a second mortgagee to purchase at such sale, where the purchaser has acquired a subsequent lien which will be periled by a resale.—Gardiner v. Schermerhorn, 1 Clarke, Ch. 101.

[q] (N. Y. 1845) A court of chancery cannot set aside a public sale made by an officer, who is not acting under the direction of the court, on the ground of inadequacy of the sum paid by the purchaser, however gross or startling it may be.—March v. Ludlum, 3 Sandf. Ch. 35.

[r] (N. C. 1853) Leave to open the biddings at a judicial sale on the ground of inadequacy of price will not be granted after the lapse of a year, in the absence of an allegation of fraud.—Ashbee v. Cowell, 45 N. C. 158.

[s] (Ohio, 1878) Where it appears from affidavits that property sold at judicial sale was valued at $16,000, but was bought at the sale for $7,000, the sale will be set aside.—Banning v. Pendery, 4 Wkly. Law Bul. 913.

[t] (Tex. 1878) Where lands are sold for 28 cents per acre, and they are worth from $2 to $5 per acre, the sale should be set aside.—Hardin v. Smith, 49 Tex. 420.

[u] (Va. 1877) Code 1873, c. 174, § 4, provides that where, at judicial sales, land does not bring at the first and second exposure to sale three-fourths of the last official assessment made for the purpose of taxation, it shall not be sold. Held, that it was error to set aside a judicial sale of land at a price but little more than 8 per cent. below the assessed value.—Curtis v. Thompson, 29 Grat. 474.

[v] (Va. 1883) That a purchaser at a judicial sale has made a good bargain is no reason for setting aside the sale.—Langyher v. Patterson, 77 Va. 470.

[w] (Va. 1891) The confirmation of a judicial sale for about $4,000 will not be vacated on the ground that the price was grossly inadequate, when, on two prior sales within two years preceding such sale the land, after wide advertisements, brought $1,560 and $2,650, respectively, and the purchaser at the last sale agreed to sell the land to a third person for $5,000.—Allison v. Allison, 88 Va. 328, 13 S. E. 549.

[ww] (W. Va. 1871) A sale of 1,700 acres of land for less than $5,000 was set aside for inadequacy of price, upon affidavits of 10 persons that the actual value was twice or thrice that sum.—Sinnett v. Cralle's Adm'r, 4 W. Va. 600.

[x] (W. Va. 1882) A decree ordering a sale of land failed to fix the amounts and priorities of the various liens thereon, whereby the land brought less than otherwise would have been the case. Held, that the court was justified in refusing to confirm the sale.—Trimble v. Herold, 20 W. Va. 602.

[xx] (W. Va. 1882) Three sales under a decree were successively set aside,—the first for inadequacy of price, the second because of a cloud on the title, and the third on an upset bid. Held, that the fourth sale would not be set aside for mere inadequacy of price.—Trimble v. Herold, 20 W. Va. 602.

[y] (W. Va. 1887) It is proper to refuse to set aside a sale for inadequacy of price where there had been two sales of the property,—one under a deed of trust, and the other at a judicial sale,—made not far from each other in point of time, both at $2,000, and affidavits were filed, stating that the property was worth, at that time, from $3,000 to $3,500, and "affiants believed that in the near future said property could be sold for an advance of from $500 to $1,000 over the price of $2,000," and another affidavit showed it sold for a fair price.—Moran v. Clark, 30 W. Va. 358, 4 S. E. 303, 8 Am. St. Rep. 66.

[z] (W. Va. 1892) A judicial sale may be set aside before confirmation for gross inadequacy of price, but, if it be attempted to establish this by parol evidence only, the proof must be very clear, especially if a great length of time elapsed between the sale and its confirmation, and during this time no advance bid has been made to the court.—Cornell v. Wilhelm, 15 S. E. 245.

Inadequacy of price in general as ground for vacation or setting aside of sale, see ante, § 77.

[a] While mere inadequacy of price is not sufficient of itself to set aside a judicial sale, yet, where the inadequacy is gross, slight additional circumstances only are required to authorize setting it aside; and where defendant, by casualty or misfortune, has been prevented from appearing in the action, and preventing a sacrifice of the property, it should be set aside.
—(U. S. 1896) Schroeder v. Young, 161 U. S. 334, 16 Sup. Ct. 512, 40 L. Ed. 721;

[b] Mere inadequacy of price will have its weight, where there are other grounds for setting aside a judicial sale.
—(Ind. 1853) Benton v. Shreeve, 4 Ind. 66;
(Md. 1839) Glenn v. Clapp, 11 Gill & J. 1.

[c] (Ala. 1873) A showing that bystanders were prevented from bidding at a judicial sale of lands by irregularities committed by the sheriff in conducting the sale, and that the lands were bid in at a grossly inadequate price, is sufficient to require the setting aside of such sale on motion.—Hurt v. Nave's Adm'r, 49 Ala. 459.

[d] (Ill. 1865) Where land is sold by order of the court of chancery under a will, inadequacy of price may be considered, with other evidence, on the question of confirming the sale.—Sowards v. Pritchett, 37 Ill. 517.

[e] (Kan. 1896) Where interested parties attack the title of property offered at a judicial sale, in such a way as to deter bidders and depress values, and where the price paid for the property is greatly inadequate, the sale should be set aside.—Wood v. Drury, 56 Kan. 409, 43 Pac. 763.

[f] (Ky. 1842) When property has been sold by a commissioner under a decree at a very inadequate price, insufficient to satisfy the debt, and is bought by complainant's counsel, and the commissioner has not used proper efforts to obtain the best price, it is no reason to refuse to set aside the sale that the purchaser has agreed to satisfy the decree in favor of his client.—Busey v. Hardin, 41 Ky. (2 B. Mon.) 407.

[g] (Ky. 1864) Where a commissioner appointed to sell land to satisfy a judgment failed to advertise the sale in the manner directed, and the land was sold for less than its real value, it was error to confirm such sale.—Williams v. Woodruff, 62 Ky. (1 Duv.) 257.

[h] (Ky. 1887) Even if it be a true rule that, when time is allowed to redeem land sold at judicial sale, mere inadequacy of price is no ground of exception to the sale, yet the rule does not apply where two lots are improperly sold, when either may be worth, and at a fair sale would bring, more than enough to satisfy the judgment, leaving the other lot unincumbered.—Bean v. Hoffendorfer, 84 Ky. 685, 3 S. W. 138.

[i] (Ky. 1888) When the judgment ordering the sale directs that notice be posted at the court house door, and at three or more public places near the land, and the commissioner states in his report that notice has been given as required, but when called as a witness states that he posted a notice at the court house, and sent copies to be posted near the land, but does not know whether they were received, and it is not shown that they were all posted, and it appears that the owner did not know of the sale until shortly before he moved to set it aside, and that the land did not bring its fair value, it is proper to order a resale.—Harris v. Gunnell, 9 S. W. 376.

[j] (Ky. 1889) Under Code, § 694, requiring property to be sold in parcels when it can be done without injury to the property, where the court orders a sale, without directing a sale in parcels, and on exceptions to the confirmation it appears that the land did not bring its full value, the court should set aside the sale and order, and direct a resale. Such an order is not an erroneous judgment merely, but an error as to the manner of sale over which the court has control until after confirmation.—Vanmeter v. Vanmeter's Assignee, 88 Ky. 448, 11 S. W. 80, 289.

[k] (Ky. 1892) Gen. St. c. 75, p. 942, prohibits any master commissioner from acting as such in any case in which he is or shall become interested as attorney or otherwise. Held, that a sale of land, made by the attorney who obtained the judgment on which it was based, as special commissioner, will be set aside on exceptions of the debtor showing that the sale was made for an inadequate price, though the commissioner, after his appointment, renounced his employment as attorney, and there is

[l] (Ky. 1895) A commissioner's sale of a debtor's residence, appraised at $4,000, to the debtor's wife, for $2,700, will not be set aside because persons would not bid against her, knowing the family were distressed over the debtor's failure, and sympathized with them.—Alms & Doepke Co. v. Gates, 32 S. W. 1088.

[m] (Md. 1856) Where the advertisement of a judicial sale did not sufficiently describe the property, and the property was sold for less than its value, the sale will be set aside.—Kauffman v. Walker, 9 Md. 229.

[n] (Md. 1882) Land was ordered to be sold at public sale; but, a satisfactory bid not being obtained, it was sold at private sale. It appeared that the price agreed upon was considerably below the value of the land, that a higher price had been offered subsequently, and the trustee himself thought that more could be obtained at public sale. Held, that the sale would not be ratified.—Kelso v. Jessop, 59 Md. 114.

[o] (Md. 1895) The failure of the trustee to advertise the sale as required by the decree, coupled with the fact that the land was sold for much less than its real value, authorizes the court to set aside the sale, as against the purchaser.—Conroy v. Carroll, 82 Md. 127, 33 Atl. 423.

[p] (Miss. 1871) When, upon the sale of land under a decree in equity, the defendant conspires with a third party to bring on the sale without the knowledge of the complainant, whereby such third party is enabled to buy the property at a grossly inadequate price, the chancellor is justified in setting aside such sale.—Pattison v. Josselyn, 43 Miss. 373.

[q] (N. J. 1856) Though mere inadequacy of price is not sufficient to vacate a judicial sale, yet, when coupled with some mistake or accident beyond the control of the injured party, the sale may be vacated.—Eberhart v. Gilchrist, 11 N. J. Eq. (3 Stockt.) 167.

[r] (N. J. 1893) Where several tracts of land, worth in the aggregate at least $2,500, are sold in a lump, and in the absence of the parties interested, for $50, the inadequacy of the price is so great as to shock the conscience, and warrant the court in setting aside the sale.—Daly v. Ely, 51 N. J. Eq. (6 Dick.) 104, 26 Atl. 263.

[s] (N. Y. 1845) A court of chancery cannot set aside a public sale regularly made by an officer not acting under the direction of this court, notwithstanding the price was grossly inadequate and the party chiefly interested did not know that it was to take place.—March v. Ludlum, 3 Sandf. Ch. 35.

[t] (N. Y. 1862) Surprise and gross inadequacy of price are sufficient grounds for setting aside a judicial sale of real estate, upon fully indemnifying the purchaser.—Griffith v. Hadley, 23 N. Y. Super. Ct. (10 Bosw.) 587.

[u] (N. Y. 1863) The court will interfere to set aside a judicial sale for an inadequate price, where there was accident and surprise on one side, and advantage taken of it on the other.—Gould v. Gager, 24 How. Prac. 440, 18 Abb. Prac. 32.

[v] (Pa. 1874) Plaintiff in proceedings resulting in a judicial sale himself conducted the sale and represented to the bidders present on the first day that the proposed sale was without legal authority and would vest no title in the purchaser. The truth was merely that he was not authorized to sell on that particular day. On the second day of the sale the plaintiff knocked down the property to himself for $20, though it was worth about $1,500. Held, that the sale was void, and would be set aside since his representation on the first day would have the effect of deterring bidders from attending the further offer of the property.—Brotherline v. Swires, 81 Leg. Int. 325.

[w] (Tenn. 1870) That the price was grossly inadequate; that the parties interested did not attend the sale, one because he was attending on a sick member of his family, and the other because he had no notice; that the property was sold at the court house, when it would have brought a better price on the premises; and that it was sold without notice in the proper newspapers,—are reasons which will support an application to set aside a judicial sale before confirmation.—Newland v. Gaines, 48 Tenn. (1 Heisk.) 720.

[x] (Va. 1873) A judicial sale of land will be set aside, where it appears that the land was sacrificed, that one of the commissioners to sell was interested in the purchase, that a material advance was offered by a substantial bidder, and there was no memorandum of the sale.—Teel v. Yancey, 23 Grat. 691.

[y] (W. Va. 1877) At a judicial sale R. became the purchaser of a tract of 100 acres of land at $26 per acre. Affidavits in the cause, which were uncontradicted, showed that the land was worth at least $40 per acre. There was a misunderstanding as to whether or not the growing crop on the land was being sold with it. The auctioneer either bid himself, or received sham bids. Held, that under these circumstances the sale was invalid and ought not to have been confirmed.—Hilleary v. Thompson, 11 W. Va. 113.

§ 79. Advance on bid.

[a] As it is the duty of the court to see that property sold at a chancery sale be sold for the best price that can be had, it is allowable to open the biddings merely upon the offer of a higher price, if the advance is sufficient to furnish an inducement, under all the circumstances, for a resale of the property.

(Tenn. 1878) Atchison v. Murfree, 3 Tenn. Ch. 728.

[d] (U. S. 1892) A master's sale of a mine having been set for Saturday, January 24th, the master received, on the night of the 23d, a telegram from a stranger in a distant city, requesting a postponement, at his expense, saying that he was a large stockholder; that he had but just received notice of the sale, and wished to bid, but was a Jew, and could do no business on Saturday. The mine was sold for $710,000, and two days later the stranger telegraphed offering $720,000. The sale was confirmed on March 2d, and on the following day the stranger filed an intervening petition to set it aside, setting up these facts, offering to pay the expenses of a resale, and to bid $900,000. Held, that the master properly ignored the telegrams; that it was the stranger's duty to intervene before confirmation; and that, as the selling price was not grossly inadequate, the sale should not be set aside.—Pewabic Min. Co. v. Mason, 145 U. S. 349, 12 Sup. Ct. 887, 36 L. Ed. 732; Marcus v. Same, Id.

[e] (U. S. 1880) Under equity rule 19, adopting the practice of England so far as it is consistent with "our local circumstances and conveniences," a third person can intervene and have a sale set aside, upon offering a sufficient advance in price and paying all the expenses incurred by the previous purchaser.—Blackburn v. Selma R. Co. (C. C.) 3 Fed. 689.

[f] (U. S. 1880) On application to set aside a sale on the offering of an advanced bid on the price, it is essential that such advanced bid be absolute and unconditional.—Blackburn v. Selma R. Co. (C. C.) 3 Fed. 689.

[g] (U. S. 1880) Under the nineteenth rule of equity, permitting one who offers an advanced bid to have a judicial sale set aside, it seems that the advanced bid should so exceed the bid price at the sale as to afford substantial evidence that the property was undersold and the buyer gained, not only a fair margin of profit, but an unconscionable advantage over the party for whose benefit the sale was made.—Blackburn v. Selma R. Co. (C. C.) 3 Fed. 689.

[h] (U. S. 1880) In an application to set aside a judicial sale upon the ground of gross inadequacy of price, it is not essential that the amount of the advance bid should be actually paid into court.—Blackburn v. Selma R. Co. (C. C.) 3 Fed. 689.

[i] (U. S. 1880) Where application has been made to set aside a sale on the offering of an advanced bid, the first purchaser is entitled to increase his bid in open court to the amount of the advanced bid and claim a preference; but such preference cannot be extended on a still further advance of the bid.—Blackburn v. Selma R. Co. (C. C.) 3 Fed. 689.

[j] (Ky. 1889) Land was sold by a commissioner under a decree and order of sale which were regular, and the sale was in accordance with the order. The price obtained was three-fourths of the admitted value of the land, which, being unsusceptible of division, was sold as a whole. The report of sale was confirmed without exceptions. The judgment debtors moved at the same term to set aside the sale, assigning as their sole ground that they were nonresidents, and that they failed to receive their attorney's letter advising them of the sale until it was too late to be represented by a bidder, and tendered an advance bid of $100. It did not appear that the debtors had been proceeded against as nonresidents, and their own attorney represented them in the case. Held, that it was error to set aside the confirmation, and order a resale.—Lawson v. Hill, 11 S. W. 606.

[k] (Ky. 1891) Land having been sold under a decree of court for $5,650, the sale will not be set aside on an offer of an advance of $1,800 made by a party to the suit, who did not ascertain that a sale had been ordered, "because he was too much engaged in his private affairs to attend to his interest in the suit or to make inquiry about it."—Beam v. Johnson, 16 S. W. 140.

[m] (Md. 1847) Where a sale was made for $3,000, it was held that an offer of $4,000, made subsequently to the sale, and after the value of the property had been enhanced, could have but little weight in determining whether the property was previously sold at a price so much below its value as to indicate a want of reasonable judgment in the trustee.—Gibbs v. Cunningham, 1 Md. Ch. 44.

[n] (N. J. 1891) A master's sale will not be set aside on the ground of mistake and inadequacy of price, because of the subsequent offer of petitioner to give more than the price at which it was sold.—Fiske v. Weigel (Ch.) 21 Atl. 452.

[o] (N. Y. 1856) Upon a sale in chancery in this state, a resale will not be ordered, either before or after the confirmation of the report of sale, upon an offer of an increased price alone. Special circumstances must in all cases exist, where the sale is not void, to justify an order for a resale.—Le Fevre v. Laraway, 22 Barb. 167.

[p] (N. Y. 1877) Where property has been sold at a judicial sale, the court will not, when the sale has been well advertised and a large attendance of buyers secured, and there has been no surprise, misunderstanding, or fraud, and no binding offer from any responsible party to pay a large sum upon a resale, refuse to confirm such sale merely because some persons say they will pay a larger price hereafter, especially when such an opportunity has been fairly afforded and refused.—People v. Bond St. Sav. Bank, 53 How. Prac. 336.

[q] (N. C. 1879) A judicial sale set aside, and a resale had to the owner, at his advance bid of 10 per cent.; he having been prevented from attending by the inclemency of the weather.—Pritchard v. Askew, 80 N. C. 86.

[r] (N. C. 1882) Though the court looks with jealousy upon the application of one who was a bidder at a judicial sale to reopen the biddings, yet the advance price offered by him will be taken as a compensation for any loss that may have arisen from a want of competition at the sale.—State v. Roanoke Nav. Co., 86 N. C. 408.

[rr] (N. C. 1883) A judicial sale will be confirmed where the price is adequate, unless before confirmation an increase of 10 per cent. is bid.—Vass v. Arrington, 89 N. C. 10.

[s] (N. C. 1885) On a showing that advanced bids had been made after a sale of land by order of court, the court may order a resale.—Hinson v. Adrian, 92 N. C. 121.

[ss] (N. C. 1885) Where a consent order directs a sale, the mere fact that after the sale an advance of 10 per cent. is offered does not require that the bidding should be opened.—Vaughan v. Gooch, 92 N. C. 524.

[t] (N. C. 1887) Under the state practice, an advanced bid of 10 per cent. before confirmation is, when properly secured, sufficient ground for reopening the biddings in commissioner's sale of land.—Dula v. Seagle, 98 N. C. 458, 4 S. E. 549.

[tt] (Pa. 1881) A sale of real estate by a master in chancery will be set aside, and the biddings reopened, if, before confirmation, a higher price is offered; but the biddings will not be so opened, except upon a reasonable advance and payment of the bidder's expenses.—Church v. Bailee, 2 Leg. Rec. Rep. 169, 29 Pittsb. Leg. J. 20.

[u] (S. C. 1830) The English practice of opening the bidding on an offer of an advance at any time before the confirmation of a judicial sale does not apply to sales by commissioners in South Carolina, where such commissioners are authorized to complete the contract by executing a conveyance to the purchaser.—Young v. Teague, 1 Bailey, Eq. 13.

[uu] (Tenn. 1852) The report of a master of the sale of land not being confirmed, it is competent for the court on the petition of a creditor to open the biddings; it being shown to the satisfaction of the court that the land was sold for a price much below its value, and was purchased with a view to favor the debtor, provided the petitioning creditor will agree to advance on the amount bid such sum as may, in the estimation of the court, authorize the biddings to be opened.—Childress v. Hurt, 32 Tenn. (2 Swan) 487.

[v] (Tenn. 1874) A court of chancery, upon the master's reporting a subsequent written bid in advance of the highest at the sale, may decree that the advanced bid be confirmed, and that, if the bidder fails to comply with the terms, the land be resold, and he charged with the deficit thereon, if any.—Allen v. East, 63 Tenn. (4 Baxt.) 308.

[vv] (Tenn. 1877) After confirmation of a resale, the biddings will not again be opened at the instance of the owner, who was present at the resale, upon a mere offer of an advance of 10 per cent. on the previous bid.—Bradford v. Hamilton, 3 Tenn. Ch. 344.

[vvv] (Tenn. 1878) Where the court orders a resale of land by a master, and it appears that since the first sale a dispute has arisen as to the title, and an action of ejectment is pending against the purchaser thereat, it is not proper for the court to entertain a proposition that, "if the court will open the biddings and settle the title of said property, I hereby guaranty an advance of 10 per cent. on the sale now reported, and will secure the same."—Lucas v. Moore, 70 Tenn. (2 Lea) 1.

[w] (Tenn. 1880) The court will open the biddings, against the objection of the purchaser of land sold under order of court to settle an estate, if an advance of nearly 100 per cent. is offered, and will change the terms from cash to a credit of one, two, and three years; no creditor objecting, and the contest being between the heirs and the purchaser only.—Reese v. Copeland, 74 Tenn. (6 Lea) 190.

[ww] (Tenn. 1882) Where a clerk and master has made a sale of land under a chancery decree, but before its confirmation the bid is raised, the court may, in its discretion, open the biddings, and receive any bids offered, rather than sell over again after public notice.—Dupuy v. Gorman, 77 Tenn. (9 Lea) 144.

[x] (Va. 1879) Under a decree of court, commissioners sold land at public auction at a fair price to the agent of three parties, with the understanding that each wanted certain parts of the land, as it was situated contiguous to their other lands, and that each should comply with the terms of the sale for his respective part. Another party then presented a petition offering a higher bid, with sureties to make it good. Held, that it was within the discretion of the court to reopen the bidding, but that a fair sale would never be set aside, especially when there was reason to believe that the higher offer was made out of malice.—Roudabush v. Miller, 32 Grat. 454.

[xx] (Va. 1882) No fixed rule can be laid down as to the amount of an upset bid which will cause the court to set aside a judicial sale. Confirmation must depend upon the circumstances of each particular case.—Hansucker v. Walker, 76 Va. 753.

[y] (Va. 1887) Where the court refuses to accept an advance bid of 30 per cent. of the price for which certain land sold, and confirms the sale, the decree will be reversed, and a resale ordered.—Withers v. Coles' Ex'r, 83 Va. 525, 5 S. E. 673.

[yy] (Va. 1888) Where land has been sold under a decree in a creditors' suit, and reported to the court the same day as sold to the highest bidder for $10,000, whereupon a third person asks to put in an upset bid of 10 per cent. advance, the upset bid should be allowed, the bidding being open again to all.—Todd v. Gallego Mills Mfg. Co., 84 Va. 586, 5 S. E. 676; Ewald v. Crockett, 85 Va. 299, 7 S. E. 386.

[z] (Va. 1888) Where land was sold under a decree for $10,000, and a third person asked to be allowed to put in an upset bid of 10 per cent. advance, and the former bidder did not ask leave to withdraw his bid, it was proper to allow 20 days for perfecting the upset bid by depositing money and furnishing bonds.—Ewald v. Crockett, 85 Va. 299, 7 S. E. 386.

Actions to set aside, see post, § 83.

Failure to give notice of setting aside of sale as ground for relief against resale, see ante, § 50 [v].

[a] A judicial sale should not be set aside against a purchaser who has complied with the conditions on a mere motion, but the complainant should be left to his remedy by suit.—(N. C. 1853) Ashbee v. Cowell, 45 N. C. 158; (S. C. 1876) Orr v. Orr, 7 S. C. (7 Rich.) 381.

[b] (Ala. 1886) Where a party to an action resulting in a judicial sale of property complains of fraud perpetrated at the sale, whereby a less price was realized than might have been obtained, he may have relief by a motion to set aside the sale.—Phillips v. Benson, 82 Ala. 500, 2 South. 93.

[c, d] (Ill. 1876) Notice of any motion to set aside a judicial sale must be given to the purchaser, but need not be given to an assignee of the certificate of sale. He stands in the position of the purchaser, and is subject to whatever may be ordered against him.—Roberts v. Clelland, 82 Ill. 538.

[f] (Neb. 1878) In an equity cause, as in an action of law, if a party desires to oppose the confirmation of a sale of real estate, he must file a motion in the district court, setting forth the ground upon which he seeks to set the sale aside.—Parrat v. Neligh, 7 Neb. 456.

[g] (N. C. 1890) A motion was made informally ore tenus to set aside a sale of land by a commissioner, for fraud in the deed and judgment. New parties were brought in on notice. No pleadings were filed alleging the grounds of the motion or a cause of action, and there was no answer or demurrer to the supposed petition. Held, that it was error to treat the motion as a new action brought, and, though no exception was taken thereto, the supreme court will, ex mero motu, take notice of it, and reverse the ruling.—Smith v. Fort, 105 N. C. 446, 10 S. E. 914.

[h] (N. C. 1890) In a suit for specific performance of a contract for sale of land, judgment was rendered for plaintiffs for rents, etc., and judgment was rendered against plaintiff for the balance of the purchase money on the land. A commissioner was appointed to sell the land, and afterwards reported it sold. Judgment was then rendered that the amount due plaintiff be paid; that fees and costs of suit be paid; and that the balance be paid into court, or bond given for the proper disposition thereof. Held, that the judgment was a final one, and the sale could only be set aside for fraud on new action brought, and not on motion.—Smith v. Fort, 105 N. C. 446, 10 S. E. 914.

[i, j] (Va. 1857) When application is made to set aside a chancery sale, it is not necessary to ask that the biddings may be begun at a substantial advance on the price reported.—Roberts v. Roberts, 13 Grat. 639, 70 Am. Dec. 435.

[k] (W. Va. 1886) A bill by proper allegations should show on its face that proper parties are made to the suit, and if it demands to have set aside a sale made under a decree in another suit, which is ended, for fraud or other reasons, and that a resale should be made, and the proceeds distributed among those entitled, so much of the substance of such suit and the decrees in it as will fully show its character and objects and the parties interested in the suit and proceeds of the sale, if made by the court, should be set out, so as to give the court definite information as to these matters.—McKay v. McKay, 28 W. Va. 514.

[a] (Ala. 1890) In the absence of excuse for the delay, a motion to set aside a judicial sale of lands made 13 years after the sale, will not be entertained, though the purchasers have never obtained possession, and though a suit instituted by them for possession 11 years after the sale has never been brought to trial. Qualifying Abercrombie v. Conner (1846) 10 Ala. 293.—Powder v. Cheeves, 90 Ala. 117, 7 South. 512.

[b] (Iowa, 1864) Acquiescence in a judicial sale may be inferred from delay, but not where no intervening rights have attached, and the purchaser, who moves to have it set aside, did not know the state of the title.—Chambers v. Cochran, 18 Iowa, 159.

[c] (Miss. 1852) Where a commissioner's sale has been confirmed by the chancery court, it is too late to apply at a subsequent term to set it aside for any causes which existed at the time of the confirmation, and which were known to the party, or which by reasonable diligence he might have ascertained, unless fraud or inevitable accident prevented him.—Henderson v. Herrod, 23 Miss. (1 Cushm.) 434.

[d] (Pa. 1847) A decree to set aside a sale made under order of court, five years after its confirmation, is void.—Lockhart v. John, 7 Pa. (7 Barr) 137.

[e] (S. C. 1886) Where parties know of an illegal combination to chill the bidding at a judicial sale, they cannot, after long acquiescence, have the sale set aside.—Baggott v. Sawyer, 25 S. C. 405.

Discretion of court on motion relating to judicial sales, see "Appeal and Error," vol. 2, cc. 1220, 1221, § 592.

[a] (Ill. 1875) A judicial sale will not be set aside by a court of equity without clear and satisfactory proof, especially after the lapse of several years.—Wilson v. Kellogg, 77 Ill. 47.

[b] (Ky. 1869) After a decretal sale of property, a court of equity will not reinstate the owner, on the ground that the purchaser by his fraudulent conduct deterred the bystanders from bidding, unless the proof is of a definite and unquestionable character to establish the fraud and resulting trust.—Crutchfield v. Thurman, 67 Ky. (4 Bush) 498.

[c] (N. Y. 1873) A provision in an order denying relief upon a summary application to set aside a sale, which assumes to limit the rights of the parties to bring an action for relief, either by prescribing terms or limiting the time for the commencement of such an action, is erroneous.—Howell v. Mills, 53 N. Y. 322.

[d] (N. C. 1859) Where a petition for the sale of land, in a court of equity, described one tract as "the mountain tract, containing about 100 acres," a sale was decreed of the lands mentioned in the pleadings, and the sale confirmed. On a bill to set aside the master's deed on the ground of fraud, it was held that it would require full and incontestable proof to satisfy the court that only a part of the 100 acres had been intended to be sold by the master.—Adderton v. Surratt, 58 N. C. 119.

[e] (Pa. 1857) On an application to set aside a judicial sale, the applicant will not be confined to matters set out in his affidavit.—Chadwick v. Patterson, 2 Phila. 275.

[f] (Tenn. 1859) If, upon an application to a court of equity by a purchaser of land sold under a decree of court, to set aside the sale, it appear to the court that the sale was merely irregular, but not void, and a confirmation thereof would promote the interests of the parties, some of whom are minors, the purchaser will be compelled to comply with the terms of sale, and his title will be perfected by a divestiture of title.—Swan v. Newman, 40 Tenn. (3 Head) 288.

[g] (Tex. 1884) A purchaser, not made a party to proceedings for the vacation of an order of sale, is not affected by a judgment vacating such order and the sale thereunder.—Burks v. Bennett, 62 Tex. 277.

[h] (Utah, 1884) Upon an application to set aside a judicial sale made pursuant to and in full compliance with a valid decree of a court directing it, objections to the sale, based upon errors in the decree, or committed by the court anterior to it, cannot be considered.—Meyer v. Utah & P. V. Ry. Co., 3 Pac. 393.

[i] (Va. 1890) A judicial sale of land for $1.50 per acre more than it was assessed for will not be set aside on a petition alleging that it was sold for an inadequate price, and that many bidders were kept away by inclement weather, where the only evidence of inadequacy of price is the opinions of neighbors, and it is not shown that any probable bidder was kept away from the sale except one who was bought off.—Tucker v. Tucker, 86 Va. 679, 10 S. E. 980.

[j] (W. Va.) In sales made by commissioners under decrees and orders of the court, the purchaser who bids off the property, and pays the deposit in good faith, has inchoate rights which entitle him to a hearing upon the question whether the sale shall be set aside.—(1882) Hughes v. Hamilton, 19 W. Va. 366; (1892) Connell v. Wilhelm, 36 W. Va. 598, 15 S. E. 245.

Action to annul sale, right to assert new grounds for relief in appellate court, see "Appeal and Error," vol. 2, c. 1590, § 1070, [jj].

[a] (U. S. 1880) Though a motion for vacation of a judicial sale was made too late for the court in which the order was granted to give relief, it does not follow that it is too late for a court of equity to grant such relief as plaintiff is entitled to.—Wills v. Chandler (C. C.) 2 Fed. 273, 1 McCrary, 276.

[b] (Ala. 1882) Where property was sold under a decree against a nonresident within six months, no bond being given by the plaintiff, the facts that such property brought its full value and that the proceeds were applied to the debt on which the decree was founded were no defense to an action to set aside the sale.—Sayre v. Elyton Land Co., 73 Ala. 85.

[c] (Ala. 1882) After an order confirming a sale under a decree in equity has been made, the proper remedy to impeach it or set aside the sale is by an original bill.—Sayre v. Elyton Land Co., 73 Ala. 85.

[d] (Ala. 1882) A proceeding to impeach a judicial sale must be instituted within a reasonable time, and what constitutes a reasonable time depends on the circumstances of the particular case.—Sayre v. Elyton Land Co., 73 Ala. 85.

[e] (Ala. 1886) Since a sale made by a register under the direction of the chancery court is under the control of the court until it has been confirmed, where a party complained of fraud perpetrated at the sale, whereby a less price was realized than might have been obtained, it is not proper for him to file an original bill in a new suit to obtain relief, but his objection should be by motion in the original proceeding.—Phillips v. Benson, 82 Ala. 500, 2 South. 93.

[f] (Ala. 1888) A bill to set aside a judicial sale on the ground that the decree ordering it, though not superseded, had been reversed on appeal, alleged that the solicitor of record of the party in whose favor the decree was rendered was in fact the purchaser. The record showed that the register made a conveyance to B., and reported that B. was the purchaser, and the sale to B. was confirmed. The register testified that T., who bid off the land, told him to make the deed to the solicitor, and call at the bank and get his money. This was denied by both T. and D., who testified that T. bid off the land for D., who paid the register's costs, and had given his note to the solicitor for the purchase money, and that there was no arrangement with the solicitor in regard to the purchase. Held, that the sale would not be set aside.—Phillips v. Benson, 85 Ala. 416, 5 South. 78.

[ff] (Ark. 1876) Gantt, Dig. § 4116, which provides that all actions against the purchaser for lands bought at a judicial sale shall be brought within five years, does not apply to a proceeding instituted for the purpose of having a judicial sale of land set aside, and the property resold, or a trust established in the plaintiff's favor, and title to one-half the land vested in him, on account of the fraudulent conduct of the purchaser; for it is not a suit for the recovery of the land, or within the provisions of section 4116 of Gantt's Digest, which provides that all actions against the purchaser for lands bought at judicial sale shall be brought within five years.—Phelps v. Jackson, 31 Ark. 272.

[g] (Fla. 1872) In a suit to set aside as fraudulent a judicial sale in reference to real or personal property, all persons should be made parties who were parties to such proceedings or who claim a present interest in the property.—Howse v. Moody, 14 Fla. 59.

[h] (Ga. 1892) In an action to set aside a judicial sale on the ground of the purchaser's fraud in hiring another not to bid against him, evidence of the amount which the suppressed competitor intended to bid is admissible to show that the fraud was injurious.—Barnes v. Mays, 88 Ga. 696, 16 S. E. 67.

[i] (La.) An action of redhibition is not allowed in judicial sales.—(1824) Boissier's Syndics v. Belair, 3 Mart. (N. S.) 29; (1825) Abat v. Casteres, Id. 220; (1825) Gould v. Bridgers, Id. 692.

[j] (La. 1852) Objection to judicial sale on the ground of invalidity of the judgment under which it was made, because of defect in the citation, cannot be entertained when made for the first time on appeal from a judgment against plaintiff in an action to annul the sale.—Barret v. Emerson, 8 La. Ann. 503.

[k] (La. 1854) Where one deters others from bidding for the property, which is sold to him for a trifling sum, the creditor may sue to annul the sale or hold him liable for the judgment; but he must choose his remedy. He cannot claim both.—Wood v. Hennen, 9 La. Ann. 264.

[l] (La. 1872) Where the purchaser at a judicial sale has paid mortgages against the property, it is necessary, in an action to annul the sale on the ground of irregularities in the proceedings, that a tender be made to the purchaser of the sum so paid.—Barelli v. Gauche, 24 La. Ann. 324.

[n] (La. 1878) A suit to annul a judicial sale will be dismissed, if plaintiff asks for the proceeds of the sale; the demands being inconsistent.—Dowling v. Gally, 30 La. Ann. 328.

[o] (La. 1887) A real tender is a condition precedent to authorize a suit to rescind a judicial sale. When it is alleged, denied, and not proved, the plaintiff's action must be dismissed.—Farquhar v. Iles, 39 La. Ann. 874, 2 South. 791.

[p] (Miss. 1850) In an action to set aside a judicial sale where the fairness of the sale appears doubtful and suspicious, the burden will be upon the purchaser to show the fairness of it.—White v. Trotter, 22 Miss. (14 Smedes & M.) 30, 53 Am. Dec. 112.

[q] (N. Y. 1863) An action to set aside a judicial sale for irregularity cannot be maintained, even by one who was not a party to the original action. His remedy is by application to the court in the original action.—Gould v. Mortimer, 26 How. Prac. 167, 16 Abb. Prac. 448.

[r] (N. C. 1882) A commissioner, making sale of land under an order of court and receiving the purchase money, is not a necessary party to an action to impeach the decree.—Gilbert v. James, 86 N. C. 244.

[s] (Tenn. 1855) Application to set aside a chancery sale, on account of a fraudulent combination to suppress competition, should be made by original bill, setting forth the grounds, and not by mere suggestion or motion, especially after the sale has been confirmed.—McMinn's Legatees v. Phipps, 35 Tenn. (3 Sneed) 196.

[t] (Tex. 1888) In an action to set aside a judicial sale the tender of the purchase money in the pleadings, followed by a payment into court of the money bid at the sale, and paid by the purchaser, is a sufficient tender.—Weaver v. Nugent (Sup.) 10 S. W. 458.

[u] (Tex. 1892) In a suit to set aside a deed of land sold under order of court, plaintiff need not tender the purchaser the amount bid by him for the land, where such sale was procured through the purchaser's fraud.—Storer v. Lane, 1 Tex. Civ. App. 250, 20 S. W. 852.

[v] (W. Va. 1876) In an action to set aside a commissioner's sale, an offer, with security, to bid a higher price at the second, is the best evidence that the price bid at the first was inadequate.—Kable v. Mitchell, 9 W. Va. 492.

§ 84. Security or other conditions.

Costs and expenses on opening sale to let in advance bid, see post, § 126 [a, d].

[a] Judicial sales should not be annulled without a previous proffer of a full indemnity to the bona fide parties whose interests are affected.

—(La. 1851) Stockton v. Downey, 6 La. Ann. 581;

(N. Y. 1830) Duncan v. Dodd, 2 Paige, 99.

[b] (Ark. 1859) Where the purchase at a chancery sale is not bona fide, it is not necessary, in order to set aside the sale on the application of the parties injured, that an advance on the bid, or any sum whatever, should have been deposited in court.—Penn's Adm'r v. Tolleson, 20 Ark. 652.

[c] (Ky. 1890) Where land sold under a decree of court is situated in another county from that in which the action is brought, and the decree is procured at the instance of the owners who receive the benefit of it, they will not be allowed to vacate the decree, and recover the land, without any offer to restore the purchase money.—Best's Ex'r v. Vanhook's Adm'r, 13 S. W. 119.

[d] (N. Y. 1862) The sale of several distinct and separate parcels of land, greatly exceeding the debt to be collected, in one mass, to the prejudice of the debtor, is a sufficient ground for setting aside a sale of real estate, even without indemnity to the purchaser.—Griffith v. Hadley, 23 N. Y. Super. Ct. (10 Bosw.) 587.

[e] (S. C. 1830) A commissioner's sale will not be set aside to let in a higher bid, except upon condition that a deposit be made, or some adequate security given, by the proposed bidder.—Young v. Teague, 1 Bailey, Eq. 13.

[f] (Wis. 1859) Where a sale is made in violation of an order staying proceedings, duly served, the defendant can have it set aside, even after confirmation by the court, without a tender of the amount bid by the plaintiff who bought at the sale.—Campbell v. Smith, 9 Wis. 305.

[a] (W. Va. 1896) Land was sold under a decree, but before the sale was confirmed it was agreed, at the instance of the purchaser, between him and a creditor under the decree entitled to a part of the proceeds of sale, that if the latter would agree to the setting aside of the sale, he, the purchaser, would save the creditor harmless from all loss which he might sustain by reason of setting the sale aside and having the property again offered. Held, such contract is not per se a fraud upon the due administration of justice, and, unless such fact is made to appear, it is binding upon and enforceable against the purchaser. — Wick v. Dawson, 42 W. Va. 43, 24 S. E. 587.

Liability of purchaser for rent on vacation of sale, see post, § 96 [i].

Rights of purchasers on reversal of judgment or decree, see post, § 108.

[a] (Ky. 1887) Upon the reversal of a judgment appointing a receiver, and ordering a sale, the title to land and personalty sold under it having in the meantime passed to a purchaser for value, so that the property cannot be recovered in specie, the original owner may bring an action to recover damages against those who procured the erroneous judgment; and the measure of damages is the value of the property on the day it was sold, with the reasonable rents up to the day of sale, or to the time the purchaser obtained possession, it having been placed in the hands of a receiver, and then with interest from that time, and ordinary costs, not including attorney's fees, subject to a credit by any debts that may have been paid out of the sale money to creditors who had filed their claims.—Hays v. Griffith, 85 Ky. 375, 8 S. W. 431, 11 S. W. 306.

[b] (W. Va. 1888) Where money from the sale of property has, by order of the court, been paid, and the decree ordering the sale was void, the person whose property was sold to raise the money may recover the same from the person to whom it was illegally paid.—Sturm v. Fleming, 31 W. Va. 701, 8 S. E. 263.

Resale because of purchaser's failure to comply with bid, see ante, §§ 50–53.

[a] (U. S. 1880) When a judicial sale has been set aside on the offering of an advanced bid, it seems that the resale should conform to the method of the original sale, upon such notice as the court may prescribe, having in view to advertise the fact that the former bids have not been accepted and that a resale will be had, commencing at the amount of the advanced bid.—Blackburn v. Selma R. Co. (C. C.) 3 Fed. 689.

[b] (Md. 1838) Where trustees, appointed to make a sale of lands under a decree, make an agreement with the purchaser, beneficial to him, which is rejected by the court, a resale cannot be ordered at the risk of the purchaser; but the first sale must be rescinded, and a new one directed on the terms of the original decree.—Randall v. Swann, 10 Gill & J. 313.

chancery," assures the court that the property shall bring the amount stipulated in the bond required to be given, renders himself liable to the court as a bidder, and is to be treated as starting the bidding at that sum, for all which the bond is intended as security. If there is not a better bid, this party is to become purchaser, and be dealt with as such; and, if the property sells for less than at the former sale, the former sale cannot be confirmed on motion of the former purchaser.—Mason v. Martin, 64 Miss. 572, 1 South. 756.

[d] (N. Y. 1841) Where land sold under a decree has been sacrificed by the neglect or mistake of the master, the parties injured are entitled to a resale, or such other relief as can be given without doing injustice to bona fide purchasers.—American Ins. Co. v. Oakley, 9 Paige, 259.

[e] (S. C. 1893) After a purchaser at judicial sale had paid into court a part of the price bid by him, and the money so paid had, by order of court, been used for the purposes of the action, the sale was declared void, as having been made at an unauthorized time. Held, that it was proper to order another sale, subject to the condition that if no bid was made, greater than the price paid at the former sale, the former sale should be confirmed, and that if there were such bid the former sale should be declared void, and the money paid thereon be returned to the purchaser.—Tompkins v. Tompkins, 39 S. C. 537, 18 S. E. 233.

[g] (Tenn. 1896) A purchaser at a judicial sale, who allows a cash payment made by him on the property to remain in the hands of the officer selling after the sale has been set aside, does so at his own risk, and he is not entitled to be credited with the amount on a subsequent purchase of the property when resold by another officer.—Head v. Moore, 96 Tenn. 358, 34 S. W. 518.

[h] (Va. 1885) A decree for a resale, rendered in proceedings to which the purchaser at the original sale was not made a party, is a nullity as to him.—Ogden v. Davidson, 81 Va. 757.

XII. OPERATION AND EFFECT.

COLLATERAL ATTACK, § 89.

Effect as to insurance of property sold, see "Insurance," vol. 28, cc. 1484, 1485, § 813.
—— of sale under junior attachment, see "Attachment," vol. 5, cc. 726, 727, § 547.

[a] (Pa. 1854) A judicial sale of one's interest in land is not constructive notice, or any notice at all, unless the fact is actually made known to the person sought to be affected with notice.—Wright v. Wood, 23 Pa. (11 Harris) 120.

§ 89. Collateral attack.

Collateral attack on judgment or decree ordering sale, see ante, § 13.
Parol evidence to impeach sale, see "Evidence," vol. 20, cc. 2385–2387, § 1696.

[a] (Ala. 1887) Under Code 1886, §§ 3489–3495, providing that a decree for the sale of land without personal service of process on defendant, or appearance by him, shall not become absolute until 18 months after its rendition, unless a copy be personally served, when the period will be 6 months from the service, and that execution shall not issue, within 18 months, unless plaintiff give bond to account for the value, rents, and profits of the land if the decree be set aside, a sale of the land of a nonresident defendant, under a decree pro confesso, after service by publication, will not be held void in a collateral action brought seven years thereafter, though the requirements as to bond and service of a copy of the decree were not complied with.—Seelye v. Smith, 85 Ala. 25, 4 South. 664.

[b] (D. C. 1891) A judicial sale, decreed without jurisdiction of the subject-matter, confers no title, and can be attacked collaterally.—Stansbury v. Inglehart, 20 D. C. 134.

[c] (Ill. 1882) Under a proceeding instituted in the circuit court by a widow and her husband's heirs, dower was assigned her, and the rest of the land ordered sold. A. derived title under the sale and his title was collaterally questioned. Held, that the fact that a mistake was made in describing the land set off to the widow did not affect the validity of the sale, nor did the fact that the sale was not confirmed by the court.—Miller v. McMannis, 104 Ill. 421.

[d] (La. 1876) A judicial sale cannot be annulled in a collateral proceeding in which the vendee is not a party.—Succession of Fontelieu, 28 La. Ann. 638.

[e] (La. 1877) The purchaser of unmortgaged property, sold under the decree of a court of competent jurisdiction, rendered in a suit where the proper parties were duly represented, is not liable to have his title to the property assailed in any collateral manner.—O'Hara v. Booth, 29 La. Ann. 817.

[f] (Md. 1868) Sales ratified by a court having jurisdiction over them should be upheld by every legal presumption, when collaterally called in question.—Cockey v. Cole, 28 Md. 276, 92 Am. Dec. 684.

[g] (Tex. 1893) Where a deed of land sold by a commissioner under order of the commissioners' court is silent as to the manner of making the sale, it will be presumed, on a collateral attack on such deed 30 years after its execution, that the power granted the commissioner was properly exercised.—Riley v. Pool, 5 Tex. Civ. App. 346, 24 S. W. 85.

[h] (Va. 1884) A sale to a bona fide purchaser under a decree of a court of competent jurisdiction upon service by publication against defendant as a nonresident cannot be collaterally impeached on the ground that defendant was dead at the time when suit was brought.—Wilcher v. Robertson, 78 Va. 602.

[i] (Wis. 1864) After confirmation of a sale made under a decree, the regularity of the appointment of the person (other than the sheriff) by whom the sale and the report thereof were made will be presumed; and courts will not inquire into it collaterally for the sake of impeaching the sale.—Eaton v. White, 18 Wis. 517.

[b] (U. S. 1882) The protection extended in equity to a bona fide purchaser belongs only to the purchaser of the legal title without notice of an outstanding equity, and not to the purchaser of an equitable title.—Latham v. Barney (C. C.) 14 Fed. 433.

[c] (U. S. 1887) Purchasers at a judicial sale of property subject to certain receiver's certificates previously issued have no interest in the trust fund represented by the certificates, and therefore cannot resist the payment on the ground that the receiver negotiated them collusively.—Central Nat. Bank v. Hazard (C. C.) 30 Fed. 484.

[d, e] (D. C. 1891) A purchaser at an unauthorized judicial sale, though an innocent purchaser for value, has not an equity that is superior to that of the original owner, and takes no title to the lands sold to him.—Stansbury v. Iglehart, 19 Wash. Law Rep. 594.

[f] (Ga. 1884) One may be a bona fide purchaser of property sold under order of court, though he is notified that it is being sold illegally and that whoever buys it will get with it "a first-class lawsuit."—Wilson v. Garrick, 72 Ga. 660.

[g] (Ky. 1861) A creditor gave an attorney general authority to collect a debt. The attorney proceeded to enforce a lien upon real estate, for which the debt was contracted, by judgment and sale. The creditor complained that he had given no authority for such proceedings. Held, that as against third parties, the purchaser and assignees, the general authority given to the attorney would shield them from responsibility to the creditor and protect them in any rights they had acquired by purchase under the judgment, if matters were otherwise regular.—Taylor v. Gilpin, 60 Ky. (3 Metc.) 544.

[h] (Ky. 1893) Defendant in an execution sale of lands had no legal title thereto, but was merely a purchaser at a decretal sale thereof. Attorneys who had a lien on the land purchased it at the execution sale, and, after obtaining a writ of possession and a sheriff's deed, conveyed it to plaintiff. Later defendant in the execution obtained by an order of court a commissioner's deed for the land under his purchase and a writ of possession. Held, that he was entitled to the land as against the grantee of the purchaser at the execution sale.—Whitaker v. Cornett, 21 S. W. 645.

[i] (La. 1850) A claim to land founded on a judicial sale duly recorded will defeat a claim founded on a prior judicial sale not recorded.—Cotton v. Stacker, 5 La. Ann. 677.

[j] (La. 1858) The purchaser at a judicial sale acquires such a vested right to the property by the adjudication that it cannot be taken from him unless he refuses to comply with the terms of the sale.—Washburn v. Green, 13 La. Ann. 332.

[k] (La. 1880) A purchaser at a probate sale regularly made is protected by the decree and the prescription of 10 years against an attack based on the fact that the attorney for the heirs had absented himself from the state before the conclusion of the mortuary proceedings.—Porter v. Hornsby, 32 La. Ann. 337.

[m] (La. 1894) The adjudication of property at a judicial sale is itself a complete title, which cannot be devested unless the purchaser refuses to comply with the terms.—Interdiction of Onorato, 46 La. Ann. 73, 14 South. 299.

[n] (Md. 1847) A judicial sale gives to a purchaser an inchoate and equitable title, which becomes complete on confirmation.—Wagner v. Cohen, 6 Gill, 97, 46 Am. Dec. 660.

[o] (Md. 1856) The purchaser takes subject to the ratification of the sale by the court.—Kauffman v. Walker, 9 Md. 229.

[p] (Md. 1863) Jurisdiction having been acquired by the court, it follows as a legal consequence that the title of the purchaser to the interest of the parties decreed to be sold cannot be affected by any apparent defect of proof.—Bolgiano v. Cooke, 19 Md. 375.

[q] (Miss. 1854) In 1845, A. purchased of B., C., D., and others a tract of land, paying a part of the price in cash and giving four notes for the balance, to which notes a condition was annexed that they were not to be paid until A. should obtain a title to the land by virtue of a sale to be made under a decree of the superior court of chancery in a case depending therein, in which B. and C. were complainants and D. and others were defendants. The decree being made, the sale was advertised, and E., who had acquired the title of A., attended for the purpose of buying the land under the decree and paying the four notes given by A., two of which were then held by F. and two by B.; but, hearing that a suit had been instituted for the land, which might succeed, he declined having the sale made under the decree B., however, instructed the commissioner to proceed, when F. purchased the land for $100, not one-fifteenth of its value. The suit for the land failed to succeed. Held, that F., having purchased the land, knowing the circumstances under which E. had bought it, acquired no title to it.—Petrie v. Pincard, 27 Miss. (5 Cushm.) 624.

[r] (Miss. 1887) Plaintiffs in ejectment showed title under sheriff's deed pursuant to decree of the chancery court against defendants, and that the latter had title at the time the decree was rendered. Defendants introduced conveyances from one of them, through intermediate conveyances, to his children. Held, that plaintiffs should recover.—Tatum v. Caston, 65 Miss. 488, 4 South. 549.

[s] (Miss. 1894) A purchaser of the fee at a void chancery sale, who, out of the price,—$533,—pays more than $300 in an account and past-due note against the life tenant, has not bought in good faith, and paid the price, within the protection of the one-year statute (Code 1871, § 2173) against the remainder-men.—Wilson v. Parker, 14 South. 264.

[t] (Mo. 1845) Where a decree is obtained setting aside a deed of trust as fraudulent and ordering a sale of the property conveyed to satisfy a judgment, the title of a purchaser at such sale is not affected by fraud or collusion in obtaining the decree; he not being a party thereto.—Jones v. Talbot, 9 Mo. 121.

[u] (Mo. 1845) Where, on a bill to set aside a deed as fraudulent, a sale of the land is decreed, a purchaser under the decree is not affected by the fraud in the deed.—Jones v. Talbot, 9 Mo. 121.

[v] (Neb. 1894) The title of a purchaser of land at judicial sale, duly confirmed, cannot be assailed because of fraud in a prior transfer of the decree under which the sale was had, if the sale itself was free from fraud.—J. T. Robinson Notion Co. v. Foot, 42 Neb. 156, 60 N. W. 316.

[vv] (N. Y. 1858) Titles to real estate cannot be successfully assailed, where they have been acquired under judicial sales, on the ground that some one who was originally a defendant in the suit, claiming an interest in or lien upon the land, had become a bankrupt or an insolvent during the progress of the suit, and his assignee had not been made a party.—Cleveland v. Boerum, 27 Barb. 252.

[w] (N. Y. 1892) Under the provision of Laws 1890, c. 275, authorizing the sale of certain land by the supreme court, that the title of the purchaser at such sale shall be valid in fee simple against all persons who shall join or acquiesce in the proceedings, assent of the adult parties is sufficiently shown by their appearance by attorney, their acquiescence in the order of sale, and their failure to object to or resist the proceedings.—In re Field, 131 N. Y. 184, 30 N. E. 48, affirming (Sup. 1891) 17 N. Y. Supp. 19.

[ww] (N. Y. 1893) At the time of a judicial sale the premises were in possession of a tenant, and the purchaser offered to complete his purchase, but the referee who made the sale told him that he could not deliver possession. The purchaser could not ascertain, either from the lessors or the tenant, under what terms the tenant held. He then demanded a return of the money paid by him, and purchased other property. Held, that the purchaser could not be compelled to complete his purchase on a surrender of the premises by the tenant two months later.—Remsen v. Reese, 72 Hun, 370, 25 N. Y. Supp. 350.

[x] (N. C. 1867) Where a party advanced a balance due from plaintiff on a contract for the purchase of land, and took title to himself under an agreement to convey to plaintiff on payment of the purchase price, and upon his death the land is sold by a clerk and master under a petition by his representatives, the purchaser cannot, before payment of the purchase money, on execution of title, claim to be either a purchaser for valuable consideration or a purchaser without notice.—Cohn v. Chapman, 62 N. C. 92, 93 Am. Dec. 600.

[y] (Tenn.) After a purchaser at a judicial sale has obtained title to the land and paid the purchase price, he is not affected by subsequent proceedings in the cause wherein the sale was ordered.—(1874) Warren v. Farquaharson, 63 Tenn. (4 Baxt.) 484; (1886) Greenlaw v. Greenlaw, 84 Tenn. (16 Lea) 435.

[z] (Va. 1883) A purchaser at a judicial sale becomes a party to the action from the date of his purchase and submits himself to the jurisdiction of the court in all subsequent proceedings relative to such sale.—Hickson v. Rucker, 77 Va. 135.

[zz] (W. Va. 1883) A purchaser of land sold under a decree of court becomes a party to the suit from the time of his purchase and is subject to the orders of the court in all subsequent proceedings.—Haymond v. Camden, 22 W. Va. 180.

A. and B. in land to the payment of their debts as members of a firm, recited that the master should, on sale of said premises, or any part thereof, execute to the purchaser a deed conveying all rights in said premises "conveyed by the said A. in and by the several trust deeds set forth in said original and cross bills herein." Held, that the direction to the master did not render the decree one for the sale of A.'s interest only, and that the purchaser under the decree acquired the interest of both A. and B.—Mason v. Patterson, 74 Ill. 191.

[b] (Ill. 1883) The rule that one cannot by a sale transfer the right of property in a chattel which he does not own applies to a judicial sale.—McCully v. Hardy, 13 Ill. App. (13 Bradw.) 631.

[c] (Ky. 1828) A decree and conveyance by a commissioner thereunder passes all the title the party had, though not sanctioned by the suit.—Logan v. Steele's Heirs, 23 Ky. (7 T. B. Mon.) 101.

[e] (Ky. 1886) Where, at a judicial sale of land a tract containing 128 acres was, by mistake, sold as 40 acres, equity will compel the purchaser to elect from which portion of the tract he will take the 40 acres, or allow him to take the whole, paying at the rate of his bid. —Miller v. Craig, 83 Ky. 623.

[f] (Ky. 1890) Where one has purchased a dower interest in land, and already owns an undivided interest in the remainder dependent thereon, a sale under a decree of "his undivided interest in the dower" passes his remainder.—Gill v. Buckner, 13 S. W. 908.

[g] (Md. 1881) The purchaser of land sold by order of court in an equity suit is entitled to the interest of all the parties to the suit, and to the interest of those who have purchased pendente lite from any of such parties.—Harryman v. Starr, 56 Md. 63.

[h] (N. Y. 1887) Where a sale is made under a special decree ordering a sale of the land itself, free and clear of all claims of the debtor or those claiming under him, the purchaser gets such a title as is ordered to be transferred.—Wallace v. Berdell, 105 N. Y. 7, 11 N. E. 274, affirming order (1886) 41 Hun, 444.

[i] (Ohio, 1851) Where a judgment attached as a lien on land, including an easement appurtenant thereto, consisting of water privileges connected with a mill and dam, the sale of the land with the mill under such judgment carries with it the full benefit of the easement also, though the description in the levy is by metes and bounds, and the easement is not expressly described or alluded to therein, on the principle that it attaches to the land and mill as a part thereof.—Morgan v. Mason, 20 Ohio, 401, 55 Am. Dec. 464.

[a–c] (U. S. 1884) Where one who buys land, which is subject to a mortgage, at a probate sale under an order directing it to be sold "clear and discharged of all liens," pays only the amount of his bid in excess of the mortgage, and accepts a deed reciting that fact, he is estopped from denying that he took title subject to the mortgage, on the ground that it is provided by statute (Act Pa. April 18, 1853; 2 Brightly's Purd. Dig. [10th Ed.] p. 1242, § 5) that at "public sale the premises sold shall be discharged from all liens."—Gibson v. Lyon, 115 U. S. 439, 6 Sup. Ct. 129, 29 L. Ed. 440.

[d] (Ga. 1874) A judicial sale of property upon which a mechanic's lien is claimed, pending a suit to establish such lien, discharges it from the lien.—De Give v. Meador, 51 Ga. 160.

[e] (Ky. 1837) Where the creditors at whose instance a judicial sale is obtained had no notice of a lien on the property, the purchaser at such sale will not be affected by such lien.—Case v. Woolley, 36 Ky. (6 Dana) 17.

[f] (Ky. 1884) A purchaser of land at a decretal sale cannot complain of the enforcement of a lien thereon against him, on the ground that he purchased without notice of the lien, where the deed filed in the case showed that there were lien notes on the land which had never been released.—Branham v. Long, 6 Ky. Law Rep. 451.

[g] (La. 1846) The purchaser at a judicial sale is bound for nothing beyond the price of his adjudication, and the sheriff is bound, after applying the price as the law directs, to give him a release from subsequent mortgages of every description, whether they be general or special mortgages.—Theard v. Prieur, 1 La. Ann. 16.

[i] (Md. 1848) A judgment creditor may prosecute his lien against property in the hands of a purchaser at a judicial sale.—Duvall v. Speed, 1 Md. Ch. 229.

[ii] (Md.) Chancery sales are made subject to all incumbrances on the property, unless there is an express stipulation to the contrary. —(1855) Farmers' & Planters' Bank v. Martin, 7 Md. 342, 61 Am. Dec. 350; (1880) Sansbury v. Belt, 53 Md. 324.

[j] (Md. 1880) Purchasers of land sold under a decree of court are charged with notice of prior unpaid judgment liens thereon.—Sansbury v. Belt, 53 Md. 324.

[k] (N. J. 1873) The act authorizing the chancellor to direct land limited over to be sold in fee does not authorize a sale free from incumbrances.—Cool's Ex'rs v. Higgins, 23 N. J. Eq. (8 C. E. Green) 308.

[l] (N. Y. 1839) A sale of land under a decree will not devest the lien of a stranger upon the land, though the decree provides for the payment of his incumbrance, if the amount due is not actually paid.—Jackson v. Edwards, 7 Paige, 386.

[m] (N. Y. 1840) The terms of a sale by a master were that the land was sold free from incumbrances, and that all taxes and assessments thereon should be paid out of the purchase money. Held, that the purchaser could not be compelled to take the land subject to an assessment for a street, laid out and used by the public prior to the sale, though the assessment had not been formally confirmed until afterwards, it appearing that the purchaser supposed such assessment included in the terms of sale; and a resale was ordered.—Post v. Leet, 8 Paige, 337.

[n] (N. Y. 1868) If a referee, selling property under a decree, irregularly sells it free from a lien which he promises to pay off out of the proceeds, instead of selling it subject to the lien, as directed by the decree, the purchasers cannot be compelled to pay into court the amount of the lien in addition to their bid; but, if the terms of sale were prejudicial to any party, the remedy is by an application for a resale.—Hotchkiss v. Clifton Air Cure, 2 Abb. Dec. 406.

[o] (N. Y. 1896) A purchaser at judicial sale of property which the notice stated was subject to a mortgage, without specifying in what money it was payable, cannot be relieved therefrom merely because the mortgage is payable in "gold coin of the United States, * * * of the present standard of weight and fineness."—Blanck v. Sadlier, 5 App. Div. 81, 38 N. Y. Supp. 817.

[p] (N. C. 1877) A sale of land was made pursuant to a regular decree of court, and the auctioneer announced that certain back taxes were to be paid by the purchaser. Held, that it was a part of the contract between the vendor and vendee that the land was sold subject to the incumbrance of the tax.—Shields v. Harrison, 77 N. C. 115.

[q] (N. C. 1877) A sale of land was made pursuant to a regular decree of a court directing a sale subject to the widow's dower, and at the time of the sale the auctioneer announced the terms of the sale in conformity to such decree. Held, that a purchaser was affected with notice, and cannot be heard to deny his knowledge that the land was sold subject to dower.—Shields v. Harrison, 77 N. C. 115.

[r] (N. C. 1887) The purchaser at a judicial sale cannot claim to be without notice of a mortgage on the premises, when there is evidence showing that all the successive occupants of the land recognized the mortgagee's rights therein; that the purchaser's husband was present at negotiations for renting the land by the mortgagee's agent; that it was publicly announced at the sale that only a certain person's interest in the land was to be sold; and that the price paid was so grossly inadequate to the real value of the land as to put her on inquiry.—Durant v. Crowell, 97 N. C. 367, 2 S. E. 541.

[s] (Ohio, 1846) A judicial sale of "a water craft," under the statute authorizing proceedings against the same by name, vests in the purchaser the title, devested of all liability to be again proceeded against under the statute for a claim existing at the time of the sale.—Jones v. The Commerce, 14 Ohio, 408.

[t] (Pa. 1837) The judicial sale of land charged with a legacy, payable in annual installments, devests it of the lien of the installments not due and payable at the time of the sale.—In re Lobach, 6 Watts, 167.

[u] (Pa. 1845) The lien of registered taxes in the city and county of Philadelphia, under the act of February 3, 1824, is devested by a judicial sale.—Janney v. Harlan, 5 Pa. Law J. 116.

[uu] (Pa. 1846) The purchaser of lands at a judicial sale takes subject to the lien created by a recognizance of the sheriff taken pursuant to Act April 13, 1834.—In re McKenzen's Appropriation, 3 Barr, 156.

[v] (Pa. 1861) Under Act April 5, 1844, making municipal assessments in Allegheny county prior liens, a judicial sale of the property on which they are assessed devests the liens.—Appeal of Allegheny City, 41 Pa. (5 Wright.) 60.

[vv] (Pa.) A purchaser at a judicial sale takes subject to arrears of ground rent.—(1870) Inland Ins. & Deposit Co. v. Burrows, 2 Lanc. Bar, No. 15, p. 2; (1879) In re Terry's Estate, 13 Phila. 298.

[w] (Pa. 1876) The word "lien," in the act of March 23, 1867, providing that the liens of first mortgages shall not be devested by judicial or other sales, is not to be taken in technical sense, but rather in the broad sense of embracing any charge or right upon the land by means of which a sale thereof could be compelled, such as the execution of a power of sale in a will or the right which a co-owner of land has to compel partition.—Wright v. Vickers, 81 Pa. (31 P. F. Smith) 122.

[xx] (Pa. 1876) The term "judicial sale," as used in Acts 1867, p. 44, entitled "An act relating to judicial sales and the preservation of the liens of mortgages," means such sale as would transfer the title to the special and particular estate mortgaged.—Wright v. Vickers, 81 Pa. (31 P. F. Smith) 122.

[y] (Pa. 1879) A purchaser at judicial sale takes the property subject to accrued interest on a mortgage against it.—In re Terry's Estate, 13 Phila. 298.

[yy] (Pa. 1887) In the city of Allegheny, Pa., a judicial sale devests the lien of taxes accruing subsequent to the incumbrance under which the sale is had, and prior to the sale.—Shaw v. City of Allegheny, 115 Pa. 46, 7 Atl. 770.

[z] (S. C. 1884) Where property is sold in a suit by subsequent creditors, not having notice of any mortgage on the property, a purchaser at the sale acquires good title, though he himself had notice of the mortgage.—Herring v. Cannon, 21 S. C. 212, 53 Am. Rep. 661.

[zz] (Tenn. 1889) Acts 1871, c. 68, provides that, when land is sold under decree, it shall be the judge's duty, before confirmation of sale, to direct a reference to ascertain whether, on the day of sale, there were any taxes due and unpaid which were a lien on the land, and, if there were, there shall be a decree that the clerk pay the taxes out of the first money collected from the sale. Held that, where no such order was made, the lien for taxes continued against the property in the hands of the purchaser.—State v. Hill, 87 Tenn. 638, 11 S. W. 610.

[c] (Ky. 1888) A purchaser of mortgaged lands at judicial sale bid a price sufficient to satisfy the mortgage and accrued taxes, and executed bonds with surety for the purchase money. Being unable to pay the bonds, the lands were surrendered into court to be resold. On the second sale the amount realized was insufficient to pay the mortgage and taxes. The purchaser at the second sale excepted to the report of sale because of the accrued tax, and an order was entered that he pay the purchase money into court, where a sum sufficient to pay the taxes would be held. The city of L., claiming the taxes as due to itself, was then allowed, on application, to withdraw the fund. Held, that the city, not being a party to the suit, had no right to withdraw the fund, and was properly required to return the same.—City of Louisville v. Kaye, 8 S. W. 869.

[d] (Md. 1848) A trustee, selling under a decree of the court of chancery, as a general rule sells the title of the parties to the suit, and nothing more; and though a purchaser, discovering a defect in his title at the proper time, may be relieved from his purchase by asking a rescission of the sale, he cannot be permitted, while holding onto his purchase, to insist upon having his title perfected by the application of the proceeds of the sale to the extinguishment of the claims of incumbrancers not parties to the suit.—Duvall v. Speed, 1 Md. Ch. 229.

[e] (Md. 1852) Where the purchaser at a chancery sale knew of an incumbrance for ground rent upon the premises, he cannot be allowed a credit for such incumbrance paid by him.—Farmers' & Planters' Bank v. Martin, 3 Md. Ch. 224.

[f] (N. Y. 1829) Where there is a sale of land under a decree, and the master is ordered to discharge incumbrances out of the purchase money, the purchaser cannot insist upon a discharge of the incumbrances before the purchase is completed.—Sears v. Hyer, 1 Paige, 483.

[g] (Ohio, 1862) Swan & C. St. p. 1465, provides that, whenever real estate is sold at judicial sale, "the court shall order the taxes and penalties and the interest thereon against such lands to be discharged out of the proceeds of such sale." Held to relate only to such taxes and penalties as were standing unsatisfied on the tax duplicate.—Ketcham v. Fitch, 13 Ohio St. 201.

[h] (Ohio, 1879) An order of the court that the sheriff shall pay taxes that are a lien on the property sold at sheriff's sale does not impose an extra official duty, and a purchaser who has been compelled to pay the taxes may recover from the sheriff the amount.—Springmeier v. Blackwell, 6 Ohio Dec. 705.

[i] (Ohio, 1896) The rights of a purchaser at a judicial sale as to the payment of taxes out of the proceeds are fixed by the date of the sale, and, after confirmation, refer back to that date.—Scheid v. Scheid, 7 Ohio N. P. 538, 5 Ohio S. & C. P. Dec. 559.

[j] (Tenn. 1872) A purchaser at a judicial sale may look to the owner for taxes due, but cannot abate the price agreed to be paid for the benefit of creditors by unpaid taxes; nor will the fact that the decree of sale was consented to make any difference.—Staunton v. Harris, 56 Tenn. (9 Heisk.) 579.

[k] (Tenn. 1882) A statute makes it the duty of the court, when real estate is sold under its decree, to make a reference to a master before confirmation of the sale, to find out if there were any unpaid taxes which, on the day of sale, were a lien on the land, and, if so, to decree that the master pay said taxes out of the first money coming to him from the sale. Where such reference was omitted, and the money paid over to creditors, held, that the court might, at the same term of court, order the same to be refunded for the payment of taxes.—Williams v. Whitmore, 77 Tenn. (9 Lea) 262.

[l] (Tenn. 1889) Acts 1871, c. 68, provides that, when land is sold under a decree, it shall be the judge's duty, before confirmation of sale, to direct a reference to ascertain whether, on the day of sale, there were any taxes due and unpaid which were a lien on the land, and, if there were, there shall be a decree that the clerk pay the taxes out of the first money collected from the sale. Held that, where the court in a judicial sale fails to make the order before confirmation, the purchaser at such sale may protect himself by applying for it before the money passes out of the jurisdiction of the court.—State v. Hill, 87 Tenn. 638, 11 S. W. 610.

[m] (Va. 1885) The court will not decree the sale of land, while incumbered for the purchase money due from plaintiff, without providing for payment of such incumbrance.—Yost v. Porter, 80 Va. 855.

§ 94. Actions by or against purchasers.

Equity jurisdiction of suit by heir against purchaser of lands at sale by probate court, see "Equity," vol. 19, cc. 270, 271, § 153 [jj].

[a] Forcible entry and detainer lies by a purchaser at a sheriff's sale made under a decree in chancery.

(Ohio, 1847) Barto v. Abbe, 16 Ohio, 408.

[b] (U. S.) A bill in equity by the owner of property sold at a public judicial sale, for an account and reconveyance, will lie against the purchaser who by fraudulent representation has obtained such property at less than its value.—(1867) Slater v. Maxwell, 73 U. S. (6 Wall.) 268, 18 L. Ed. 796; (1868) Cocks v. Izard, 74 U. S. (7 Wall.) 559, 19 L. Ed. 275.

[c] (Ga. 1875) A possessory warrant will not lie against a purchaser at judicial sale, made as prescribed by law, on the ground that a trespass was committed by the levying officer in taking possession; the purchaser not being particeps in the tort.—Finney v. Fechtner, 54 Ga. 501.

[d] (Ill. 1863) When a remedy by an action of forcible entry and detainer is sought under the second clause of the act of 1861, it is not restricted to the nominal party against whom the decree was rendered, but may be employed against any one who, even after the expiration of the time of redemption from the sale under the decree, and after the execution and delivery of the master's deed to the purchaser, by collusion with the defendant in the decree, obtains and holds the possession of the premises without the knowledge or consent of the purchaser.—Jackson v. Warren, 32 Ill. 331.

[e] (Ky. 1869) In an action to recover property sold at a decretal sale, on the ground that the purchaser, by fraudulently stating that he was bidding for the benefit of plaintiff (then the owner), prevented competition and bought the property at too low a price, it appeared that the property was sold for a fair and full price, that the evidence as to the fraudulent statements was conflicting, and that the petition did not allege a tender or make an offer of reimbursement. Held, that the decree of the chancellor dismissing the petition should not be reversed.—Crutchfield v. Thurman, 67 Ky. (4 Bush) 498.

[g] (Mo. 1841) Dig. 1835, p. 278, § 8, providing for an action of forcible detainer when defendant lawfully and peaceably obtains possession, but unlawfully holds over by force, contemplates a case where plaintiff has been in lawful possession; and therefore a purchaser at judicial sale cannot maintain the action against the original owner.—Hatfield v. Wallace, 7 Mo. 112.

[h] (N. C. 1886) A purchaser at a judicial sale must enforce his rights under the purchase by motion in the suit in which the sale is made, and not by an independent suit.—Long v. Jarratt, 94 N. C. 443.

[j] (Tenn. 1840) Where a tract of land intended to be sold was laid off into lots, with streets intersecting each other, for the benefit of purchasers, and, so divided, was sold under a decree in chancery upon a credit which had not expired, the purchasers being in the possession under the sale, the property was sub judice, and the purchasers quasi parties, and a petition by any purchaser was the proper mode of application to the court for the relief against obstructions placed on certain streets by other of the purchasers, and could be abated in the name of the complainants.—Leake v. Cannon, 21 Tenn. (2 Humph.) 169.

[k] (Va. 1885) At a judicial sale of land in a creditors' suit, A. bought one parcel and B. another. Held, that A. could not maintain a suit against B. to compel a conveyance of part of the parcel bought by B., on the ground of a mistake in the commissioner's deed; there being no privity between A. and B. in the matter.—Garnett v. Loven, 80 Va. 456.

(B) POSSESSION, RENTS, AND PROFITS.

RIGHT TO POSSESSION AND ENFORCEMENT THEREOF, § 95.
RENTS AND PROFITS, § 96.

§ 95. Right to possession and enforcement thereof.

Provision in decree as to delivery of possession, see ante, § 5 [e].
Character of possession of purchaser, see "Champerty and Maintenance," vol. 9, cc. 2036, 2037, § 66.

[a] The authority of the court to put the purchaser of land under its decree in possession, by an order based on the petition of the purchaser, is restricted to those cases in which the parties holding the possession are either parties to the proceedings or those who go into possession pendente lite, claiming title under the parties to the bill or some of them.
—(Ala. 1841) Creighton v. Paine, 2 Ala. 158;
(Md. 1847) Oliver v. Caton, 2 Md. Ch. 297.

[b] Where property is sold under a decree of court, and the report of the sale is duly confirmed, the purchaser is entitled to possession of the property from the time of such confirmation, unless the decree contains an express direction to the contrary.
—(Tenn. 1874) Shields v. Thompson, 63 Tenn. (4 Baxt.) 227;
(Va. 1877) Hudgins v. Marchant, 28 Grat. 177;
(W. Va. 1881) Beard v. Arbuckle, 19 W. Va. 135.

[c] (Ala. 1841) Where possession after a judicial sale is withheld, the purchaser should petition the court, setting forth his purchase and the deed under which he claims, and by whom the possession is withheld, and that notice has been given of the application.—Creighton v. Paine, 2 Ala. 158.

[d] (Ala. 1884) Plaintiff purchased at a sale under decree, and the register was ordered to execute a deed upon plaintiff's crediting the amount of the purchase money on the decree. Held, that after the execution of the deed the burden was on defendant, resisting an application for writ of assistance, to show that the credit was not entered.—Kemp v. Lyon, 76 Ala. 212.

[e] (Cal. 1855) The statute allowing a redemption of real property sold at judicial sales contemplates that the possession shall not change to the purchaser until the expiration of the time prescribed as a limit to the redemption.—Guy v. Middleton, 5 Cal. 392.

[f] (Ill. 1873) A delay of five years in taking possession held not to estop a purchaser at a judicial sale from asserting title, on bill against him to set aside the sale. In such case, the decree is notice to all parties, and his delay will not be regarded in equity as an undue concealment of any facts which he was bound to communicate.—Watt v. McGalliard, 67 Ill. 513.

[g] (Ky. 1888) The court directed the sale of whatever interest defendant, or those claiming under him, who were parties to the suit or purchasers pendente lite, might have in certain property, reserving the power to put the purchaser in possession of the land sold. The title to a part of the land failed by reason of the adverse possession of others than parties and pendente lite purchasers. Held, that the reservation referred only to that part of the land sold, the title to which was good.—Preston v. Breckinridge, 86 Ky. 619, 6 S. W. 641.

[h, i] (Ky. 1893) Defendant in an execution sale of lands had no legal title thereto, but was merely a purchaser at a decretal sale thereof. Attorneys who had a lien on the land purchased it at the execution sale, and, after obtaining a writ of possession and a sheriff's deed, conveyed it to plaintiff. Later defendant in the execution obtained by an order of court a commissioner's deed for the land under his purchase, and a writ of possession. Held, that he should not be given possession of the land without satisfying the lien debts thereon, of which the grantee of the attorneys was virtually the owner.—Whitaker v. Cornett, 21 S. W. 645.

[j] (Md. 1828) The purchaser of land at a sale on process from the chancery court is entitled to a writ in the nature of a writ habere facias possessionem to obtain possession, unless cause be shown against it within the first four days of the term to which the execution is returnable.—Dorsey v. Campbell, 1 Bland, 356.

[k] (Md. 1829) Where A. purchased property at a sale under a decree, and gave his notes for the purchase money, with B. as surety, who was afterwards obliged to pay the notes, and A. then executed a deed of the same property to B., which was left with C. as an escrow, to be delivered up on a condition which did not appear to have been performed, it was held that A. could not be ousted by an order from the court of chancery.—Gowan v. Sumwalt, 1 Gill & J. 511.

[m] (Md. 1866) Where a purchaser at a sale under a decree, after having fully complied with the terms of the sale, is withheld from possession of the premises by a party to the suit, or by one claiming under such a party, by a title accruing after the suit was commenced, an order will be granted whereby such purchaser may obtain possession of the premises on proper process.—Applegarth v. Russell, 25 Md. 317.

[n] (Miss. 1849) A purchaser of land at a commissioner's sale under a decree of the superior court of chancery, who is no party to the original suit in which the decree of sale was made, cannot obtain in his own name a writ of assistance from the chancellor to turn parties out of the possession of the purchased premises, and put him in. The purchaser can only proceed by getting the vendor to make application for the process.—Wilson v. Polk, 21 Miss. (13 Smedes & M.) 131, 51 Am. Dec. 151.

[o] (N. Y. 1843) The court has no power to put the purchaser at a master's sale into possession of the premises by a summary proceeding, unless he is party to the suit or has come into possession, subsequently to the commencement of the suit, under or with the assent of a party.—Boynton v. Jackway, 10 Paige, 307.

[p] (N. Y. 1861) A purchaser at a judicial sale, under a judgment which directs that the purchaser be put in possession, is entitled to a writ of assistance, notwithstanding the death of the plaintiff, after judgment, and before the sale. A revival of the action is not necessary.—Lynde v. O'Donnell, 21 How. Prac. 34, 12 Abb. Prac. 286.

[q] (Or. 1881) The right to possession of a purchaser at a judicial sale is not affected by the fact that the person in possession appeals from the order of confirmation of sale, and that his undertaking on appeal provides for payment for the use and occupation, if the decree be affirmed.—British Columbia Bank v. Harlow, 9 Or. 338.

[r] (S. C. 1870) When land is sold by a commissioner in equity under a decree of court, an attachment cannot issue to compel the party in possession to surrender the premises until after the commissioner's report of the sale has been confirmed.—Crotwell v. Boozer, 1 S. C. (1 Rich.) 271.

[s] (Tenn. 1857) A court of chancery will carry into full effect sales made under its authority, by putting the purchaser into possession, so long as the court retains control over the subject-matter and parties.—Planters' Bank v. Fowlkes, 36 Tenn. (4 Sneed) 461.

[t] (Va. 1877) Since one purchasing land under a chancery decree becomes a party to the cause in which the decree is rendered, so far as his rights as a purchaser are concerned, the court may enter a decree for the delivery of the possession of the property to him.—Hudgins v. Marchant, 28 Grat. 177.

[u] (Va. 1877) Where, by virtue of an express direction in the decree confirming the sale of property, the purchaser is put in possession before appeal from the decree is perfected, he is entitled to retain possession until the case is determined by the appellate court.—Hudgins v. Marchant, 28 Grat. 177.

[v] (Va. 1877) Where an appeal has been perfected from a decree of court confirming the sale of property before the purchaser has taken possession, he is not entitled to possession until after the decision on the appeal.—Hudgins v. Marchant, 28 Grat. 177.

Liabilities of purchasers and their sureties in general, see post, § 111.

Rights of purchaser at bankrupt's sale to rents and profits, see "Bankruptcy," vol. 6, cc. 440, 441, § 375.

[a] A purchaser at judicial sale is entitled to the rents and profits arising from the premises during the period from the sale to its confirmation.

—(D. C. 1876) Huntington v. Walker, 9 D. C. (2 MacArthur) 479;

(Md. 1847) Wagner v. Cohen, 6 Gill, 97, 46 Am. Dec. 660.

[b] (U. S. 1838) The principal and surety in a covenant for payment of the purchase price on a master's sale in chancery have no claim upon the rents and profits of the estate except from the time when the conveyance is completed.—Wood v. Mann, Fed. Cas. No. 17,954 [3 Sumn. 318].

[c] (Ark. 1890) A purchaser at a void judicial sale of the mortgaged land, who went into possession and improved the land with notice from the beginning of litigation affecting his title adversely, was liable for the rents during the entire period of his possession.—Jefferson v. Edrington, 53 Ark. 545, 14 S. W. 99.

[d] (Ill. 1892) An order to sell land, entered at the August term, provided that 10 per cent. of the price should be paid cash, the balance the following February 1st, without interest; deed to be delivered on payment. The sale was had October 31st, and approved December 7th. A week later, the purchaser induced the master to deliver him the deed, giving for it a certified check, payable February 1st. Held, that the master's action was unauthorized, and the purchaser, knowing that no title was to pass till February 1st, had no claim on the rent corn remaining on the premises on December 14th.—Argo v. Oberschlake, 48 Ill. App. 289.

[e] (Iowa, 1877) Unaccrued rent reserved in a lease will pass with the land at judicial sale, notwithstanding the fact that notice in an action of attachment against the land was served by publication, or that the land was not appraised prior to the sale.—Townsend v. Isenberger, 45 Iowa, 670.

[f] (Iowa, 1877) Rent reserved, but not accrued, under a lease, passes with a conveyance of the premises, and a purchaser thereof at judicial sale becomes entitled to such rent.—Townsend v. Isenberger, 45 Iowa, 670.

[g] (Ky. 1881) A purchaser of real estate at a decretal sale is not entitled to recover rents from the date of sale to the confirmation and conveyance by the court, against defendant in possession.—Elliott's Adm'r v. Bush, 3 Ky. Law Rep. 466; Brown v. Berkley, Id. 469.

[h] (La. 1872) A purchaser at a judicial sale under a void judgment is liable for rents.—Walworth v. Stevenson, 24 La. Ann. 251.

[i] (Md. 1847) Where a sale under a decree is vacated, the purchaser, having been let into possession by the trustee and enjoyed the use, is responsible for rents and profits.—Wagner v. Cohen, 6 Gill, 97, 46 Am. Dec. 660.

[j] (Md. 1876) Land was sold under a decree in equity, and the trustee reported to the court that he sold the same "subject to the right of the tenant to cut and secure the growing crop." The sale, as reported, was ratified by the court. The purchasers and the tenant were parties to the proceedings for the sale of the land. The tenant cut and sold the crop of wheat which was growing at the time of the sale, and received the money therefor. In an action by the purchasers against the tenant to recover the value of the crop which he had sold, held, that plaintiffs were estopped from claiming the crop of wheat or its value.—Bruner v. Ramsburg, 43 Md. 560.

[k] (S. C. 1877) Where, in an action to set aside a judicial sale on the ground of fraud, the validity of the sale was sustained, but the purchasers were required to account for the difference between the price they bid for the land and the enhanced price at which they had sold it, they were not liable for rent.—Mars v. Comers, 9 S. C. (9 Rich.) 70.

[m] (Tenn. 1874) A purchaser at a master's sale, being entitled to possession at the date of confirmation, may recover the rents of the property from that time.—Shields v. Thompson, 63 Tenn. (4 Baxt.) 227.

[o] (Va. 1839) On the 30th of October, 1834, a decree was made for the sale of a tract of land, on a credit of 6, 12, and 18 months. Before the decree there had been a contract to rent the land, and pursuant to that contract a lease was made for a year, commencing the 25th of December, 1834, and ending the 25th of December, 1835. During this year, on the 10th of January, 1835, sale was made under the decree, which sale was confirmed and a conveyance executed to the purchaser. Held, that the purchaser must be considered complete owner from the date of the sale, and entitled to the rent which became due afterwards.—Taylor v. Cooper, 10 Leigh, 317, 34 Am. Dec. 737.

[p] (Wis. 1855) The purchaser at a chancery sale buys subject to the final order or decree of the court, and, if he take possession after the sale at which he purchased has been set aside and the order of confirmation vacated, he is a trespasser, and is liable for all the mesne profits which accrue from the time of his entry till his eviction, and for all the crops and produce on the estate at the time of his entry.—Lupton v. Almy, 4 Wis. 242.

[d] (Ala. 1844) Where the purchaser of land at a sale under the order of the orphans' court, which had no jurisdiction to direct such sale, goes into possession, and so remains for two years, exercising ownership by cultivation, etc., he cannot rescind the contract of sale, unless the heirs are unable or unwilling to give a good title.—Lamkin v. Reese, 7 Ala. 170.

[e] (Fla. 1854) A court of equity will relieve a purchaser of real estate, sold under a decree of court, where time has been allowed to perfect title, and 10 years have elapsed and the title is not perfected.—Myers v. Nourse, 5 Fla. 516.

[f] (Ill. 1851) A sale of real estate of A. had taken place under a decree of the circuit court of the United States for the Illinois circuit. B. became the purchaser of a piece of land, and paid the purchase money to the plaintiffs, but, discovering that A. had no title thereto, made application to the court to have the purchase money reimbursed out of moneys of the plaintiffs in court. Held, in the absence of fraud and unfair dealing, that this could not be done, but, that being a judicial sale, B. must take the consequences of a defect or failure of title.—United States v. Duncan, 12 Ill. (2 Peck) 523.

[g] (Ky. 1878) After confirmation of a judicial sale, no relief will be granted the purchaser, on the ground of defect of title, in the absence of fraud.—Farmers' Bank v. Peter, 76 Ky. (13 Bush) 591.

[h] (La. 1859) When property is sold at sheriff's sale, and the party causing the sale to be made is not able to put the purchaser in the enjoyment of the premises, nor of the rents, he has a right to refuse payment of the price.—Hernandez v. His Creditors, 14 La. Ann. 337.

[i] (Md. 1832) Where the trustee, at the time of a judicial sale, expressly declared that he only sold the estate, right, and interest which the parties to the decree had in certain land, and that, if they had no right, he sold none, it is not necessary in determining the rights of the purchaser, to determine whether the maxim caveat emptor applies to such sale.—Brown v. Wallace, 4 Gill & J. 479.

[j] (Md. 1832) Where a trustee appointed to make a sale under a decree expressly declared, at the time of sale, that he only sold the estate, right, and interest of the parties to the decree, and, if they had no right, he sold none, there can be no pretense of warranty of title.—Brown v. Wallace, 4 Gill & J. 479.

[k] (Md. 1863) A purchaser discovering a defect of title of real estate, sold by decree of a court of equity at a proper time, may be relieved from his purchase by asking a rescission of the sale.—Bolgiano v. Cooke, 19 Md. 375.

[l] (Md. 1895) Where a purchaser at a sale by a trustee under order of court was fully cognizant of a defect in the title, equity will not relieve him from liability to comply with the terms of the sale, on the ground that the defect renders the title unmarketable.—Stewart v. Devries, 81 Md. 525, 32 Atl. 285.

[n] (N. Y. 1877) Where, at auction sale under a decree of court, there is sold only the "estate, right, title, and interest" of the owner or supposed owner, the purchaser cannot refuse to complete the purchase on the ground that the title is defective.—Mott v. Mott, 68 N. Y. 246.

[o] (N. C. 1877) Where a particular piece of land is sold under an order of court, a good title is deemed to be offered; and a purchaser will not be compelled to complete his purchase, by payment of the price, if it appear that a good title cannot be made. It is otherwise in cases where the sale is ordered merely of the estate of a person, named in the land.—Shields v. Allen, 77 N. C. 375.

[p] (N. C. 1879) A purchaser at a judicial sale, knowing of an adverse claim to the property, the strength of which he cannot determine until the same has been judicially ascertained, may buy in the rival claim, and deduct for it, or, if the money has been paid into court, demand the return of a proportional part of it.—Etheridge v. Vernoy, 80 N. C. 78.

[q] (N. C. 1879) The purchaser at a judicial sale will not be compelled to pay his money and take a title substantially defective, unless the sale be made of an estate or interest short of the entire title, and so mentioned in the decree, or clearly implied from the nature of the sale.—Edney v. Edney, 80 N. C. 81.

[r] (N. C. 1886) Where the pleadings and proceedings purport to sell a perfect title, a purchaser will not be required to pay the money and take the land, if the title is imperfect; but, where the true state of the title is set out in the pleadings, he will not be released from his bid, if the title is not good.—Eccles v. Timmons, 95 N. C. 540.

[s] (Pa. 1856) The rule of caveat emptor applies to a purchaser at a judicial sale only as to open defects. Against secret defects in a title apparently good he will be protected.—Banks v. Ammon, 27 Pa. (3 Casey) 172.

[t] (S. C. 1860) Where a commissioner of the court of equity, at his sale of personal property, gives notice that there is no warranty of the soundness of the property, the rule caveat emptor applies, and the purchaser will be bound to pay, though the property should prove unsound.—Parker v. Partlow, 12 Rich. Law, 679.

[u] (Tenn. 1858) Where slaves are sold by a commissioner, under order of court, with a warranty of title and soundness, the purchase and payment of the purchase price is a sufficient consideration to support the warranty.—Kearly v. Duncan, 38 Tenn. (1 Head) 397, 73 Am. Dec. 179.

[v] (Va. 1845) A purchaser of land at a judicial sale can only obtain relief for defects in the title, or incumbrances on the property, by resisting a confirmation of the sale, on the report of the commissioner. Afterwards a court of equity will not enjoin a judgment against him for the purchase money.—Threlkelds v. Campbell, 2 Grat. 197, 44 Am. Dec. 384.

[w] (Va. 1882) It is no ground for a refusal to carry out the terms of a judicial sale that the court refused to refer the question of title to a commissioner. Such a course cannot be demanded as of right.—Thomas v. Davidson, 76 Va. 388.

[x] (Va. 1894) Where a court has three times ordered property to be sold without ordering an account of the liens on the property, and the title to the same is uncertain, a purchaser should not be required to complete his purchase.—Etter v. Scott, 90 Va. 762, 19 S. E. 776.

[y] (W. Va. 1873) Where a court of equity appoints special commissioners to make sale of land in a pending cause for the purposes thereof, and the sale is made accordingly, such court should not entertain a bill of injunction to enjoin the collection of a judgment at law rendered upon a bond given to the commissioners for the purchase money, upon allegations that the commissioners have no title to the land, and that no deed has been made or filed as an escrow for the same, and that the title to the land is in another person, especially where such person is a party to the suit in which the decree of sale is made.—Shields v. McClung, 6 W. Va. 79.

[a] (U. S. 1882) Where, after a judicial sale of land, it is discovered that the defendant in such proceedings has not a title in fee thereto, the purchaser at the sale will be relieved from complying with his bid, and a resale of such interest in the land as the defendant has will be ordered.—Dunscomb v. Holst (C. C.) 13 Fed. 11.

[b] (Ky. 1890) Where more than half a century has elapsed since the conveyance of the land by a remote vendor in a deed wherein his wife joined, but which was ineffectual to convey her inchoate dower right, the court will not assume, in favor of a purchaser at a judicial sale, who fails to comply with the terms of sale, that the wife is still alive, and may yet assert her rights.—Southwick v. Greuzenbach, 14 S. W. 344.

[d] (Ky. 1891) The purchaser of a lot having a front of 110½ feet, at judicial sale, cannot claim that he was deceived because he afterwards discovered that the lot was not a parallelogram, one of the side lines running obliquely, so as to make the back line only 82 feet, where this back line was stated in the advertisement of the lot to be "100 feet, more or less."—Williams v. Duncan, 92 Ky. 125, 17 S. W. 330.

[e] (Md. 1828) A trustee appointed by a court of chancery sold an entire tract of land at a certain price per acre, and the sale was ratified. At the time of the sale it was known to the trustee and purchaser that a bill was pending for the recovery of an interest in the same land, in opposition to those whose title the trustee was about to sell; and, by the final decision upon that bill, it was decreed that the complainants were entitled to one-fourth of the tract. After this decision the purchaser filed a petition in the same court, setting it forth, and claiming to vacate the sale to himself, on account of the apprehended interruption of a road, alleged to lead through the premises which he intended to purchase from his estate, which, together with the proximity of the two estates, he alleged to have been his only inducement to purchase. The existence of the road was not proved, and it appearing that the quantity of land to be obtained from the trustee was not a material consideration in the purchase, that the trustee could give a good title under the original decree to three-fourths of the whole tract, that the petitioner had secured for himself three-fourths of the remaining quarter, and that the trustee was enabled, by a deed from the party entitled to the remainder, to convey that also, which, if the petitioner accepted it, would secure to him the entire object of the purchase without loss, it was held that the purchaser could not be discharged from his contract, as its enforcement, subject to a proportionate deduction for that portion of the land which he had purchased from others, would do him no injury.—Weems v. Brewer, 2 Har. & G. 390.

[f] (Md. 1828) A purchaser of land sold under a decree of the court of chancery, claiming to be discharged from his contract, should make out a fair and plain case for relief, and not every defect in the subject sold, or variation from the description, will avail him.—Weems v. Brewer, 2 Har. & G. 390.

[g] (N. Y. 1831) Where a purchaser at a master's sale, under a decree against heirs and devisees for a debt due from their testator, was assured that a perfect title should be given, and it appeared that certain judgment creditors of the heirs and devisees had not been made parties to the suit, it was held that the purchaser was not bound to complete the purchase.—Morris v. Mowatt, 2 Paige, 586, 22 Am. Dec. 661.

[h] (N. Y. 1832) Land sold under a decree was described, in the notice of sale by the master, as containing 20 acres, "more or less," but it in fact contained but 13 acres; and one of the trustees of the fund to be raised by the sale was present at the sale, and, knowing of the mistake in quantity, concealed it, and urged the purchaser and others to bid. Held, that the purchaser could not be compelled to complete the purchase.—Veeder v. Fonda, 3 Paige, 94.

[i] (N. Y. 1834) A purchaser at a sale by a master is authorized to object to the title only when it is probable that some third person has a valid claim or lien upon the premises.—Dunham v. Minard, 4 Paige, 441.

[j] (N. Y. 1873) Where the terms of sale provide that existing incumbrances will be allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase money, on his producing vouchers therefor, the existence of incumbrances which he might have thus paid off is no reason for refusing to fulfill his purchase.—Lenihan v. Hamann, 14 Abb. Prac. (N. S.) 274.

[k] (N. Y. 1877) Where a tract of land divided into city lots is put up and sold at auction under a decree of court in separate and independent parcels, a defect in the title to one parcel, or to a lot included therein, will not avoid or affect the sale of another parcel; but a defect in the title to any one of several lots put up and sold as one parcel avoids the sale of the whole parcel.—Mott v. Mott, 68 N. Y. 246.

[m] (N. Y. 1892) A power of attorney executed by a married woman to her husband authorized him to sell and convey all or any lands belonging to her individually or jointly with another, and "for the purpose aforesaid" and in her name, as her act and deed, to execute all necessary or proper "deeds, conveyances, releases, releases of dower, and right of dower, or other instruments for the conveying, surrendering, and relinquishing all or any part of my estate, right, title, and interest, whether vested or contingent, choate or inchoate." Held, that whether the instrument by its terms authorized the husband to execute a release of dower in his lands for the wife was a question of such reasonable doubt as entitled a purchaser of land at a judicial sale to relief from his bid, on discovery that in the chain of title to the land dower was released by a husband under such a power.—Wronkow v. Oakley, 64 Hun, 217, 19 N. Y. Supp. 51, 16 L. R. A. 209; In re Wolff, Id.

[n] (Ohio, 1876) Where real estate sold at a judicial sale was advertised by the officer, through mistake, as dry land, while in fact a part thereof was covered with water, a purchaser, who believed the property to be dry, but was not misled by any act or representation of the officer, was bound by the sale.—Mechanics' Sav. & Bldg. Loan Ass'n v. O'Connor, 29 Ohio St. 651.

[o] (Pa. 1851) Where burial lots were sold by special agreement in lump, and it appeared that the numbers of the lots had been given in the advertisement to sell (though transposed), the sale will not be set aside, though there were three or four lots less than advertised.—Monument Cemetery Co. v. Potts, 1 Phila. 251.

[p] (Pa. 1890) Where a person purchases property at a sale under an order of the orphans' court, which property is burdened with an easement in favor of adjacent lots, of which the purchaser had no notice, he will not be compelled to complete the purchase.—In re Morgan's Estate (Orph. Ct.) 9 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 119.

[r] (Tenn. 1873) Where a purchaser of land at a chancery sale has received a deed, a petition by him alleging that within the limits of the land conveyed, "as he is informed and believes," there is a certain number of acres in adverse possession of another and in litigation, but which does not allege that the title acquired by him is invalid, shows no ground for equitable relief.—Foster v. Bradford, 1 Tenn. Ch. 400.

[s] (Tenn. 1874) A lot was advertised as fronting on a certain street 62 feet, and sold at a master's sale for $12,815 in gross. On petition brought by the purchaser before confirmation of the decree, it appeared that the frontage was in fact only 60 feet and 3 inches. Held, that he was not entitled to relief.—Shields v. Thompson, 63 Tenn. (4 Baxt.) 227.

[t] (Va. 1895) Where property sold under decree of court is correctly represented by a plat which discloses an encroachment of about 2½ feet on a street, which plat is referred to in the advertisement of sale, and exhibited on the day of sale, a purchaser cannot plead ignorance of said encroachment.—Carneal v. Lynch, 91 Va. 114, 20 S. E. 959, 50 Am. St. Rep. 819.

Titles and interest which pass under judicial sale in general, see ante, § 91.

[a] (U. S. 1882) A title acquired under the following devise in a will, "I bequeath to my daughter [the land in question] for her and her children's sole and separate use, free from any claim or control of her husband," is not of such clear and indisputable character as the purchaser at a judicial sale has a right to demand.—Dunscomb v. Holst (C. C.) 13 Fed. 11.

[b] (D. C. 1888) Adverse possession of lands for such length of time as will bar an action for their recovery constitutes a good title thereto, which the purchaser at a judicial sale will be required to take.—Cox v. Cox, 7 Mackey, 1.

[c] (La. 1883) A purchaser at a judicial sale is entitled to an unincumbered title before being compelled to comply with the term of the adjudication.—Roberts v. Bauer, 35 La. Ann. 453.

[d] (N. J. 1893) Purchasers at a judicial sale are not entitled to a "merchantable title," but only to such a title as the proceedings show that they will get.—Boorum v. Tucker, 51 N. J. Eq. (6 Dick.) 135, 26 Atl. 456.

[e] (N. Y. 1830) A purchaser at a master's sale is bound to complete the purchase, where the vendor shows a prima facie title against which there are no reasonable grounds of suspicion.—In re Browning, 2 Paige, 64.

[f] (N. Y.) A purchaser at a master's sale, under the assurance that he is to receive a perfect title, will not be compelled to complete the purchase, unless a title, good both in law and equity, can be given.—(1831) Morris v. Mowatt, 2 Paige, 586, 22 Am. Dec. 661; (1840) Coster v. Clarke, 3 Edw. Ch. 428.

[g] (N. Y. 1839) The court, in giving title to the purchaser at a master's sale under a decree, only assumes to give such a title as a purchaser at a private sale would be bound to receive.—Spring v. Sandford, 7 Paige, 550.

[h] (N. Y. 1868) A purchaser at a judicial sale cannot be compelled to take title, when a person, who, if living, would have an interest in the property, is not proven to be dead, merely because such person has been absent, unheard of, for seven years. The presumption of death, arising from such absence, is not a sufficient basis for the title.—McDermot v. McDermot, 3 Abb. Prac. (N. S.) 451.

[i] (N. Y. 1884) A purchaser at a judicial sale will not be compelled to complete his purchase, where a link in the title consists in a special guardian's purchase of property sold by him as such guardian.—People v. Globe Mut. Life Ins. Co., 33 Hun, 393.

[j] (N. Y. 1885) A purchaser at a judicial sale will not be compelled to take a title, a chain in which consists of a deed executed 50 years before by two only of three executors, who all qualified, and who, unless the one not joining renounced the trust, should all have joined in the deed, the question of renunciation depending on inferences and presumptions by no means incontrovertible; the question of whether the title of the testator's children, all of whom, save one, joined in a quitclaim deed, was an absolute or a determinable fee, being a question of law and in doubt, and it not being certain that a possession relied on as constituting a bar had certainly continued for a sufficient length of time to cut off all rights.—Fleming v. Burnham, 100 N. Y. 1, 2 N. E. 905.

§ 100. Compensation for deficiency or defect, or abatement in price on account thereof.

Liability for excess over amount which could properly be sold, see post, § 111 [c].

—— of purchaser for deficiency on resale, see ante, § 52.

Liens, charges, and incumbrances in general, see ante, § 92.

Right of purchaser to have liens and incumbrances discharged out of purchase money, see ante, § 93.

[a] (U. S. 1812) A judgment for the purchase price of lands sold by commissioners at a public sale by the acre, as directed by a decree of the court, will be enjoined to the extent of any deficiency, though the commissioners declared that the purchaser must buy at his own risk, both as to quantity and title.—Strodes v. Patton, Fed. Cas. No. 13,538 [1 Brock. 228].

[b] (Ga. 1882) A qualification of the quantity of the lot of land sold as "more or less" will cover any deficiency not so gross as to justify the suspicion of willful deception or mistake amounting to fraud; and this, without regard to existence of legal fraud, as defined in Code, § 3174.—Wylly v. Gazan, 69 Ga. 506.

[d] (Ky. 1890) Where plaintiff, as commissioner, sells a tract of land, giving a bond conditioned, among other things, that the purchaser should be put in full possession of the land, and it appears that a portion of the tract is in the adverse possession of another person, the purchaser is entitled to have the value of that portion deducted from the purchase price of the tract.—Aiken v. Underwood, 12 S. W. 1061.

[e] (La. 1848) A judicial purchaser may claim, if there is a deficiency in the quantity of the land sold, a proportional diminution of the price.—Hall v. Nevill, 3 La. Ann. 326.

[f] (Md. 1828) Where the purchaser at a judicial sale gets substantially what he bargained for, he will be compelled to take compensation for a deficiency.—Weems v. Brewer, 2 Har. & G. 390.

[g] (Md. 1832) At a judicial sale a certain lot was represented as containing 143 acres, for which the purchaser offered $23 per acre. Held to be a sale by the acre, and that the purchaser applying to the court, within a reasonable time, would be allowed for a deficiency in the number of acres.—Brown v. Wallace, 4 Gill & J. 479.

[h] (Md. 1851) Where a tract of land sold by a trustee appointed by a court of equity contains a less number of acres than the trustee represented that it did, and the deficiency becomes known before ratification, the vendee should proceed by petition to such court, for an abatement of the price, and not by original bill, though the sale be not impeached for fraud.—Marbury v. Stonestreet, 1 Md. 147.

[i] (Md. 1851) Where a tract of land sold by a commissioner under a decree was advertised as containing 669 acres, but in fact contained only 530 acres, the purchaser was entitled to an abatement in the price.—Marbury v. Stonestreet, 1 Md. 147.

[j] (Md. 1865) Purchasers from a trustee in chancery sought, by petition, an abatement of the purchase money, on the ground of a deficiency in the quantity of the land. It appeared that the land had been advertised and described by the trustee as a cotton factory, etc., "with 187 acres of land, more or less, attached thereto," and the advertisement further stated that the property could be examined by any person desiring. Held, that the qualifying words, "more or less," gave sufficient notice to the purchasers that quantity did not enter into the essence of the contract, warning them to ascertain the true quantity at their own risk.—Slothower v. Gordon, 23 Md. 1.

[k] (Md. 1865) Where a trustee in chancery sells real estate consisting, in part, of machinery, which he describes as being "in good running order and now in use," it will be presumed that he believed the condition of the machinery to be such as he represented, and an abatement in price, on account of inferior quality, will not be allowed in the absence of proof of fraud.—Slothower v. Gordon, 23 Md. 1.

[l] (Md. 1874) A purchaser, with a good opportunity of examining the premises, purchased at a sale made under an order of the orphans' court certain leasehold property described in the advertisement of sale as "fronting on A street 50 feet, with an even depth of 123 feet." After the confirmation he found that the lot tapered from 50 feet frontage to a width of only 40 feet in the rear. None of the buildings were on the deficiency. Held, that the court properly allowed a proportionate abatement from the purchase money, and refused to rescind the sale.—Carmody v. Brooks, 40 Md. 240.

[m] (N. J. 1890) A tract of land described by metes and bounds, and stated to contain 121 acres, more or less, was sold by order of court, after having been offered twice, the purchaser being present on both occasions, and a week elapsing between the two. With this opportunity to investigate the quantity of land before bidding, he purchased the tract for a lump sum. Held, that a shortage of 10 acres in the quantity is not such a discrepancy as to entitle him to a diminution in the price.—Close v. Brown (Err. & App.) 20 Atl. 674.

[o] (S. C. 1892) Land was advertised for sale as all that tract or parcel known as the "Anderson Quarry Tract," and the number of acres (1,266⅔) was mentioned as part of the description. Held, that the sale thereunder not being by the acre, and the chief element of value being the granite, which the advertisement stated was found on the land in inexhaustible quantities, no abatement in the purchase price would be made because of a deficiency of about 200 acres, in the absence of fraud and intentional misrepresentation, and evidence that the purchaser failed to get all that he valued in the purchase.—Lyles v. Haskell, 35 S. C. 391, 14 S. E. 829.

citing the boundaries of the land purchased, he is not entitled to compensation for a deficiency in the number of acres called for within such boundaries.—Foster v. Bradford, 1 Tenn. Ch. 400.

[q] (Tenn. 1880) A purchaser of land at a judicial sale is entitled to an abatement of the price, where it appears that the amount actually conveyed was less than that represented to have been conveyed at the sale.—Myers v. Lindsay, 73 Tenn. (5 Lea) 331.

[r] (Va. 1811) Under the rule that where land is sold by metes and bounds, exhibited to the purchaser before he put in his bid, with a qualification that the sale was made whether the land included a certain number of acres, "more or less," the purchaser cannot recover compensation for a deficiency, though subsequent articles of agreement, under seal, referred to the terms of sale, and the quantity of ground mentioned in the advertisement is specified, omitting the words "more or less."—Grantland v. Wight, 2 Munf. 179.

Recovery of purchase price because of error or defect in decree or order of sale, see post, § 107 [c, d, e].

[a] (U. S. 1850) The purchaser at a judicial sale, who has paid the money to the judgment creditor, cannot, on discovering a defect of title, call on him for repayment, but his remedy, if any, is against the judgment debtor.—United States v. Duncan, Fed Cas No. 15,003 [4 McLean, 607].

[b] (Tenn. 1847) Where a purchaser at a master's sale discovers a defect in the title, after paying the price, he may recover it back at any time before a conveyance is made, by a petition in the cause in which the sale was ordered.—Read v. Fite, 27 Tenn. (8 Humph.) 328.

Persons who may question validity of sale, see ante, § 69.

[a] (U. S. 1838) The surety in a covenant by the purchaser at a sale under a decretal order to pay the purchase money cannot take any exceptions to the title, where the principal has failed to do so.—Wood v. Mann, Fed. Cas. No. 17,954 [3 Sumn. 318].

[b] (Tenn. 1877) The surety on notes given for land bought at a judicial sale cannot maintain a suit in equity to avoid the sale, on the ground of a defect of title.—Lillard v. Puckett, 68 Tenn. (9 Baxt.) 568.

§ 103. Waiver of objections to and defects in title.

[c] (Ky. 1886) A purchaser of land sold under decree of court, who has neither resisted the order confirming the sale nor attempted, during the term, to have that order set aside, may, after the term has closed, institute a suit to enjoin the collection of a bond given by him for the purchase money, where the title to the land is not good, and the description is so vague that it cannot be identified, and he has been led by the conduct of the parties in the sale proceedings to postpone a motion to have the order ratifying the sale set aside until after the term of court has come to a close.—Morrow v. Wessell, 1 S. W. 439; Id., 2 S. W. 251.

[d] (Md. 1832) Where a judicial sale was made in 1812, and the purchaser, after being privy to a survey of the land, gave his bond, took possession, and used the property, without making complaint until 1818, he thereby forfeited all claims of an allowance for a deficiency in the number of acres.—Brown v. Wallace, 4 Gill & J. 479.

[dd] (Va.) If the purchaser at a judicial sale would object to the title, he should do so before confirmation. After confirmation he can, ordinarily, have no relief, except for fraud or mistake.—(1852) Young's Adm'r v. McClung, 9 Grat. 336; (1877) Long v. Weller's Ex'r, 29 Grat. 347; (1882) Thomas v. Davidson, 76 Va. 338; (1882) Boyce v. Strother, Id. 862; (1883) Hickson v. Rucker, 77 Va. 135.

[e] (Va. 1858) The purchaser at a public sale of lands was informed immediately after the sale that the title to a portion thereof was vested in infants, and could not be obtained, except by a suit in chancery. The purchaser, however, manifested his intention to proceed with the purchase, taking a conveyance for that portion which could be made at once, and to look to a court of chancery for title to the other portion. Held, that the purchaser waived any objection which he might have made to the title.—Goddin v. Vaughn's Ex'x, 14 Grat. 102.

[f] (Va. 1877) The general rule that objections by purchasers to judicial sales for defect of title must be made before the sale is confirmed by the court, and that objections afterwards come too late, does not apply to the equity of a purchaser arising from after-discovered mistakes, fraud, or other like matter.—Watson v. Hoy, 28 Grat. 698.

[g] (Va. 1877) The title to an easement is necessarily connected with the title to the land to which it is appurtenant; and, as a purchaser at a judicial sale of land cannot be heard to object for want or defect of title after the confirmation of the sale, no such objection in respect to an easement appurtenant to such land can be raised after confirmation of the sale.—Long v. Weller's Ex'r, 29 Grat. 347.

[h] (Va. 1877) An objection by a purchaser at judicial sale, taken after the sale has been confirmed, that, owing to his misinformation as to the boundaries of the land, he does not get certain water privileges which he would have had if he had been correctly informed as to the said boundaries, can only be sustained on the ground of fraud or mistake; and, if mistake is relied upon, it must be the mistake of both parties.—Long v. Weller's Ex'r, 29 Grat. 347.

[i] (Va. 1887) The purchaser at a duly-confirmed judicial sale, having paid the cash down and the first installment of the deferred payments, according to the terms of sale, withheld the second and last installment, and to a rule to show cause answered that the property was subject to an adverse claim of title, contrary to the representations of the commissioner, and asked for an order to deposit said second installment to await the determination of said adverse claim. The commissioner denied making such representations, and a resale was ordered, and the payment of certain debts thereon out of the proceeds. The resale was advertised, but enjoined by the purchaser. On hearing, the commissioner answering as before, the adverse claimants also filing their cross bill, the injunction was dissolved without prejudice to a new suit by the claimants, and the property ordered resold, unless the balance of the purchase money were paid within 30 days. The purchaser appealed on the ground that the adverse claim should have been determined before a resale was ordered. Held that, the rule of caveat emptor applying, the purchaser could not object to the title after the sale was confirmed; fraud or mutual mistake not being averred.—Redd v. Dyer, 83 Va. 331, 2 S. E. 288, 5 Am. St. Rep. 272.

IN GENERAL, § 104.
IRREGULARITIES AFFECTING SALE, § 106.
PROCEEDINGS FOR RELIEF, § 107.

Validity of sale in general, see ante, §§ 68–71.

[a] (Ala. 1875) A purchaser of land at a sale under an order of the probate court cannot be heard to complain of lapse of time between the rendition of the decree and the sale under it.—Bland v. Bowie, 53 Ala. 152.

[b] (D. C. 1888) The purchaser at a judicial sale cannot question the regularity of the proceedings had before the decree of sale was entered.—Cox v. Cox, 7 Mackey, 1.

[c] (Pa. 1887) Where the jurisdiction of the court has attached in proceedings for the sale of property, the purchaser's title is unprejudiced, as against all persons who were made parties, by any error in the proceedings.—Morrison v. Nellis, 115 Pa. 41, 7 Atl. 768.

Defects and irregularities in judgment or decree as ground for setting aside sale, see ante, § 74.

Form, requisites, and validity of judgment or decree in general, see ante, §§ 9, 10.

[a] Where the court rendering a decree for the sale of property has jurisdiction, the purchaser at such sale will be protected, though the judgment may be erroneous or invalid.

—(U. S. 1844) Grignon's Lessee v. Astor, 43 U. S. (2 How.) 319, 11 L. Ed. 283; (1834) Bank of the United States v. Voorhees, Fed. Cas. No. 939 [1 McLean, 221], affirmed Voorhees v. Bank of the United States (1836) 35 U. S. (10 Pet.) 449, 9 L. Ed. 490;

(Ind. 1849) Taylor's Heirs v. Parker, Smith, 225;

(La. 1840) Brosnaham v. Turner, 16 La. 433.

[b, c] The purchaser at a judicial sale, without notice, actual or constructive, will be protected, though the decree for the sale was obtained by fraud.

—(Ala. 1879) Dunklin v. Wilson, 64 Ala. 162;

(N. Y. 1857) Clarke v. Davenport, 14 N. Y. Super. Ct. (1 Bosw.) 95.

[d] A purchaser at a judicial sale is bound to look to the jurisdiction of the court granting the order of sale, but the truth of the record concerning matters within its jurisdiction cannot be disputed by him.

—(La. 1892) Successions of Theze, 44 La. Ann. 46, 10 South. 412;

(Tex. 1881) Stegall v. Huff, 54 Tex. 193.

[e] (D. C. 1892) A decree of sale of land made by a court without jurisdiction gives the purchaser no title.—Stansbury v. Inglehart, 19 Wash. Law Rep. 594.

[f] (Ga. 1853) If a court has jurisdiction, no error or irregularity in the mode of its exercise can affect the purchaser's title under a judicial sale.—Walker v. Morris, 14 Ga. 323.

[g] (Ga. 1874) Ejectment was brought against defendant for a certain tract of land. The latter had made advances for the benefit of the plaintiffs and of the property sought to be recovered, and had purchased the land in satisfaction of such indebtedness, at a sale made under the order of the chancellor. This order was attacked by the plaintiffs as illegal. Held, that even if the order was unauthorized, yet defendant, having purchased the property in good faith, under color of legal proceedings, might set up the facts aforesaid by an equitable plea, and claim to be reimbursed before a recovery could be had.—Askew v. Patterson, 53 Ga. 209.

[h] (Ill. 1841) Where the facts necessary to give the court jurisdiction appear on the face of proceedings resulting in a judicial sale, the purchaser will be protected, though the judgment may be erroneous.—Buckmaster v. Jackson, 4 Ill. (3 Scam.) 104.

[i] (Ill. 1875) If the court ordering a sale of real estate has jurisdiction of the subject-matter and of the parties, no mere errors can have any effect upon the sale or the title under it. Until reversed, the decree confers power to sell and pass the title, if there was jurisdiction, however erroneous the decree may be.—Wing v. Dodge, 80 Ill. 564.

[j] (Ky. 1878) One does not, by virtue of his purchase at a sale made under a void judgment, acquire a lien on the thing sold for the amount of the debt paid by the sale.—Grigsby v. Barr, 77 Ky. (14 Bush) 330.

[l] (La. 1872) A purchaser at a judicial sale obtains no title if the judgment, under which he purchases, is absolutely void for want of citation.—Walworth v. Stevenson, 24 La. Ann. 251.

[m] (La. 1879) Innocent third persons who purchase property at a public sale held under the decree of a court of competent jurisdiction cannot be affected by any irregularities in the decree, subsequently ascertained.—Wisdom v. Parker, 31 La. Ann. 52.

[n] (La. 1888) Although a purchaser may be protected by the order of a court directing a sale in a matter over which it has jurisdiction, he has the right to inquire into the proceedings conducive to the order of sale, to ascertain whether, under the showing made, the court had the power to make the order, and may refuse to comply with his bid, whenever such proceedings and order are unauthorized.—Succession of Dumestre, 40 La. Ann. 571, 4 South. 328.

[o] (La. 1888) Where an order of court for the sale of succession property is not justified by the face of the papers, and is therefore illegal, the purchaser may demand the return of money paid by him to the auctioneer.—Succession of Dumestre, 40 La. Ann. 571, 4 South. 328.

[p] (La. 1888) An order of court for the sale of succession property, not justified by the face of the papers, is illegal, and an adjudicatee may refuse to comply with his bid.—Succession of Dumestre, 40 La. Ann. 571, 4 South. 328.

[pp] (La.) A purchaser at a public sale in pursuance of an order of court, is not bound to look beyond the decree in order to ascertain its necessity.—(1889) Massie v. Brady, 41 La. Ann. 563, 6 South. 536; (1896) Munday v. Kaufman, 48 La. Ann. 591, 19 South. 619.

[r] (Miss. 1857) A sale made in execution of a decree irregularly obtained by the complainants confers no title to a trustee purchasing for their benefit.—Goff v. Robins, 33 Miss. 153.

[s] (Miss. 1876) Under Act Feb. 11, 1873, providing that a purchaser of land at a sale made under a void or voidable decree of the probate court shall have a lien on the land for the repayment of his purchase money "paid in good faith," the term, "good faith," means that the purchase money shall have been genuinely paid, without any knowledge or suspicion of fraud on the part of the purchaser.—Cole v. Johnson, 53 Miss. 94; Gaines v. Kennedy, Id. 103.

[t] (N. C. 1876) A plaintiff can claim no benefit from a purchase of land at a sale under a decree entered in the cause against one in possession claiming title to the land, when he knows at the time of the purchase that the person so in possession was not in fact made a party to the action.—Chambers v. Brigman, 75 N. C. 487.

[w] (Tex. 1881) Where a title derived through a judicial sale was defective for want of jurisdiction in the court, but the proceedings were regular on their face, and the jurisdiction of the court, which was a court of general jurisdiction, was not questioned at the time, held, that the purchaser should be reimbursed for necessary repairs made and taxes paid.—French v. Grenet, 57 Tex. 273.

[x] (Tex. 1883) Jurisdiction existing to order a sale, the purchaser's title cannot be affected by collateral facts which, if known to the court, would have prevented the order, such, for instance, as the pendency of a suit elsewhere.—Edwards v. Halbert, 64 Tex. 667.

[a] (Mich. 1869) A purchaser at a judicial sale has a right to presume that it is conducted according to the provisions of the public law; and, if good according to that law, he will be protected, notwithstanding the existence of a private statute, authorizing the sale, of which he had no knowledge, and the provisions of which were not regarded.—Browning v. Howard, 19 Mich. 323.

[b] (Miss. 1837) A sale of property in any other manner than that prescribed by law vests no title in the vendee.—Cable v. Martin, 2 Miss. (1 How.) 558.

[c] (Mo. 1874) Where a judicial sale of land is made under the authority of a court having power to order it, and there is no pretense of fraud, the title of the purchaser will not be affected by slight irregularities in the sale, especially after a considerable lapse of time.—Pattee v. Thomas, 58 Mo. 163.

[d] (Tex. 1889) Mere irregularities in a judicial sale of personalty will not affect the title of a purchaser in good faith.—Huckins v. Kapf (App.) 14 S. W. 1016.

Recovery back of purchase money on discovery of defect in title, see ante, § 101.

[a] (Tenn. 1873) A party asking the rescission of a judicial sale, on the ground of alleged errors, must prove such errors, since the presumption of law is in favor of the validity of the sale.—Puckett v. Jenkins, 61 Tenn. (2 Baxt.) 484.

[b] (Tenn. 1895) A petition for relief from a purchase of land at a judicial sale, alleging that at the time the suit was brought, and "for some time afterwards," one of the parties, a married woman, was a minor, and that the process was not served on her by an officer, but that she was in court by the acknowledgment of the service of process, is insufficient, as at the time of the acknowledgment of service she may have been of age.—Ward v. West (Ch. App.) 35 S. W. 563.

[c] (Va. 1887) In an action to recover back the purchase price of property bought at a judicial sale under a void decree, it is a misjoinder to join as a party plaintiff one who purchased at such sale, but who has conveyed to plaintiff all his interest in the property, and become a bankrupt.—Abernathy v. Phillips, 82 Va. 769, 1 S. E. 113.

[d] (Va. 1887) A person who, under order of court, has made a deed of certain lands purchased at a judicial sale, and parted thereby with whatever interest he may have held in the land, is not a proper party to a suit by the purchaser to recover from the beneficiaries of the sale the purchase price paid, on account of the nullity of the decree; and it is a misjoinder to make him a party plaintiff with the purchaser.—Abernathy v. Phillips, 82 Va. 769, 1 S. E. 113.

[e] (Va. 1887) Purchasers at a judicial sale under a void decree are at law entitled to recovery of the purchase price, with interest from the time of eviction; and therefore a bill for relief based on these facts will not be entertained in equity, in the absence of special facts showing the necessity for an accounting.—Abernathy v. Phillips, 82 Va. 769, 1 S. E. 113.

Reversal of judgment as ground for setting aside sale, see ante, § 73 [g, m].

Rights of debtor on reversal of judgment, see ante, § 86.

—— of vendee of purchaser taking after reversal of decree, see post, § 114 [a].

[a] A judicial sale, made pursuant to the decree or judgment of a competent court having jurisdiction of the subject-matter and of the parties, passes title to the purchaser, even though the judgment should afterwards be reversed or set aside for error or irregularity.

[c] (U. S. 1863) The rule that purchasers at judicial sale will be protected, though the decree be subsequently reversed, applies only when the power to make the sale is expressly given.—Gray v. Brignardello, 68 U. S. (1 Wall.) 627, 17 L. Ed. 693.

[f] (Ala. 1877) A sale, made under a judgment or decree that is afterwards reversed for error, is avoided only when the judgment or decree was void.—Lesslie v. Richardson, 60 Ala. 563.

[g] (Ala. 1880) When a party purchases lands under a judgment or decree, whether he be the original plaintiff in the suit or an assignee of the judgment or decree, he acquires only a defeasible title, liable to be defeated by a subsequent reversal of the judgment or decree; and this rule obtains whether the reversal is based on an amendable defect or on one which is incurable.—McDonald v. Mobile Life Ins. Co., 65 Ala. 358.

[h] (Ala. 1886) Where complainant's wife purchases at a judicial sale, complainant entering a credit on his decree for the amount of the purchase money, and the transaction showing nothing more than a gift to her by him, she is not a bona fide purchaser; and, on a reversal of the decree, her title will be set aside, and the parties restored to their rights.—Ivie v. Stringfellow's Adm'r, 82 Ala. 545, 2 South. 22.

[i] (Cal. 1860) A sale was had in a particular manner under a decree. Upon appeal the decree was reversed, and the sale ordered to be made differently,—in separate lots instead of in one. Held that, upon the question whether the sale should stand or restitution be had, the partial reversal was the same as a total reversal.—Reynolds v. Harris, 14 Cal. 667, 76 Am. Dec. 459.

[j] (Ill. 1871) The rights of persons not parties to the record, acquired under judicial sales, when the court had jurisdiction, will not be affected by a subsequent reversal of the decree under which they were acquired.—Hobson v. Ewan, 62 Ill. 146.

[k] (Ind. 1843) If a person, having obtained a decree in chancery for certain land and been put into possession, sell the land to a bona fide purchaser for value, before a suit in error to reverse the decree is commenced, the title of such purchaser, or of those claiming under him, will not be affected by a subsequent reversal of the decree; and if, after such decree is reversed and the bill dismissed, a writ of restitution be opposed on the ground, supported by affidavit that the facts are as above stated, the writ will be refused.—McCormick v. McClure, 6 Blackf. 466, 39 Am. Dec. 441.

[m] (Ky. 1821) Where a conveyance was made under a decree in chancery, and the decree was afterwards reversed, but the reversal was not consummated by a reconveyance, it was held that the conveyance was still good in law.—Porter's Heirs v. Robinson, 10 Ky. (3 A. K. Marsh) 253, 13 Am. Dec. 153.

[n] (Ky. 1847) Where property is sold under a chancellor's decree, and the money paid to the complainant, on the decree being reversed and the property held not subject to the complainant's demand, the chancellor may order its repayment, either to the defendant to whom the property belonged or to any other person who is entitled to the funds.—Kane v. Pilcher, 46 Ky. (7 B. Mon.) 651.

[o] (Ky. 1867) If an appeal, in order to set aside a judicial sale, is prosecuted before the sale is fully completed, by a conveyance offered by the court, and before the collection and disbursement of the purchase money, the court and the purchaser at such sale are chargeable with notice of such appeal; and if, notwithstanding such notice, the court completes the sale, without objection on the part of the purchaser, he cannot be regarded as a bona fide purchaser, without notice, but may be compelled to release his title acquired under such sale to the owner of the land, if the decree is reversed and the sale set aside.—Miller v. Hall, 64 Ky. (1 Bush) 229.

[p] (Ky. 1867) A purchaser at a judicial sale, which is set aside on appeal, has a lien on the land purchased, for money paid before the appeal was prosecuted.—Miller v. Hall, 64 Ky. (1 Bush) 229.

[q] (Ky. 1887) A judgment directing land to be sold free of lien was appealed from, and reversed; but, no supersedeas having been executed, the land was sold in the meantime. Held, as the judgment was reversed because erroneous, but not void, the purchaser at the sale acquired a good title, and the successful appellant was not entitled to a lien on the land, even though the plaintiff in the action was the purchaser, but he was entitled to a personal judgment against the plaintiff for the amount of his claim.—Stewart v. Hoskins, 3 S. W. 124.

[r] (Ky. 1887) The reversal of a judgment does not affect the validity of a sale made under it, although the plaintiff in the action was the purchaser, and no deed had been made to him at the time of reversal, the sale having been confirmed, and no appeal taken from the order of confirmation.—Dunn v. German Sec. Bank, 3 S. W. 425.

[s] (Md.) Where no appeal bond is filed to stay the execution of a decree ordering a sale of land, the rights of the purchasers under the sale will not be disturbed or affected by a reversal, unless it can be shown that there was collusion or unfairness at the sale.—(1885) Lenderking v. Rosenthal, 63 Md. 28; (1891) Garritee v. Popplein, 73 Md. 322, 20 Atl. 1070.

[t] (N. Y. 1858) A decree directed lands to be sold, and how the proceeds should be appropriated, but the sale was enjoined. In another suit, brought in the nature of a cross bill, the decree directed the sale of the lands as well under the first as the second decree. The master, who made the sale, had in his hands the second decree only. Held, that the sale was made on that decree only, and a reversal thereof nullified it.—Wambaugh v. Gates, 8 N. Y. (4 Seld.) 138.

[u] (Ohio, 1828) Where a party, having title to land under a decree in chancery, conveys in good faith, before a citation in error is served, a reversal of the decree does not devest the purchaser's title.—Taylor's Lessee v. Boyd, 3 Ohio (3 Ham.) 337, 17 Am. Dec. 603.

[w] (Va. 1887) Where commissioners assumed to sell certain lands under a decree in a creditors' bill pending appeal, and such sale was not confirmed, and the decree was subsequently annulled, the purchasers at such sale, who went into possession thereunder, cannot be treated as receivers, and allowed the commissions of the sale, or the expenses of, or compensation for, the management of the lands.—Strayer v. Long, 83 Va. 715, 3 S. E. 372.

[x] (Va. 1891) Where payments of purchase money at a judicial sale are void, because made to an unbonded commissioner, proceedings against the purchasers to show cause why the property should not be resold are not within Code, § 3425, which declares that the purchaser's title at a sale made under a decree six months after the date thereof, and confirmed, shall not be affected by a subsequent reversal, since the object of such proceedings is not to set aside the sale, but to compel the purchasers to comply with their respective contracts.—Whitehead v. Bradley, 87 Va. 676, 13 S. E. 195.

[y] (W. Va.) A purchaser at a judicial sale, upon reversal of the decree, is not protected by Code, c. 132, § 8, providing that such reversal shall not affect such purchaser, when the record shows that necessary parties interested in the land, having liens thereon, were not parties when the sale was ordered and confirmed.—(1884) Underwood's Ex'r v. Pack, 23 W. Va. 704; (1893) Turk v. Skiles, 38 W. Va. 404, 18 S. E. 561.

Rights of purchaser on opening or vacation of sale, see post, § 110.

[a] Where a stranger, in good faith, purchases property at a judicial sale, a subsequent vacation of the judgment under which the sale was had does not devest his title.
—(Ark. 1882) Moore v. Woodall, 40 Ark. 42; (Tex. 1889) Huckins v. Kapf (Tex. App.) 14 S. W. 1016.

[b] (Mich. 1876) A purchaser under a decree must ascertain at his peril whether the decree was warranted or not; and, though the time for appealing from the decree had expired when he purchased, he cannot claim immunity, as a bona fide purchaser, from the effects of a subsequent order without notice to him, setting the decree aside as unwarrantably entered.—Ritson v. Dodge, 33 Mich. 463.

(F) OPENING OR VACATION OF SALE.

Liability of purchaser for rents and profits on setting aside sale, see ante, § 96.
Opening, vacating, or setting aside sale in general, see ante, §§ 72–87.
Rights of purchaser on vacation of judgment or decree, see ante, § 109.

[a] (D. C. 1894) Where a sale by a court trustee, after ratification, is set aside, on application of the interested parties, for fraud, a purchaser at such sale, who had paid money to the trustee, but who received only a portion of it back, after vacation of the sale, cannot claim a repayment of the balance due him from the proceeds of the resale made by a substituted trustee.—Kenaday v. Waggaman, 3 App. D. C. 412.

[b] (Md. 1884) Innocent bona fide holders of property purchased by them at a judicial sale, and who, acting under the belief that they have good title to the property, have made beneficial improvements thereon, are entitled to compensation for such improvements, upon the sale being annulled by claimants who were not made parties to the proceeding in which the sale was decreed.—Long v. Long, 62 Md. 33.

[c] (Neb. 1880) The doctrine that all rights acquired under a judicial sale, made while the judgment is in force, should be protected, though the sale be subsequently set aside, is properly applicable only when the power to make the sale is clearly given.—State Bank v. Green, 10 Neb. 130, 4 N. W. 942.

[d] (Tex. 1892) A sale by the purchaser at judicial sale of a part of the land for more than the amount bid by him for the whole is a bar to his rights to the purchase money paid by him, on setting aside the sale to him.—Storer v. Lane, 1 Tex. Civ. App. 250, 20 S. W. 852.

[e] (W. Va.) On setting aside a sale made under a void decree, a purchaser is entitled to be substituted to the rights of the creditor, and to a decree charging the land with the amount of the debt paid by him, less the rents, profits, and taxes he has received while in possession.—(1883) Haymond v. Camden, 22 W. Va. 180; (1891) Hull's Adm'r v. Hull's Heirs, 35 W. Va. 155, 13 S. E. 49, 29 Am. St. Rep. 800; Dudley v. Same, Id.

(G) LIABILITIES OF PURCHASERS AND THEIR SURETIES.

Liabilities of bidders as such, see ante, § 54.
Liability of purchaser for rents and profits, see ante, § 96.
—— on assignment of bid, see ante, § 45.

[a] The purchaser of real estate sold under an order of court must pay interest on the deferred payments from the day when the premises were struck off to him.
—(D. C. 1876) Huntington v. Walker, 9 D. C. (2 MacArthur) 479;
(Md. 1847) Wagner v. Cohen, 6 Gill, 97, 46 Am. Dec. 660.

[b] (Md. 1811) A purchaser at a sale under a decree of court is bound to pay interest on the purchase money, according to the terms of the sale, whether he obtains possession or not.—Brown v. Wallace, 2 Bland, 585.

[c] (Md. 1848) A purchaser at a sale under order of court cannot be obliged to pay for an alleged excess of land over that which could properly be sold, merely on evidence founded on a survey ordered by the court on an ex parte application of the petitioner, which differed from the survey according to which the land was sold.—Goldsborough v. Ringgold, 1 Md. Ch. 239.

[d] (Miss. 1852) Where property is sold on a credit under a decree in chancery, the decree is satisfied to the extent of the amount of the sale, and a new contract is made between the purchaser and the complainant, and the purchaser is bound by the terms of that contract.—Shotwell v. Webb, 23 Miss. (1 Cushm.) 375.

[e] (Tex. 1889) In an action for the wrongful taking and detention of a horse, which defendant had purchased at a judicial sale without notice of plaintiff's claim, the measure of damages is the market value of the horse at the time it came into the purchaser's hands, with interest from that date. No special damages can be recovered for the value of its hire while in defendant's possession.—Huckins v. Kapf (App.) 14 S. W. 1016.

[f] (Va. 1880) Where a commissioner was appointed to sell land on credit (bonds to be taken for the several deferred payments, and the title to be retained), and such sale was made, the bonds taken, and the sale reported to the court, but there did not appear to have been a decree confirming the sale, and afterwards, as the bonds fell due, the purchaser paid the money to one of the commissioners, and he deposited it, as collected, in a bank to his credit as commissioner, not using it or mingling it with his own, and it was finally lost through the failure of the bank, held, that the purchaser was bound to pay the purchase money again.—Tyler v. Toms, 75 Va. 116.

[g] (Va. 1887) A commissioner sold lands to defendant, but failed to give bond, or account for the money. Defendant was required to pay the price again, and plaintiff, as receiver in the cause, took judgment against defendant and his security, and sued out execution, which was returned not satisfied. Before the judgment was obtained, the commissioner executed a deed of trust to indemnify defendant. After the return of the execution, the receiver filed his petition in chancery to enforce his execution lien against the fund secured to defendant in the trust deed. Defendant resisted it, because he claimed the fund as a homestead, and because he had assigned the same. The receiver then brought suit to enforce his judgment lien against the lands of defendant and his security. The commissioner was insolvent, and not a party. Held, as the proceeding to enforce the execution lien against the trust fund was uncertain, that plaintiff had a right to enforce his judgment lien against defendant's lands.—Eggleton v. Whittle, 84 Va. 163, 4 S. E. 222.

XIV. PERSONS CLAIMING UNDER PURCHASERS.

ASSIGNEES OF CERTIFICATES OF SALE, § 113.
GRANTEES OF PURCHASERS, § 114.

[a] (Ky. 1891) A deed of land by one F. to plaintiffs' ancestor was set aside as in fraud of the grantor's creditors, and the land was ordered to be sold. At the commissioner's sale plaintiffs' ancestor became the purchaser, and gave bond for the purchase money; but there was no report of the sale to the court, no confirmation of it, or other steps taken by the court, nor any payment of the purchase money, so far as was shown by the record. Held, that plaintiffs could not recover possession of the land from the heirs of F.—Penn v. Fightmaster, 17 S. W. 334.

Assignment of certificate before period of redemption has elapsed consideration for promissory note, see "Bills and Notes," vol. 7, c. 286, § 178 [a].

[a] (Ill. 1876) The assignee of the purchaser at a judicial sale before the execution of a deed takes the certificate charged with all the defenses which could be interposed against the purchaser.—Roberts v. Clelland, 82 Ill. 538.

[b] (Ill. 1892) Under Rev. St. c. 77, § 29, which makes certificates of judicial sales assignable by indorsement, so as to give the assignee "the same benefits therefrom" as the assignor would otherwise have had, a transfer of such a certificate by means of an assignment written on another piece of paper merely vests the assignee with the equitable title thereto.—Chytraus v. Smith, 141 Ill. 231, 30 N. E. 450.

[c] (Ill. 1892) One who purchases a master's certificate of sale after the holder has made a valid contract to sell it to another takes the certificate subject to the contract.—Chytraus v. Smith, 141 Ill. 231, 30 N. E. 450.

[d] (W. Va. 1877) A commissioner's deed, made, by direction of the purchaser at the commissioner's sale, to his assignee, is a valid defense in ejectment by the debtor against the assignee to recover the property.—Hall v. Hall, 12 W. Va. 1.

Conveyance to grantee of purchaser, see post, § 119 [q].
Effect of reversal of decree on title of grantee of purchaser, see ante, § 108 [b, j, k, u].

Right of grantee of purchaser to file bill to compel a conveyance, see post, § 119 [d].

—— to move for confirmation, see ante, § 61 [f].

[b] (U. S. 1887) Persons acquiring title through the purchasers at a judicial sale of property subject to certain receiver's certificates previously issued have no interest in the trust fund represented by the certificates, and therefore cannot resist their payment on the ground that the receiver negotiated them collusively.—Central Nat. Bank v. Hazard (C. C.) 30 Fed. 484.

[c] (Ill. 1887) One who has purchased from the accepted bidder at a master's sale before a duplicate of the certificate of purchase has been filed for record, as required by the decree and by Rev. St. c. 77, § 17, and before the confirmation of the sale, cannot object to the subsequent action of the court in approving or disapproving the sale.—Harwood v. Cox, 26 Ill. App. 374.

[e] (Ind. 1884) A complaint to set aside an alleged fraudulent conveyance, which shows that defendant's grantor was a bona fide purchaser for value at a judicial sale, is demurrable, even though the conveyance to defendant was without consideration.—Moore v. Trimble, 94 Ind. 153.

[f] (Ky. 1815) A. obtained land by virtue of a conveyance made under a decree of court, which decree was afterwards reversed. B., the devisee of A.'s grantor, brought a bill for a reconveyance. It appearing that C., a purchaser from A., had notice of B.'s equity, it was decreed that he should surrender to them the title.—Thompson v. Mason, 7 Ky. (4 Bibb) 195.

[g] (Ky. 1846) The fraudulent conduct of a purchaser at a commissioner's sale will not affect a bona fide purchaser from him, not participating in the fraud or having knowledge of it, and his title will be protected.—Vaughn v. Hann, 45 Ky. (6 B. Mon.) 388.

[h] (Ky. 1862) Where property described by metes and bounds as containing 174 acres, but really containing 214 acres, is sold at judicial sale, the vendee of the purchaser, who, without notice of the error, has purchased and paid for all of the land, including the surplus, will be protected.—Jennings v. Monk's Ex'r, 61 Ky. (4 Metc.) 103.

[i] (Ky. 1867) Where an attorney becomes a purchaser at a judicial sale made for the benefit of his client, and conveys to his minor children the land thus purchased in consideration of love and affection, they are not bona fide purchasers without notice.—Salter v. Dunn, 64 Ky. (1 Bush) 311.

[j] (La. 1835) A first purchaser at a judicial sale cannot repudiate the title he gives his grantee; and his averment in a petition that the proceedings under which the title was originally acquired were null cannot avail third persons, particularly when the ultimate object of such petition was to strengthen the title.—Poultney's Heirs v. Cecil's Ex'r, 8 La. 321.

[k] (Miss. 1877) One who purchases land from the purchaser at a sale under a decree in chancery is unaffected by irregularities in the proceedings, of which he did not have notice.—Davis v. Watson, 54 Miss. 679.

[l] (Miss. 1893) Where a commissioner, appointed by the court, sells personal property on credit, and the purchasers afterwards resell the property, and leave the state without paying their bid, the purchasers' vendees are not subject to an order to either pay the bid of their vendors or surrender the property to the commissioner, because they were not parties to the original suit; but, if the vendees had no title because the bidders had none, the commissioner's remedy was by an action for a recovery of the property.—Weaver v. Nelson, 12 South. 597.

[m] (N. C. 1845) Where a purchaser at a judicial sale conveyed the land to another, who had notice that the purchase money was unpaid, the lien on the land in favor of the original owners still subsisted against the property in the hands of such vendee.—Barnes v. Morris, 39 N. C. 22.

[n] (N. C. 1885) The fact that a judicial sale was fraudulent and liable to be set aside as to the original purchaser will not defeat the title of a subsequent bona fide purchaser from the original purchaser.—Fowler v. Poor, 93 N. C. 466.

[o] (Ohio, 1844) Land fraudulently transferred by a judicial sale descended to the heirs of the alienee, who assigned the same in partition to one of their number, who took possession, paid taxes, and made valuable improvements. Held, in an action to set aside the transfer for fraud, that the heir was entitled to be equitably compensated for his expenditures and improvements out of the proceeds of sale to be ordered.—Bomberger v. Turner, 13 Ohio St. 263, 82 Am. Dec. 438.

[qq] (Tenn. 1880) The vendee of a purchaser of land, sold under a decree directing that a lien be reserved for the payment of the purchase money, cannot defeat the lien by pleading the statute of limitations.—Ex parte Spence, 74 Tenn. (6 Lea) 391.

[r] (Va. 1884) Under a decree of sale of land by parcels, without reservation of right of way, the sale was so advertised, but the auctioneer proclaimed such reservation, and A. and B. bought; B. supposing that he was securing right of way over A.'s parcel. The commissioners' report of the sale did not allude to any reservation save in an addendum by one commissioner acting solely, which spoke of such reservation. This commissioner conveyed to A. and B., without any reservation, and, after A. had conveyed to C., B. filed petition, alleging that the omission of the reservation was a mistake and asking for its correction. Held, that C. was not affected by the addendum, which was no part of the report, and that B. could not complain of any mistake after waiting till the rights of third persons had intervened.—Shirley v. Rice, 79 Va. 442.

[a] (Ala. 1892) Code, § 1885, authorizing one creditor to redeem from another creditor who has himself redeemed from the purchaser at a sale under a decree, authorizes such redemption from a redemptioner only by a judgment creditor, and no other class of creditors has the right to redeem from one who has acquired the property by redemption under the statute.—Owen v. Kilpatrick, 96 Ala. 421, 11 South. 476.

[c] (Ill. 1851) The right of redemption does not extend to all sales made under a decree in chancery.—Farnsworth v. Strasler, 12 Ill. (2 Peck) 482.

[d] (Ill. 1857) The statute which allows redemptions from sales on execution, and under decrees directing the sale of mortgaged lands, does not extend to ordinary chancery sales.—West v. Flemming, 18 Ill. (8 Peck) 248, 68 Am. Dec. 539.

[e] (Ill. 1873) Under the rule that one's right to redeem depends on the decree, and not on recitals in the notice or deed, no right to redeem existed where the master's posted notice recited that the sale would be subject to redemption, but the notice by publication that it would be without redemption, and where, also, his deed misrecited the term of court at which the decree was rendered.—Watt v. McGalliard, 67 Ill. 513.

[f] (Ill. 1874) Where one purchases an entire tract of land at a master's sale, and afterwards assigns an undivided interest therein, there can be no legal redemption of the interest so assigned.—Groves v. Maghee, 72 Ill. 526.

[g] (Ill. 1884) A clause in a decree for the sale of land, declaring that such a sale shall be made absolute, does not bar the statutory right of a judgment creditor to redeem.—Fitch v. Wetherbee, 110 Ill. 475.

[h] (Ill. 1893) Where land is sold by a master, and a subsequent incumbrancer purchases the certificate of redemption after the expiration of 12 months from sale, such purchase does not operate as a redemption from the sale, but merely as an assignment of the right to obtain the master's deed, which right is subject to redemption by judgment creditors during the 3 months following the 12 months.—Boynton v. Pierce, 49 Ill. App. 497, affirmed (1894) 151 Ill. 197, 37 N. E. 1024.

[i] (Ill. 1894) Where a person entitled to redeem from a master's sale procures an assignment of the certificate of purchase to himself, instead of redeeming, such assignment does not constitute a redemption, and does not prevent redemption by other parties.—Boynton v. Pierce, 49 Ill. App. 497, affirmed (1894) 151 Ill. 197, 37 N. E. 1024.

[k] (N. Y. 1889) It is in the inherent power of a court of equity, on ordering the sale of land to satisfy the lien of a collector's bond, to require it to be sold subject to the same right of redemption by the owner or by junior lienholders as if the sale were made under judgment; there being no special statutory provision governing such sales.—Crisfield v. Murdock, 55 Hun, 143, 8 N. Y. Supp. 593, judgment modified (1891) 127 N. Y. 315, 27 N. E. 1046.

[l] (Tenn. 1855) Since Act 1833, c. 47, § 2, the right of redemption exists in all cases when land is sold on a credit by order of the chancery court, unless the credit is given on application of the complainant, and that fact appears in the decree, and the specific land to be sold is also set forth in the decree; and it should appear also in the decree, in explicit terms, that the chancellor in ordering the sale intended that no right of redemption should exist.—Burrow v. Henson, 34 Tenn. (2 Sneed) 658.

[m] (Tenn. 1870) Under sections 2124 and 4489 of the Code, which provides that in certain cases the court may sell land on credit, and without the right of redemption by the debtor, if the court require the payment of a material proportion of the value of the land in cash, the equity of redemption will not be barred.—McBee v. McBee, 48 Tenn. (1 Heisk.) 558.

[n] (Tenn. 1883) The purchaser at a judicial sale of land subject to redemption may claim the value of improvements put by him on the land with the consent of the owner of the equity of redemption, so far as the value of the land has been permanently enhanced by the improvements, subject to account for rents and profits.—Paul v. Williams, 80 Tenn. (12 Lea) 215.

[o] (Tenn. 1891) The claim for alimony in a wife's bill for divorce is not a debt; and a sale of the husband's lands under a decree, directing one-half the proceeds to be paid over to the wife as alimony, is not a sale made to satisfy a debt, and is not subject to redemption, under Code, § 2124, providing that "real estate sold for debt shall be redeemable at any time within two years."—White v. Bates, 89 Tenn. 570, 15 S. W. 651.

[p] (Va. 1892) Where the judgment debtor had 103 days, exclusive of the time the cause was pending in the supreme court, in which he might have redeemed, and his failure to redeem resulted from inability, and not from lack of time, and neither he nor his creditors could have been benefited by further delay, the claim that the commissioners did not wait for the 90 days allowed by the decree for redemption to expire cannot prevail.—Strayer v. Long's Ex'r, 89 Va. 471, 16 S. E. 357.

[q] (W. Va. 1877) It is error to decree a sale of real estate without giving the defendant a day to redeem the property, by paying the amount charged thereon.—Wiley v. Mahood, 10 W. Va. 206.

[a] (U. S. 1875) Where a junior judgment creditor enforces his judgment first, and the prior judgment creditor enforces his judgment later, by bill in equity, to which the junior judgment creditor is not made a party, the latter, in equity, will be allowed to redeem, even after the statutory period of redemption has expired.—Howard v. Milwaukee & St. P. Ry. Co., Fed. Cas. No. 6,761 [7 Biss. 73], affirmed (1879) 101 U. S. 837, 25 L. Ed. 1081.

[b] (Ill. 1876) A party holding a certificate of the purchase of lands sold under a decree may lawfully give the former owner further time in which to redeem, and may properly impose his own terms.—Ross v. Sutherland, 81 Ill. 275.

[c] (Ky. 1888) Defendant bid in land, appraised at $1,200, for $473.80, at a judicial sale, under an agreement with plaintiffs, who were pendente lite purchasers, that they might redeem it by paying the purchase money and interest. Plaintiffs retained possession nearly two years, and improved the land. Held, in an action to enjoin defendant's writ of possession, and to have him declared trustee for plaintiffs' benefit, that the time of redemption was not material, and that plaintiffs might redeem upon bringing the purchase money, interest, and costs, into court.—Fishback v. Green, 87 Ky. 107, 7 S. W. 881.

[e] (Tenn. 1847) Where a parol agreement was made that one person should purchase property at a chancery sale, and permit a redemption, and no time was fixed at which the right to redeem should expire, it was held that such agreement would be held not to limit the time allowed by law, but to enlarge it, and that the right of redemption was favored in law, and it would be decreed in equity, if asserted in a reasonable time.—Haywood v. Ensley, 27 Tenn. (8 Humph.) 460.

[a] (Ill. 1867) A judgment creditor, wishing to redeem lands formerly belonging to his debtor and sold by a master in chancery under a decree, paid the redemption money to the master instead of to the sheriff, in whose hands his execution was, as required by Scates' Comp. pp. 607, 608. Held, that the redemption was invalid, and could not be ratified by the sheriff, as the master did not act as the sheriff's agent in receiving the money.—Littler v. People, 43 Ill. 188.

[b] (Ill. 1876) Where lands have been sold under circumstances such that the court will permit redemption from the sale, the highest equity is the purchaser's right to have the purchase money refunded.—Smith v. Knoebel, 82 Ill. 392.

[d] (Tenn. 1894) Thomp. & St. Code, § 2136, as amended by Acts 1889, c. 83, § 2, providing that, when the purchaser of land subject to redemption resides out of the county where the land lies, the party entitled to redeem may pay the redemption money to the clerk of the circuit court of the county in which the land lies, to be held for the person entitled thereto, applies to sales under a decree of the chancery court.—Maupin v. Blanton, 93 Tenn. 422, 25 S. W. 99.

[e] (Tenn. 1895) Redemption from judicial sale may be made in paper currency issued by authority of the United States, whether legal tender or not, unless the officer whose duty it is to receive the money objects to receiving anything but legal tender.—Rogers v. Rogers (Ch. App.) 35 S. W. 890.

[a] (Ill. 1890) Under Rev. St. c. 77, § 18, which provides for redemption from judicial sales by payment to the purchaser or the officer who made the sale of the purchase price, with interest, a bill to redeem which does not allege that the complainant has paid or tendered the redemption money to any one authorized to receive it is demurrable, even though the sale was made under a decree directing a sale without redemption, since the right to redeem and the mode of doing so are governed solely by the statute.—Hyman v. Bogue, 135 Ill. 9, 26 N. E. 40.

[b] (Tenn. 1850) Where a bill is filed to redeem real estate sold at a chancery sale, on the ground of a tender of the redemption money and refusal, the bill should tender the money; and it should appear to the court, before any decree for redemption is made, that the money has been paid into court subject to the order of the defendant.—Simmons v. Marable, 30 Tenn. (11 Humph.) 436.

[c] (Tenn. 1850) A chancery court has no power to vest the title in a complainant who has filed his bill for the redemption of land from a chancery sale, on the ground of tender and refusal, and order the land to be sold, if the redemption money be not paid at a given time.—Simmons v. Marable, 30 Tenn. (11 Humph.) 436.

[a] (U. S. 1887) Where title to property worth many thousands of dollars was purchased at a judicial sale for $100, the purchaser will be restrained from taking any title by the purchase, where the facts show that the sale was made under adverse circumstances, when creditors jointly interested were not parties, and that the decree was procured, and the sale made, in a court distant from that in which the land was situated.—Hunt v. Fisher (C. C.) 29 Fed. 801.

[b] (Ala. 1845) Commissioners being ordered by the court to make a conveyance, according to a sale by them, are in no default by not looking up the purchaser to tender him a conveyance. It is sufficient if they deliver the deed on demand.—Perkins' Ex'rs v. Winter's Adm'x, 7 Ala. 855.

[c] (Ala. 1845) Where commissioners appointed to conduct a judicial sale refuse to execute a deed according to the order of the orphans' court, that court has power to cause a conveyance to be made.—Perkins' Ex'rs v. Winter's Adm'x, 7 Ala. 855.

[d] (Ala. 1876) Where the purchaser of property at a judicial sale sold and conveyed to a third person, and the original notes for the purchase money, being partly unpaid, were claimed by different persons, the subpurchaser could file a bill in equity against such claimants to compel a conveyance.—Todd v. Flournoy's Heirs, 56 Ala. 99, 28 Am. Rep. 758.

[e] (Ill. 1881) Where, during defendant's lifetime, his land was sold under a decree in the suit, the master's deed may be executed after defendant's death, without reviving the suit against his heirs.—Dugger v. Oglesby, 99 Ill. 405.

[f] (Ky. 1810) One applying for an order for the appointment of commissioners, to convey in pursuance of a decree, should show that he has an interest in the land to be conveyed; and, where he claims as assignee of the party in whose favor the decree was rendered, he should file his assignment, or submit proofs of its existence.—Yocom v. Chapline, 5 Ky. (2 Bibb) 156.

[g] (Ky. 1893) At a sale of land under a judgment to satisfy debts owing S. and P., the debtor became the purchaser, executing three purchase money bonds in payment. During the litigation for the sale, the debt of P., which had precedence over that of S., was assigned to B. The bonds not having been paid, judgment was rendered that the property be sold to satisfy only the last bond, and for the benefit alone of S. Judgment was then rendered that the property be conveyed to H., the purchaser at the last sale, "free of lien." Held, that this was erroneous, and prejudicial to B., who, by reason of his interest in the first two bonds through the assignment to him of the debt of P., had a lien on the property, and his rights should be determined before such conveyance.—McKee v. Hilpp, 24 S. W. 429.

[h] (La. 1878) Where property sold at public sale is bought by three persons in indivision, each being entitled, by agreement among themselves, to a certain undivided portion of the property, any one of the common owners, who has paid his share of the adjudicated price, has a right to demand from the sheriff a deed of sale for his undivided portion; and no one of the coproprietors is entitled to oppose the demand on the ground that the taxes on the property have not been paid.—Montross v. Jamison, 30 La. Ann. 172.

[i] (Md. 1823) If a sale of property is bona fide made under an order of the orphans' court, and the purchaser complies with, or offers to comply with, the terms of sale, or pays the purchase money, the property vests in the purchaser without an actual delivery.—Scott v. Burch's Adm'x, 6 Har. & J. 67.

[j] (Miss. 1845) In judicial sales of personal property, as in others, the property passes by delivery, and a bill of sale is not necessary.—Conger v. Robinson, 12 Miss. (4 Smedes & M.) 210.

[k] (Neb. 1871) A person who purchases land at a judicial sale becomes a party thereto, and he is entitled of right to an order from the court directing a conveyance to be made to him.—Phillips v. Dawley, 1 Neb. 320.

[l] (N. C. 1881) The authority conferred upon a commissioner to make a deed of land sold under decree of court, retaining title until the payment of the purchase money, can only be exercised when the same is actually paid, not when it is secured by note.—In re Macay, 84 N. C. 59.

[m] (N. C. 1885) Unless the principal is insolvent, land sold at a master's sale will not be ordered conveyed to the surety who pays the purchase money.—Dawkins v. Dawkins, 93 N. C. 283.

[n] (Tenn. 1847) The purchaser of real estate at a chancery sale becomes, by virtue of his purchase, quasi a party to the proceedings; and, where the purchase is made on a credit, the court will see that the money is fairly paid to those entitled before the purchaser will be invested with the title.—Deaderick v. Watkins, 27 Tenn. (8 Humph.) 520.

[o] (Tenn. 1850) The purchaser at a master's sale is entitled to a deed, unless there be some special circumstances to authorize the biddings to be opened.—Morton v. Sloan, 30 Tenn. (11 Humph.) 278.

[p] (Va. 1891) Where the commissioner who makes a judicial sale is directed by decree to execute deeds to such of the purchasers as have complied with the terms of sale, and take deeds of trust for the deferred payments, failure of a purchaser to take a deed from the commissioner, and to give back a deed of trust, though an irregularity, will not vitiate his title.—Whitlock v. Johnson, 87 Va. 323, 12 S. E. 614.

[q] (W. Va. 1883) A. bought land at a special commissioner's sale. After confirmation of the sale, but before the execution of the deed, A. gave to the special commissioner a power of attorney, authorizing him to sell the land. The special commissioner signed a contract of sale as such special commissioner and as A.'s attorney in fact. Held, that the contract purported that the subpurchaser was entitled to a deed from the special commissioner with the assent of A., and that he, therefore, could demand a deed with special warranty of title only, not with full covenants of warranty.—Tavenner v. Barrett, 21 W. Va. 656.

conveyance to the purchaser.—Miller v. Sherry, 69 U. S. (2 Wall.) 237, 17 L. Ed. 827.

[c] (Ill. 1836) Where a statute requires that a deed of land sold by order of court should set out the order at large, it is not sufficient to set it out in substance.—Doe v. Hileman, 2 Ill. (1 Scam.) 323.

[d] (Ky. 1821) A deed made in pursuance of a decree in chancery is good, although no other consideration is expressed.—Porter's Heirs v. Robinson, 10 Ky. (3 A. K. Marsh.) 258, 13 Am. Dec. 153.

[e] (Ky. 1832) A deed made by a commissioner ordered by decree of the court to convey the title of nonresident heirs to land is valid, whether he subscribe to it his own name as commissioner, or that of the person whose title he conveys.—Nesbit v. Gregory, 30 Ky. (7 J. J. Marsh.) 270.

[f] (Ky. 1832) A deed made by a commissioner, conveying the title of nonresident heirs to land, is not void, although the decree under which it was made did not allow the heirs time to make the deed in their own proper persons.—Nesbit v. Gregory, 30 Ky. (7 J. J Marsh.) 270.

[g] (Ky. 1862) In a judicial sale and conveyance to the purchaser by a commissioner of a tract of land, described by metes and bounds as containing 174 acres, made in a proceeding to satisfy the debts of the owner, where the tract turns out to contain 214 acres, the commissioner's deed is not void as to the surplus, but passes the legal title to the whole tract.—Jennings v. Monks' Ex'r, 61 Ky. (4 Metc.) 103.

[h] (Ky. 1863) A commissioner's deed to a house and the ground on which it was situated is invalid, where the commissioner advertised and sold the house only.—Jarboe v. Colvin, 67 Ky. (4 Bush) 70.

[i] (Md. 1883) Where a trustee appointed by the court to sell land executes a deed before payment of the purchase money, and before ratification of the sale by the court, such deed is an absolute nullity, and not a mere irregularity, which may be waived.—Johnson v. Hines, 61 Md. 122.

[j] (Miss. 1845) Since a bill of sale is not necessary to convey title to the purchaser of personal property at a judicial sale, the fact that a bill of sale is defective is not cause for rescinding the contract.—Conger v. Robinson, 12 Miss. (4 Smedes & M.) 210.

[k] (Miss. 1845) Where slaves are sold by a commissioner in chancery, and the slaves sold are delivered to the purchaser, it is immaterial by what name the slaves are described in the bill of sale.—Conger v. Robinson, 12 Miss. (4 Smedes & M.) 210.

[m] (N. C. 1890) A deed of land sold by a commissioner on order of court recited the substance of the order of sale, that a sale was made, the order of confirmation, and that the deed was made in consideration of the sum bid for the land. Held, that the failure to state the receipt of the price was not such an irregularity as to authorize a motion, after the final judgment, to set aside the proceedings.—Smith v. Fort, 105 N. C. 446, 10 S. E. 914.

[n] (N. C. 1896) Where a commissioner, appointed by the court for the purpose, sold land, and after a confirmation of the sale executed a deed therefor, reciting the facts, and purporting to convey the property by virtue of such sale, the fact that he added no designation to his signature to indicate that it was not made in his individual capacity will not affect the validity of the deed; it appearing that he had no interest of his own in the property.—Exum v. Baker, 118 N. C. 545, 24 S. E. 351.

[a] (U. S. 1864) When chancery has full jurisdiction as to both persons and property, and decrees that a master of the court sell and convey real estate, the subject of a bill before it, a sale and conveyance in conformity to such decree is as effectual to convey the title as the deed of a sheriff, made pursuant to execution on a judgment at law.—Miller v. Sherry, 69 U. S. (2 Wall.) 237, 17 L. Ed. 827.

[b] (U. S. 1887) Where the deed to purchasers at a judicial sale provides that such sale is "subject to certain certificates of indebtedness," such purchasers, and all persons claiming under them, are estopped by the deed from denying the lien of the certificates for the whole principal and interest due upon them.—Central Nat. Bank v. Hazard (C. C.) 30 Fed. 484.

[c] (Ala. 1833) A deed of conveyance, under a decree in chancery authorizing the sale of land of a person, is evidence of the grantee's title to such person's interest in the land, against all the world.—Ryder v. Innerarity, 4 Stew. & P. 14.

[d] (Iowa, 1889) In a deed executed by a commissioner to convey lands in pursuance of a decree of a court of general original jurisdiction, recitals of facts supporting the validity of the decree and of other matters affecting the validity of the conveyance are sufficient, prima facie, to establish the same; jurisdiction of the subject-matter being presumed.—Henderson v. Robinson, 76 Iowa, 603, 41 N. W. 371.

[e] (Ky. 1830) If a defendant die before a decree, the deed of the commissioner, made under the decree, does not bind the decedent.—Langford's Heirs v. Stuart, 27 Ky. (4 J. J. Marsh.) 576.

[f] (Ky. 1834) The deed of a commissioner, appointed to convey land under a decree, can pass the title only to the land embraced by the decree.—Moss v. Scott, 32 Ky. (2 Dana) 271.

§ 122. Correction of errors in conveyance.

[a] (Ill. 1886) Where a conveyance is made by a master or other person in pursuance of a decree, and it is afterwards discovered that such conveyance and decree both proceed upon a mistake of fact, mutual between the parties thereto, the mistake in the conveyance cannot be corrected without first correcting the decree.—Rose v. Shankland, 115 Ill. 526, 4 N. E. 843.

[b] (Pa. 1896) A mistake in a deed made by a trustee of an orphans' court may be corrected by such court, where intervening rights will not be prejudiced.—In re Nimick (Orph. Ct.) 26 Pittsb. Leg. J. (N. S.) 283.

XVII. PROCEEDS, FEES, AND EXPENSES.

IN GENERAL, § 123.
APPLICATION TO DEBTS, LIENS, AND INCUMBRANCES, § 124.
LIABILITY OF OFFICER AND HIS SURETIES FOR PROCEEDS AND ENFORCEMENT THEREOF, § 125.
EXPENSES, § 126.

Allowance by appellate court of interest and damages out of proceeds for detention of property pending appeal, see ante, § 67 [c].

Attachment of proceeds of sale, see "Attachment," vol. 5, c. 707, § 530.

Surplus proceeds of sale of land subject to dower, see "Dower," vol. 17, cc. 1133–1139, §§ 31–33.

[a] (U. S. 1831) Where a decree directs an officer of the court to sell property "and bring the proceeds of sale into court," and the sale is on a credit of one, two, and three years, and bonds are given for the payment of the installments, these bonds are the immediate proceeds of sale; and the creditor may require that they shall be brought into court.—Wallis v. Thornton, Fed. Cas. No. 17,111 [2 Brock. 422].

[b, c] (D. C. 1889) The fact that a trustee, or officer of a court, executing a decree for a sale of lands, misapplies or fails to account for the proceeds, will not affect the title of the purchaser, unless such misapplication is the result of a preconcerted plan to which he is a party, or chargeable with notice thereof before the purchase.—Marshall v. Wheeler, 7 Mackey, 414.

[d] (Ky. 1895) Land was sold by order of a court, and price paid to the master commissioner. One of the parties entitled to a share of the proceeds failing to call for his share, it was, by order of the court, loaned to the purchaser, who gave the master commissioner his indorsed note as security. Held, that the master commissioner acquired no lien on the land.—Lilly v. Northern Bank, 29 S. W. 736.

[e] (Md. 1831) No trustee appointed to make a sale of property under a decree in the usual form, directing the proceeds to be brought into court, can be allowed, in any manner, to dispose of them, without the express previous sanction of the court.—Tilly v. Tilly, 2 Bland, 436.

[f] (Md. 1848) The court has incontestable power to pass an order directing the trustee appointed to make a judicial sale to bring the proceeds into court, to be disposed of under its direction.—Sewall v. Costigan, 1 Md. Ch. 208.

[g] (Md. 1883) In case of a sale made after the passage of an act regulating the investment of the proceeds of such sales, but under a decree made before the passage, the act controls.—Gill v. Wells, 59 Md. 492.

[h] (N. Y. 1832) A party may apply to the court in the first instance to correct an error by the master in paying over the proceeds of a sale by him.—Lawrence v. Murray, 3 Paige, 400.

[i] (N. Y. 1892) The provisions of Laws 1890, c. 276, authorizing the supreme court to sell certain real estate in the city of New York, conveyed by B. for life and in remainder, that the proceeds of the sale shall be brought into court, and shall retain the legal character of real estate, and be held by the court for the determination of the rights of all persons entitled, fully protect the possible and contingent interests of persons not in being, who shall at any time have or claim an interest in said property.—In re Field, 131 N. Y. 184, 30 N. E. 48, affirming (Sup. 1891) 17 N. Y. Supp. 19.

[j] (Tenn. 1871) A special commissioner for the sale of lands gave bond to the state for the use of ten beneficiaries named therein, and the guardian of two of them made a motion upon notice in the court, appointing the special commissioner, though not in the case then pending for the sale of the lands, for the share of money due to her wards from sales made by commissioner; there having been no decree or order of the court ascertaining the amount of shares due said wards. Held, the motion would not lie, although, had the motion been for all the beneficiaries in the bond, it would have been a proper remedy.—Somerville v. Somerville, 52 Tenn. (5 Heisk.) 160.

[k] (Tenn. 1876) An order of the court, directing that the proceeds of property sold under a decree in one cause be held subject to the orders of the court in another cause, is void.—Mayo v. Harding, 3 Tenn. Ch. 237.

Right of purchaser to have liens and incumbrances discharged out of purchase money, see ante, § 93.

[a] (U. S. 1890) As the state has a paramount lien for taxes on realty, when a judicial sale was made subject thereto, such taxes would not be ordered paid out of the proceeds.—George v. St. Louis Cable & W. Ry. Co. (C. C.) 44 Fed. 117.

[b] (Ala. 1884) Where lands are sold under decree in chancery, subject to all liens held by persons not parties to the suit, a lien for municipal taxes assessed and unpaid is not entitled to be paid out of the proceeds of sale.—State v. Vincent, 78 Ala. 233.

[bb] (Ark. 1859) Where the terms of the sale of land are that the proceeds "will, after payment of costs, be applied to pay" certain specified creditors, the master will not be authorized to pay them over till further order of court.—Penn's Adm'r v. Tolleson, 20 Ark. 652.

[c] (Ind. 1850) Where neither party, before a trial in which the question is involved, has made application of the proceeds of a judicial sale, the court will direct them to be applied pro rata to the debts for which the sales were made.—Russell v. Metzgar, 2 Ind. (2 Cart.) 345.

[cc] (Ky. 1886) A decree directing the sale of land to pay—First, the debt of A.; second, the debt of B.; third, the debt of C.; and, fourth, the costs of the case,—does not settle finally the priority of liens, particularly when no issue is made as to priority; and when the sale is made the court may, in the distribution of the proceeds, disregard the judgment, in so far as it attempts to determine the question of priority.—Bank of Kentucky v. Allen, 8 Ky. Law Rep. 36.

[d] (La. 1893) When the property of a tutrix is sold at judicial sale, and adjudicated to the heir holding the ranking mortgage, the proceeds must be attributed thereto, and any other imputation, with the consent of the adjudicatee, will not bind a third possessor of another portion of the property mortgaged, who is proceeded against in an hypothecary action.—Smith v. Lewis, 45 La. Ann. 1457, 14 South. 221.

proceeds to pay a creditor of the estate to which the proceeds belong, cannot come in claiming as equitable assignee of so much, and to have it set off against the share of him to whom it was paid.—Mackubin v. Brown, 1 Bland, 410.

[f] (Md. 1831) A purchaser at a sale made under a decree of court is not bound to see the application of the purchase money.—Coombs v. Jordan, 3 Bland, 284, 22 Am. Dec. 236.

[g] (Md. 1848) The court is not disposed to look with favor upon the appropriations by its trustees of the proceeds of sales, without its previous authority; and such conduct will be viewed with especial jealousy where married women and children are concerned, and the property, or fund raised by the sale, is subject to marriage settlements designed for the support of families.—Sewall v. Costigan, 1 Md. Ch. 208.

[h] (Md. 1853) The fact that a decree appointing a trustee to sell property contained no direction that he should bring the proceeds of the sale into court cannot be construed as granting authority to him to disburse the fund.—Dent v. Maddox, 4 Md. 522.

[j] (Md. 1878) By a decree for the sale of real estate, the property was divided into two parts, and the incumbrances on each, in the order of their priority, distinctly designated. The division was made by providing that the net proceeds of sale of that portion of the said real estate which is not covered by the said decrees under which a party had become the purchaser should be applied to the payment of certain designated claims, and the proceeds of the remaining portion which was so covered should be applied to pay certain other claims. The decree in conclusion provided that in order to ascertain the relative values respectively of the two portions "the said trustees should first offer the said portions of the said real estate separately, and then, if they should deem the same advisable, they should offer the whole together for an advanced price, and report to the court the same respective amounts as offered for the same two portions of the said real estate, as well as the whole amount for which the whole may be sold, in order to enable the court to ascertain what proportions of the proceeds of sale shall be considered as arising from each portion of said real estate respectively." The property was offered for sale as directed by the decree, first in separate portions, and then as a whole. The amounts bid not being deemed adequate, the property was withdrawn, and was again offered for sale in the same manner as before, and sold at the price then offered for the whole. Held, that the auditor, in distributing the net proceeds of sale, might average the bids for the separate portions made at the sale, and when the property was previously offered, and apportion the proceeds accordingly, in the manner required by the decree. The same reason which would make the bona fide bids for the several parts a standard of value when the sale of the whole was actually made would lead the court to adopt, as a means of valuation, the average of bids bona fide made on several occasions, by analogy to the practice adopted in chancery of averaging the opinions of witnesses to ascertain the value of property or improvements.—Cornell v. McCann, 48 Md. 592.

[k] (Md. 1889) Act 1874, c. 483, § 63, which provides that, where a sale of property has been made by any ministerial officer under judicial process, all sums in arrear for taxes from the party whose property is sold shall first be paid, does not deprive one whose property has been sold by trustees appointed by the court of the right to resist, on the distribution, the payment of a tax levied more than four years before the sale; section 91 of the said act providing that taxes levied and not collected for four years shall be barred.—Perkins v. Gaither, 70 Md. 134, 16 Atl. 531.

[n] (N. Y. 1887) The rule that, upon a sale of the right, title, and interest of the debtor, under execution, the debtor is entitled to have the proceeds applied in satisfaction of the judgment, even though the purchaser's title fails, does not apply where the sale is under a special decree ordering a sale of the land itself, free and clear of all claim of the debtor, or those claiming under him.—Wallace v. Berdell, 105 N. Y. 7, 11 N. E. 274, affirming order (1886) 41 Hun, 444.

Powers, duties, and liabilities of officer in general, see ante, § 20.

[a] (N. C. 1878) The only remedy against a commissioner appointed to make a judicial sale is in an action by the parties entitled to the money collected by him.—Smith v. Moore, 79 N. C. 82.

[b] (S. C. 1824) Under a rule against a master to show cause why he had not paid over the proceeds of certain sales, the court refused to hear evidence to contradict the affidavit of the master, denying that he had sold or been ordered to sell.—Ex parte Perry, 1 Harp. Eq. 50.

[c] (Tenn. 1860) A petition against a commissioner, appointed by court to sell property, and his sureties, to enforce their liability for property or money which the commissioner has received and failed to account for, may be treated as a motion for judgment against them to enforce such liability; that being the remedy provided by statute in such a case.—Smith v. Woods, 41 Tenn. (1 Cold.) 535.

[d] (Tenn. 1860) Where a special commissioner appointed by court to sell property fails to pay over money or property received while acting in that capacity, his personal representative will, on motion after his death, be liable with the sureties to a judgment therefor.—Smith v. Woods, 41 Tenn. (1 Cold.) 535.

[e] (Tenn. 1860) A special commissioner appointed by the court to sell property is liable, on motion, to a judgment against him and his sureties, in case of failure to pay over any money or property received by him in that capacity.—Smith v. Woods, 41 Tenn. (1 Cold.) 535.

[a] (U. S. 1880) On opening the biddings and setting aside a sale on the offering of an advanced bid, the costs and expenses are to be paid, and the first purchaser indemnified by the advance bidder; but what particular items are to be comprised in such costs and charges will depend upon the circumstances of each case.—Blackburn v. Selma R. Co. (C. C.) 3 Fed. 689.

[b] (La. 1896) Under Act 1877, No. 49, providing that the cost of the advertisement for judicial sales shall not exceed 70 cents per square for first insertions and 25 cents for each subsequent insertion, the charge for such insertions is 70 cents for the first insertion and 25 cents for subsequent insertions, whether made consecutively or not.—Succession of Von Hoven, 48 La. Ann. 620, 19 South. 766.

§ 1. Nature and functions in general.

[a] A jury is a body of men sworn to declare the facts of a case as they are proven from the evidence placed before them.
—(Ind. 1882) Hunnel v. State, 86 Ind. 431;
(Wash. 1895) State v. Voorhies, 12 Wash. 53, 40 Pac. 620.

[b] (Nev. 1876) The terms "jury" and "trial by jury," as used in the constitution, mean twelve competent men, disinterested and impartial, not of kin, nor personal dependents of either of the parties, having their homes within the jurisdictional limits of the court, drawn and selected by officers free from all bias in favor of or against either party, duly impaneled and sworn to render a true verdict according to law and the evidence.—State v. McClear, 11 Nev. 39.

§ 2. Constitution in general.

[a] (Colo. 1892) Where proceedings to condemn land for town waterworks are tried at a regular term of court, instead of in vacation, the trial must be before the jury drawn and selected in the ordinary way.—Warner v. Town of Gunnison, 2 Colo. App. 430, 31 Pac. 238.

Right of appeal from verdict by jury of less than twelve, see "Appeal and Error," vol. 2, c. 1348, § 750 [d].

[a] (Ill. 1873) The term "jury" means a panel of 12 men, unless a different number is designated in the statute; as where a city charter provides that the assessment for certain public improvements shall be made by a jury.—Bibel v. People, 67 Ill. 172.

[b] (Miss. 1838) A jury must consist of 12 men; no other number is known to the law.—Dixon v. Richards, 3 Miss. (2 How.) 771.

[d] (N. J. 1819) A trial cannot be had before a jury of six men only, where the amount pending exceeds $50.—Ashcroft v. Clark, 5 N. J. Law (2 Southard) 577.

[e] (Tenn. 1827) While 20 jurors are to be summoned in proceedings before justices of the peace for forcible entries and detainers, 12 or more will be sufficient to try the issue.—Clements v. Clinton, 8 Tenn. (Mart. & Y.) 198.

[f] (Va. 1795) The jury upon an inquest of office respecting property escheated to the commonwealth previous to the act of 1794 might have been composed of 12 men, or a greater or less number.—Bennet v. Commonwealth, 2 Wash. 154.

[a] (Ala. 1889) Const. 1875, art. 1, §§ 7, 12, which provide that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate," and that in all prosecutions by indictment the accused shall have "a speedy public trial, by an impartial jury" of the county or district in which the offense was committed, contemplates a common-law jury of twelve men, and Acts 1888–89, p. 501, prescribing that in Barbour county a jury for the trial of a misdemeanor on an indictment shall consist of eight men, is unconstitutional.—Collins v. State, 88 Ala. 212, 7 South. 260.

[b] (Fla. 1877) Under a constitutional provision that the number of jurors for the "trial of causes" may be fixed by law, the legislature may provide for a trial of criminal cases by a jury of six, without violating "the right of trial by jury" within the meaning of the bill of rights.—Gibson v. State, 16 Fla. 291.

[c] (Mich. 1866) An amendment to the city charter of Detroit, which reduced the number of jurors to be summoned for assessing damages for land taken for streets to twelve, and the number to be sworn as jurors to six, was held to be unconstitutional.—Campau v. City of Detroit, 14 Mich. 276.

[d] (N. Y.) The constitution leaves the trial of all cases of misdemeanor to be provided for by the legislature, by a jury of twelve, six, or any other number, or without a jury.—(1855) People v. Fisher, 20 Barb. 652, 11 How. Prac. 554. 2 Parker, Cr. R. 402. CONTRA, see (1856) Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y. (3 Kern.) 378.

[f] (Ohio, 1854) The term "jury," as used in article 1, § 19, of the constitution, providing that compensation for the taking of land for public roads shall be assessed by a jury, means a body of 12 men in a court of record.—Lamb v. Lane, 4 Ohio St. 167.

[g] (Pa. 1888) The legislature may provide trial by jury different from that contemplated by the constitution at its adoption for offenses not then provided for, and the trial of such offenses may be by such number of jurors as the legislature may determine; and where parties, having committed the offenses provided for by this kind of trial, voluntarily place themselves within the requirements of the law, and accept the trial, such trial for such offenses has been held good.—Commonwealth v. Byers (Quart. Sess.) 5 Lanc. Law Rev. 270.

[h] (S. C. 1867) Under Const. 1865, art. 9, § 7, providing that the general assembly shall have power to determine the number of persons who shall constitute a jury in the inferior and district courts, it is competent for the legislature to limit the number of jurors in the district court to eight.—State v. Starling, 15 Rich. Law, 120.

[i] (Wis. 1853) Rev. St. c. 86, § 16, is unconstitutional because it deprives the suitor of the right to a trial by a jury of 12 men, secured to him by article 1, § 5, of the constitution.—Norval v. Rice, 2 Wis. 22.

[j] (Wis. 1854) The word "jury," as used in the constitution of this state, means a jury of 12 men.—May v. Milwaukee & M. R. Co., 3 Wis. 219.

[a] (Ga. 1880) The law of 1878, as to impaneling of twelve jurors, does not apply to the city court of Atlanta: its jurisdiction being coextensive with the limits of the county. The law allowing a jury of five continues in force as not inconsistent with the new constitution.—Downing v. State, 66 Ga. 110.

[b] (N. Y. 1855) Act 1813, § 95, relating to the district courts of New York City (2 Rev. Laws 1813, p. 374), prescribes that twelve jurors shall be summoned, and six impaneled, to try a cause, and this part of the act never having been repealed or altered, there was no error in summoning twelve, and drawing six, to try a cause in such court.—City of New York v. Mason, 1 Abb. Prac. 344.

[d] (Tex. 1877) Const. 1876, art. 5, § 13, allowing a verdict in civil cases to be rendered on the concurrence of nine members of the jury, was in force until the passage of Act Aug. 1, 1876, restoring the old rule, and a verdict rendered in a civil suit one month before the passage of the latter act, on the concurrence of ten jurors, was valid.—Bowen v. Davis, 48 Tex. 101.

Adoption of practice in state courts in general, see "Courts," vol. 13, cc. 2703–2706, §§ 929, 930.

[a] (U. S. 1795) The provision of the judiciary act adopting state laws respecting juries applies to the mode of selection and to qualifications, but not to the number of jurors to be summoned, which is to be determined, under the common law, by a consideration of all the circumstances.—United States v. Insurgents, Fed. Cas. No. 15,443.

[b] (U. S. 1873) Neither the act of 1789 (1 Stat. 73) nor the act of 1840, in respect to the selection of jurors for federal courts, fix the number of jurors to be selected, but leave the matter in the discretion of the court, to be determined by rule, if the court deems it best to make a rule on the subject.—United States v. Gardner, Fed. Cas. No. 15,187.

[b] (Ill. 1883) Under Const. art. 2, § 13, providing that compensation for property taken for public use shall be ascertained by "a jury," and article 2, § 5, providing that the trial of civil cases before justices of the peace by a jury of less than twelve men may be authorized by law, an assessment of damages by a justice and six men, as authorized by the legislature, is constitutional.—McManus v. McDonough, 107 Ill. 95.

[c] (Iowa, 1857) The state law may make offenses of inferior grades originally cognizable by inferior courts, and the state constitution may provide that the general assembly may authorize trial by a jury of a less number than 12 men, in such inferior courts.—State v. Bryan, 4 Iowa (4 Clarke) 349.

[d] (La. 1860) A jury formed before the recorder's court, under a special statute, does not fall under the constitutional clause in respect to an impartial trial by a jury of the vicinage, and any number of jurors that the legislature may deem proper to fix may compose the jury.—State v. Gutierrez, 15 La. Ann. 190.

[e] (Mich. 1885) Under Const. art. 6, § 28, declaring that the number of jurors shall be 12, except in courts not of record, a conviction in the recorder's court of Kalamazoo, which is a court of record (Local Acts 1883, p. 677), by a jury of 6 men, will be quashed.—People v. Luby, 56 Mich. 551, 23 N. W. 218.

[f] (N. Y. 1869) The provision of the constitution securing the trial by jury "in all cases in which it has heretofore been used" does not prevent the legislature from authorizing trials to be had otherwise than by a common-law jury of 12, in civil courts of local jurisdiction, in the case of actions in which the amount claimed does not exceed the limit of such jurisdiction, as it was established before the constitution took effect.—People v. Lane, 6 Abb. Prac. (N. S.) 105.

[g] (N. Y. 1872) The word "jury," as used in the constitution, does not mean a jury of 12 men exclusively. A jury of 6 men, in a justice's court, is as much a jury, in the eye of the law, as a jury of 12 men in a court of record; and is the jury which had been "heretofore used" in that tribunal at the adoption of the constitution. — Knight v. Campbell, 62 Barb. 16.

[h] (N. Y. 1878) The constitution of this state, giving trial by jury "in all cases in which it has been heretofore used," means a common-law jury of 12 men; and does not apply to the trivial offenses triable before a court of special sessions.—People v. Justices of Court of Special Sessions, 74 N. Y. 406.

Mode of selecting as infringing right to jury of the vicinage, see post, § 229.

[a] (U. S. 1883) Under Rev. St. § 802, providing that jurors shall be returned from such parts of the district from time to time as the court shall direct, so as to be most favorable to an impartial trial, or so as not to incur unnecessary expense, or unduly burden the citizens of any part of the district with such service, the circuit court for the Eastern district of Virginia properly directed the clerk to draw 12 names from the Alexandria box, 12 names from the Norfolk box, and only 6 from the Richmond box; this being no discrimination against Richmond.—United States v. Munford (C. C.) 16 Fed. 164.

[b] (U. S. 1889) Under Rev. St. § 802, permitting jurors to be returned on an order of court from parts of a district, a plea to an indictment that the jurors were drawn from an alleged division of the district, and not from the entire territory within the district, is bad, as there is no injury or prejudice averred.—United States v. Chaires (C. C.) 40 Fed. 820.

[c] (U. S. 1889) A plea is also bad which set forth that defendants are and were citizens of L. county, in said district; that the offense charged was committed, if at all, in said L. county; and that none of the names placed in the jury box from which the grand jury was drawn were citizens of said L. county.—United States v. Chaires (C. C.) 40 Fed. 820.

[d] (Colo. 1873) Jurors to sit in a case to be tried in a judicial district covering several counties need not be drawn from the county in which the offense is alleged to have been committed.—Beery v. United States, 2 Colo. 186.

[e] (Colo. 1873) Where an officer is directed to summon petit jurors from the body of the district, the jurors must be drawn from the judicial district to which the court belongs.—Beery v. United States, 2 Colo. 186.

[f] (Iowa, 1874) Where the list of jurors had been destroyed by fire, the court caused a precept to be issued to the sheriff directing him to summon a new panel; and 24 jurors were accordingly selected from 10 of the 20 townships of the county. Held a sufficient compliance with section 2738 of the Revision, requiring their selection from the body of the county.—State v. Arthur, 39 Iowa, 631.

[g] (Kan. 1895) A challenge to the array of jurors, on the ground that the proper officer of one township in the county failed to return a list of names of persons suitable to act as jurors, and that no jurors from such township were included in the panel, the jurors constituting the panel having been legally returned, drawn, and summoned, was properly overruled.—State v. Frazier, 54 Kan. 719, 39 Pac. 819.

[h] (Mass. 1863) It is not necessary, in summoning a sheriff's jury, to take any jurors from the town nearest the land in controversy; but it is enough if they are all taken from towns within the county, and adjoining the town in which the land lies.—Shattuck v. Stoneham Branch R. Co., 88 Mass. (6 Allen) 115.

[i] (Mass. 1878) Errors in preparing the list of jurors in one city of a county afford no ground for challenge to the array.—Commonwealth v. Walsh, 124 Mass. 32.

[j] (Mich. 1869) The requirement of Const. art. 18, § 2, that the jury shall be of the "vicinage," does not require the jurors in condemnation proceedings to be drawn from the city where the land lies; it being sufficient if they come from the county.—Convers v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co., 18 Mich. 459.

[k] (Mich. 1878) It is not ground of challenge to the array that no jury list for the year was returned from one town.—Thomas v. People, 89 Mich. 309.

[l] (Mich. 1885) The jury in condemnation proceedings brought by a municipality should be chosen from the body of the county, and not merely from the township or village interested in the condemnation.—Houghton Common Council v. Huron Copper Min. Co., 57 Mich. 547, 24 N. W. 820.

[m] (Mich. 1886) Under How. Ann. St. §§ 7554, 7555, 7567, 7575, it is not ground for a challenge to the array in a criminal case that from one township no list of jurors was returned.—People v. Coffman, 59 Mich. 1, 26 N. W. 207.

[n] (Mich. 1887) The defendant in a prosecution for murder challenged the array because two townships of the county (including the vicinage of the crime) were not represented on the panel. The order in this case directed a jury to be drawn from the body of the county, as authorized by How. Ann. St. § 7578. It was not shown that the officers who drew the jury had arbitrarily left out the townships from which jurors were not drawn, nor that the lists of such townships had not already been exhausted. Held, that the challenge was properly overruled.—People v. Coughlin, 67 Mich. 466, 35 N. W. 72.

[o] (Mo. 1887) Rev. St. 1879, § 2777, provides that every juror shall be a resident of the county. Section 2778, provides that no exception to a juror on the ground of nonresidence shall be allowed after the jury is sworn. Held, that a challenge by the state, in a murder trial in the St. Louis criminal court, on the ground that the juror was not a resident of St. Louis, was properly sustained.—State v. Brooks, 92 Mo. 542, 5 S. W. 257, 330.

[p] (Neb. 1880) The failure of the county commissioners to select jurors from the several precincts in the county in proportion to the number of persons therein competent to serve on grand and petit juries, as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 658, is good cause for challenge to the array.—Clark v. Saline County Com'rs, 9 Neb. 516, 4 N. W. 246.

[q] (Neb. 1882) Where unorganized territory is attached to a county for "judicial purposes," under Comp. St. p. 193, § 146, it is within the criminal jurisdiction of the district court sitting in such county (section 147); and the county commissioners, in selecting juries, may draw from such unorganized territory according to its proportion.—In re Crawford, 12 Neb. 379, 11 N. W. 494; State v. Page, 12 Neb. 386, 11 N. W. 495.

[r] (N. Y. 1866) Laws 1864, p. 248, incorporating the city of Elmira from parts of the towns of Elmira and Southport, provides, in section 5, that the city shall be regarded as a town, under the provisions of the Revised Statutes, in regard to the making, return, and filing of jury lists. No provision is made by such charter for return of any jury list from the city except in accordance with the Revised Statutes. 2 Rev. St. p. 333, § 17, provides that persons returned on a jury list shall be competent for three years and until other lists are returned. Held that, in a criminal trial in April, 1866, jurors were properly drawn from the list returned for the town of Elmira in July, 1863.—Gardiner v. People, 6 Parker, Cr. R. 155.

[s] (N. Y. 1888) Laws 1822, c. 137, § 3, which is unrepealed, divides Seneca county into two jury districts, and enacts that the clerk of the county shall keep the names of the jurors in such districts separate, and the jurors shall be drawn for each court from the district in which the court is to be held; and Code Civ. Proc. § 3347, declares that the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1027, 1062, regarding the drawing of jurors, do not affect "any special provisions of law remaining unrepealed after May, 1877, whereby * * * a county is divided into two or more jury districts." Held, that a challenge to the jury as not drawn from the body of the county, as provided by Code Cr. Proc. § 358, enacting that a trial jury shall be formed "as provided by the Code of Civ. Proc.," is properly refused.—People v. Johnson, 110 N. Y. 134, 17 N. E. 684.

[t] (Pa. 1796) A court cannot direct the sheriff to take a jury from any particular part of the county.—Hartshorne's Lessee v. Patton, 2 Dall. 252, 1 L. Ed. 369.

[u] (Tenn. 1892) The fact that Code, § 4805, gives the court power to order a special jury, and designate the persons to be summoned, does not authorize it to exclude a certain class as the residents of a certain city.—City of Jackson v. Pool, 91 Tenn. (7 Pickle) 448, 19 S. W. 324.

[v] (Va. 1846) Act Feb. 24, 1846, requiring the venire in cases of felony to summon jurors residing remote from the place of the commission of the offense, instead of from the neighborhood, was applicable to all cases tried after the passage of the act, even though a venire had been issued under the former law.—Perry v. Commonwealth, 3 Grat. 632.

Competency of jurors, see post, § 404.
Right to challenge for cause, see post, § 553.
Waiver of right, see post, § 191.
As class legislation, see "Constitutional Law," vol. 10, c. 2091, § 673 [l].

[a] (U. S. 1895) In a civil action in the court for the Indian Territory, the court is bound, on request of either party, to have drawn a list of 18 competent jurors, from which the jury is to be selected by each party striking three names, in accordance with Mansf. Dig. Ark. §§ 4013–4015, which are expressly put in force in the territory by act of congress (26 Stat. 81); and a refusal to grant such a request on the ground that, according to the rule established by the court since its organization, exceptions should be taken to the 12 men called into the box, is reversible error.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Shane, 157 U. S. 348, 15 Sup. Ct. 641, 39 L. Ed. 727.

[b] (U. S. 1892) Mansf. Dig. Ark. § 4013, provides that if either party to an action shall desire a panel, the court shall cause the names of 24 competent jurors to be placed in the box, from which 18 shall be drawn and entered on a list, and section 4014 provides that each party shall be furnished with a copy of this list, from which each may strike the names of 3 jurors, and the 12 remaining shall constitute the jury. These acts were by Act Cong. May 2, 1890, § 31, extended over the Indian Territory. Held, that refusal to allow a defendant in a civil case in the Indian Territory to have the jury drawn and impaneled in the mode described therein was error.—Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Washington, 49 Fed. 347, 1 C. C. A. 286, 4 U. S. App. 121; Same v. Campbell, 49 Fed. 354, 1 C. C. A. 293, 4 U. S. App. 133; Same v. Martin, 49 Fed. 359, 1 C. C. A. 298, 4 U. S. App. 198.

[c] (Mo. 1896) A special jury, under the common law, is one nominated and selected by the proper officer, by the exercise of judgment and discretion, and not drawn by lot or chance, as in case of ordinary juries.—State ex rel. St. Louis, K. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Withrow, 133 Mo. 500, 36 S. W. 43.

[d] (Mo. 1896) Laws 1891, p. 173, provides that panels of jurors shall be drawn from the jury box on requisition by the court, and section 7 provides that the name of every juror drawn for a special venire shall be returned to the box or wheel, unless the judge shall order to the contrary. Held, that the act was intended to govern the selection of special juries as well as juries in general, and hence does not take away by implication the right to a special jury given by Rev. St. 1879, § 2802, and Rev. St. 1889, § 6089.—State ex rel. Kansas City & S. Ry. Co. v. Slover, 134 Mo. 607, 36 S. W. 50.

[e] (Ohio, 1894) Under Rev. St. § 79, providing that when a statute is repealed or amended, and such repeal or amendment relates to the remedy, the repeal or amendment shall not affect pending cases unless so expressed, Act May 18, 1894, repealing Rev. St. §§ 5185–5188, providing for struck juries, did not affect cases pending at its passage; struck juries being part of the remedy, and the repealing act making no reference to pending cases.—McDonald v. Lane, 32 Wkly. Law Bul. 150, 5 Ohio S. & C. P. Dec. 37.

[f] (Va. 1890) Under Code, § 3168, providing that a court "may allow a special jury," the allowance of a special jury is not a matter of right, but rests in the sound discretion of the court.—Atlantic & D. R. Co. v. Peake, 87 Va. 130, 12 S. E. 348.

§ 10. —— Nature of actions in which allowed.

[a] (La. 1812) A special jury of merchants will not be allowed to try the question whether a conveyance was made in fraud of creditors.—Emerson v. McCullough's Syndics, 2 Mart. (O. S.) 297.

[b] (La. 1876) A special jury was proper in an action involving extensive accounts of a public officer; both parties having assented.—Kellogg v. Clinton, 28 La. Ann. 674.

[c] (N. Y. 1805) The fact that the government of the United States is interested in a cause does not make it of such importance as to warrant the granting of a struck jury.—Hartshorn v. Gelston, 3 Caines, 84.

[d] (N. Y. 1805) Where a town contributes to the expense of a suit, it is a good ground for moving for a struck jury to be taken from another county.—Stryker v. Turnbull, 8 Caines, 103.

[e] (N. Y. 1806) In an action by a public officer for a libel in relation to an official trust, a struck jury will be allowed.—Livingston v. Cheetham, 1 Johns. 61.

[f] (N. Y. 1806) On the affidavit of counsel in a cause stating that, in his opinion, it was a cause of importance, and that a large sum of money was depending, a struck jury was allowed.—Livingston v. Smith, 1 Johns. 141.

[g] (N. Y. 1806) A special jury was granted in an action against a person for opening a highway near a trunpike gate, to avoid it.—New Windsor Turnpike Co. v. Ellison, 1 Johns. 141.

[h] (N. Y. 1806) A special jury was not granted on an affidavit stating that the action was on a policy of insurance and involved questions of intricacy and importance, and that another cause on the same policy had been tried and the jury discharged because they were unable to agree on a verdict.—Anonymous, 1 Johns. 314.

[i] (N. Y. 1807) A struck jury was refused in an action on a policy, where the plaintiff claimed a total loss to the amount of $27,500.—Wright v. Columbian Ins. Co., 2 Johns. 211.

[j] (N. Y. 1807) A struck jury was denied in an action for libel by a person who was recorder of Albany and member of the assembly; it not appearing that the libel was concerning his official character.—Van Vechten v. Hopkins, 2 Johns. 373.

[k] (N. Y. 1809) Where the subject-matter of a libel related to a remote transaction, and though concerning the conduct of a foreign minister resident here, but who had long been superseded, a struck jury was not allowed.—Genet v. Mitchell, 4 Johns. 186.

[l] (N. Y. 1809) Where a representative in congress is libeled in respect to his official conduct, a struck jury may be awarded.—Thomas v. Rumsey, 4 Johns. 482.

[m] (N. Y. 1809) A struck jury will not be granted in an action for a libel against a person who is a public officer, unless the libel relates to his official misconduct.—Thomas v. Croswell, 4 Johns. 491.

[n] (N. Y. 1829) The fact that the controversy excites much speculation and interest in the county where it is tried does not render the case so important as to require a struck jury.—Poucher v. Livingston, 2 Wend. 296.

[o] (N. Y. 1829) The fact that the question brought before a jury is the genuineness of the signature to a note does not render the case so complicated as to require a struck jury.—Poucher v. Livingston, 2 Wend. 296.

[p] (N. Y. 1853) In an action under the statute by the representatives of a deceased person killed by the alleged negligence of defendant, a struck jury will not be granted on account of the alleged disposition of ordinary jurors to give excessive damages.—Murphy v. Kipp, 8 N. Y. Super. Ct. (1 Duer) 659.

[q] (N. Y. 1859) Under 2 Rev. St. p. 514, providing that the court shall order a special jury when it shall appear that a fair and impartial trial will be more likely to be obtained by having a struck jury, or that the importance or intricacy of the cause requires such a jury, a motion for such a jury is properly denied in New York City, where the court is of the opinion that a fair and impartial trial will be less likely to be obtained by such a jury.—Nesmith v. Atlantic Ins. Co., 8 Abb. Prac. 423.

[r] (N. Y. 1864) The court will not order a struck jury in an action on a policy of marine insurance, where the allegation that the grounds of defense are intricate and difficult is only substantiated by showing that the defense turns on the unseaworthiness of the vessel at the time she sailed, and on the fact that the master was chargeable with a want of competency and seamanship in not making a near port of distress at the time when the water was alleged to have been gaining upon and disabling his vessel; which he might and ought to have done in season to prevent her loss.—Walsh v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 25 N. Y. Super. Ct. (2 Rob.) 646, 17 Abb. Prac. 356.

[t] (N. Y. 1892) Plaintiff in ejectment claimed as heir at law, and defendant claimed under a will of plaintiff's ancestor, which plaintiff attacked as having been obtained by fraud and undue influence. There had been a similar action between other parties, in which the jury failed to agree. The case was of no public importance, had excited no public interest, there was no fear of any inability to obtain an impartial jury, and no claim of unfairness on the former trial was made. Held, that plaintiff's motion for a special jury was improperly granted.—Ives v. Ranger, 65 Hun, 622, 20 N. Y. Supp. 32.

[u] (N. Y. 1893) Where, in an action for libel, the affidavits used on a motion for a struck jury state only that the defenses are a general denial, justification, and facts in mitigation of damages, and that the action involves the official misconduct of public officers, one of whom affiants believe is the brother of the commissioner of juries, it is not sufficient showing to bring the case within the provisions of Code, § 1063, which provides that the court may order a struck jury where it appears a fair or impartial trial cannot be had without, or that the importance or intricacy of the case requires, one.—Adams v. Morgan, 67 Hun, 649, 21 N. Y. Supp. 1057.

[a] (N. J. 1838) A rule for a struck jury entered on motion of the state after the venue had been changed to another county was discharged on motion of the prosecutor.—Anonymous, 16 N. J. Law (1 Har.) 398.

[b] (Ohio, 1839) A struck jury may be demanded in a criminal, as well as a civil, case.—Sutton v. State, 9 Ohio (9 Ham.) 133.

[d] (Ohio, 1859) Under the statute the prisoner or the state may have a struck jury as of right, except in cases where either party is entitled to more than two peremptory challenges.—Whitehead v. State, 10 Ohio St. 449.

[e] (Ohio, 1889) Under Rev. St. § 5184, providing that any party to an action may demand a struck jury for the trial of any issue of fact, an accused, in a prosecution in a police court, is not entitled to a struck jury, since such section applies only to procedures in the courts of common pleas, district and supreme courts.—State v. Ermston, 2 O. C. D. 431.

[f] (Ohio, 1891) Under Rev. St. § 7276, providing that in all cases other than capital cases the jury shall be summoned and impaneled according to the provisions of the law relating to the summoning and impaneling of jurors in other cases, the state, in a prosecution under the "compulsory school attendance" law, is entitled to a struck jury.—Quigley v. State, 5 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 638.

[h] (Pa. 1886) Act April 14, 1834, § 140, provides that 12 names shall be drawn from the box, and that if any jurors so drawn do not appear, or shall be challenged or set aside, further names shall be drawn till 12 shall appear and be approved, who, being sworn as the law directs, shall be the trial jury. Section 141 directs that such jury shall be sworn to try the issue between the "plaintiff" and "defendant," and a true verdict to give, unless dismissed by the court, or the cause be withdrawn by the parties. Act March 29, 1860, § 1, gives each party to a civil suit four peremptory challenges. Cr. Proc. Act March 31, 1860 (Purd. Dig. p. 384), § 36, grants to the defendant in cases of treason, murder, rape, and other crimes named, the right to challenge 20 jurors peremptorily, and in other criminal trials limits that right to four challenges. Act June 23, 1885, amending Act 1834, § 140, provides that the names of 20 jurors shall be drawn from the box and listed by the clerk, and that "plaintiff" and "defendant" shall alternately strike 1 name therefrom till each has stricken 4 names, and that the remaining 12 jurors, being sworn "as the law directs," shall be the jury. Held, that Act 1885 was only applicable to civil actions.—In re Calling Jurors, 1 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 644.

[i] (W. Va. 1873) Code, c. 116, § 21 (re-enacted by Laws 1870, c. 20), providing that any court may allow a special jury in any case, does not apply in cases of felony.—State v. Miller, 6 W. Va. 600.

[j] (W. Va. 1891) The offense of giving intoxicating drink to a voter at an election, in violation of Code, c. 5, § 10, providing as a penalty therefor a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $50, being a misdemeanor, defendant, on an indictment therefor, is not entitled to a special jury, under Code, c. 116, § 21, authorizing the court to allow a special jury in any civil case.—State v. Pearis, 35 W. Va. 320, 13 S. E. 1006.

Open venire to another jurisdiction, see post, § 325 [z].

Summoning talesmen to fill vacancies on foreign jury, see post, § 377 [c].

[a] (Ill. 1884) No statutory authority exists for the selection of grand and petit jurors in one county to serve in another county.—Buckrice v. People, 110 Ill. 29.

[b] (Ky. 1891) Cr. Code, § 194, provides that, if the judge be satisfied, after having made a fair effort for that purpose, that from any cause it will be impracticable to obtain a jury free of bias in the county where the prosecution is pending, he may order the sheriff to summon jurors from some adjoining county. Held that, on a trial for homicide, the fact that defendant had extensive relations, and had received three former trials, was sufficient to justify an order to the sheriff to summon jurors from an adjoining county.—Brafford v. Commonwealth, 16 S. W. 710.

[c] (Ky. 1893) Error cannot be predicated, in a criminal cause, on the court's refusal to grant defendant's motion to have the jury summoned from an adjoining county on the ground that the prosecutors were people of influence, and were using money to secure a conviction, as by Cr. Code, § 194, the court must satisfy itself, by making a fair effort, that it will be impracticable to obtain a jury free of bias in the county where the cause is pending before authorizing the summons of a jury from another county.—Roberts v. Commonwealth, 94 Ky. 499, 22 S. W. 845.

[d] (Ky. 1896) Under Cr. Code, § 194, providing that, if the judge is satisfied that an impartial jury cannot be obtained in the county where the prosecution is pending, he may summon jurors from an adjoining county in which he shall believe there is the greatest probability of obtaining an impartial jury, the fact that former juries in the case had been summoned from a certain county did not establish the fact that an impartial jury could not have been gotten from that county, or that the judge did not believe that there was the greatest probability of obtaining an impartial jury from that county.—Massie v. Commonwealth, 36 S. W. 550.

[e] (N. J. 1809) Where it appeared that an impartial jury could not be had in the county where the action was brought, on account of the great influence of the parties, a foreign jury was granted.—Bell v. Van Riper, 3 N. J. Law (2 Penning.) 510.

[f] (Va. 1853) The regular term of the court having nearly expired, and only one of the jurymen summoned to try a prisoner being found free from objection, such juror was discharged by the court, which, being of opinion that jurors qualified to serve could not be gotten in the county, made an order directing the sheriff to summon 30 persons from each of two counties, to attend as jurors for the trial of the prisoner at a special term of the court appointed to be held, and to which time the court adjourned. Held, that it was not necessary to issue another venire for summoning jurors from the county, returnable to the special term, before making the order to summon jurors from abroad, and that it was not error to direct jurors to be summoned from two counties at the same time.—Wormeley v. Commonwealth, 10 Grat. 658.

[g] (Va.) A corporation court has authority to direct jurors to be summoned from without the limits of the corporation for the trial of a prisoner indicted in that court, when an impartial jury cannot be obtained within the corporation.—(1871) Chahoon v. Commonwealth, 21 Grat. 822; (1872) Sands v. Same, Id. 871; (1873) Craft v. Commonwealth, 24 Grat. 602.

[h] (Va.) Under a statute requiring a jury to be made up of persons residing remote from the scene of the crime, a jury summoned from the body of the county anywhere outside the limits of the municipality wherein the crime was committed is properly constituted.—(1873) Craft v. Commonwealth, 24 Grat. 602; (1886) Lawrence v. Commonwealth, 81 Va. 484.

[i] (Va. 1887) On a criminal trial it is not error for the court to refuse to cause a venire to be summoned from another county, because of prejudice against the accused, until an effort has been made to obtain a jury, free from exception, from the venire already summoned.—Puryear v. Commonwealth, 83 Va. 51, 1 S. E. 512.

Absence or presence of negroes on jury, see post, § 226 [b, d, k–m].

Demand for jury, see post, § 158 [e].

[a] (U. S. 1824) A foreigner in Virginia is entitled to a jury de medietate linguæ.—United States v. Carnot, Fed. Cas. No. 14,726 [2 Cranch, C. C. 469].

[b] (U. S. 1835) A foreigner is not entitled to a jury de medietate, in Washington county, D. C.—United States v. McMahon, Fed. Cas. No. 15,699 [4 Cranch, C. C. 573].

[c] (Cal. 1877) The jury de medietate linguæ is not known to the laws of California.—People v. Chin Mook Sow, 51 Cal. 597.

[d] (La. 1850) If the right of trial by a jury de medietate linguæ ever existed in Louisiana, it was abolished by the statutes prescribing the qualifications of jurors and the manner in which juries should be composed.—State v. Fuentes, 5 La. Ann. 427.

[e] (N. C. 1825) An alien is not entitled to a jury de medietate.—State v. Antonio, 11 N. C. 200.

[f] (Pa. 1783) The statute of 28 Edw. III. c. 13, granting trials per medietatem linguæ to foreigners, is in force in Pennsylvania.—Respublica v. Mesca, 1 Dall. 73, 1 L. Ed. 42.

[g] (Pa. 1783) Evidence that a foreigner accused of crime was allowed to have foreigners on the jury that tried him is sufficient to show an adoption of the statute of 23 Edw. III. c. 13, by which a foreigner indicted for a criminal offense is entitled to a jury de medietate linguæ.—Respublica v. Mesca, 1 Dall. 73, 1 L. Ed. 42.

[h] (Va. 1841) The statute (1 Rev. Code, c. 75, § 13) that "juries de medietate linguæ may be directed by the courts respectively" is not imperative that they shall direct such a jury in cases, even of a criminal nature, in which aliens are parties, but confers a discretionary power on the courts to direct such jury, if to them it appear proper.—Richards v. Commonwealth, 11 Leigh, 690; Brown v. Same, Id. 711.

[a] (U. S. 1882) In a proceeding at common law a citizen of the United States cannot be devested of his property except by verdict of a jury, in a proceeding in which he is in some manner a party, having opportunity to be heard, and having a day in court.—The J. W. French (D. C.) 13 Fed. 916.

[b] (Miss. 1826) The wager of law has been abolished by the constitutional provisions securing the right of trial by jury in all cases.—Jennings v. Gibson, 1 Miss. (Walk.) 234.

[c] (Mo. 1888) Whether under Rev. St. art. 6, c. 21, § 896, provision is only made for a jury trial when a new appraisement is ordered, is immaterial, as the constitutional right to a jury trial is not lost by the lack of legislation prescribing the mode of its exercise.—Kansas City, C. & S. R. Co. v. Story, 96 Mo. 611, 10 S. W. 203.

[d] (N. Y. 1856) Where a will is admitted to probate upon the verdict of a jury, a party to the proceedings is not entitled to a jury trial, in an action subsequently brought against him, to enforce the provisions of the will. Such a trial would be substantially a second trial of an issue, which was never a matter of right.—Nichols v. Romaine, 3 Abb. Prac. 122.

[a] (Iowa) The rights of the parties with respect to trial by jury are determined by the law in force at the time of the commencement of the action, and are not affected by a subsequent change of statute.—(1875) Wadsworth v. Wadsworth, 40 Iowa, 448; (1877) Wormley v. Hamburg, 46 Iowa, 144.

[b] (Ga. 1848) The provision in the constitution that "trial by jury, as heretofore used, shall remain inviolate," means that it shall not be taken away in cases where it existed when the constitution was adopted, in 1798, and not that there must be a jury in all cases.—Flint River Steamboat Co. v. Foster, 5 Ga. 194, 48 Am. Dec. 248.

[d] (Minn. 1860) Const. art. 1, § 4, adopts without change the right of trial by jury as it existed in the territory of Minnesota at the time of the adoption of the state constitution, and it relates only to civil matters.—Whallon v. Bancroft, 4 Minn. 109 (Gil. 70).

[e] (N. Y. 1855) The phrase "the trial by jury," as used in Const. art. 1, § 2, refers as well to all other incidents of the trial as to the number of men necessary to constitute the jury.—People v. Fisher, 20 Barb. 652, 11 How. Prac. 554, 2 Parker, Cr. R. 402.

[f] (N. Y. 1865) The constitution of 1846 does not limit or restrict the authority of the legislature to legislate in respect to the right of trial by jury, except only as to the particular right guarantied.—Walter v. People, 32 N. Y. 147.

[g] (Pa. 1862) The constitutional provision relative to trial by jury was intended to preserve that right as it existed at the formation of our state government, and not to increase or extend it, and must be construed with reference to the statutes that were in force in England and in the province of Pennsylvania at the adoption of the first constitution of the state.—Byers v. Commonwealth, 42 Pa. (6 Wright) 89.

[a] (Iowa, 1885) Since Code 1873, par. 2793, providing that a trial may proceed with 10 or 11 jurors when the jury has been reduced by sickness to that number, is unconstitutional, such objection may be raised by a municipal corporation, in a suit to which it is a party, as well as by a natural person.—Kelsh v. Town of Dyersville, 68 Iowa, 137, 26 N. W. 38.

[b] (Ky.) The right of trial by jury did not belong to public debtors before the adoption of the constitution, nor is it extended to them by that instrument.—(1802) Caldwell v. Commonwealth, 2 Ky. (Ky. Dec.) 129; (1828) Harris v. Wood, 22 Ky. (6 T. B. Mon.) 641.

[c] (La. 1825) Under a statute providing that the plaintiff or defendant in an action shall be entitled to a jury on demand, an intervening party, while technically speaking neither a defendant nor a plaintiff, is entitled to a trial by jury on any issue which is properly triable by jury.—Lacroix v. Menard, 3 Mart. (N. S.) 339, 15 Am. Dec. 161.

[e] (La. 1849) Article 107, Const. 1845, which guaranties a speedy public trial by an impartial jury of the vicinage, does not apply to slaves.—State v. Dick, 4 La. Ann. 182.

[f] (Md. 1883) Parties are not entitled as of right to have an issue of fact in equity tried by a jury; and there is no exception in favor of an heir at law.—Chase v. Winans, 59 Md. 475.

[g] (Miss. 1844) A statute confiding the trial of slaves for larceny, etc., to justices of the peace, in order to fix the liability of the master for the value of the property stolen, is constitutional.—Dowell v. Boyd, 11 Miss. (3 Smedes & M.) 592.

[h] (N. H. 1882) Trial by jury is not secured to a town by the constitution, and a cause to which it is a party may be submitted to referees without its consent.—Wooster v. Town of Plymouth, 62 N. H. 193; Kimball v. Bridgewater, Id. 694; Sargent v. Littleton, Id.

[i] (Pa. 1865) An heir at law of a deceased mortgagor who denies the validity of a mortgage is not entitled to an issue to try disputed facts, under the act of April 20, 1846 (Purd. Dig. p. 446), giving the right to such an issue to "persons interested," since the statute applies to lien creditors only.—Appeal of Housekeeper, 49 Pa. (13 Wright) 141.

[j] (Pa. 1866) A municipal corporation has no constitutional right to a trial by jury.—Appeal of Borough of Dunmore, 52 Pa. (2 P. F. Smith) 374.

[k] (R. I. 1895) The legislature has power to give the state a right to jury trial in proceedings to condemn land for state purposes.—In re Condemnation of Certain Land for New State House, 19 R. I. 326, 33 Atl. 448.

adoption of Const. art. 1, § 15, providing that "the right of jury trial shall remain inviolate," did not uniformly give both parties the right to a jury trial, but in many cases gave it to the landowners only, the state cannot claim a jury trial, as a constitutional right in proceedings under Pub. Laws, c. 1201, to condemn land for a state house.—In re Condemnation of Certain Land for New State House, 19 R. I. 326, 33 Atl. 448.

[a] (Md. 1891) Act 1878, c. 143 (Code Pub. Loc. Laws, art. 4, § 806), gives the city of Baltimore full power to provide for opening or widening any street, and for granting appeals to the city court from the decision of the commissioners as to damages caused or benefits accruing to property owners, and for securing "to every such owner * * * the right * * * to have decided by a jury trial whether any damage has been caused or any benefit has accrued to them." Held, that this secures to each owner the right to a separate jury trial if he should demand it, and it is error to consolidate the appeals of several owners over their objection.—Friedenwald v. City of Baltimore, 74 Md. 116, 21 Atl. 555.

[b] (Mass. 1852) Where several stockholders in a corporation are summoned to answer in a suit against the corporation, pursuant to St. 1851, c 315, § 1, requiring such service in order that execution may issue against them on a judgment against the corporation, and severally deny their liability, they are not entitled to a separate trial by different juries.—Holyoke Bank v. Goodman Paper Mfg. Co., 63 Mass. (9 Cush.) 576.

Effect of denial in one court where allowed in another, see post, § 236 [f].

Splitting cause of action to bring within jurisdiction of inferior court, see post, § 206 [m].

[a] (U. S. 1826) Act New York March 24, 1897, entitled "An act to settle disputes concerning the titles to lands in the county of Onondaga," which provides for the appointment of commissioners to determine disputes, does not constitute such commissioners a court, within the meaning of the constitution, inasmuch as their award is in no way binding upon the parties; and therefore said act is not unconstitutional in that it does not require such commissioners to proceed according to the course of the common law or by a jury trial.—Barker v. Jackson, Fed. Cas. No. 989 [1 Paine, 559].

[b] (Ala. 1883) The provision of the general law creating the county court and clothing it with jurisdiction of misdemeanors that, if a trial by jury is not demanded, "the judge shall determine both the law and the facts, without the intervention of a jury, etc.," (Code, § 4718) applies to the jurisdiction of the county court of Wilcox as enlarged by the special statute of Feb. 23, 1881 (Pamph. Acts 1880, p. 265).—Bell v. State, 75 Ala. 25.

[c] (Ga. 1877) The provisions of Const. 1868, as to rendering judgment without a jury trial where there is no issuable defense on oath, apply to cases transferred by the operation of said constitution to the superior court, in consequence of the abolition of the county court.—Redd v. Davis, 59 Ga. 823.

[d] (Mass. 1872) St. 1871, c. 391, provides that the First district court of Southern Worcester shall have the same jurisdiction as the existing police courts, except the municipal courts of Boston and Worcester, and shall have original concurrent jurisdiction with the superior court in the county of Worcester in all personal actions in which the debt or damages demanded, or property replevied, does not exceed $300, in which jury trials may be had. Gen. St. c. 150, §§ 9, 18, gives jurisdiction to justices of the peace and police courts, where the amount involved does not exceed $100, and provides for jury trials therein as in other civil cases. Held, that such First district court has authority to impanel a jury of 12 men, to try the issues in a petition, under Gen. St. c. 150, to enforce a mechanic's lien; the amount involved not exceeding $100.—Ward v. Edmunds, 110 Mass. 340.

[e] (N. Y. 1810) The laws as to trial by jury in other courts apply to trials in justices' courts.—Blackley v. Sheldon, 7 Johns. 32.

[f] (N. Y. 1878) The organization of the court of special sessions in the city of New York, where defendant in a criminal prosecution is tried without a jury, if he elects that court, is constitutional.—People v. Justices of Court of Special Sessions, 74 N. Y. 406.

[g] (N. Y. 1894) One tried before a police justice of Newtown for Sabbath breaking is entitled to a jury, as provided by the Code of Criminal Procedure, in case of proceedings in courts of special sessions (Laws, 1873, c. 159, § 2), which allows him to try all criminal cases that may be tried by a justice of the peace, provided that he shall do this only "as a court of special sessions."—Erbe v. Monteverde, 18 Misc. Rep. 404, 35 N. Y. Supp. 102.

[h] (N. C. 1855) The act of the legislature, giving power to a county court to abolish the trial by jury in such court, is not unconstitutional.—Thompson v. Floyd, 47 N. C. 313.

[i] (N. C. 1860) The acts of 1844 and 1846, abolishing trials by jury in the county court of Rutherford, etc., embrace an action of assumpsit, begun by attachment, as well as one commenced by a common writ ad respondendum.—Harriss v. Hampton, 52 N. C. 597.

[j] (S. C. 1848) The constitution, in preserving the trial by jury, "as heretofore used," does not interfere with those tribunals which, at the time of its adoption, proceeded to judgment without the intervention of a jury.—Commissioners v. Seabrook, 2 Strob. 563.

[k] (S. C. 1886) Where a town charter invests the intendant with the power and jurisdiction of trial justices generally, in prosecutions for the violation of town ordinances, one so prosecuted is entitled to a trial by jury and to an appeal.—Beaufort v. Ohlandt, 24 S. C. 158.

[l] (S. C. 1895) Under 16 St. at Large, p. 467, § 2, conferring on the recorder of the city of Charleston all the authority of a trial justice in criminal matters, and Code Cr. Proc. § 20, providing that every person charged with an offense before a trial justice shall be entitled, on demand, to a trial by jury, a person charged before the recorder of Charleston with violation of an ordinance is entitled, on demand, to a jury trial.—State v. Larkins, 44 S. C. 362, 22 S. E. 409.

[m] (Tenn. 1831) Acts 1829, c. 95, creating a special court for the determination of suits commenced by the bank of the state of Tennessee against her officers and other defaulters to said institution, and authorizing such court to determine the causes according to the principles of a court of equity, is unconstitutional, as violating the right of trial by jury.—State Bank v. Cooper, 10 Tenn. (2 Yerg.) 599, 24 Am. Dec. 517.

On appeal in probate matters, see post, § 97.

[a] (Ala. 1847) The orphans' court has no authority to impanel a jury to ascertain a disputed fact, save only where there is a contest about a will, and one or two other special cases, unless there is a doubt in relation to the controverted fact which requires a cross-examination to elicit the truth; and, in a case not coming within the exception, the necessity of a jury must appear on the record, by setting out the testimony, so as to enable an appellate court to revise the order directing a jury to be impaneled.—Reynolds' Adm'rs v. Reynolds' Distributees, 11 Ala. 1023.

[b] (Ill. 1887) Under the drainage act of 1885, an appeal from the decision of the commissioners could be taken to any term of the county court. The county court had a probate term. A jury trial was held to be a matter of right to the appellant. Held that, in cases cognizable at the probate term, the court had power to impanel a jury.—Mascall v. Drainage Com'rs, 122 Ill. 620, 14 N. E. 47.

[c] (Ind. 1860) Under Rev. St. 1843, p. 666, parties in the probate court can claim a trial by jury as a matter of right, and the court is bound by the verdict, which can only be set aside as any other verdict may be.—Clem v. Durham, 14 Ind. 263.

[d] (Mo. 1891) Rev. St. 1889, § 2131, providing for the trial of certain issues of fact by jury "in an action for the recovery of money only, or of specific real or personal property," does not apply to proceedings in the probate court; and in that court there can be no trial by jury in the absence of statutory provision therefor.—Bradley v. Woerner, 46 Mo. App. 371.

§ 21. —— Federal courts or tribunals.

Crimes committed within jurisdiction of the United States, see post, § 137.
Effect of provision for jury trial on appeal, see post, § 241 [a, b].
Nonsuit as infringing right to trial by jury, see post, § 235 [a, b].
Number of jurors, see ante, § 6.

Removal from state to federal court as converting legal into equitable action, see post, § 65.
Adoption of practice of state courts, see "Courts," vol. 13, cc. 2705, 2706, § 930.

[a] (U. S. 1880) The provision of the act of March 3, 1863 (Rev. St. §§ 1059–1061), authorizing the court of claims, without the intervention of a jury, to hear and determine claims against the government, and also any set-off, counterclaim, claim for damages, or other demand on the part of the government against the claimant, does not violate the seventh amendment of the constitution.—McElrath v. United States, 102 U. S. 426, 26 L. Ed. 189.

[b] (U. S. 1888) Const. art. 3, § 2, providing that "the trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury, and such trial shall be held in the state where the said crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any state the trial shall be at such place or places as the congress may by law have directed;" and the sixth amendment, declaring that "in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury of the state and district," etc.,—extend the guaranty of jury trial to the District of Columbia equally with the states.—Callan v. Wilson, 127 U. S. 540, 8 Sup. Ct. 1301, 32 L. Ed. 223.

[c] (U. S. 1890) The constitution of the United States, securing to citizens the right of trial by jury, and requiring an indictment by a grand jury, does not give a citizen or a temporary subject the right to claim the guaranty when tried before a consul or tribunal, in accordance with a treaty for offenses committed in a foreign country. Affirming (1890) 44 Fed. 185.—Ross v. McIntyre, 140 U. S. 453, 35 L. Ed. 581, 11 Sup. Ct. 897.

[d] (D. C. 1884) Act Cong. 1870, vesting in the judge of the police court the power to convict persons charged with offenses against the criminal laws of the United States, without a trial by jury, will not now be held to be in conflict with Const. art. 3, § 2, providing that "the trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury," as this jurisdiction of the police court has been acquiesced in for nearly 14 years; but, if the police court were just entering upon its existence, we should feel bound to consider the question, and would do so, perhaps, with some prepossession against the jurisdiction.—In re Fry, 3 Mackey, 135.

[e] (D. C. 1888) Act Cong. March 3, 1865, § 4, providing that "issues of fact in civil cases in any circuit court of the United States" may be tried by the court without a jury when the parties or their attorneys stipulate to that effect, does not apply to the supreme court of the District of Columbia.—Cunkle v. Heald, 6 Mackey, 485.

[f] (Okl. 1893) Const. U. S. Amend. 7, providing that in suits at common law involving more than $20 the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, applies to territorial courts.—Bradford v. Territory, 1 Okl. 366, 34 Pac. 66.

[a] (Me. 1841) The power given to courts-martial to punish by fine is not within the provision of the constitution of the United States, securing a trial by jury.—Rawson v. Brown, 18 Me. (6 Shep.) 216.

§ 23. —— Application of provisions of federal constitution to state courts.

State law infringing federal constitution, see post, § 206 [f].
Where affected by amount in controversy, see post, § 25 [b, g].

[a] The seventh amendment to the United States constitution, giving the right to a trial by jury in all suits at common law where the amount in controversy shall exceed $20, relates only to proceedings in the United States courts.

guarantying the right to a trial by jury, do not place any restrictions on the powers of the states. They refer only to questions arising in the federal courts.—Kansas v. Bradley (C. C.) 26 Fed. 289.

[d] (U. S. 1892) The provision of the federal constitution that "in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial by a jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed," etc., qualifies the judicial powers granted to the United States, and has no application to the powers exercised by the states.—In re King (C. C.) 51 Fed. 434.

[e] (La. 1811) That part of the federal constitution which requires a trial by jury relates only to crimes against the United States.—Territory v. Hattick, 2 Mart. (O. S.) 88.

[f] (La. 1874) The provisions of the federal constitution relating to trials by jury apply only to the federal courts.—State v. Carro, 26 La. Ann. 377.

[g] (N. M. 1893) Const. Amend. U. S. art. 7, which provides that the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, and no fact tried by a jury shall be otherwise re-examined in any court of the United States than according to the rules of the common law, applies only to powers exercised by the government of the United States, and not to those of states and territories.—Walker v. New Mexico & S. P. R. Co., 34 Pac. 43.

[h] (N. Y. 1824) 2 Rev. Laws, pp. 507, 508, creating a special session of justices for the trial of petit larceny without a jury, is not repugnant to U. S. Const. art. 3, § 2, providing that all trials for crime shall be by jury, as such provision only applies to federal courts.—Murphy v. People, 2 Cow. 815; Jackson v. Wood, 2 Cow. 819.

[i] (N. Y. 1824) Const. U. S. Amend. 6, giving to the accused the right of trial by jury in all criminal prosecutions, does not apply to the individual states, but restricts the power to the general government only.—Jackson v. Wood, 2 Cow. 819, note.

[j] (W. Va. 1892) Const. U. S. art. 3, § 3, declaring that the trial of crimes shall be held in the state where they shall have been committed, and Const. Amend. 6, declaring that in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, apply only to offenses against the United States, and proceedings in its courts, and not to an offense against a state and a prosecution therefor in the state courts.—Ex parte McNeely, 36 W. Va. 84, 14 S. E. 436, 32 Am. St. Rep. 831, 15 L. R. A. 226.

§ 24. —— Jurisdiction of inferior courts of cases in which trial by jury is guaranteed.

Effect of provision for jury trial on appeal, see post, § 238.

Right to jury trial on appeal from justice of the peace, see post, § 96.

Jurisdiction of justices of the peace in actions where party has right to trial by jury, see "Justices of the Peace," vol. 31, c. 1050, § 176 [e].

[a] (Ala. 1870) An act of the legislature extending the jurisdiction of an inferior court to cases in which the parties litigant are entitled, at common law, to a trial before a jury, is unconstitutional, if it does not provide for a jury trial, and there is no provision in the general law by which a jury trial may be had in such court.—Thomas v. Bibb, 44 Ala. 721.

[b] (Ky. 1801) That part of the statute of 1792, prohibiting dealing with slaves without their owners' consent, which provides that the owner may recover four times the value of the commodity transferred, by the judgment of a justice of the peace, if it be under five pounds, is unconstitutional, as it deprives the party of a trial by jury.—Enderman v. Ashby, 2 Ky. (Ky. Dec.) 53.

[c] (N. Y. 1868) The act of 1861 (Laws 1861, c. 158), extending the jurisdiction of justices in actions on contract, held not to be in violation of the provisions of the state constitution respecting the right of trial by jury, because the right of trial by jury remained unimpaired.—Dawson v. Horan, 51 Barb. 459.

[d] (Ohio, 1858) The act of May 1, 1854, "to extend the jurisdiction of justices of the peace in civil cases," is not unconstitutional for the reason that it does not provide for a trial by jury.—Norton v. McLeary, 8 Ohio St. 205.

[e] (S. C. 1805) The act of assembly of 1801, extending the jurisdiction of justices of the peace to $30, was unconstitutional, under Const. 1790, art. 9, § 6, providing that trial by jury as heretofore used in the state shall remain inviolate.—White v. Kendrick, 1 Brev. 469.

§ 25. Amount or value in controversy.

Effect of provision for jury trial on appeal, see post, § 238 [b, c, e].

In proceedings to enforce municipal regulations, see post, § 107 [a].

Necessity of demand for jury, see post, § 155 [f].

Number of jurors as infringing right, see post, § 222 [o].

Restrictions on right of appeal, see post, § 212 [b, c, e, h, j].

Splitting cause of action as denial of right, see post, § 206 [m].

[a] (U. S. 1831) If a jury is required, and denied by the justice, when the sum exceeds ten dollars, it is an error for which his judgment should be set aside, under Geyer, Dig. Ark. p. 387, § 12, giving a right to a jury trial if the sum demanded exceeds $10.—Miles v. James, Fed. Cas. No. 9,543a [Hemp. 98].

[b] (U. S. 1849) The seventh amendment to the federal constitution, which provides that in suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed $20, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, etc., is a provision exclusively for cases at common law.—Motte v. Bennett, Fed. Cas. No. 9,884 [2 Fish. Pat. Cas. 642].

[c] (Ala. 1830) Where a demand is under $20 when the warrant issues, but is increased to more than that sum by interest during the pendency of the appeal, the issue is properly tried by a jury.—McGrew v. Adams, 2 Stew. 502.

[d] (Ala. 1850) Where, on the trial of an appeal from a justice's to the circuit court, the sum in controversy is less than $20, a jury is not necessary; but, if the cause of action be an open account, the court cannot render judgment final until the demand has been established by proof.—Witherington v. Brantley, 18 Ala. 197.

[e] (Ala. 1885) Where the sum claimed on appeal from a justice of the peace exceeds $20, an issue must be made up, under the direction of the court, and tried by a jury.—Lehman v. Hudmon, 79 Ala. 532.

[f] (Mass. 1857) Whether "the damages demanded exceeded $20," and thus entitle either party to demand a trial by jury before a justice of the peace, under St. 1852, c. 314, is to be determined by the ad damnum in the writ.—Trees v. Rushworth, 75 Mass. (9 Gray) 47.

[g] (Minn. 1860) Article 7 of the amendments to the constitution of the United States proposed in 1789, does not prevent a state legislature from extending the right of jury trial to cases at law involving less than $20.—Whallon v. Bancroft, 4 Minn. 109 (Gil. 70).

[h] (N. J. 1893) In an action under the supplement to the district court act of March 27, 1882, to recover a claim over $200, defendant may demand a trial by jury, since Const. art. 1, par. 7, declares that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate.—Raphael v. Lane, 56 N. J. Law (27 Vroom) 108, 28 Atl. 421.

[i] (S. C. 1857) The recorder of the city of Charleston has jurisdiction of an action to recover a penalty not exceeding $20, for the violation of an ordinance of the city council, without the aid of a jury, even if the defendant should demand one.—City of Charleston v. Stelges, 10 Rich. Law, 438.

§ 26. Actions by or against the United States.

Impairment of right, see post, § 206 [a].

[a] (U. S. 1890) In an action against a collector to recover duties paid under protest, the importer has no constitutional right to trial by jury as to the value of the goods, since the government has authority to prescribe the terms upon which it may be sued, through its collector, to recover duties paid.—Auffmordt v. Hedden, 137 U. S. 310, 11 Sup. Ct. 103, 34 L. Ed. 674, affirming (C. C. 1886) 30 Fed. 360.

[b] (U. S. 1876) The seventh amendment to the constitution of the United States, securing trial by jury, does not extend to suits against the government. They are not suits at common law.—McElrath v. United States, 12 Ct. Cl. 312.

[a] (Ga. 1848) The right of trial by jury, though essential in criminal cases, is not so much so in civil cases.—Flint River Steamboat Co. v. Foster, 5 Ga. 194, 48 Am. Dec. 248.

[b] (La. 1843) In an action of settlement between partners, either may submit all matters in controversy to a jury.—Gridley v. Conner, 4 Rob. 445.

[c] (La. 1847) A bank obtained a judgment on two mortgages, subscribed by defendant D. and indorsed by two other defendants. The mortgaged land was sold to satisfy the judgment, and a third person claimed the price in the hands of the sheriff, by the way of a third opposition, on the ground that he had a superior mortgage on the property. To this defendant excepted, and plaintiff filed a general denial and prayed for a trial by jury. Held, that he was entitled to a jury.—Bank of Louisiana v. Delery, 2 La. Ann. 648.

[d] (La. 1855) Several creditors having seized property, the plaintiff, claiming a superior right on the proceeds to all but the first, sued the rest with the debtor, alleging that their judgments were fraudulent. By an ex parte order the sheriff was directed to hold the surplus of the sale, after satisfying the first seizure. Defendants answered to the merits, agreeing that until a decision no execution should issue on the 12 months' bond for the surplus of the sale. Held, that defendants were entitled to a jury trial.—Stewart v. Scudder, 10 La. Ann. 216.

[e] (La. 1857) In a suit for damages, where one of the defendants is charged with aiding and abetting the other in the commission of a wrong or injury, he has a right to demand trial by jury.—Fonda v. Broom, 12 La. Ann. 768.

[f] (Vt. 1848) The statute (Rev. St. c. 26, § 33) which secures to either party the right of a trial by jury, if demanded, refers to that trial of the issue which precedes the judgment.—Brown v. Irwin, 21 Vt. 68.

[a] A constitutional provision "that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate, and shall extend to all cases at law, without regard to the amount in controversy," simply adopts the law as it existed at the time of the adoption of the constitution, and does not operate to extend the right of trial by jury to cases where it did not before exist.
—(Minn. 1860) Whallon v. Bancroft, 4 Minn. 109 (Gil. 70);
(Wis. 1863) Mead v. Walker, 17 Wis. 189.

[b] (U. S. 1830) The seventh amendment of the constitution of the United States, which declares that "in suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed $20, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved," may, in a just sense, be construed to embrace all suits which are not of equity or admiralty jurisdiction, whatever peculiar form they may assume to settle legal rights.—Parsons v. Bedford, 28 U. S. (3 Pet.) 433, 7 L. Ed. 732.

[c] (Ga. 1876) The provision in the constitution of 1868, giving the judge power to render judgment without the intervention of a jury, where no issuable defense is filed on oath, is not retroactive; hence, where an appeal was entered prior to the adoption of the constitution, the court should not render judgment against a principal and surety without submitting the case to the jury.—Walker v. Bivins, 57 Ga. 322; Birdsong v. Woodward, Id. 354.

[d] (Ill. 1870) Constitutional provisions which declare that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate, and shall extend to all cases at law," and that "no freeman shall be deprived of his property but by the judgment of his peers," entitle a party to a jury in all cases in which it was authorized at the time of the adoption of the organic law.—Whitehurst v. Coleen, 53 Ill. 247.

[e] (Ind. 1857) Not every case which is not a criminal case is a civil one, wherein, by the constitution, "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate;" but that term embraces such as were treated as civil cases in this state when the constitution was adopted.—Lake Erie, W. & St. L. R. Co. v. Heath, 9 Ind. 558.

[f] (La. 1842) The trial by jury, guarantied in criminal cases by the constitution, rests in civil cases with the legislature alone; but its importance, as a legal right and political institution, the court will not undervalue nor overlook.—Dabbs v. Hemken, 3 Rob. 123.

[g] (La. 1873) The fourteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States does not make any change on the subject of jury trials in civil suits.—State ex rel. Morgan v. Kennard, 25 La. Ann. 238; Woodruff v. Lobdell, Id. 658.

[h] (La. 1875) The legislature is not under constitutional obligation to accord trial by jury in all civil causes.—Sauvinet v. Walker, 27 La. Ann. 14.

[i] (Vt. 1860) Any law which destroys or materially impairs the right of trial by jury according to the course of the common law, in cases proper for the cognizance of a jury, is contrary to article 12 of the bill of rights, section 31 of the constitution.—Plimpton v. Somerset, 33 Vt. 283.

[a] (U. S. 1879) The provision of law of 1875 (18 Stat. 470, § 3), as to removal of a cause from a state court to a federal court, does not repeal that of Rev. St. § 649, authorizing the court to try, upon the stipulation of the parties, issues of fact without the intervention of a jury.—Phillips v. Moore, 100 U. S. 208, 25 L. Ed. 603.

Practice in trial of special issues by jury, see "Trial," X. (A).

[a] (U. S. 1835) The right of trial by jury, secured by the federal constitution, is the trial according to the course of common law, and is confined to matters of fact only. Therefore Act Feb. 12, 1793 (1 Stat. 302), which provides for the seizure of a fugitive from labor, and his examination before a magistrate, is not unconstitutional, as denying the right to a trial by jury, for, so far as the question of slavery is involved upon such examination, it is a question of law, and not a question of fact.—In re Martin, Fed. Cas. No. 9,154 [2 Paine, 348].

[b] (Ala. 1828) In a summary proceeding against an officer, for failure to return a writ, where there is a material issue on controverted matter in pais, he has the right of trial by jury.—Pope v. Stout, 1 Stew. 375.

[c] (Cal.) The constitutional provision securing the right of trial by jury applies only to civil and criminal cases in which an issue of fact is joined.—(1860) Koppikus v. State Capitol Com'rs, 16 Cal. 248; (1862) People v. Blake, 19 Cal. 579.

[d] (Ill. 1883) Where objection is made to the commission's report of survey, under Act March 25, 1869, "to provide for the permanent survey of lands," denying its correctness, an issue of fact is formed, on which any party to the record is entitled to a jury trial.—Atkins v. Huston, 106 Ill. 492, reversing (1879) 5 Ill. App. 326.

[e] (Ky. 1853) Issues of fact, arising in actions by ordinary proceedings for the recovery of money or of specific real or personal property, shall be tried by jury, unless a jury trial is waived.—Smith v. Moberly, 54 Ky. (15 B. Mon.) 70.

[f] (La. 1825) Where, in a case involving long accounts, plaintiff asks for a jury, and defendant, when the trial comes on, for a reference, the court is not bound to grant it, under acts 1804, No. 2, § 2; No. 26, § 20.—Caulker v. Banks, 3 Mart. (N. S.) 532.

[g] (Mass. 1829) The requirements of article 15, in the declaration of rights, relative to trial by jury, are satisfied by having all controverted facts essential to the trial passed upon by a jury, if required by either party; and the court must determine whether the facts proposed to be so tried are essential or not.—Proprietors of Charles River Bridge v. Proprietors of Warren Bridge, 24 Mass. (7 Pick.) 344.

[h] (Mass. 1891) Where a deputy game commissioner illegally seizes and carries away rabbits exposed for sale, in an action for conversion, where there is no evidence of a consent to the taking, the deputy is not entitled to have the issue submitted to a jury.—Averill v. Chadwick, 153 Mass. 171, 26 N. E. 441.

[i] (Miss. 1854) It is the right of a party, on the trial of questions of fact, to demand and have a trial by jury.—Scott v. Nichols, 27 Miss. (5 Cushm.) 94, 61 Am. Dec. 503.

[j] (Mo. 1860) On trial of issues raised in an action to recover money only, which is governed by the practice act of 1849, it is improper to submit portions of the issues to the jury and reserve the remainder for the determination of the court.—Ragan v. McCoy, 29 Mo. 356.

[k] (N. Y. 1869) A reference may be ordered in a case pending in a New York county court, under the general provisions of the Code authorizing references, notwithstanding the requirement (Code, § 366) that issues of fact in county courts shall be tried by jury.—Coy v. Rowland, 40 How. Prac. 385.

[l] (N. Y. 1883) The court will not direct the framing of issues for trial by jury, where the points involved are numerous, complex, and confusing.—Rutty v. Person, 12 Abb. N. C. 352.

[m] (N. C. 1872) In all actions where legal rights are involved and issues of fact are joined by the pleadings, the plaintiff is entitled to a trial by jury.—Andrews v. Pritchett, 66 N. C. 387.

[n] (N. C. 1874) Const. art. 11, § 18, provides "that in all issues of fact joined in any court the parties may waive the right to have the same determined by a jury, in which case the findings of the judge upon the facts shall have the force and effect of a verdict of a jury." Held that, in an action on a guardian's bond, the defendants were entitled to have issues of fact submitted to a jury, though a reference of the cause had been made, under Code Civ. Proc. tit. 10, § 219, since a reference is but ancillary to the powers of the court, and the constitutional provision is not necessarily confined to issues raised by the pleadings.—State v. Brown, 70 N. C. 27; Keener v. Finger, Id. 35.

[o] (N. C. 1876) A defendant in a bastardy proceeding, who alleges that he has paid the mother of the child a certain sum, for which he exhibits her receipt, which receipt, the mother charges, was obtained from her by fraud, is entitled to have the issue thus joined tried by a jury; and for the court below to refuse a trial by jury, when demanded by the defendant, is error.—State v. Beasley, 75 N. C. 211.

[p] (Ohio, 1861) Code Civ. Proc. § 87, provides that defendant may demur to a petition on the ground that the plaintiff has no legal capacity to sue. Section 89 provides that when the defect mentioned in section 87 does not appear on the face of the petition the objection may be taken by answer. In an action by persons claiming to be trustees of an incorporated religious society to recover possession of land, defendants answered, denying that plaintiffs were such trustees, and claiming that they, the defendants, were the trustees of such society, and praying for affirmative relief as against plaintiffs. Held, that an issue was thereby raised as to who were the legal trustees, which was properly triable by jury on the demand of either party, and it was error to decide that issue on a motion filed by defendants to dismiss the action on the ground that plaintiffs were not the trustees of such society.—First Presbyterian Soc. v. Smithers, 12 Ohio St. 248.

[q] (Pa. 1851) A rule for judgment will be discharged, where it appears from plaintiff's affidavit, and from the statement of the balance by the plaintiff, that some of the collaterals deposited by defendant have been realized, for which defendant is entitled to an accounting, since defendant is entitled to a trial by jury.—Krantler v. United States Bank, 1 Phila. 213.

[r] (Pa. 1855) Upon motion for summary relief against abuse of the process of court, by entering judgment under a warrant of attorney, the court may examine the fact whether such judgment was unduly entered, without sending the matter to a jury.—Banning v. Taylor, 24 Pa. (12 Harris) 289.

[s] (Pa. 1858) To support the demand of an issue in the orphans' court, it must be shown that there exists in regard to the claim some disputed fact for the determination of which the intervention of a jury is necessary.—In re Beehler's Estate, 3 Phila. 254, 15 Leg. Int. 350.

[t] (Pa. 1890) Where, in a suit to determine the right of a public officer to compensation, there is no dispute as to the facts, an issue should not be awarded.—City of Scranton School Dist. v. Simpson, 133 Pa. 202, 19 Atl. 359, 25 Wkly. Notes Cas. 517.

[u] (Pa. 1894) A case merely involving conflicting evidence as to whether services rendered by a daughter to her father were performed under his express promise to pay her therefor is for the jury.—Glone v. Arleth, 162 Pa. 550, 29 Atl. 862.

[v] (S. C. 1843) Where a poor debtor was arrested under sundry writs of ca. sa., and filed a schedule, which was opposed and issue joined, it was held that, under the statute of 1788, the judge had no power, although the facts were undisputed, to decide, without the intervention of a jury upon the intention, that the facts did not constitute undue preference.—Weed v. Evans, 2 Speers, 232.

[w] (Wash. 1875) The court may not try a cause involving an issue of fact where there is no waiver of jury trial, as provided by statute.—Johnson v. Goodtime, 1 Wash. T. 484.

[x] (W. Va. 1890) The submission of "particular questions of fact" to the jury is, under Code, c. 131, § 5, discretionary with the court; and such discretion is properly exercised where the questions proposed are immaterial or irrelevant.—Wheeling Bridge Co. v. Wheeling & B. Bridge Co., 34 W. Va. 155, 11 S. E. 1009.

[z] (Wyo. 1883) Comp. Laws, p. 67, § 263, provides that in actions for the recovery of real property "the issues of fact arising therein shall be tried by a jury, unless a jury trial is waived." Other statutes provide that in case a jury is waived the trial may be by the court. Held, that where, in an action for the recovery of a mining claim, part of the material facts alleged in the petition were admitted and part denied in the answer, it was error to dismiss the action on motion and affidavits supporting defendant's claim, and deny plaintiff the right to a trial on the issues.—Friend v. Oggshaw, 3 Wyo. 59, 31 Pac. 1047.

[a] (Ala. 1831) The statute providing that final judgment may be given on default, in actions on promissory notes, without the intervention of a jury, does not apply to a written agreement to pay a certain sum of money for 50,000 staves, subject to a deduction for any number not taken, at a certain rate.—Martin v. Woodall, 1 Stew. & P. 244.

[b] (Ala. 1856) Where final judgment by default, without the intervention of a jury, was rendered for unpaid calls for stock, it was held the judgment was erroneous, as unpaid calls for railroad stock are not "instruments of writing, ascertaining the plaintiff's demand." Code, § 2366.—Connoly v. Alabama & T. R. R. Co., 29 Ala. 373.

[c] (Ala. 1887) In an action on a note containing a provision for 10 per cent. attorney's fees, the amount of plaintiff's demand, on default, is sufficiently "ascertained" by the instrument itself (Code, § 2740), so that no jury is necessary to ascertain the amount.—Wood v. Winship Mach. Co., 83 Ala. 424, 3 South. 757, 3 Am. St. Rep. 754.

[d] (Ark. 1843) Rev. St. § 81, provides that in all cases of interlocutory judgments or instruments in writing, when the damages are not fixed by the instrument, they shall be assessed by a jury impaneled for that purpose. Section 98 provides that all issues of fact "joined in any suit at law" shall be tried by the court, where neither party demand a jury trial. Held, that in an action on a bond, where the damages were not fixed, and the defendant was in default and made no appearance, a failure to impanel a jury to assess the damages was error, although the record stated that "neither party required a jury."—Wallace v. Henry, 5 Ark. (5 Pike) 105.

[e] (Ga. 1851) On the trial of a scire facias against the principal and his securities upon a bail bond, the defendants are not entitled to a jury trial unless they file such an issuable plea as will require the intervention of a jury to try it.—Davidson v. Carter, 9 Ga. 501.

[f] (Ga. 1872) Const. art. 5, § 13, provides that the right of trial by jury, except where it is otherwise provided, shall remain inviolate. Section 3, par. 3, gives the court authority to render judgment without the verdict of a jury, in all civil cases founded on contract, where an issuable defense is not filed on oath. Held, that a judgment rendered by the judge of the superior court, without the verdict of a jury, in a civil case founded on contract, where an issuable defense is filed on oath, will be set aside.—Erambert v. Scarborough, 46 Ga. 398.

[g] (Ga. 1875) A verdict, in a civil case, founded on contract, where no issuable defense is filed on oath, is illegal. The court must take the responsibility of rendering judgment without a jury. Under the constitution, an issuable defense, on oath, is required to put the case before the jury, or to give them any power whatever to deal with it.—Lester v. Piedmont & A. Life Ins. Co., 55 Ga. 475.

[i] (Ga. 1887) The entry of judgment by a plaintiff's attorney, in pursuance of an order of court authorizing him to do so, in a case where no issuable defense has been filed, is a sufficient compliance with Const. 1868, art. 5, § 3, par. 3, which provides that the court shall render judgment without the verdict of a jury in all cases founded on contract when no issuable defense is filed.—Tift v. Keaton, 78 Ga. 235, 2 S. E. 690.

[j] (Ga. 1887) Const. art. 6, § 4, par. 7, provides that the court shall render judgment without the verdict of a jury, in all civil cases founded on unconditional contracts in writing, where an issuable defense is not filed under oath or affirmation. Plaintiff brought suit on three promissory notes bearing even date, and falling due on January 1, 1886–87–88, respectively. They were collateral to a bond conditioned that if the first note was not paid at maturity, then the other notes should become due. Held, that the notes and bond constituted an entire, conditional contract, and the judge could not try the case without a jury.—Dye v. Garrett, 78 Ga. 471, 3 S. E. 692.

[k] (Ga. 1888) Under Code, § 5145, providing that the court shall render judgment without a verdict in civil cases founded on unconditional contracts in writing, etc., a judgment should be so rendered where the contract is wholly unconditional as to the existence and amount of the debt, though there may be a condition as to the vesting in the debtor of title to the property for which the debt was incurred.—Craig v. Herring, 80 Ga. 709, 6 S. E. 283.

[m] (Ga. 1893) A written contract to pay $250, which amount, in a certain event, is to be reduced to $200, but containing no stipulation to pay less than the latter amount in any event, is an unconditional contract in writing for $200; and in a suit on the contract to recover the $250, where no defense was made, a judgment for $200 rendered by the court, without the intervention of a jury, is valid.—Knox v. Yow, 91 Ga. 367, 17 S. E. 654; Yow v. Knox, Id.

[n] (Ga. 1893) Where, in an action by the second indorser against the first indorser of a note, the declaration, besides setting forth the note with its indorsements, alleges facts not apparent on the instrument itself, which rendered protest for nonpayment necessary to bind the indorsers, the case is one for a verdict by a jury, and not one for judgment by the court without a jury, though no issuable defense on oath has been filed.—Everett v. Westmoreland, 92 Ga. 670, 19 S. E. 37.

[o] (Ind. 1845) If a demurrer to a declaration on a bill of exchange be overruled, the court may assess the damages, so far as the amount due on the bill of exchange is concerned; but in respect to the costs of protest, if chargeable at all, there should be a jury of inquiry.—Phipps v. Addison, 7 Blackf. 375.

[p] (Iowa, 1859) The plaintiff claimed a certain sum to be due as a balance on several promissory notes. The defendant denied that this sum was due, and the plaintiff replied, admitting the truth of the defendant's allegation. Held, that there was no issue made up on which a trial by jury could be claimed.—Mann v. Howe, 9 Iowa, 546.

[q] (Iowa, 1878) In an action on a promissory note providing for "attorney's fees and other costs and charges, if the same is not paid when due," such fees should be treated as part of the costs. Accordingly, under the Code, the defendant is not entitled to a jury.—Musser v. Crum, 48 Iowa, 52.

[r] (Ky. 1823) In cases of debt or covenant, where the amount is liquidated by the act or deed of the parties, a court may proceed, without a jury, to assess damages, such having been the law before the constitution; and, on this principle, the court may decide on fee bills issued by clerks, without the intervention of a jury.—Harrison v. Chiles, 13 Ky. (3 Litt.) 194.

[s] (Ky. 1860) Where defendant to a suit on a promissory note controverts none of the facts, but only alleges in his answer that plaintiff is no longer owner or holder of said note, but has assigned it, and then fails to support this allegation by proof, the court should proceed to render judgment on the merits, and the intervention of a jury is unnecessary.—Vanbuskirk v. Levy, 60 Ky. (3 Metc.) 133.

[t] (La. 1880) A suit against the husband on a note drawn by the wife, and signed by him only for the purpose of authorizing her, although given for the price of a purchase for account of the community, and after he has assumed her debt, is not upon an unconditional obligation to pay a sum of money, so as to entitle the defendant to a jury, without the oath required by Code, art. 494.—State ex rel. Leeds v. Third District Judge, 32 La. Ann. 542.

[u] (La. 1880) A stipulation by the maker of a note that he will pay "such counsel fees as is customary," in case of legal proceedings, etc., is not an unconditional obligation to pay a specific sum of money, which deprives him of his right to a trial by jury.—Boagni v. Anderson, 32 La. Ann. 920.

[v] (La. 1892) Code Prac. § 494, provides that actions on notes shall be tried without a jury unless defendant shall make oath that his signature to the note is not genuine, or that he expects to prove that it was obtained through fraud or error, or want or failure of consideration, or where he sets up a plea of compensation or reconvention, and makes oath to the truth of all the allegations. Held, that the holder of a note, which bears interest, by its terms, from maturity, cannot claim that he is entitled as a matter of absolute right to a trial without a jury, where, in suing the maker, he claims interest from its date under an allegation of error, and where, averring that payment of the note is secured by a privilege, he seeks to have that privilege recognized and enforced through pleadings which disclose the fact that the existence of the privilege is a matter still in pais, requiring to be established by parol evidence.—State ex rel. Whitney Iron Works Co. v. Judge of Twenty-Second Judicial Dist. Court, 44 La. Ann. 1085, 11 South. 684.

[w] (N. Y. 1873) In an action upon a policy of insurance covering a stock in trade consisting of fireworks and other "hazardous" and "extra hazardous" merchandise, held, that the defendant was entitled to have the question whether the risk was increased by the addition of a certain species of fireworks tried by a jury.—Jones v. Firemen's Fund Ins. Co., 51 N. Y. 318, affirming (1868) 2 Daly, 307.

[x] (Ohio, 1879) Where a defense to an action against an indorser is that, on sale of property securing the note, it brought a larger amount than was sufficient to satisfy the note, but plaintiff negligently permitted second lien holders to obtain a portion of the fund, thereby preventing full payment of the note, defendant is entitled to a jury trial.—Clarke v. Huff, 6 Ohio Dec. 771.

[y] (Pa. 1857) Defendant was entitled to a trial by jury, in an action against him on a note, where he interposed an affidavit of defense, setting forth "that the said note was placed fraudulently in circulation, and neither the defendants nor the drawer received any consideration therefor, and that the said note was given to a certain note bearer to have discounted for said defendants, since which time neither the note nor any proceeds thereof have ever been received."—Rifer v. Reed, 2 Phila. 342.

[z] (S. C. 1818) By an act of assembly, where a bond is for other than the payment of money, the plaintiff may be compelled to submit the condition of the bond and the special circumstances to a jury, to assess the damages.—Cowan v. McCullough, 2 Mill, Const. 165.

[zz] (Tex. 1867) In a proceeding upon a forfeited bail bond, where the defendant sought to put in issue the legitimacy of the state government and the authority of the officers acting thereunder, as a defense, held, that he was not entitled to a jury to try such issue.—Shrader v. State, 30 Tex. 386.

Affidavit of defense as prerequisite to right, see post, § 168.

Application of constitutional provisions as to legal and equitable suits, see post, § 37 [f].

Requiring affidavit of defense as infringement of right; see post, § 209.

[a] (U. S. 1872) Where a seizure of goods has been made on land for an infringement of the internal revenue laws, the claimant is entitled to a trial by jury, if he appears and files an answer denying the facts charged in the information; and the court cannot strike out his answer, thus depriving him of his right to trial by jury.—Garnharts v. United States, 83 U. S. (16 Wall.) 162, 21 L. Ed. 275.

[b] (Ala. 1838) A denial, in a case in admiralty, of the allegations of the petition, and concluding to the country, is the tender of an issue to a jury, and cannot be tried by the court.—Gayle v. Preston, 8 Port. 291.

[c] (Fla. 1869) A respondent in an information to try his title to an office can claim no trial by jury until he tenders an issue of fact.—State v. Gleason, 12 Fla. 190.

[d] (Ill. 1892) Where objections to an application for judgment for delinquent taxes show upon their face that the matters alleged constitute no defense to the application, the court may overrule them without submitting the issues of fact to a jury.—Scott v. People, 142 Ill. 291, 33 N. E. 180.

[e] (Iowa, 1868) The question whether a release taken by a defendant of "all causes of action," etc., on settlement of his appeal from a justice's judgment, included the costs of the suit, is one of law for the court, and on which he cannot call a jury.—Packer v. Packer, 24 Iowa, 20.

[f] (Kan. 1892) Where the answer in an action against the surety on a note does not state a defense, defendant's request for a jury trial is properly refused.—Goodacre v. Skinner, 47 Kan. 575, 28 Pac. 705.

[g] (Ky. 1846) Under act 1831 (1 St. Laws, 357), which gives a remedy, by motion, against public officers, for failing to pay up the revenue in their hands, where the amount to be recovered on such motion is liquidated, no jury is necessary, unless rendered so by the nature of the defense set up.—Rodes v. Commonwealth, 45 Ky. (6 B. Mon.) 359.

[h] (Me. 1823) In assumpsit by plaintiff, as indorsee of a note, defendants pleaded the general issue. When the case was called for trial, counsel for defendants appeared and demanded a trial by jury. The court asked defendants' counsel if his clients had a substantial defense, to which the counsel replied that he did not know as he had not seen his clients, but had received a letter from them, from which it might be fairly inferred that they had a substantial defense. Held, that it was error to call on plaintiff to prove his demand, and to enter a default against defendants.—Frothingham v. Dutton, 2 Me. (2 Greenl.) 255.

[i] (Mo. 1884) Under Rev. St. § 3000, giving trial by jury "in an action," etc., the test is plaintiff's suit, not the defense set up or the issue developed in a cause.—Smith v. St. Louis Beef Canning Co., 14 Mo. App. 522.

[j] (Ohio, 1879) In an action for money only, where there was an issue of fact joined which defendant was entitled to have tried by a jury, it was error to refuse one.—Clarke v. Huff, 8 Am. Law Rec. 26.

[k] (Pa. 1852) On exceptions to a sheriff's return, setting forth that the mortgage upon which plaintiff claims the proceeds of the sale "was given without any considerations whatever, and with the intention of hindering and delaying the exceptants, and other just creditors of the defendant, and preventing the payment of his debts and liabilities," the exceptants are entitled to a jury trial.—Lippincott v. Lippincott, 1 Phila. 396.

[l] (Pa. 1860) In an action on a duebill, signed by an agent of the defendant, if the affidavit of defense expressly denies the authority of the agent, the defendant is entitled to a jury trial, although a partial payment may be indorsed on the instrument.—Hunter v. Reilly, 36 Pa. (12 Casey) 509.

[m] (Tex. 1853) Where the action is on a liquidated demand, and the answer tenders only an issue of law, there is no necessity for a jury trial.—Richardson v. Ellett, 10 Tex. 190.

[a] (U. S. 1869) Where the record of a foreign court is denied by the plea of nul tiel record, the issue is to be tried by a jury, because the existence of the record to be inspected must first be made by proof, which it may be necessary to submit to a jury.—Basset v. United States, 76 U. S. (9 Wall.) 38, 19 L. Ed. 548.

[b] (Ky. 1830) An issue on a plea of nul tiel record is properly triable by the court.—Carson v. Pearl, 27 Ky. (4 J. J. Marsh.) 92.

[c] (Mo. 1884) On a proceeding by scire facias to revive a judgment, the defendant is not entitled to have a plea of nul tiel record tried by a jury.—Simpson v. Watson, 15 Mo. App. 425.

[e] (Pa. 1846) The plea of nul tiel record to an alderman's judgment on scire facias against the bail on appeal, made in trial de novo on appeal, is triable by the record, and not by a jury.—Oliver v. Foster, 3 Clark, 388.

[f] (R. I. 1889) In an action on an appeal bond, binding the principal and sureties severally, where defendant pleads nul tiel record, a jury trial is properly refused.—State v. Sutcliffe, 16 R. I. 410, 16 Atl. 710.

§ 33. Plea of payment.

[a] (N. Y. 1889) Under Code Civ. Proc. § 968, providing that issues of fact in actions for money judgment shall be tried by a jury, unless a jury trial is waived or a reference directed, an action by a legatee against an executor, for an alleged unpaid balance of a legacy, the defenses being that the alleged balance was paid out as a legacy tax, and that the question of defendant's liability was res judicata, is triable by a jury.—Kennagh v. McColgan, 53 Hun, 635, 6 N. Y. Supp. 244, 17 Civ. Proc. R. 287.

[b] (N. C. 1874) Jury trial in a case involving plea of payment is matter of right, if demanded in due season; and a refusal to allow it is reversible error.—Isler v. Murphy, 71 N. C. 436; Rowland v. Thompson, Id. 467.

[c] (Tex. 1894) Where, in an action on a verified account for goods sold, defendant demanded a jury and paid the jury fee, and filed a general demurrer and denial, and, objections thereto having been sustained, filed an amended answer consisting of a general denial and plea of part payment, he was entitled to a trial by jury.—Mullaly v. Goggan (Civ. App.) 25 S. W. 666.

[a] (La. 1874) Where a reconventional demand is pleaded in a suit not triable by jury, it is not error to refuse to submit such demand to the jury.—Pool v. Alexander, 26 La. Ann. 669.

[b] (La. 1880) The maker and indorser of a promissory note are not entitled to plead an unliquidated claim in compensation against the holder, nor, by swearing to the plea, are they entitled to a trial by jury.—Burbridge v. Anderson, 32 La. Ann. 877.

[c] (N. Y. 1889) In an action by an overseer of the poor before a justice, for a statutory penalty of $50 for illegally selling liquor, a counterclaim alleging that plaintiff owes defendant $100 for money advanced to him officially, under a promise to refund it if he should sue defendant for such a penalty, is not authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 501, allowing counterclaims; and such plea creates no issue requiring a jury trial, under section 3068, which provides for such a trial in the county court on an appeal from a justice, when an issue of fact was joined in the justice's court, and the judgment demanded exceeds $50.—Moore v. Trimmer, 52 Hun, 612, 6 N. Y. Supp. 480, 17 Civ. Proc. R. 99.

[a] (U. S. 1874) Though, by the organic act of the territory of Montana, common law and chancery jurisdiction is exercised by the same court, and, by legislation of the territory, all distinctions in pleadings and modes of procedure in common law actions and in equity are abolished, the relief which the law affords must be administered through the intervention of a jury, unless a jury be waived.—Basey v. Gallagher, 87 U. S. (20 Wall.) 670, 22 L. Ed. 452.

[b] (Ga. 1857) In this state all equity cases are tried by a special jury, under direction of the court as to the law.—Brown v. Burke, 22 Ga. 574.

[c] (Ind. 1889) Whenever the cause of action is one that can only be enforced by invoking the equitable powers of the court, then the right of trial by jury does not obtain, but, if the cause of action does not depend on the equity jurisdiction of the court, a jury may be demanded.—Martin v. Martin, 118 Ind. 227, 20 N. E. 763.

[d] (Mont. 1872) Under the Code of Procedure, cases in equity in which equitable relief is demanded, and actions at law in which an equitable defense is made, cannot be tried by a jury, as at law, but the decree must be rendered by the judge, sitting as a chancellor in a court of chancery.—Gallagher v. Basey, 1 Mont. 457.

[e] (N. Y. 1895) The fact that an equitable action will involve a conflict of evidence is not ground for granting a trial by jury.—Cantoni v. Forster, 12 Misc. Rep. 343, 33 N. Y. Supp. 565.

[f] (N. C. 1884) The right to a jury exists as well when the issue involves equitable elements as when they are legal only.—Worthy v. Shields, 90 N. C. 192.

[g] (Pa. 1882) It was never intended by the grant of equity jurisdiction to take away the common-law right of trial by jury in cases in which, by the ordinary practice, it is competent to determine the rights of parties in that manner.—Gerard Bank v. Maguire (Com. Pl.) 39 Leg. Int. 168.

[h] (Tenn. 1885) Suits in chancery are not suits "triable by jury," within the meaning of that term in Code, §§ 3602–3605.—Cooper v. Stockard, 84 Tenn. (16 Lea) 140.

[a] (Mich. 1867) It is not, it seems, in the power of the legislature, under the constitution of the state, to provide for the trial of titles to land in equity, in cases which were triable at law before the present constitution, unless it shall first make provision for having the case tried by jury if the defendant shall so elect.—Tabor v. Cook, 15 Mich. 322.

[b] (Pa. 1873) The legislature cannot give a tribunal, acting without a jury, power to determine legal rights, unless there be some equitable ground of relief.—Appeal of Haines, 73 Pa. (23 P. F. Smith) 169.

[a] (U. S. 1855) Const. Amend. 7, providing that, in suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed $20, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, does not affect the exclusive jurisdiction of courts of equity, nor that which they have exercised concurrent with courts of law, so as to effect a right to sue in equity in Iowa, to enforce a decree rendered in favor of complainants in Kentucky.—Shields v. Thomas, 59 U. S. (18 How.) 253, 15 L. Ed. 368.

[c] (Ark. 1887) Under the seventh section of the Arkansas declaration of rights, providing that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate, and extend to all cases at law, without regard to the amount in controversy," the right is confined to cases which at common law were properly so triable before, and does not affect the discretion of a court of chancery to dispense with jury trial.—State v. Churchill, 3 S. W. 352.

[d] (Cal. 1855) The parties to a suit in chancery are not entitled to a trial by jury.—Walker v. Sedgwick, 5 Cal. 192.

[f] (Ga. 1877) The provision of the constitution that "the court shall render judgment without the verdict of a jury in all civil cases founded on contract, where an issuable defense is not filed on oath," refers to common-law, and not to equity, trials. The words, "civil cases," have been so construed (Gilbert v. Thomas [1847] 3 Ga. [3 Kelly] 575); and the word. "judgment," is appropriate to proceedings at law, and not to equity.—Isaacs v. Tinley, 58 Ga. 457.

[i] (N. H. 1876) In proceedings in equity there is no constitutional right of trial by jury.—Bellows v. Bellows, 58 N. H. 60.

[j] (N. Y. 1847) Under Const. art. 1, § 2, providing that "trial by jury in all cases in which it has been heretofore used shall remain inviolate forever," a trial by a justice of the supreme court at a special term of an equity case without a jury is proper, since the practice of the court of chancery before the adoption of the constitution dispensed with trial by jury.—Rathbun v. Rathbun, 3 How. Prac. 139.

[k] (Wis. 1861) The provision in the constitution preserving the jury trial does not extend to equity cases, in which the party has never been entitled thereto as of right.—Stilwell v. Kellogg, 14 Wis. 461.

[a] (Mass. 1866) The provisions of St. 1862, c. 181, and St. 1863, c. 249, relating to ratifying assessments by mutual insurance companies, that all questions that may arise shall be heard and determined as in other equity cases, sufficiently provide for a hearing by jury.—Hamilton Mut. Ins. Co. v. Parker, 93 Mass. (11 Allen) 574.

[b] (Mich. 1889) The act regulating the practice in chancery courts (Laws 1887, p. 358) provides that either party shall be entitled to a jury trial, to be demanded in the same manner as in a suit at law, and the verdict of such jury on any question of fact shall have the same force and effect in the circuit court in chancery, and in the supreme court on appeal, as the verdict in an action at law. Whenever a jury is demanded, an issue or issues shall be framed under the direction of the court, if the court deems it necessary to submit such issue, and in all cases of trial in open court, whether with or without a jury, the court shall rule upon all questions of admissibility of testimony in like manner, and with like effect, as in a suit at law. When the cause has been tried by a jury the parties shall be entitled to make and settle a case, in which it shall be necessary to set out only so much of the testimony as may be necessary to an understanding of the questions raised; and an appeal may be taken as in ordinary chancery cases. Held, that the changes are so entirely in conflict with the rights of parties and the remainder of the chancery system that it cannot be carried into effect, as it permits the interests of the several parties to be decided partly by a jury and partly in some other way.—Brown v. Kalamazoo Circuit Judge, 75 Mich. 274, 42 N. W. 827, 5 L. R. A. 226.

[c] (N. Y. 1891) Laws 1844, c. 220, applying only to the city of New York, provided that, in the foreclosure of mechanics' liens, the issue should be joined and the judgment enforced in the same manner as in actions of assumpsit. Const. 1846, art. 1, § 2, declared that trial by jury should, "in all cases in which it has heretofore been used, remain inviolate forever." Held, that this does not render unconstitutional the mechanic's lien act of 1885, c. 342, applying to New York city as well as to the state generally, providing that the manner and form of instituting and prosecuting to judgment actions to foreclose mechanics' liens shall be the same as in actions to foreclose mortgages, and thus taking away the right to a trial by jury in such actions.—Riggs v. Shannon (Com. Pl.) 16 N. Y. Supp. 939, 27 Abb. N. C. 456, 21 Civ. Proc. R. 434.

[d] (N. Y. 1891) Code Civ. Proc. § 970, provides that "where a party is entitled, by the constitution, or by express provision of law, to a trial by jury of one or more issues of fact," the court must, on motion, cause "those issues to be distinctly and plainly stated for trial accordingly." Laws 1891, c. 208, amending this section, extends this right so as to embrace all actions "where one or more questions arise on the pleadings as to the value of property, or as to the damages which a party may be entitled to recover." Held, that this amendment applies to actions pending when it took effect as well as to actions subsequently brought.—Underhill v. Manhattan Ry. Co. (Sup.) 18 N. Y. Supp. 43, 27 Abb. N. C. 478, 21 Civ. Proc. R. 441; Eggers v. Same (Super. N. Y.) 18 N. Y. Supp. 181, 27 Abb. N. C. 463, 21 Civ. Proc. R. 403.

[e] (N. Y.) Laws 1844, c. 220, relating to mechanics' liens in New York city, merely provided that liens may be filed where work has been done or materials furnished on buildings in that city; that foreclosure proceeding should be commenced by the service of a notice on the owner; and that issue should be joined on the appearance of the parties and tried as in action of assumpsit. Laws 1885, c. 342, relating to mechanics' liens, applies to the entire state, and provides that, in an action to foreclose, all persons having a lien on the property must be made defendants, and that the court may settle and determine the equities of all the parties thereto; and section 12 provides that the issues joined must be tried the same as other issues are tried. Held, that the act of 1885 does not violate Const. 1846, art. 1, § 2, which provides that "trial by jury, in all cases in which it has been heretofore used, shall remain inviolate forever," since the issues of fact in an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien are still triable by jury.—(1891) Schillinger Fire Proof Cement & Asphalt Co. v. Arnott (Sup.) 14 N. Y. Supp. 326; (1895) Id., 86 Hun, 182, 33 N. Y. Supp. 343.

[f] (Wis. 1883) Under Rev. St. § 3323, providing that any issue of fact in an action for a mechanic's lien shall, on demand of either party, be tried by a jury, there cannot be a peremptory reference, under section 2864, providing for reference in all cases involving the examination of a long account; the general law being controlled by the special provision.—Druse v. Horter, 57 Wis. 644, 16 N. W. 14.

[b] (Ala. 1843) It is competent for the chancellor to determine the question of lunacy, when raised by the pleadings, without directing an issue.—Alexander v. Alexander, 5 Ala. 517.

[c] (Ark. 1883) Gantt's Dig. § 4642, provides that "all other issues of fact [after specifying certain ones that must be tried by jury] * * * shall be tried by the court, subject to its power to order any issue or issues to be tried by a jury." Held not to enlarge the right of trial by jury, but to apply only to cases so triable before.—Williams v. Citizens, 40 Ark. 290.

[d] (Ga. 1822) Although it is the practice to associate a jury with the court in the determination of chancery causes, yet there is no law requiring it.—McGowan v. Jones, R. M. Charlt. 184.

[e] (Ga. 1852) In causes in equity the facts are to be submitted to a special jury, who have the exclusive right to pass upon them, and the court alone is to determine all questions of law.—Mounce v. Byars, 11 Ga. 180.

[f] (Iowa, 1868) A party in an equitable action triable by the first method of trying equitable actions cannot, as a matter of right, demand that the issues be tried by a jury.—State v. Orwig, 25 Iowa, 280.

[g] (Iowa, 1871) In an equitable proceeding, triable, under Revision, §§ 2998, 2999, by the second method of trial for equitable causes, either party is entitled to a jury to try the facts put in issue by the pleadings.—Benedict v. Hunt, 32 Iowa, 27.

[h] (Kan. 1890) Under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 266, 267, 289, 291, 292, while all issues of fact in the district court may be tried by a jury, in some cases they must be so tried, unless the parties waive a jury; but, in others, it is within the discretion of the court whether they shall be so tried.—Smith v. Wise, 44 Kan. 742, 25 Pac. 204.

[i] (Me. 1876) Under Act 1873, c. 130, it is imperative on the law court, on motion of either party, to frame issues for a jury trial in suits in equity.—Call v. Perkins, 65 Me. 439.

[j, k] (Mo. 1860) The trial of the issues raised in an action for the recovery of money only, to which the practice act of 1849 is applicable, is for the jury, unless a jury trial is waived.—Ragan v. McCoy, 29 Mo. 356.

[l] (Mo. 1879) In chancery cases the right of trial by jury does not exist, although the chancellor may direct certain isues of fact to be tried by a jury, but in such a case he will not bound by their finding.—Gay v. Ihm, 69 Mo. 584.

[m] (N. H. 1838) Under Bill of Rights, art. 22, in a chancery case, where there is a controversy about a matter of fact, defendant has a right to have the issue tried by a jury.—Marston v. Brackett, 9 N. H. 336.

[n] (N. H. 1846) A party to a bill in equity has a constitutional right to require a trial by jury of a contested matter of fact, if he asserts that right at a proper stage of the cause.—Holtt v. Burleigh, 18 N. H. 389.

[o] (N. Y. 1821) The question of lunacy may be decided by the court without the aid of a jury.—Smith v. Carll, 5 Johns. Ch. 118.

[p] (N. Y. 1863) In an action of an equitable nature, under the Code of Procedure, a party is not entitled as of right to a trial of issues by a jury, on the ground that the case is one in which courts of equity were formerly accustomed to award issues.—Moffat v. Moffat, 23 N. Y. Super. Ct. (10 Bosw.) 468; Same v. Mount, 17 Abb. Prac. 4.

[q] (N. Y. 1871) In an action by an attorney for various services, which required an examination of a long account and a reference, the items being denied, if the answer allege payment, that question must be disposed of before the accounts can be examined, and, as that is an issue which either party may require to be tried by a jury, a compulsory reference cannot be ordered till that issue is disposed of.—Schermerhorn v. Wood, 4 Daly, 158.

[r] (N. C. 1822) In this state issues of fact must be decided by a jury in equity as well as at law.—Taylor v. Person, 9 N. C. 298.

[s] (N. C. 1887) Issues of fact arising in the progress of an inquiry by commissioners appointed to allot a homestead claimed under execution, which issues arise not upon the pleadings, but merely upon exceptions to the findings of fact by the commissioners, are not such issues of fact as entitle the parties to a trial by jury.—Beavans v. Goodrich, 98 N. C. 217, 3 S. E. 516.

[t] (Or. 1895) Hill's Ann. Laws, § 396, providing that whenever, in an equity case, it becomes necessary or proper to inquire of any fact by the verdict of a jury, the court may direct a statement thereof, and a jury may be formed to inquire of the same, is merely declaratory of the common-law equitable procedure, and in such an action the submission of a question of fact to a jury is within the sound discretion of the court.—Raymond v. Flavel, 27 Or. 219, 40 Pac. 158.

[u] (Pa. 1861) Where the answer of a respondent avers an assignment of complainant's interest in the concern, under which his right to an account is denied, the assignment becomes thereby a preliminary question, to be disposed of by a jury, unless the parties prefer a master or a referee.—Collyer v. Collyer, 38 Pa. (2 Wright) 257.

[a] (Iowa, 1889) Code 1873, § 2517, provides that, in actions which have been "properly commenced by ordinary proceedings," either party shall have the right to have equitable issues tried to the court. Section 2740 provides that issues of fact in actions begun by ordinary proceedings must be tried to a jury, unless waived. "All other issues shall be tried by the court," unless referred. Held, that a defendant, in an equitable action to foreclose a mortgage, who sets up a counterclaim on which a legal issue is framed, is not entitled to have such issue tried to a jury.—Ryman v. Lynch, 76 Iowa, 587, 41 N. W. 320.

[b] (Ky. 1893) Plaintiff sued in equity for the price of repairs made by him on defendants' flouring mill, and asked that a lien be declared and enforced on the mill for such price. Defendants admitted the contract under which the work was done, but claimed that it was not properly done, and asked damages. Held that, as the right to a lien depended on the decision of legal issues, it was error to refuse to transfer the case to the common-law docket, to be tried by a jury.—Carder v. Weisengburg, 95 Ky. 135, 23 S. W. 964.

[c] (N. Y. 1888) The refusal of a request by defendant, who has pleaded a counterclaim, in an action to foreclose a mortgage, for leave to apply at special term for the framing of issues for a jury, is discretionary.—MacKellar v. Rogers, 109 N. Y. 468, 17 N. E. 350.

[d] (N. Y. 1888) A defendant in foreclosure, who counterclaims money due and damages for breach of a contract, asking an affirmative judgment thereon, cannot demand a jury trial of the issues thus raised as of course under Code Civ. Proc. § 974, providing that "where the defendant interposes a counterclaim, and thereupon demands an affirmative judgment against the plaintiff, the mode of trial of an issue of fact arising thereupon is the same as if it arose in an action brought by the defendant against the plaintiff for the cause of action stated in the counterclaim, and demanding the same judgment;" as the action, being for other than a money judgment, is not within Code, § 968, providing that an issue of fact in an action for a money judgment only must be tried by a jury.—MacKellar v. Rogers, 109 N. Y. 468, 17 N. E. 350, affirming (1885) 52 N. Y. Super. Ct. (20 Jones & S.) 468.

[e] (N. Y. 1893) In an action to enforce a mechanic's lien, it is imperative on the court, under Code, §§ 970, 974, to grant an application, seasonably made, for trial by jury of questions of fact arising on a counterclaim for damages.—Deeves v. Metropolitan Realty Co. of City of New York (Com. Pl.) 6 Misc. Rep. 91, 26 N. Y. Supp. 23, judgment affirmed (1894) 141 N. Y. 587, 36 N. E. 739.

[f] (N. Y. 1894) Where defendant interposed a common-law counterclaim, he thereupon became entitled to trial by jury, and his motion to frame issues for trial by jury should be granted of course, unless plaintiff asks for a reference, and shows that the case is referable.—Roslyn Heights Land & Imp. Co. v. Burrowes, 76 Hun, 62, 27 N. Y. Supp. 622.

Cancellation for fraud, see post, § 47 [a].
Fraudulent conveyances, see post, § 48.
In action by receiver, see post, § 74 [g].

[a] (Md. 1835) The chancellor, upon an allegation of fraud in obtaining a deed, is not bound to send the facts to be tried by a jury, if he can determine the matter himself, to his own satisfaction, upon the evidence.—Stewart v. Iglehart, 7 Gill & J. 132, 28 Am. Dec. 202.

[aa] (Minn. 1868) St. 13 Eliz. c. 5, and the statute of this state, rendering void certain conveyances made with a fraudulent intent, are but declaratory of the common law; and where, in an action for the recovery of specific personal property, such fraudulent intent is in issue, it must, under Gen. St. p. 478, § 199, be tried by a jury or referred.—Blackman v. Wheaton, 13 Minn. 326 (Gil. 299).

[b] (Mo. 1867) Whether certain promises were fraudulently given, and were the sole ground of plaintiff's action, to his injury and to defendant's gain, should be submitted to a jury on an issue directed on that question.—Rutherford v. Williams, 42 Mo. 18.

[c] (N. Y. 1845) Where a motion to set aside proceedings in a suit in chancery was founded on a release executed by the opposite party, and was opposed on the ground that the release was obtained by fraudulent representations, it was held that the court could determine the question of fraud without the intervention of a jury.—Ferris v. Crawford, 2 Denio, 595.

[d] (N. Y.) In an action to foreclose a mortgage, defendant is not entitled, as a matter of right, to a trial by jury of a defense of fraud.—(1876) Knickerbocker Life Ins. Co. v. Nelson, 8 Hun, 21; (1890) Stephens v. Humphries, 57 Hun, 587, 10 N. Y. Supp. 455.

Effect of equitable defense to legal action, see post, §§ 59, 60.

—— of legal defense to equitable action, see post, § 56 [a, d].

In partition, see post, § 44.

Power to regulate, see ante, § 36 [a].

[a] (U. S. 1895) A court of equity has no jurisdiction, on a petition of a receiver appointed by it, for an order requiring the delivery of possession of real estate, to try a claim of title to such real estate, set up by the occupant thereof, but the claimant is entitled to a trial by jury.—Coles v. Northrup, 66 Fed. 831, 14 C. C. A. 138, 30 U. S. App. 270.

[b] (Cal. 1891) Under Const. art. 1, § 7, providing that the right to trial by jury shall be secured to all and remain inviolate, defendant, in an action to quiet title, under Code Civ. Proc. § 738, is entitled to jury trial on the issues of prior possession and ouster when his verified answer shows that shortly before the commencement of the action he was rightfully in possession, and was ousted by plaintiff and wrongfully kept out of possession by him.—Donahue v. Meister, 88 Cal. 121, 25 Pac. 1096, 22 Am. St. Rep. 283.

[c] (N. Y. 1884) Where, in an action to foreclose a mortgage given by A., a denial is interposed by B., who is joined with A., as defendant, that his title or interest is subordinate to that of plaintiff's, as alleged, and he claims possession by a title paramount and adverse to his, the complaint should be dismissed as to B., as the right of possession between A. and B. cannot be settled in a foreclosure action, but must be tried by a jury.—Meigs v. Willis, 66 How. Prac. 466.

[e] (S. C. 1885) An action for the recovery of land, or, alternatively, for an order limiting its use, involves the title to land, and is triable only by a jury, unless a jury is waived.—St. Philip's Church v. Zion Presbyterian Church, 23 S. C. 297.

[f] (S. C. 1886) In an action for foreclosure of a mortgage given by devisees on their testator's land, a person was made defendant who claimed title paramount under a judgment against the executor and a sale thereunder. Held, that the issue as to such person's paramount title should be tried by a jury, and, after disposing of that issue, the case should be proceeded with as an equity case.—Sale v. Meggett, 25 S. C. 72.

[g] (S. C. 1893) Mortgagees of land made one P., who was in possession, and the mortgagors, defendants in a foreclosure suit, to which no defense was made. P. and one of the mortgagors held the legal title. The mortgagees obtained title from the master, and agreed with the mortgagors to reconvey on certain conditions. Afterwards the former brought an action for specific performance, and, in default thereof, for cancellation of the agreement, sale of the premises, and possession. P. was made a defendant, and set up a claim under a parol partition made with his mother prior to the mortgage, and by adverse possession. Held that, on the trial of such action, P. was entitled to a jury, since as to him it was merely an action for possession.—Marshall v. Pitts, 39 S. C. 390, 17 S. E. 831.

In actions in general, see post, § 85.

In mandamus, see post, § 106 [j].

Statutory provisions, see ante, § 38 [d].

Suit for damages by or against receivers, see post, § 74 [a, h].

Proceedings for assessment by jury, see "Damages," vol. 15, cc. 2343–2351, §§ 520, 520½; cc. 2447, 2448, § 575.

[a] (Fla. 1895) Laws 1889, c. 3884, § 2, providing that courts of chancery shall entertain suits to enjoin trespasses on timbered lands, and the cutting and removal of trees therefrom, and cause an account to be taken of the damage to the complainant from such trespass, and decree payment of the amount found due, to the extent of conferring jurisdiction on the court of chancery of an account for damages for a mere trespass cognizable at law, in respect to which the court had no jurisdiction independent of the statute, impairs the right of trial by jury.—Wiggins v. Williams, 36 Fla. 637, 18 South. 859, 30 L. R. A. 754.

[b] (Ind. 1892) Where the facts stated in a complaint present no ground for a specific decree, and it is sought to recover compensation by way of damages only, it is proper to submit the cause to a jury; the rule being that if the remedy sought be equitable the court cannot be required to call a jury, but if it be legal the trial is by jury, unless the jury is waived.—Robertson v. McPherson, 4 Ind. App. 595, 31 N. E. 478.

[c] (Ky. 1822) In a chancery case the court can decree the value of the hire of the slaves in question according to his own computation, without the intervention of a jury.—Baltzell v. Hall's Heirs, 11 Ky. (1 Litt.) 97.

[d] (Ky. 1895) In a suit in equity to recover the value of lumber cut from land, and to enjoin further trespasses, the court may determine the value of the lumber removed, and the damages for the injury arising therefrom.—Semon v. Freitag, 29 S. W. 320.

[e] (N. J. 1895) Where the amount of damages for breach of covenant against incumbrances is admitted by the party liable, such damages may be assessed by a court of equity without the intervention of a jury.—Schmid v. Lisiewski, 53 N. J. Eq. (8 Dick.) 670, 31 Atl. 603.

[f] (N. Y. 1861) The holder of a note, holding collateral securities as a pledge for its payment, assigned the securities to a third person. Held, in an action by the pledgor against the assignee for an accounting, that the court had no power to render judgment for damages against the assignee, as if the action had been of a legal, and not an equitable, nature, as this would deprive defendant of a right of trial by jury.—Lewis v. Varnum, 12 Abb. Prac. 305.

[g] (N. Y. 1861) In an action by a purchaser of land, in which the only relief specifically demanded was that the vendor be compelled to perform the agreement by conveying, it appeared that the defendant, had never been able to perform his agreement. Held, that the court could not order a reference to ascertain the damages for the breach of the agreement, and that the defendant had a right to have such questions tried by a jury.—Stevenson v. Buxton, 15 Abb. Prac. 352, reversing (1859) 8 Abb. Prac. 414, 37 Barb. 13.

[h] (N. Y. 1863) In an action to compel a specific performance and for an injunction till performance is made, it is competent for the court to render judgment simply for damages for the failure to perform, without allowing the defendant a jury trial.—Dunnell v. Ketcltas, 16 Abb. Prac. 205.

[i] (N. Y. 1885) In an action brought by a vendee to compel the specific performance of a contract of sale, or, if specific performance could not be made, for the recovery of the purchase price and damages, the court cannot, on determining that specific performance can be made, proceed to adjudicate on the amount of the claim for purchase money or for damages, without the intervention of a jury, since such claims are strictly legal in their nature.—Willis v. Bellamy, 52 N. Y. Super. Ct. (20 Jones & S.) 373.

[j] (N. Y. 1891) In an action to restrain the future maintenance of an elevated railroad and to recover damages for its maintenance in the past, the defendant is not entitled to a jury trial of the claim for damages, under the provision of the New York constitution that "trial by jury in all cases in which it has heretofore been used shall remain inviolate," since the cause of action is an equitable one, and a court of equity may award money damages which are incidental to the relief by injunction.—Lynch v. Metropolitan El. Ry. Co., 129 N. Y. 274, 29 N. E. 315, 26 Am. St. Rep. 523, 15 L. R. A. 287; Herold v. Same, 129 N. Y. 636, 29 N. E. 319, affirming (1891) Lynch v. Same, 59 N. Y. Super. Ct. 582, 13 N. Y. Supp. 956.

[k] (N. Y. 1891) In an action to restrain the maintenance of an elevated railroad in front of plaintiff's premises, plaintiff cannot recover for past damages caused by such elevated railroad while the premises were owned by plaintiff's grantor, and assigned to plaintiff by his grantor, as defendant would be deprived of its right to jury trial as to such past damages.—Siefke v. Manhattan Ry. Co., 59 N. Y. Super. Ct. (27 Jones & S.) 444, 14 N. Y. Supp. 763.

[l] (N. Y. 1891) Const. art. 6, § 8, as amended Jan. 1, 1870, provides that "the legislature shall have the same powers to alter and regulate the jurisdiction and proceedings in law and equity as they have heretofore possessed." Code Civ. Proc. § 970, provides that, "where a party is entitled by the constitution or by express provision of law to a trial by jury of one or more issues of fact," the court must, on motion, cause "those issues to be distinctly and plainly stated for trial accordingly." Laws 1891, c. 208, amending this section, extends this right so as to embrace all actions "where one or more questions arise on the pleadings as to the value of property or as to the damages which a party may be entitled to recover." Held, that such amendment is not unconstitutional, as granting a right of trial by jury in cases formerly within the cognizance of courts of equity.—Eggers v. Manhattan Ry. Co. (Super. N. Y.) 18 N. Y. Supp. 181, 27 Abb. N. C. 463, 21 Civ. Proc. R. 403; Underhill v. Same (Sup.) 18 N. Y. Supp. 43, 27 Abb. N. C. 478, 21 Civ. Proc. R. 441.

[m] (N. Y. 1891) Under Code Civ. Proc. § 970, providing that, where a party is entitled by the constitution or by express provision of law to a trial by jury of one or more issues of fact, the court must, on motion, cause those issues to be distinctly and plainly stated for trial accordingly, as amended by Laws 1891, c. 208, extending that right so as to embrace all actions where one or more questions arise on the pleadings as to the value of the property or as to the damages which the party may be entitled to recover, does not apply to the question of fee damage which it is necessary for the court to determine, in order to grant the relief demanded, in an action praying for an injunction against the construction of an elevated railway and asking for a judgment for past damages.—Eggers v. Manhattan Ry. Co. (Super. N. Y.) 18 N. Y. Supp. 181, 27 Abb. N. C. 463, 21 Civ. Proc. R. 403; Underhill v. Same (Sup.) 18 N. Y. Supp. 43, 27 Abb. N. C. 478, 21 Civ. Proc. R. 441.

[n] (N. Y. 1891) Under Laws 1891, c. 208, amending Code Civ. Proc. § 970, providing that, where one or more questions arise on the pleadings as to the value of property or as to the damages which a party may be entitled to recover, those issues shall, on motion, be distinctly and plainly stated for trial by jury, in an action against an elevated railroad company for injunction and damages, presenting an issue as to past damages, such issue comes within the amendment, and, on a motion to that effect, must be tried by a jury.—Eggers v. Manhattan Ry. Co. (Super. N. Y.) 18 N. Y. Supp. 181, 27 Abb. N. C. 463, 21 Civ. Proc. R. 403.

[o] (N. Y. 1892) Code Civ. Proc. § 970, as amended by Laws 1891, c. 208, providing that where a party is entitled by the constitution or by express provision of law to a trial by jury of one or more issues of fact, in an action not specified in section 968, or where one or more questions arise on the pleadings as to the value of property or as to damages which a party may be entitled to recover, either party may have an order directing such issues to be stated for trial by jury, does not entitle defendant, in an action to restrain the running of his elevated road, and for damages, to such order as a matter of right, but the granting of such an order rests in the sole discretion of the court.—Shepard v. Manhattan Ry. Co., 131 N. Y. 215, 30 N. E. 187; Levingston v. New York El. R. Co., 131 N. Y. 600, 30 N. E. 189.

[p] (N. Y. 1893) Where, in an action for equitable relief only against several defendants, the court found that no grounds therefor existed against any of defendants, but that plaintiff was entitled to damages at law against one of defendants for breach of contract, the court properly refused to submit the case to the jury.—Hawes v. Dobbs (Com. Pl.) 18 N. Y. Supp. 123.

[q] (N. Y. 1893) Where a plaintiff, suing for specific performance, fails to make out a case entitling him to equitable relief, he has no right to have the case tried as an action at law for damages, especially where, before the trial, the defendant's motion for a jury trial has been refused.—Lochmann v. Meehan, 66 Hun, 633, 21 N. Y. Supp. 389.

[r] (N. Y. 1894) In an action by an abutting property owner to restrain the future maintenance of an elevated railroad, and to recover damages for its maintenance in the past, defendant is not entitled to a jury trial as to damages which accrued when plaintiff had only a part interest in the property, the right of action for which she acquired by assignment from the other co-tenants.—Hunter v. Manhattan Ry. Co., 141 N. Y. 281, 36 N. E. 400.

on the question of past damages, though he obtained the right to such damages by assignment.—Klipstein v. New York El. R. Co., 8 Misc. Rep. 457, 28 N. Y. Supp. 683.

[t] (Wash. 1894) In a suit for equitable relief and damages, the court is not obliged, on request of a party, to call a jury to assess damages.—Wintermute v. Carner, 8 Wash. 585, 36 Pac. 490.

[u] (Wash. 1895) Where one purchases a business, and takes possession thereof, under a contract that the purchase price shall be deposited in a bank till it is determined whether the seller or another person claiming to own the business is entitled thereto, and that, in the event of its being determined that the seller is the owner, the money shall be paid to him, but, if found that the claimant is the owner, the money shall be returned to the purchaser, and the purchaser is afterwards made a party defendant to a suit by the claimant to be declared the owner, and for damages for the conversion of the good will of the business, he is not entitled as of right to a jury trial on the question of damages.—Murray v. Okanogan Live Stock & Dressed Beef Co., 12 Wash. 259, 40 Pac. 942.

[a] (Mo. 1894) In partition, where there is an issue between two defendants as to which is entitled to one undivided half of the land, and the decision of that issue depends on a finding as to the alleged title by adverse possession of one of the parties, a trial by jury as to that issue should be granted, when asked.—Benoist v. Thomas, 121 Mo. 660, 27 S. W. 609.

[b] (Mo. 1895) On issues in an action for partition by heirs as to whether gifts to the parties by deceased were advancements, or absolute gifts, there is no absolute right to trial by jury.—Gunn v. Thruston, 130 Mo. 339, 32 S. W. 654.

[d] (N. Y. 1881) Where, in an action for partition, there were a large number of defendants and many separate appearances, and where the case presented four distinct issues of fact, two of which affected distinct parts of the property, and the other two affected undivided shares in the whole of the remainder, held, that though the cause could be better tried by reference than in any other way, yet, if any of the parties objected to a reference, the case should go to a jury; but, except as to the issues raised by claim of ownership of two pieces of the property, a compulsory reference might be ordered, and the action might be severed, so as to try separately before a referee the issues as to the remainder of the property, the title to which was not in dispute.—Cassedy v. Wallace, 61 How. Prac. 240.

[e] (N. Y. 1881) Under Laws 1853, c. 238, an heir at law may maintain an action for partition of a testator's lands, and declare void a devise under which the widow is in occupation thereof. In such action, the issues may, by timely demand, be tried by jury. Accordingly, the law does not contravene the constitutional inhibition of trial of title in an action of partition.—Ward v. Ward, 23 Hun, 431; Wager v. Wager, Id. 439.

[f] (N. Y. 1889) Code Civ. Proc. § 1544, which provides that an issue of fact in a partition case shall be triable by a jury, applies only to issues of fact denying plaintiff's right to maintain the action, and not to issues involving long accounts between the co-tenants, arising from a contract among them to improve the land and share the expense in the ratio of their respective interests, and such issues may be tried by a referee.—Brown v. Brown, 52 Hun, 532, 5 N. Y. Supp. 803.

[h] (Pa. 1873) Where, in a suit for partition, the possession of the plaintiff, who was one of the tenants in common, is disputed by the others, an issue should be framed, and the facts found by the jury.—Harding v. Devitt, 10 Phila. 95, 30 Leg. Int. 416.

[i] (S. C. 1892) In an action of partition, defendant is entitled to a jury trial of the issues as to the title as made by the pleadings; and, unless the same is waived, it is error to frame an issue out of chancery and submit it to a jury.—Capell v. Moses, 36 S. C. 559, 15 S. E. 711.

[j] (S. C. 1894) In an action by the widow of intestate against the administrator, who claims as sole heir, for partition of land, defendant is entitled to a jury trial, under Code, § 274, of the question whether plaintiff is the widow of deceased.—Osborne v. Osborne, 41 S. C. 195, 19 S. E. 494.

[a] (Minn. 1891) On the trial of an action, which was brought to determine adverse claims to real property, and to cancel and set aside, with the record thereof, certain deeds and mortgages relating to the same, the plaintiffs were not entitled, as a matter of strict right, to the verdict of a jury upon any question of fact.—Roussain v. Patten, 46 Minn. 308, 48 N. W. 1122.

[b] (N. J. 1873) Quiet occupation under claim of title entitles the occupant to an issue at law to try the validity of an adverse claim under P. L. 1870, p. 20, "to compel the determination of claims to real estate in certain cases, and to quiet the title to the same," though the adverse claimant is a tenant in common.—Powell v. Mayo, 24 N. J. Eq. (9 C. E. Green) 178.

Issue of fraud, see ante, § 41.
Question of title, see ante, § 42 [c, f, g].
Set-off and counterclaim, see ante, § 40.

[a] (Iowa, 1891) In an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien, where the owner claims to have conveyed the land before the lien was filed, he has no right to have the cause transferred to the law calendar to have a trial by jury on the account only.—Frost v. Clark, 82 Iowa, 298, 48 N. W. 82.

[aa] (Kan. 1868) In an action on a note for foreclosure of a mortgage securing it and determination of the priority of liens, the defendant is entitled, on demand, under section 274, Civ. Code, to have the issues tried by a jury, where there has been no reference made under section 292.—Clemenson v. Chandler, 4 Kan. 558.

[b] (Ky. 1888) Under Civ. Code, § 12, providing that "in an equitable action * * * either party may by motion have the case transferred to the ordinary docket for the trial of any issue concerning which he is entitled to jury trial, but either party may require every equitable issue to be disposed of before such transfer," the issue as to the value of an attorney's services is transferable to the ordinary docket, to be tried by jury, in an action to enforce his lien, and recover for professional services; the equitable issue as to lien depending upon the result of the legal issue as to the value of the services.—Hill v. Phillips' Adm'r, 87 Ky. 169, 7 S. W. 917.

[c] (N. Y. 1840) Where the defendant, in a suit to foreclose a mortgage, alleged that the mortgage was usurious, on the ground that the mortgagor had been compelled, as a condition of the loan, to purchase property of the mortgagee at a price far exceeding its value, it was held to be a proper case for awarding an issue.—New Orleans Gaslight & Banking Co. v. Dudley, 8 Paige, 452.

[d] (N. Y. 1891) Laws 1885, c. 342 (Mechanic's Lien Act), provides that the manner and form of instituting and prosecuting actions to foreclose mechanics' liens shall be the same as in actions to foreclose mortgages (there being no right to a trial by jury in such actions). Code Civ. Proc. § 970, as amended by Laws 1891, c. 208, provides that where one or more questions arise on the pleadings "as to the value of property, or as to the damages which a party may be entitled to recover," either party may apply for an order directing "all such" issues to be stated for trial. Held that, in an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien, a party is only entitled to a trial by jury on the questions of the value of the property and damages, and not as to extra work done under the contract, or as to whether an alleged agreement was made subsequent to the contract, or as to payments.—Riggs v. Shannon (Com. Pl.) 16 N. Y. Supp. 939, 27 Abb. N. C. 456, 21 Civ. Proc. R. 434.

Issue of fraud, see ante, § 41 [c].

[a] (Ky. 1888) In an action to set aside a deed for mental incompetency of the grantor and fraud of the grantee, brought by one as next friend, an affidavit by the grantor was filed, asking for the dismissal of the action as brought against his will, denying his incompetency, and alleging that the deed was given for a valuable consideration. The motion to dismiss being overruled, he asked leave to file an answer setting up substantially the same facts, which was also refused. Held, that the grantor, having thus put in issue the fact of his incompetency, was entitled to jury trial of that issue, and a writ of inquiry should have been issued.—Howard v. Howard, 87 Ky. 616, 9 S. W. 411, 1 L. R. A. 610.

[b] (Mass. 1876) Whether the plaintiff in a bill in equity to reform an insurance policy by inserting a stipulation alleged to have been agreed to by the parties thereto can have issues framed for a jury is not a matter of right, but wholly at the discretion of the court.—Ross v. New England Mut. Ins. Co., 120 Mass. 113.

[a] (Mass. 1884) Defendant in a suit in equity, under St. 1875, c. 235, for the collection of a debt out of property alleged to have been fraudulently conveyed to him, is entitled to a jury, on the issue of the fraud in the conveyance.—Powers v. Raymond, 137 Mass. 483.

[b] (Mass. 1887) In a suit in equity to set aside a compromise made by defendant with his creditors, on the ground that their assent was obtained by fraud, held that, irrespective of the question whether defendant had a constitutional right to a trial by jury, the court, in the exercise of its discretion, should, on defendant's motion, frame issues for a jury, the case being in effect substantially a common-law case, wherein, but for the fact that, under Pub. St. c. 151, § 3, it was brought in equity, a trial by jury might have been had.—Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Moulton, 143 Mass. 543, 10 N. E. 251.

[c] (Minn. 1860) Unless a conveyance carries upon its face the evidence of fraudulent intent, every question of that kind arising under Pub. St. c. 51, relating to fraudulent conveyances, must be submitted to a jury.—Filley v. Register, 4 Minn. 391 (Gil. 296), 77 Am. Dec. 522.

[d] (Mo. 1886) The attaching creditor, in answer to an interplea claiming the attached goods by virtue of a chattel mortgage, set up that the mortgage was executed by the debtor to defraud and hinder his other creditors. Held, that the issue was properly triable by a jury, and did not require a transfer of the case to equity.—Caruth-Byrnes Hardware Co. v. Wolter, 91 Mo. 484, 3 S. W. 865.

[e] (S. C. 1887) A complaint in equity was filed, praying that a sale of choses in action, and an assignment for the benefit of creditors, made by an insolvent, be set aside. An order was made referring the case to the master to take testimony and report upon all the issues. Defendant claimed the right to have certain issues referred to a jury. Held, that the reference to the master was properly ordered.—Pelzer v. Hughes, 27 S. C. 408, 3 S. E. 781.

Issue of damages, see ante, § 43.

[a] (Ga. 1878) Where the only issue made by the answer to a mandamus nisi is the fact that a bill in equity has been filed asking that a judgment plaintiff who applied for the mandamus be enjoined, so that the sole question, made under Code, § 3201, is as to the equity of the bill, the court may determine such question without a jury; and, where the decision that the bill has no equity is correct, the judgment making the mandamus absolute will not be reversed.—City of Brunswick v. Dure, 60 Ga. 457.

[b] (Mich. 1887) An action was brought to enjoin, as a nuisance dangerous to public health, a dam which had been in existence for over 40 years on the property of the defendant, who also held deeds for the land overflowed by the mill pond. The only evidence returned to the appellate court in proof of the nuisance was an indictment and conviction of defendant's grantors for the maintenance of said dam, nearly 30 years before. Held, that defendant was entitled to a jury trial.—Ronayne v. Loranger, 66 Mich. 373, 33 N. W. 840.

[c] (N. H. 1889) Under Laws 1887, c. 77, §§ 1, 2, giving the supreme court jurisdiction in equity, on information or petition, to enjoin or abate as a common nuisance the use of any building for the sale of liquors, defendant is entitled to a trial by jury to ascertain the fact of the nuisance before it can be abated in equity.—State v. Currier, 66 N. H. 622, 19 Atl. 1000.

[d] (N. Y. 1872) The defendant in an application for an injunction has no absolute right to have the facts on which plaintiff's claim for relief depends tried by jury, since it is discretionary with the court to determine for itself the questions of fact on which the right to equitable relief demanded may depend.—Colman v. Dixon, 50 N. Y. 572.

[e] (N. Y. 1884) An action brought by the people against a telegraph company charged with maintaining unlawfully its poles in a public street is an action to abate a nuisance, and, an issue of fact being joined, is triable before a jury.—People v. Metropolitan Telephone & Telegraph Co., 31 Hun, 596.

[f] (N. Y. 1886) Code Civ. Proc. § 968, provides that in certain actions, including actions for a nuisance, an issue of fact must be tried by a jury unless the jury trial is waived or a reference directed. Section 970 provides that where a party is entitled by express provision of law to a trial by jury of one or more issues of fact, in an action not specified in section 968, he may apply, upon notice to the court, for an order directing all the questions arising upon those issues to be distinctly and plainly stated for trial. Held, in an action for the abatement of a nuisance, the recovery of damages, and a perpetual injunction, that plaintiff was entitled as a matter of right to a jury trial on the question of nuisance or no nuisance.—Cogswell v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 54 N. Y. Super. Ct. (22 Jones & S.) 92.

[g] (N. Y. 1887) Construing Code Civ. Proc. § 968, providing that, in an action for a nuisance, the issues of fact must be tried by a jury, unless a jury is waived, in connection with section 1660, providing that an action for a nuisance may be maintained at common law, an equitable action to restrain the continuance of a nuisance, or an action for a nuisance in which equitable relief is asked, is not an action for nuisance within section 968.—Cogswell v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 105 N. Y. 319, 11 N. E. 518, reversing (1886) 54 N. Y. Super. Ct. (22 Jones & S.) 92.

[h] (N. Y. 1889) An action to enjoin as a nuisance the keeping of bees on premises adjacent to plaintiff's dwelling house, and for damages on account of such nuisance, is not within Code Civ. Proc. § 968, providing that in certain actions, including an action "for a nuisance," the issues of fact must be tried by a jury, and in such an action defendants are not entitled to a jury trial as matter of right.—Olmsted v. Rich, 53 Hun, 638, 6 N. Y. Supp. 826; following (1887) Cogswell v. Railroad Co., 11 N. E. 518.

[i, j] (N. Y. 1891) In an action for damages to real property caused by an elevated railroad in the street in front thereof, and to restrain the further maintenance of the structure and the passage of trains upon it, the complaint alleged that the trains made "so much noise as greatly to interfere with the enjoyment" of the property, and that the locomotives emitted "foul gases, smoke, and cinders, which are a nuisance," and that thereby the value of the property had greatly deteriorated. Held that, so far, at least, as damages were claimed, the action was for a nuisance, and to that extent must be first tried by a jury, under Code Civ. Proc. § 968, subd. 2, providing for the trial by jury of an issue of fact in an action for a nuisance; the other issues then to be tried before the court.—Cornell v. New York El. R. Co., 59 Hun, 625, 13 N. Y. Supp. 511.

[k, l] (N. Y. 1896) A complaint alleged that defendants' works, used in supplying steam to various customers, were located near a house owned by plaintiff, that defendants' operations were so negligently conducted as to constitute a nuisance by tainting the air, and the manner in which the injury was occasioned to plaintiff's premises was specified. The complaint also alleged that plaintiff did not have an adequate remedy at law. The relief prayed for was that defendant be enjoined from operating its works in any manner so as to produce the effects complained of, and that plaintiff recover damages already sustained. Held, that the action was not for a nuisance within Code Civ. Proc. § 968, which provides that in an action for a nuisance an issue of fact must be tried by a jury, as section 1660, providing that an action for a nuisance may be maintained in any case where such action might have been maintained under the laws in force immediately before the Code took effect, refers only to the common-law action of nuisance, which was either for damages or to abate the nuisance.—Goldschmidt v. New York Steam Co. (Sup.) 40 N. Y. Supp. 109.

[m] (Ohio, 1876) Under Code, § 263, a jury trial may be had upon "issues of fact arising in actions for the recovery of money," even though equitable relief is asked, as here, to enjoin the defendant from further violating an agreement not to practice medicine in a certain town.—Brundridge v. Goodlove, 30 Ohio St. 374.

[n] (Ohio, 1894) Where the existence of a nuisance is clearly shown, in an action to enjoin it, relief will not be denied because its existence has not been determined by a jury called to aid the court, or in an action for damages.—McClung v. North Bend Coal & Coke Co. (Com. Pl.) 31 Wkly. Law Bul. 9.

[a] (Ga. 1881) Where a receiver files exceptions of fact to the auditor's report on his account, he is entitled to a jury to pass upon them.—Akers v. Veal, 66 Ga. 302.

[b] (Tex. 1896) In proceedings for accounting by a receiver, instituted by motion in the action in which he was appointed, he is entitled to have tried by jury issues of fact arising on exceptions to the master's report.—Hamm v. J. Stone & Sons Live Stock Co., 13 Tex. Civ. App. 414, 35 S. W. 427.

Issue of damages, see ante, § 43 [g, h, i, q].

[a] (Mo. 1860) A case for the specific performance of a parol contract for the conveyance of land is required by law to be tried by the court, and it is therefore discretionary with it whether any issues shall be submitted to a jury.—McCullough v. McCullough, 31 Mo. 226.

[b] (N. Y. 1824) In a suit to compel a conveyance, where the title appears doubtful, and the doubt arises from questions of fact, it is a proper case for an issue at law, and an issue thereon should accordingly be directed to a jury.—Seymour v. De Lancey, Hopk. Ch. 436, 14 Am. Dec. 552.

§ 52. Joinder of legal and equitable issues.

As waiver of jury, see post, § 187.
Effect of prayer for personal judgment in foreclosure suit, see post, § 69 [q, t, u].
In action involving title to land, see ante, § 42.
In answer in legal action, see post, § 59 [i].
Injection of equitable issues into legal action, see post, § 53.

[a] (Cal. 1893) Plaintiff is not entitled to a jury in an action to recover money, it being asked that the assignment thereof be set aside for fraud and undue influence; the case being one of equitable cognizance.—Wheelock v. Godfrey, 100 Cal. 578, 35 Pac. 317.

[b] (Ind. 1886) In a suit for partition and to quiet title, a jury may be demanded as matter of right.—Kitts v. Wilson, 106 Ind. 147, 5 N. E. 400.

[c] (Ind. 1888) Under the rule that, if any essential part of a cause is exclusively of equitable cognizance, the whole is drawn into equity, a suit on a promissory note, and to set aside a conveyance as fraudulent, need not be submitted to a jury generally as an action at law.—Towns v. Smith, 115 Ind. 480, 16 N. E. 811.

[d] (Ind. 1892) Under Rev. St. 1881, § 409, providing that in case of the joinder of actions, which were formerly of exclusive equitable jurisdiction, with causes of action which were formerly designated as actions at law, and were triable by a jury, the former shall be triable by the court and the latter by a jury, the parties to an action to set aside a deed and for partition of certain lands are entitled to have the issue as to the partition tried by a jury.—Abernathy v. Allen, 132 Ind. 84, 31 N. E. 534, following Kitts v. Willson (1886) 106 Ind. 147, 5 N. E. 400.

[e] (Ky. 1855) Where both legal and equitable defenses are relied upon, the former should be tried by the jury.—Petty v. Malier, 54 Ky. (15 B. Mon.) 591.

[f] (Mo. 1888) Where issues both of legal and equitable cognizance are so blended as to make the entire action properly an equitable one, it is not error to refuse a trial by jury.—Kortjohn v. Seimers, 29 Mo. App. 271.

[g] (N. Y.) In an action on a policy, the plaintiffs claimed under it for a loss, alleged facts showing an error in making it out, and demanded judgment for the loss and such further judgment as might be proper and necessary for the recovery. Held, that both legal and equitable relief was prayed for, and that the cause should have gone to the circuit, to a jury, where the relief could have been granted by the court, and the cause then submitted to a jury.—(1859) New York Ice Co. v. Northwestern Ins. Co., 31 Barb. 72; (1860) Id., 20 How. Prac. 424, 10 Abb. Prac. 34.

[h] (N. Y.) An action on a policy of insurance, also praying for a reformation of the policy as ancillary to the action at law, should go to the circuit court for trial by jury, to be submitted after the court had determined the right to the equitable relief prayed for.—(1859) New York Ice Co. v. Northwestern Ins. Co., 31 Barb. 72; (1860) Id., 20 How. Prac. 424, 10 Abb. Prac. 34.

[i] (N. Y. 1863) Where, in case of a breach of trust, the fund remains land, and the plaintiff frames his action to seek specific, equitable relief, joining, as defendants with the trustees, third persons who claim an interest in the land, and pending the action the plaintiff files a supplemental complaint, in which he alleges that the land has meanwhile been converted into money, and claims a judgment for damages, as well as all the relief asked in the original complaint, not inconsistent therewith, the action is still triable by the court without a jury.—Currie v. Cowles, 22 N. Y. Super. Ct. (9 Bosw.) 642.

[j] (N. Y. 1863) By uniting in one action claims for an accounting in respect to both real and personal property, plaintiff deprives himself of the right, if there is one, in respect to the personal property, to have the action tried by jury.—Moffat v. Moffat, 23 N. Y. Super. Ct. (10 Bosw.) 468; Same v. Mount, 17 Abb. Prac. 4.

[k] (N. Y. 1871) Where legal and equitable causes of action are at issue in one cause, all the issues, unless referred or a jury trial waived, must be tried by a jury.—People v. Albany & S. R. Co., 5 Lans. 25.

[l] (N. Y. 1878) Where the allegations in the complaint make out a case for equitable relief, and certain of them make out a case as to some defendants for legal relief, the issues joined as to the first are to be tried at special term by the court without a jury, and, if it fails, and leaves the issues joined as to some defendants as to the second, those should be tried by a jury; and this though the complaint is, as to the legal cause, in form an action in equity, and prays for equitable relief.—Hennequin v. Butterfield, 43 N. Y. Super. Ct. (11 Jones & S.) 411.

[m] (N. Y. 1891) In an action by assignors of a contract to do certain work for a city to recover money due thereon in excess of the indebtedness as security for which the contract was assigned, the city was made a party, as well as the assignee, and an injunction was asked to restrain it from paying over to the assignee money which the city held, owing on the contract. Held, that the case was one of equitable jurisdiction, proper for trial by the court instead of by a jury.—Titman v. Twelfth Ward Bank, 58 Hun, 610, 12 N. Y. Supp. 634.

[n] (N. Y. 1891) Plaintiff, a vendee of real estate, took from the vendors an assignment of all their right to any damages arising from operation of defendants' elevated railroad in front of the premises conveyed. In an action against defendants, she asks for an injunction in case of nonpayment of the damages to the fee, and those incidental thereto, for the past damages accruing after the reception of her title, and also for the assigned damages sustained by her grantors. Held, that the cause of action was strictly legal as to the assigned damages, which had been severed from the realty, and in no way connected with her equitable right to an injunction in case of nonpayment of future damages, and that defendants were entitled to a trial by jury in respect of the legal cause of action, without regard to the joinder of the two causes of action in one suit.—Sommer v. New York El. Ry. Co., 60 Hun, 148, 14 N. Y. Supp. 619.

[o] (N. Y. 1891) An action for both legal and equitable relief in respect of the same cause of action is not, as of right, triable by jury.—Bergman v. Manhattan Ry. Co., 59 N. Y. Super. Ct. (27 Jones & S.) 566, 14 N. Y. Supp. 384.

[p] (N. Y. 1891) A complaint for malicious prosecution averred that plaintiff had executed a release extorted by duress, and asked to have it canceled. Held, that the action was equitable.—Stono v. Weiller, 128 N. Y. 655, 28 N. E. 653, affirming Stone v. Same (1890) 57 Hun, 588, 10 N. Y. Supp. 828.

[pp] (Ohio, 1861) On a petition containing two counts,—the first at law under Code, § 122, on an account for lumber sold, and the second to enforce a mechanic's lien on defendant's house,—a jury trial may be had on the first count, under Code, § 263, providing that a jury trial may be had of "issues of fact arising in actions for the recovery of money."—Clippenger v. Ross, 2 Ohio Dec. 562, 3 West. Law Month. 645.

[q] (Ohio, 1877) In an action for an injunction and for an account depending on the right to an injunction, neither party has the right to a jury.—Converse v. Hawkins, 31 Ohio St. 209.

[r] (S. C. 1888) In an action for the recovery and partition of real estate, the former cause of action must, as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 274, be tried by a jury, and is not a case for "issues from chancery." If it is determined in favor of plaintiffs, the court on its equity side may then decree partition.—Reams v. Spann, 28 S. C. 530, 6 S. E. 325.

[s] (S. C. 1895) The fact that, in an action by an attorney for fees, it is also sought to impose a lien on a certain fund, does not entitle plaintiff to have the question as to the value of the services tried to the court.—Wilson v. York Tp., 43 S. C. 299, 21 S. E. 82; Same v. Catawba Tp., Id.; Same v. Cherokee Tp., Id.; Same v. Ebenezer Tp., Id.

[t] (S. C. 1895) Where the issues raised by pleadings are partly legal and partly equitable, it is not error to deny a motion to have all the issues tried by jury, though the right exists to have purely legal questions so tried.—City Council of Greenville v. Ormond, 44 S. C. 119, 21 S. E. 642.

[u] (Wash. 1892) In an action for divorce, where plaintiff joins as defendants persons to whom she claims her husband has fraudulently conveyed his property, and asks that the conveyance be set aside, that she may have alimony out of the property, under Code Proc. § 776, dispensing with jury trials in divorce cases, defendants have no right to have the issue of conspiracy to defraud plaintiff tried by a jury.—Prouty v. Prouty, 4 Wash. 174, 29 Pac. 1049.

[a] (N. Y. 1864) Code, § 275, provides that "the relief granted to a plaintiff, if there be no answer, cannot exceed that which he shall have demanded in his complaint; but, in any other case, the court may grant him any relief consistent with the case made by the complaint, and embraced within the issue." Held, that while such section is intended to relieve a plaintiff from any technical objection that he has not prayed for the precise relief which, as it appears upon the trial, he is entitled to, it cannot be construed to enable plaintiff, by merely alleging in his complaint grounds of equitable relief, and failing to establish them, to secure a trial of an action for fraud without a jury, in violation of the constitution and of section 253 of the Code.—Bradley v. Aldrich, 40 N. Y. 504, 100 Am. Dec. 528.

[b] (N. Y. 1877) A plaintiff, by stating in his complaint an action of a distinctly equitable character, cannot deprive defendant of a jury trial, where the case is otherwise proper for a jury.—Davison v. Jersey Co. Associates, 71 N. Y. 333.

[c] (N. Y. 1880) A party cannot be deprived of his right to trial by jury, by the other party uniting with a cause of action at law allegations which, if proved, would entitle him to ancillary equitable relief.—Brady v. Cochran, 23 Hun, 274.

Issue of fact, see ante, §§ 39–51.
—— of fraud, see ante, § 41.

[a] (Iowa, 1878) On a defense of alteration, defendant is not entitled to a jury trial in a foreclosure suit, which is an equitable proceeding, under Code 1873, § 2509.—Clough v. Seay, 49 Iowa, 111.

[b] (Kan. 1882) The fact that defendant in an action to quiet title sets up as a defense a cause of action in the nature of ejectment does not entitle him to a jury trial.—Larkin v. Wilson, 28 Kan. 513.

[c] (N. Y. 1873) While courts of equity, under the old English practice, assumed a remedial jurisdiction over claims of dower, yet, where the right to dower was contested, such courts have uniformly held that the question of right must be tried at law, and therefore, in an action for admeasurement of dower, the defense to which was that plaintiff had, by an antenuptial agreement, released her claim to dower, the defendant was entitled to a trial by jury.—Kinne v. Kinne, 2 Thomp. & C. 398.

[d] (Ohio, 1887) Where plaintiff sets out an equitable cause of action, and no issue of fact is taken on his averments, but defendant sets up new matter constituting a legal cause of action, which, if established, will extinguish the case made in the petition, such legal cause of action is triable by jury.—Sallady v. Webb, 2 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 553.

As issue of fact, see ante, § 40.

[a] (Ind. 1895) In an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien, when defendant sets up a counterclaim growing out of the same transaction, the whole controversy is drawn into equity, and defendant is not entitled to a trial by jury.—Reichert v. Krass, 13 Ind. App. 348, 40 N. E. 706, 41 N. E. 835.

[b] (Neb. 1893) A defendant to an equity suit is not entitled, as a matter of right, to a jury for the trial of a counterclaim for damages, which he has voluntarily pleaded.—Morrissey v. Broomal, 37 Neb. 766, 56 N. W. 383.

[c] (N. Y. 1880) In an action by C. against J. for a dissolution and accounting, J.'s answer averred that C. had, by appropriating the good will to himself, violated a provision in the articles that the good will should be sold to such partner as should bid the highest price; that the same was worth $200,000, and J. asked to counterclaim this against any sum found due to C. J. set up, as a further counterclaim, a fraudulent appropriation by C. of partnership funds. Held, that these matters presented no proper counterclaim, under Code, § 974. They showed no distinct cause of action entitling J. to a trial by jury, and were proper items to be proved on an accounting.—Cook v. Jenkins, 79 N. Y. 575.

As issue of fact, see ante, § 39 [q].

[a] (Cal. 1885) A plea of limitation does not convert an equitable action to determine conflicting claims to land into a legal action, so as to give defendant a right to a trial by jury.—Hancock v. Plummer, 66 Cal. 337, 5 Pac. 514.

[b] (Iowa, 1869) In an action on an account there were fourteen items under eight different dates, and two credits. The account was all on one side, and no discovery sought. The defenses were denial, payment, and the statute of limitations. Held, that the defendant was entitled to a trial by jury, of which he could not be deprived by a reference of the account without his consent.—McMartin v. Bingham, 27 Iowa, 234, 1 Am. Rep. 265.

[c] (Iowa, 1896) An answer in an action in equity to foreclose a mortgage, pleading payment and the statute of limitations as defenses, does not entitle defendant to a jury trial.—Leach v. Kundson, 97 Iowa, 643, 66 N. W. 913.

[d] (N. C. 1872) A plaintiff, in an action to recover possession of land alleged that the defendant held a bond for title under a former owner now dead, and had made payments in part for the land, and that said former owner had devised the land to a daughter, who conveyed to the plaintiff. The defendant answered that by payments in money, and in property and services which were to be taken as money, he had paid in full for the land. Plaintiff replied that the alleged payments were not payments, but items in an account which were barred by the statute of limitations. A reference was ordered, and the referee reported that the defendant had made partial payments exceeding his indebtedness for the land. Exceptions were filed and sustained, on the ground that the items allowed were barred by the statute. Held, that these proceedings involved a misconception of the issue. The proper issue was whether the defendant paid his vendor in full or partially, and, if partially, how much, and should have been trial by a jury.—Eubanks v. Mitchell, 67 N. C. 34.

As issue of fact, see ante, § 46 [c].

[a] (Iowa, 1878) Under Code 1873, § 2509, providing that an action on a note, together with a mortgage or deed of trust, for the foreclosure of the same, shall be by equitable proceedings, an issue as to usury may be tried in certain proceedings without the intervention of a jury.—Clough v. Seay, 49 Iowa, 111.

[b] (N. Y. 1847) Though the maker of a mortgage which is usurious and a cloud upon his title has a right, under the act of 1837, to come into the court of chancery for the purpose of having the mortgage canceled, he is not entitled to an injunction to prevent the mortgagee from trying the question of usury before a jury, in a suit at law upon the bond, unless a discovery is necessary, or some other obstacle exists to the making of the defense at law.—Hartson v. Davenport, 2 Barb. Ch. 77.

[c] (N. Y. 1876) An action to foreclose certain mortgages to which usury was pleaded as a defense is a purely equitable action, and the framing of issues to a jury is in the discretion of the court, and not a matter of right.—Knickerbocker Life Ins. Co. v. Nelson, 8 Hun, 21.

[a] (Cal. 1890) In an action to foreclose a mortgage, defendant is not entitled to a jury trial as a matter of course, though judgment is asked for any deficiency, and the execution of the note is denied.—Downing v. Le Du, 82 Cal. 471, 23 Pac. 202.

[b] (Kan. 1890) In an action on a promissory note secured by a chattel mortgage, where a personal judgment against defendant is prayed for, and the execution of the note is denied under oath, defendant is entitled to a jury.—State Journal Co. v. Commonwealth Co., 43 Kan. 93, 22 Pac. 982.

See ante, § 35 [d].

[a] (Cal. 1886) Where, in an action of ejectment, the cross complaint of defendant sets up the defense, and makes a case involving the application of equitable doctrines, and seeks relief that only a court of equity can give, the defendant is not entitled to a jury trial.—Fish v. Benson, 71 Cal. 428, 12 Pac. 454.

[b] (Cal. 1895) In ejectment, wherein defendant alleged that the instrument under which plaintiff claims was in fact intended as a mortgage, the fact that the answer closed with a prayer that it be "adjudged that plaintiff is not the owner of the property described," does not render the defense an equitable one, so as to deprive defendant of his right to trial by jury.—Locke v. Moulton, 108 Cal. 49, 41 Pac. 28.

[c] (Ind. 1891) Where, in an action to rescind a sale of land, the defendant, by cross complaint, seeks to recover possession of the land and quiet his title thereto, a demand that the issues be tried by the court should not be granted, since the issue in the cross action is properly triable by jury.—Ross v. Hobson, 131 Ind. 166, 26 N. E. 775.

[d] (Ind. 1893) In an action to quiet title to an undivided half of a certain lot, defendants filed a cross complaint setting up title to the entire lot under sheriff's deed executed pursuant to a sale to satisfy a mechanic's lien, and also claiming to own a judgment lien against the property; and the relief prayed was that their title be quieted, or, in default of such relief, that they have a lien on the lot for the money paid by them, and that the undivided half be sold to satisfy the same. Held, that such cross complaint was an action to quiet title simply, which is triable by jury.—Jennings v. Moon, 135 Ind. 168, 34 N. E. 996.

[e] (Ind. 1893) Where an action to quiet title, which is triable by jury, was joined in a cross complaint with one to declare a lien, which is triable by the court, it was not error to refuse defendants' demand to have all the issues raised thereby tried by the court.—Jennings v. Moon, 135 Ind. 168, 34 N. E. 996.

[f] (Iowa, 1885) Where an action of trespass is brought by a party claiming title to land used as a right of way against a railroad company so using it, and the company files a cross petition, setting up that the records of the condemnation proceedings have been lost, and demanding equitable relief, the action is to be considered an equitable proceeding, and the case is not properly triable by a jury.—Marling v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 67 Iowa, 331, 25 N. W. 268.

[g] (Ky. 1853) Where, in an action commenced by ordinary proceedings, the defendant's answer makes an issue cognizable in equity, this should be tried in the manner prescribed in cases of equitable proceedings; but if the answer makes an issue not cognizable in equity, and the equitable defense has been adjudged insufficient, such issue must be referred to the jury, unless trial by jury has been waived.—Smith v. Moberly, 54 Ky. (15 B. Mon.) 70.

[h] (Mo. 1877) Under Wag. St. p. 109, §§ 13, 15, a proceeding by sci. fa. against a surety on an administrator's bond differs from no other suit, as to the right to try issues of fact by a jury, although an equitable defense is set up.—Wolff v. Schaeffer, 4 Mo. App. 367, affirmed (1881) 74 Mo. 154.

[i] (Mo. 1883) Where an answer in ejectment combines a legal with an equitable defense, plaintiffs may demand a jury.—Grayson v. Weddle, 80 Mo. 39.

[j] (Mo. 1884) The right to a trial by jury is not lost by filing an equitable answer.—Moline Plow Co. v. Hartman, 84 Mo. 610.

[k] (Mo. 1894) An action for recovery of money is an action at law, to be tried by a jury, though fraud is pleaded as a defense.—Routt v. Milner, 57 Mo. App. 50.

[l] (Mo. 1895) Where, in ejectment, the answer is a virtual admission of plaintiff's legal right to possession, but undertakes to avoid it by showing that it was held by plaintiff in trust for defendant, and asks affirmative relief, the case is converted into an equity one, in which neither party is entitled to a jury.—O'Day v. Conn, 131 Mo. 321, 32 S. W. 1109.

[m] (N. Y. 1889) Where the complaint states two legal causes of action, the only defense to one of which is a general denial, the plaintiff is, as to that issue at least, entitled to a jury trial, though an equitable defense to the other cause of action is interposed.—Beary v. Hoster, 53 Hun, 632, 6 N. Y. Supp. 330.

[n] (Ohio, 1895) Where the issues made upon the petition are triable by a jury, the filing of cross petitions, which, though equitable in their nature, do not supersede or extinguish the case made in the petition, will not require a trial by the court.—Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. Morris, 10 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 502, 3 Ohio Dec. 479.

[o] (Ohio, 1896) Where an equitable cross demand was set up in the answer in an action for the recovery of specific real property and damages for its wrongful detention, and affirmative relief is demanded, the issue arising on the cross petition and reply was not a right triable by jury, under Rev. St. § 5130.—Gill v. Pelkey, 54 Ohio, 348, 43 N. E. 991.

[q] (S. C. 1884) In an action for the recovery of real property, defendant set up as a defense that plaintiff had agreed to convey to her the land, and also another tract, upon payment of a stated amount, and had subsequently taken such other tract in full payment of the amount so stipulated. Held, that this defense raised an equitable issue, which should have been decided by the judge himself.—Brownlee v. Martin, 21 S. C. 392.

[r] (S. C. 1889) In an action to recover personal property which plaintiffs claim under a mortgage, the condition of which is alleged to have been broken, where the defenses are (1) a general denial, (2) plea of purchase for valuable consideration and without notice of the mortgage, and (3) payment of the mortgage debt, only legal issues are raised, under Gen. St. § 1776, which provides that mortgages not recorded are null as against subsequent purchasers; and it is error to set aside a verdict for plaintiffs, and order a new trial, on the ground that the answer sets up an equitable defense, which is triable only by the court.—Gregory v. Ducker, 31 S. C. 141, 9 S. E. 780.

[s] (S. C. 1895) In a suit on a bond, where the allegations in the answer involve fraud and mistake in an account, it is not error to deny a motion to have the cause submitted to a jury, the issues being purely equitable.—City Council of Greenville v. Ormand, 44 S. C. 116, 21 S. E. 641.

[a] (N. Y. 1874) Where a plaintiff's right to claim interest does not depend upon an examination of accounts mentioned in the answer, but rests upon a question of fact determinable from evidence extrinsic of the accounts, the case is not one involving an examination of a long account, so as to deprive plaintiff of the right to a jury trial on the issue of his right to interest.—Ronalds v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 37 N. Y. Super. Ct. (5 Jones & S.) 208.

[b] (N. Y. 1887) Code, § 974, provides that, when a defendant interposes a counterclaim, the mode of trial of an issue of fact arising thereon is the same as if it arose in an action brought by the defendant against the plaintiff for the cause of action stated in the counterclaim and demanding the same judgment. Section 968 provides that an issue of fact shall be tried by a jury, unless a jury trial is waived or a reference is directed. To a complaint to recover on a contract of indemnity defendant set up two counterclaims,—the first alleging that the agreement relied on in the complaint was obtained by fraud and asking judgment that it be canceled; the second realleging the ground of the first counterclaim and demanding a money judgment for damages. Held that, notwithstanding section 974, it is apparent from the pleadings that the examination of a long account will be involved in the trial, and the action, being of an equitable nature, will be tried by the court.—Robinson v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co., 55 N. Y. Super. Ct. (23 Jones & S.) 152.

[c] (N. Y. 1887) If the action disclosed by the complaint is triable by jury, the fact that the answer or counterclaim involves the examination of a long account cannot make the entire cause referable.—Untermeyer v. Bernhauer, 105 N. Y. 521, 11 N. E. 847.

[d] (N. Y. 1889) A complaint which alleges that defendants had plaintiff's brokers buy stocks for plaintiff, and received payment from them; that it was agreed that the stock was to be held subject to plaintiff's order until a certain date without further payment; and that before such date defendants converted the stock to their own use.—is in form for a conversion, and a compulsory reference cannot be had, even though the answer sets up a defense which may involve the examination of a long account.—Fiero v. Paulding, 53 Hun, 633, 6 N. Y. Supp. 122.

[a] (Cal. 1885) Since the effect of an intervention is to add new parties for the purpose of determining all conflicting claims to the matter in controversy, and does not affect the nature of the action, or interfere with the trial, where plaintiff, in ejectment, desires a jury trial, the filing of an intervention praying equitable relief will not affect his right to a jury.—Reay v. Butler, 7 Pac. 669.

[b] (Ill. 1888) Where an intervening petition is filed to enforce an equitable lien on a fund in the chancery court, the defendant, by answering to the merits, submits the issue to the court, and is bound by its action. It is wholly within the discretion of the chancellor whether or not the issue should be submitted to a jury.—South Park Com'rs v. Phillips, 27 Ill. App. 380.

[c] (Mo. 1887) In an action in which an interpleader will not lie, where a bill in the nature of a bill of interpleader is filed, neither party is entitled to a jury as a matter of right.—Grand Lodge Order of Hermann-Soehne v. Elsmer, 26 Mo. App. 108.

[a] (Ga. 1857) An order dissolving an injunction and directing a credit on a fi. fa. which was admitted by the plaintiff is not a decree requiring the intervention of a jury.—Cardin v. Jones, 23 Ga. 175.

[b] (Ga. 1879) A chancellor does not violate the constitutional right of trial by jury in pronouncing judgment without the intervention of a jury, upon receiving an auditor's report that is not excepted to and presents no issue for a jury to try.—Cook v. Houston County Com'rs, 62 Ga. 223.

[c] (Ga. 1894) In the absence of statute, one excepting to an auditor's report, on the ground that the report of the evidence is incomplete, is not entitled, as of right, to have the question tried by jury.—Faircloth v. Stubbs, 94 Ga. 126, 21 S. E. 282.

[d] (Md. 1896) Code, art. 16, § 194, authorizing the court of equity, on failure of a purchaser at a trustee's sale to comply with his bid, to direct the property to be resold, and to order the payment by the purchaser of any deficit on the resale from the amount of his bid, does not violate Const. art. 15, § 6, providing that the trial by jury in courts of law shall remain inviolate.—Capron v. Devries, 83 Md. 220, 34 Atl. 251.

[e] (N. C. 1867) Code, c. 41, § 129, providing that, where a purchaser at a judicial sale ordered by the court fails to pay the purchase money, a judgment may be entered against him by the court, after giving such purchaser 10 days' notice of application therefor, is not in conflict with the declaration of rights, which provides that in all controversies at law respecting property the ancient mode of trial by jury is one of the best securities of the people, and ought to remain sacred and inviolate, since such proceeding is merely a substitute of the original power of a court of equity to proceed in such cases by attachment.—Ex parte Cotten, 62 N. C. 79.

See post, § 139.

[a] (Iowa, 1886) The fact that the act constituting the contempt of an injunction to abate a liquor nuisance is also a crime under the statute does not entitle defendant to a jury trial. —Manderscheid v. Plymouth County Dist. Ct., 69 Iowa, 240, 28 N. W. 551.

[b] (Kan. 1891) A party charged with contempt for the violation of an injunction is not of right entitled to a jury trial.—State v. Durein, 46 Kan. 695, 27 Pac. 148.

[c] (N. D. 1895) One charged with contempt of court under Laws 1890, c. 110, § 13, relating to liquor nuisances, and to contempts of court for violating injunctional orders in actions to abate the same, is not entitled to have the charge tried by a jury.—State v. Markuson, 5 N. D. 147, 64 N. W. 934.

[d] (S. C. 1894) Where land is sold on foreclosure, and the purchaser, having obtained possession of part only, obtains from the court a rule requiring the mortgagor to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt, and why the sheriff should not eject him, the question whether the land so retained by the mortgagor passed under the sale is for the court.—Ex parte Boyce, 41 S. C. 201, 19 S. E. 495; Dacus v. Smith, Id.

[e] (S. D. 1892) The constitutional provision that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate" does not entitle to a jury trial one prosecuted for contempt because of his violation of an order enjoining the sale of intoxicating liquors.—State v. Mitchell, 3 S. D. 223, 52 N. W. 1052.

[a] (U. S.) Const. U. S. Amend. 7, provides that "in suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed $20, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved." The occupying claimant law of Ohio provides that an occupying claimant of land shall not be evicted or turned out of possession until he shall be fully paid the value of all lasting and valuable improvements made by him previous to receiving actual notice, by the commencement of suit, of a superior claim of title; the value of such improvements to be determined by commissioners appointed by the court. Held, that the recovery of the value of improvements by an occupying claimant was within the contemplation of such constitutional provision, and therefore such occupying claimant law, in so far as it provided for the ascertainment of the value of improvements by commissioners, would not be enforced in the federal courts, according to the procedure in the state court; but as the recovery for such improvements would be cognizable in equity, the federal courts will treat the proceeding as one in equity and appoint commissioners to value the improvements.—(1829) Bank of Hamilton v. Dudley, 27 U. S. (2 Pet.) 492, 7 L. Ed. 496; (1830) Parsons v. Bedford, 28 U. S. (3 Pet.) 433, 7 L. Ed. 732.

[b] (U. S. 1880) The fact that the value of the improvements, and of the use and occupation, in ejectment under Rev. St. Conn. p. 362, § 17, are to be determined by the court upon equitable principles, does not deprive the plaintiff of a right to trial by jury, in contravention of the inhibition in the state constitution. —Griswold v. Bragg (C. C.) 48 Fed. 519.

[a] (U. S. 1867) In an action in a state court in Ohio, where the distinction between actions at law and suits in equity is abolished, and the action must always be brought in the name of the real party in interest, the defendant removed the cause into the federal court, whereupon the plaintiffs, by leave of the court, filed a bill in equity setting up the same cause of action, supposing (as it would seem) this to be necessary in that court, inasmuch as they were the equitable owners only of the drafts sued on. Held that, as the action was maintainable in the names of the plaintiffs as a legal action in the state court, it was equally maintainable in their names as a legal action when removed into the federal court, and that the plaintiffs had no right to deprive the defendant of a trial by jury by transferring what was really an action at law into a suit in equity.—Thompson v. Railroad Companies, 73 U. S. (6 Wall.) 134, 18 L. Ed. 765.

[a] (Idaho, 1889) An action under Act Jan. 30, 1885, whose object is not only to try the title to an office of which there are several claimants, but to oust a usurper and subject him to punishment by fine, is of legal and not of equitable cognizance, and the parties are entitled to trial by jury of the issues raised therein.—People v. Havird, 2 Idaho, 498, 25 Pac. 294, 10 L. R. A. 831.

[b] (Ill. 1889) Act July 1, 1883 (Starr & C. Ann. St. 1348), providing that whenever any association organized on the assessment plan, for the benefit of the representatives of deceased members, makes false reports required by statute, or conducts its business fraudulently, the attorney general shall institute proceedings to remove the officers, or dissolve the association, is not unconstitutional, as depriving corporations of the right of trial by jury, in that it transfers the jurisdiction of suits to dissolve corporations from courts of law to courts of equity.—Chicago Mut. Life Indemnity Ass'n v. Hunt, 127 Ill. 257, 20 N. E. 55, 2 L. R. A. 549.

[e] (Ind. 1890) In an action by one of several sureties on a note, who had been compelled to pay it, against a co-surety for contribution, the complaint alleged that the principal and the other sureties were, at the time of payment and since, insolvent, and had not, then or since, any property subject to execution. Held, that these allegations did not render the cause one of "exclusive equitable jurisdiction," within the provision of Rev. St. 1881, § 409, that such causes should be tried by the court; and it was properly tried by a jury.—Michael v. Albright, 126 Ind. 172, 25 N. E. 902.

[f] (Ind. 1891) Since Code, § 251, requires all suits to be brought in the name of the real party in interest, whether his title be legal or equitable, the right of the assignee of a chose in action to sue thereon does not depend on principles of equity jurisprudence, but on the express terms of the statute; and hence, in an action for rent accruing, which has been assigned to plaintiff, it is not error to grant a trial by jury.—McCoy v. Oldham, 1 Ind. App. 372, 27 N. E. 647, 50 Am. St. Rep. 208.

[g] (Iowa, 1877) An action for rent against a party claiming no title to the premises is an action at law, entitling defendant to trial by jury.—Bardwell v. Clare, 47 Iowa, 297.

[h] (Me. 1868) The libelee in a libel to annul a marriage is not entitled to a trial by jury under Const. art. 1, § 20.—Coffin v. Coffin, 55 Me. 361.

[i] (Minn. 1873) An action was brought to recover the value of certain wheat alleged to have been delivered by the bailee in excess of the quantity deposited with it by defendant, and converted by defendant. Held, that such action was a case at law, within Const. art. 1, § 4, entitling defendant to a jury trial.—St. Paul & S. C. R. Co. v. Gardner, 19 Minn. 132 (Gil. 99), 18 Am. Rep. 334.

[j] (N. M. 1889) An action on a contract by which plaintiff delivered to defendant's intestate a number of sheep, to receive in return, at the end of a fixed period, a quantity of wool, is not of an equitable nature, requiring relief in chancery, so as to deprive a party of a trial by jury.—Lewis v. Baca, 5 N. M. 289, 21 Pac. 343.

[k] (N. Y. 1859) An action to recover penalties for the violation of fire laws, and for the removal of buildings improperly constructed, is not an action in its nature equitable, but seeks relief at law. It is therefore within the constitutional guaranty of a jury trial.—Fire Department v. Harrison, 2 Hilt. 455, 17 How. Prac. 273, 18 How. Prac. 181, 9 Abb. Prac. 1.

[m] (Ohio, 1861) In a civil action on an account for lumber sold by plaintiffs to defendant, the issue must be tried by a jury, as it is a law action.—Clippenger v. Ross, 2 Ohio Dec. 562.

[a] (Cal. 1891) In an action for the possession of land defendant is entitled to a trial by jury, under Code Civ. Proc. § 592, giving the right to a jury trial "in actions for the recovery of specific real or personal property," and plaintiff cannot deprive him of this right by framing his complaint so as to make the action an equity case, under Id. § 738, providing that an action may be brought by any person against another who claims an interest or estate in real property adverse to him, for the purpose of determining such adverse claim.—Newman v. Duane, 89 Cal. 597, 27 Pac. 66.

[b] (Cal. 1894) An action to enjoin diversion of water and abate defendants' dam and for damages is not an action to recover specific property, or for money due on contract, or for damages for breach of contract, or for injuries, such as, under Code Civ. Proc. § 592, gives the right to a trial by jury.—Churchill v. Baumann, 104 Cal. 369, 36 Pac. 93, 38 Pac. 43.

[e] (Minn. 1891) An action by the assignee of an insolvent debtor under the insolvent law of 1881, to recover money paid by the debtor to a creditor in payment of an antecedent debt, for the purpose of giving an unlawful preference over other creditors, is an action for the recovery of money only, and either party is entitled to a trial by jury.—Tripp v. Northwestern Nat. Bank, 45 Minn. 383, 48 N. W. 4.

[f] (Minn. 1896) Where the assignee in insolvency brings an action to set aside an execution sale, and to cancel the record of the sheriff's certificate thereof, on the grounds that the judgment and sale thereunder constituted a preference permitted by the insolvent in favor of one of its creditors, the defendant is not entitled to a jury trial, since the action is not one for the recovery of money only, or specific real or personal property, within the meaning of the statute.—Yanish v. Pioneer Fuel Co., 64 Minn. 175, 66 N. W. 198.

[g] (Mo. 1887) Plaintiff alleged that defendant had a contract with the city for street paving, and that defendant contracted with plaintiff to take charge of the work for one-fourth the profits; that plaintiff had performed his agreement, and defendant had failed to pay him one-fourth the profits; and that there is due plaintiff from defendant, on a just accounting, a certain sum, for which he asked judgment. Held, that the action was one for money, and not for an accounting or for equitable relief, and was triable by jury.—Donovan v. Barnett, 27 Mo. App. 460.

[h] (Neb. 1884) A proceeding to foreclose a mechanic's lien is equitable in its nature; and a party thereto is not entitled to a trial by jury, under Code Civ. Proc. § 280, which provides that issues of fact arising in actions for the recovery of money or of specific real or personal property shall be tried by a jury.—Dohle v. Omaha Foundry & Machine Co., 15 Neb. 436, 19 N. W. 644.

[i] (N. Y. 1857) An action to recover from an insurer the amount of a loss, founded upon an agreement to insure and deliver a policy, and a loss before delivery of the policy, being for the recovery of money only, is one which the Code requires to be tried by a jury.—Rockwell v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 4 Abb. Prac. 179.

[j] (N. Y. 1860) An action between partners for a dissolution and a settlement of the partnership affairs is not an action for the recovery of money only, which must be tried by a jury; but it is a suit which would formerly have been a suit in chancery, in which the court had power to order a feigned issue, and in which, under the Code, an order may be made for the trial of any questions of fact which are in issue.—O'Brien v. Bowes, 17 N. Y. Super. Ct. (4 Bosw.) 657.

[k] (N. Y. 1885) Code, § 968, provides that, where judgment for a sum of money is demanded, there must be a jury trial, and also in ejectment and certain other enumerated actions, and that other issues of fact must be tried by the court. Held, that the nature of the demand affords the test, and that, if a money demand is secondary to a demand for equitable relief, the case is for the court.—Clark v. Blumenthal, 52 N. Y. Super. Ct. (20 Jones & S.) 355.

[m] (N. Y. 1887) An action by an administratrix against the executors of an estate for part of a year's salary due plaintiff's intestate, who was one of the executors, is a pure money demand, and within the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 968, providing that an action in which the complaint demands judgment for money only must be tried by a jury, unless same is waived or a reference is directed.—Wood v. Simonson, 12 N. Y. St. Rep. 512.

[n] (N. Y. 1888) A complaint alleging that plaintiff recovered a judgment against a general partnership, on which execution was issued and returned unsatisfied, and that defendant, a special partner, fraudulently withdrew the assets contributed by him, together with alleged profits, although demanding a judgment against defendant as a general partner to the amount of money wrongfully withdrawn by him, states an equitable cause of action in the nature of a creditor's bill, and not an action to recover a money judgment only, which, under Code Civ. Proc. § 968, would entitle the parties to a jury trial.—Bell v. Merrifield, 109 N. Y. 202, 16 N. E. 55, 4 Am. St. Rep. 436.

[p] (N. Y. 1888) Under Code Civ. Proc. § 968, providing that in actions in which the complaint demands judgment for a sum of money the issues of fact must be tried by a jury, an action to recover assessments ordered by a court of another state having jurisdiction, on account of unpaid stock subscriptions, must be brought to trial at a jury term.—Glenn v. Lancaster, 109 N. Y. 641, 16 N. E. 484, affirmed (1888) 21 Abb. N. C. 272.

[s] (N. Y. 1896) On a complaint alleging that defendant, while acting as plaintiff's attorney, received certain chattels and money, and fraudulently retained the same for his own use, demanding judgment that defendant account for money and property, that plaintiff recover damages for breach of contract, and for such other relief as might be equitable, the cause of action is equitable, and triable by the court without a jury.—Laufer v. Sayles, 5 App. Div. 582, 39 N. Y. Supp. 377.

[t] (Ohio, 1862) Under Code, § 263, providing that in an issue of fact arising in an action for the recovery of money either party has the right to demand a trial by jury, the right to a trial exists in an action for money between two firms in part composed of the same members, though the action involves the exercise of chancery jurisdiction.—Riddle v. McBeth, 2 Ohio Dec. 606.

[u] (Ohio, 1866) Code, § 557, provides that an action may be brought by any person in possession by himself or tenant of real property against any person who claims an estate or interest therein adverse to him for the purpose of determining such adverse estate or interest. Held, that an action by a party claiming the legal title and possession of real estate to determine the interest of a party claiming an estate therein adverse to him, and to enjoin such party from doing irreparable injury to the property by cutting timber thereon, was not an action "for the recovery of money, or of specific real or personal property," in which the parties are entitled to demand a trial by jury.—Ellithorpe v. Buck, 17 Ohio St. 72.

[v] (Ohio, 1872) In an action for the recovery of money, wherein the only relief prayed for is a money judgment, either party is entitled to a trial by jury, notwithstanding numerous items of account or of claim and counterclaim are involved in the issue.—Averill Coal & Oil Co. v. Verner, 22 Ohio St. 372.

[w] (Ohio, 1877) In an action for partition and an equitable account incident thereto, and not for the recovery of money or specific real property, neither party has the right to demand a jury trial, and an appeal, therefore, lies from the judgment.—Linton v. Laycock, 33 Ohio St. 128.

[x] (Ohio, 1885) An action to compel the return of an insurance policy claimed to have been signed under duress and without consideration is not triable by jury, since it is not an action for the recovery of money or specific personal property, within Rev. St. § 5130, providing for a trial by jury in such actions.—Windhorst v. Wilhelms, 1 O. C. D. 17.

[y] (Ohio, 1888) Where plaintiff administrator alleges that the husband of his intestate received money belonging to her which he promised to invest for her use, on account of which he seeks to recover a judgment for money, either party is, under the Code (Rev. St. § 5130), which provides that issues of fact for the recovery of money only shall be tried by a jury, unless waived, entitled to a trial by jury, and it matters not that before the adoption of the Code the relief would have been by a suit in equity, as the right to trial by jury may be extended but not abridged.—Gunsaullus v. Pettit, 46 Ohio St. 27, 17 N. E. 231.

[z] (Ohio, 1893) Rev. St. § 5130, provides that a jury may be demanded to try any "issues of fact arising in actions for the recovery of money only." Held, that an action is not one for the recovery of money only, within the purview of the statute, where to administer full and complete relief therein it is necessary to invoke the equity powers of the court to adjust the accounts between the parties.—Black v. Boyd, 50 Ohio St. 46, 33 N. E. 207.

[zz] (S. C. 1873) An action by a cestui que trust to set aside a sheriff's deed on execution against the trustee personally, on the ground that the land was not subject to such execution, is not an action for the recovery of "specific real property," but is a "matter of equity," and is therefore triable by the court, though a jury may be impaneled in the discretion of the judge.—Price v. Brown, 4 S. C. (4 Rich.) 144.

[a] (Cal. 1861) An ordinary suit at law cannot be sent to a referee against the objection of a party who wishes a trial by jury; and this, even though the trial involves the examination of a long account.—Grim v. Norris, 19 Cal. 140, 79 Am. Dec. 206.

[b] (Ind. 1884) Before the adoption of the Code of 1881, parties were entitled to trial by jury in equitable actions. Held, that a party to a suit to settle a partnership was entitled to a jury.—Redinbo v. Fretz, 99 Ind. 458.

[d] (Ky. 1894) An action for damages on a contract involving the value of tools and plant in use, and not paid for; the value of materials on hand or delivered, or ready for delivery subsequent to a given date; the reasonable value of unestimated work done after that date; the amount of 15 per cent. earnings retained; interest from date of breach; and whatever profits plaintiff would have earned had he been permitted to complete the work under the contract,—may be transferred to equity, and referred to a special commissioner, without violation of Const. art. 13, § 8, guarantying the right to trial by jury.—O'Connor v. Henderson Bridge Co., 95 Ky. 633, 27 S. W. 251; Henderson Bridge Co. v. O'Connor, Id.

[e] (Minn. 1869) There are some issues which should under any circumstances be tried by the court or referee. The taking and settling the accounts of a copartnership forms one of those issues, and no court should ever submit it to a jury.—Berkey v. Judd, 14 Minn. 394 (Gil. 300).

[f] (Minn. 1873) Gen. St. 1866, c. 66, § 228, so far as it authorizes a compulsory reference in actions at law where the trial of an issue requires the examination of a long account on either side, is void, as infringing the constitutional guaranty of the right of trial by jury.—St. Paul & S. C. R. Co. v. Gardner, 19 Minn. 132 (Gil. 99).

[g] (Minn. 1879) An action involving an adjustment and settlement of mutual accounts, growing out of a common transaction, is one of equitable cognizance, and not triable by a jury.—Garner v. Reis, 25 Minn. 475.

[h] (Minn. 1883) An action for an accounting for property taken and held in trust by defendant for plaintiff, and for a partition of a part thereof, and the appointment of a receiver, is triable by the court, without a jury, as an equitable action.—Judd v. Dike, 30 Minn. 380, 15 N. W. 672.

[i] (Mo. 1874) The present constitutional provision as to the right of trial by jury refers to the right as theretofore existing, and does not inhibit the reference of a long account to an auditor on motion of one and against the objection of the other party.—Edwardson v. Garnhart, 56 Mo. 81.

[j] (Mo. 1880) Plaintiffs and defendant, being common carriers and owning connecting lines, agreed in relation to transportation of two cargoes of goods over their lines, estimated on the amount of freights to be collected by each and the profits to be realized on the whole transaction, and struck a balance. Plaintiffs paid defendant in advance what it was estimated would come into their hands by way of collection in excess of their share of the profits. One cargo was subsequently destroyed, whereby part of the estimated profits were not realized. Plaintiffs, claiming that the enterprise was a partnership transaction, sued to recover the amount of their advances and their share of the profits realized, and for an accounting. The answer did not dispute the correctness of the items which entered into the settlement, or the accuracy of the balance ascertained, but denied the partnership, and alleged that defendant's share in the undertaking consisted in the rendering of services to plaintiffs, and that the money paid defendant was for such services. Held, that the issues joined were properly triable by a jury, and were not for reference or triable by the court.—Silver v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co., 72 Mo. 194, affirming (1878) 5 Mo. App. 381.

[k] (Neb. 1876) An action upon an account, of legal cognizance, is not referable, if either party claims trial by jury.—Lamaster v. Scofield, 5 Neb. 148.

[m] (N. H. 1882) Const. art. 20 (Bill of Rights), provides "that in all controversies concerning property, and in all suits between two or more persons, except in cases in which it has been heretofore otherwise used and practiced, the parties have a right to trial by jury." Gen. Laws, c. 231, § 8, provides that "on the report of an auditor either party may elect to try the cause by the jury." In assumpsit on an account containing 273 items, and the set-off nearly as many more, the case was heard, and report made by an auditor. Held, that defendant is not entitled to jury trial on the auditor's report.—Davis v. Dyer, 62 N. H. 231.

[n] (N. Y. 1867) The Code by expressly permitting, even where a long account is involved (section 271), the referee to be confined to passing upon a specific question of fact involved in the issue, and by allowing an account to be taken as a separate matter "for the information of the court," not only authorized, but required, that neither party should be deprived of the benefit of a trial before a court or a jury as to matters not involved in the account.—Wheeler v. Falconer, 30 N. Y. Super. Ct. (7 Rob.) 45.

[o] (N. Y. 1870) Where the complaint states a cause of action which, if true, would entitle plaintiff to recover moneys paid to defendant, who interposes a counterclaim involving the examination of a long account, a reference does not violate Const. art. 1, § 2, guarantying trial by jury.—Townsend v. Hendricks, 32 N. Y. Super. Ct. (2 Sweeny) 503.

[p] (N. Y. 1871) In an action by an attorney for various services, including the management of suits in various courts, the drawing of deeds and other instruments, the examination of the titles to lands, charges for disbursements, etc., including many items, where a general denial is interposed, held, that the trial of the issues involves the examination of a long account, and a compulsory reference may be ordered. In such a case, a reference might have been ordered before the adoption of Const. 1846, and a trial by jury is not a matter of right.—Schermerhorn v. Wood, 4 Daly, 158.

[q] (N. Y. 1873) Under the Code of Procedure the court cannot refer the trial of an action, where any issue raised upon the complaint is such that the objecting party has the right to its trial by jury. All the causes of action stated in the complaint must be referable, and the power to refer even actions arising on contract is restricted to cases where the court can see, from the proofs before it, that the examination of a long account will be required.—Evans v. Kalbfleisch, 16 Abb. Prac. (N. S.) 13.

[r] (N. Y. 1878) In an action by some of the owners of a vessel to receive their share of the proceeds of a sale of the vessel made by defendant as their broker, for which, as alleged, he declined to account, the relief sought was an accounting and payment of the plaintiffs' proportionate share. Held, that the matter was of equitable cognizance, all the parties being before the court, and that a jury trial was properly refused by the court to the defendant.—Whiton v. Spring, 74 N. Y. 169.

[s] (N. Y. 1887) An action for unliquidated damages for breach of a building contract, which specifies several items of damage, consisting of loss of occupancy, damage to the building, and increased cost of completion, does not involve an account, and either party, on objection to a reference, is entitled to a trial by jury.—Untermeyer v. Bernhauer, 105 N. Y. 521, 11 N. E. 847.

[t] (N. Y. 1887) The complaint of a stockholder of an insolvent bank, suing in his own behalf and for the benefit of the other stockholders, against the directors, alleging that the property of the bank has been stolen and lost through the misconduct, inattention, and negligence of such directors, and asking that the damages resulting therefrom be made good by such directors, is in the nature of a complaint in an equitable action against the directors, as trustees, to call them to account, and such action is properly triable by the court, with the assistance of a jury, upon such questions of fact as the court may refer to them.—Brinckerhoff v. Bostwick, 105 N. Y. 567, 12 N. E. 58, reversed (1887) 43 Hun, 458.

[u] (N. Y. 1888) An action to recover money lost at stock gambling under the guise of purchases and sales of shares of stock and oil certificates, though covering many transactions and numerous items, is not an action involving the examination of a long account, within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, providing for compulsory references.—Willard v. Doran & Wright Co., 48 Hun, 402, 1 N. Y. Supp. 345.

[v] (N. Y. 1888) The right of trial by jury, guarantied by Const. 1846, art. 1, § 2, extends only so far as that right was recognized at the time of the adoption of the constitution; and as it was then the authorized practice to direct a reference in cases involving the examination of a long account, and not requiring the decision of any difficult question of law, a reference of such a case cannot be objected to as unconstitutional.—Shepard v. Eddy, 50 Hun, 601, 2 N. Y. Supp. 534, 15 Civ. Proc. R. 403.

[w] (N. Y. 1889) S., a short time before her death, transferred shares of stock to defendant, with whom she had resided, and who had had charge of her bank account, and made necessary purchases during her sickness. Defendant sold the stock and deposited the proceeds in bank to her own credit. The executor of S. sued to set aside such transfer on the ground of undue influence, etc., for an accounting, and to recover the money, or so much as might on the accounting be found due. A temporary injunction issued to restrain defendant from drawing out, and the bank from paying over, the deposit. Held, that the case was in equity, and a jury trial was properly refused.—Brigham v. Gott, 51 Hun, 636, 3 N. Y. Supp. 518.

[ww] (N. Y. 1889) An action against the clerk of a county to recover money paid him upon false and fraudulent claims for services and money expended for the county, founded on Code Civ. Proc. c. 16, tit. 1, art. 4, allowing an action in the name of the people for the misappropriation of public property, is an action sounding in tort, in which the defendant is entitled to a trial by jury; and hence the court is not authorized to compel a reference.—People v. Wood, 54 Hun, 438, 7 N. Y. Supp. 712.

[x] (N. Y. 1893) In an action for an accounting by defendant of his agency as manager of plaintiff's business for a term of years, plaintiff alleged that during the agency defendant had rendered accounts, purporting to be true statements of the receipts and disbursements of the business, some of which plaintiff has since learned were untrue; that the items, amounts, and dates of the transactions are known to defendant, but are unknown to plaintiff; that during the agency defendant established a business of his own in opposition to that of plaintiff's, thus allowing plaintiff's business to deteriorate; that defendant converted to his own use certain structures and apparatus belonging to plaintiff, and refused to deliver possession thereof on demand; that because of such acts and omissions by defendant, plaintiff suffered great loss in its business, and incurred large expense, which it seeks to recover when ascertained by a proper accounting. Held that, though some of the allegations might afford a remedy by action in tort, the acts complained of being a part of the dealing of an agent with the property of his principal, a case of equitable cognizance is presented; hence a reference was properly ordered.—Empire State Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Bickford, 72 Hun, 580, 25 N. Y. Supp. 283.

[xx] (Ohio, 1887) On the trial of an action against several defendants, where the plaintiffs in their petition charge upon the defendants a conspiracy to cheat and defraud the plaintiffs, and with thereby procuring and appropriating to their own use a single sum of money which rightfully belongs to the plaintiffs, and which they are entitled to recover, and for which they seek a joint judgment against the defendants, and the answer admits the receipt of a stated sum of money, and is otherwise, in effect, a general denial, either party is entitled to demand a jury, notwithstanding the plaintiffs pray a full discovery, and for an account of the full amount due to them, and to have an equitable lien declared and enforced.—Chapman v. Lee, 45 Ohio St. 356, 13 N. E. 736.

[yy] (Vt. 1881) Where an account of executors and trustees has been allowed by the probate court, and an appeal taken, and the question is merely one of accounting, there is nothing for a jury, and a commissioner is properly appointed to take the account.—In re Weatherhead, 53 Vt. 653.

[zz] (Wis.) Though Const. art. 1, § 5, provides that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate, and shall extend to all cases at law, without regard to the amount in controversy, it is competent for the legislature to provide for compulsory reference in actions involving the examination of long accounts, as such reference was provided for in actions of that kind by the territorial laws in force at the time of the adoption of the constitution.—(1842) Norton v. Rooker, 1 Pin. 195; (1863) Mead v. Walker, 17 Wis. 189; (1866) Board of Sup'rs of Dane County v. Dunning, 20 Wis. 210.

[a] (Cal. 1885) A party is not entitled, as a matter of right, to a trial by jury of an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien; it being a proceeding in equity, and the granting or refusing of a jury trial in such cases being entirely within the discretion of the court.—Curnow v. Happy Valley Blue Gravel & Hydraulic Min. Co., 68 Cal. 262, 9 Pac. 149.

[b] (Cal. 1894) In an action in equity to foreclose the lien of an assessment for street improvements, defendant is not entitled to a jury trial, as the action is not on a contract made by him, or which imposes a personal liability on him.—Santa Cruz Rock Pav. Co. v. Bowie, 104 Cal. 286, 37 Pac. 934.

[c] (Conn. 1879) Act 1875, providing that, in a bill for a foreclosure, the petitioner may pray for possession of the land mortgaged, and that the court may, if it grants the foreclosure and finds the petitioner entitled to possession, issue an execution of ejectment for the delivery of the possession to the petitioner, is not unconstitutional, as infringing the right of trial by jury.—Middletown Sav. Bank v. Bacharach, 46 Conn. 513.

[d] (Ind. 1883) In a suit to foreclose a mortgage, there is no constitutional right to a trial by jury.—Carmichael v. Adams, 91 Ind. 526.

[e] (Ind. 1886) Under Rev. St. 1881, § 409, providing that in causes which, before the 18th day of June, were of exclusive equitable jurisdiction, the case should be triable by the court, a suit to foreclose a chattel mortgage is of equitable cognizance, triable by the court, and there is, in such case, no constitutional right to a jury.—Brown v. Russell, 105 Ind. 46, 4 N. E. 428.

[f] (Ind. 1890) An action to foreclose a mechanic's lien is one of equity cognizance, and trial by jury is properly denied.—Albrecht v.

[g] (Ind. 1891) Where a lien on real estate is to be foreclosed, and a specific decree rendered, the entire issue is for trial by the court.—Brighton v. White, 128 Ind. 320, 27 N. E. 620.

[h] (Ind. 1892) A suit to enforce a lien is triable by the court.—Coleman v. Floyd, 131 Ind. 330, 31 N. E. 75.

[i] (Kan. 1886) A jury trial cannot be demanded as a matter of right in an action to recover on a note, and to foreclose a mortgage, where the pleadings admit the right to recover the amount claimed to be due upon the note, and nothing is left in controversy but the right to foreclose the mortgage.—Morgan v. Field, 35 Kan. 162, 10 Pac. 448.

[j] (Mich.) Laws 1882, p. 7 (How. Ann. St. p. 1265), is not unconstitutional because a suit in equity thereunder to enforce a tax lien need not be tried before a jury; the constitutional provision that "the right of trial by jury shall remain" not requiring the extension of the right to new cases.—(1884) State v. Iron Cliffs Co., 54 Mich. 350, 20 N. W. 493; (1885) In re Wayne County Taxes, 54 Mich. 417, 23 N. W. 189.

[k] (Mo. 1885) A suit to subject land to the enforcement of a vendor's lien, being an equitable one, is properly triable by the court, and a jury cannot be demanded therein as a matter of right.—Bronson v. Wanzer, 86 Mo. 408.

[l] (Mo. 1891) In a proceeding to enforce a mechanic's lien, a jury trial is allowable.—Murdock v. Hillyer, 45 Mo. App. 287.

[m] (Mont. 1884) Where suits to foreclose a chattel mortgage and to recover possession of the property are united, under Laws 12th Sess. p. 5, § 9, if the answer admits the mortgagee's right of possession, there is no issue for a jury. —Clark v. Baker, 6 Mont. 153, 9 Pac. 911.

[n] (N. Y. 1877) The complaint herein alleged that defendant was a married woman and possessed of a separate estate, that plaintiff sold to her building materials, and that the same were used for the benefit of her separate estate in the erection of buildings thereon, and judgment was demanded for the amount due, and that her separate estate be applied to the payment of the same, and that for that purpose a receiver thereof be appointed. Held, that the action was an action at law, and defendant was entitled to a trial by jury.—Litchfield v. Dezendorf, 11 Hun, 358.

[o] (N. Y. 1894) A proceeding to determine an attorney's lien is one of equitable jurisdiction, and the client is not entitled to a jury trial.—Canary v. Russell, 10 Misc. Rep. 597, 31 N. Y. Supp. 291, 24 Civ. Proc. R. 109.

[p] (Ohio, 1861) In a petition to enforce a mechanic's lien, there can be no jury trial, except on an order directing an issue out of chancery.—Clippenger v. Ross, 2 Ohio Dec. 562.

[q] (Ohio, 1873) In a suit for the foreclosure of a mortgage and for recovery of a personal judgment against defendant for the money due, defendant, under Act Feb. 19, 1864, is entitled to demand a jury trial as a right.—Keller v. Wenzell, 23 Ohio St. 579.

[r] (Va. 1881) A party has no absolute right to a trial by jury of an issue joined on a motion for a mechanic's lien; it being in the nature of an equitable remedy, and Code 1873, c. 163, § 8, not applying to motions which partake of the nature of an equitable proceeding to enforce a charge on real estate.—Pairo v. Bethell, 75 Va. 825.

[s] (Wis. 1861) The practice of uniting the legal cause of action for the mortgage debt with the equitable remedy in foreclosure, rendering the whole an equitable proceeding, existed in this state before the adoption of the constitution, and the parties in such a proceeding cannot now claim a jury trial of the issue upon the debt.—Stilwell v. Kellogg, 14 Wis. 461.

[t] (Wis. 1864) In a foreclosure action, the rendition of a personal judgment for any deficiency by the court without the intervention of a jury, is not an infringement of the right of trial by jury, secured by the constitution.—Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Cross, 18 Wis. 109.

[u] (Wis. 1889) An action to foreclose a lien upon a pledge is of an equitable nature, and not triable by jury, though a personal judgment be entered against the pledgor.—Wilson v. Johnson, 74 Wis. 337, 43 N. W. 148.

§ 70. Enforcement and administration of trusts.

As action for recovery of money only, see ante, § 67 [y].

[a] (Ind. 1890) An action by a widow against the administrator of her husband's estate to recover her distributive share is of an equitable nature, and cannot be submitted to a jury as an action at law, under Elliott's Supp. § 302, which provides that where claims have been filed against an estate, disallowed, and transferred to the docket for trial, "the trial of such claims shall be conducted as in ordinary civil cases."—Sherwood v. Thomasson, 124 Ind. 541, 24 N. E. 334.

[b] (N. Y. 1863) Questions concerning trust funds belong to a court of equity, and do not require a jury trial, under the clause of the constitution that "trial by jury, in all cases in which it has been heretofore used, shall remain inviolate forever."—Sands v. Kimbark, 27 N. Y. 147, affirmed (1863) 39 Barb. 108.

[c] (N. Y. 1893) An action to enforce a provision of a will that defendant, the executrix, should pay plaintiff a sufficient sum to keep him from want, in which the complaint asks, not for a gross sum, but for $20 a week, "or such reasonable sum as may be proper," is an equitable action, and defendant is not entitled to a jury trial.—Burke v. Burke, 5 Misc. Rep. 312, 26 N. Y. Supp. 55, 31 Abb. N. C. 63.

[d] (Ohio, 1859) In an action in the nature of a bill in equity to enforce an express trust and for an account, it is within the discretion of the court to submit any questions to a jury. —Carlisle v. Foster, 10 Ohio St. 198.

[e] (S. C. 1876) An action by the heirs of a decedent to recover from the surety of a late commissioner in equity proceeds of land sold by him for partition is an equitable action, and properly triable by the court without a jury.—Featherston v. Norris, 7 S. C. (7 Rich.) 472.

[f] (S. C. 1895) The liability of a bank for cashing checks drawn by its president, as executor, on a fund deposited in trust for beneficiaries under the will, with knowledge of the nature of the fund, and that he intended to convert it to his own use, can be enforced only in a court of chancery, and a jury trial cannot be demanded as a matter of right.—Knobeloch v. Germania Sav. Bank, 43 S. C. 233, 21 S. E. 13.

[a] (Cal. 1891) Where defendant, in an action under Code Civ. Proc. § 1050, to have determined a claim asserted by defendant against plaintiff on a note, files a pleading which in form and substance is a complaint on the note, asking judgment for the amount claimed thereon, and plaintiff, answering, sets up want of consideration and other defenses, it is error for the court to refuse a demand by plaintiff for a jury trial.—Taylor v. Ford, 92 Cal. 419, 28 Pac. 441, reversing Id., 24 Pac. 942.

[b] (Cal. 1896) In an action to reform a written contract, and to restrain defendant meanwhile from disposing of the subject-matter of the contract, plaintiff is not entitled to a jury trial.—Loftus v. Fischer, 113 Cal. 286, 45 Pac. 328.

[c] (Ind. 1886) An action to set aside a will is, of right, triable by a jury, as it was not one of exclusive equitable jurisdiction prior to June 18, 1852, and not within section 409, Rev. St.—Lamb v. Lamb, 105 Ind. 456, 5 N. E. 171.

[d] (Ind. 1888) Where, in an action on a note and mortgage, defendant's wife filed a counterclaim, alleging that she executed the note and mortgage as surety for her husband, and had acquired the lands by gift from her father, and praying a cancellation of the mortgage, the issue joined is equitable, and a jury should be denied.—Johnson v. Johnson, 115 Ind. 112, 17 N. E. 111.

[e] (Ind. 1892) A complaint by the heirs of M. alleged that while he was of unsound mind defendants, with full knowledge thereof, fraudulently and without consideration induced him to convey lands to them; that he was subsequently adjudged insane, and his guardian disaffirmed the conveyances, and demanded a reconveyance, which was refused. The prayer for relief was for a judgment disaffirming and canceling the deeds, and that the title to the lands might be revested in plaintiffs, freed and discharged from all claims of defendants. Some of the land was in another state, and without the court's jurisdiction. Held, that the action was not to quiet title, but was a suit in equity to cancel the deeds, and plaintiffs, having elected to so proceed, were not entitled to a jury trial.—Monnett v. Turpie, 132 Ind. 482, 32 N. E. 328.

[f] (Mo. 1859) Where a plaintiff seeks the annulment of deeds, on the ground that they were obtained by duress and violence, the cause must be tried by the court, and not by the jury.—Bray v. Thatcher, 28 Mo. 129.

[g] (Mo. 1859) Where the object of a suit is to set aside conveyances of land and procure reconveyances, on the grounds of violence and fraud in obtaining them, the cause is properly tried by the court, and not by the jury.—Bray v. Thatcher, 28 Mo. 129.

[h] (N. Y. 1857) An action to set aside an assignment as fraudulent and void is properly triable by the court without a jury, where the facts are undisputed; the only question being whether, on the facts, the assignment was void.—Wilson v. Forsyth, 16 How. Prac. 448.

[i] (N. Y. 1890) An action wherein the complaint seeks to have set aside, on the ground of fraud, a release to defendant of all liability for causing plaintiff's arrest, and to recover damages for malicious prosecution, is for equitable relief, and is not triable by jury.—Stone v. Weiller, 57 Hun, 588, 10 N. Y. Supp. 828.

[j] (N. Y. 1894) In an action to adjudge a note and chattel mortgages void on the ground of usury, where defendant denies the usury and prays judgment against plaintiff, it is not error to deny plaintiff's motion to frame issues for the jury on the counterclaim, as, when defendant has answered plaintiff's proof, he has also established his case.—Hayes v. Bainbridge, 79 Hun, 611, 30 N. Y. Supp. 148.

[k] (Ohio, 1875) Plaintiff, having paid the whole of a sum called for by a written contract in ignorance of an alleged mistake therein, brought suit for the reformation of the contract, at the same time asking for a money judgment for the amount of his overpayment. The only issue of fact raised by the pleadings was as to his right to have the contract reformed. Held, that neither party was entitled to demand that such issue should be tried by a jury.—Ellsworth v. Holcomb, 28 Ohio St. 66.

§ 72. Establishment of lost or destroyed instruments.

[a] (Ill. 1883) Rev. St. 1874, c. 116, known as the "Burnt Records Act," which provides for the establishment by a court of equity of titles to land, the record of which has been destroyed by fire, is not unconstitutional, as depriving parties of the right to trial by jury.—Heacock v. Lubuke, 107 Ill. 396.

[b] (Ill. 1884) Const. 1818 provides that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate." Const. 1848 provides that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate, and shall extend to all cases at law, without regard to the amount in controversy." Const. 1870 provides that "the right of trial by jury as heretofore enjoyed shall remain inviolate." Held, that Rev. St. 1874, c. 841, known as the "Burnt Records Act," which provides for the establishment of titles, the record of which has been destroyed by fire, by a suit in equity, is not unconstitutional, as depriving the parties of a right to trial by jury, since such a suit is of equitable cognizance, and is not embraced within the scope of the constitutional provisions.—Heacock v. Hosmer, 109 Ill. 245.

[d] (Ill. 1892) The burnt records act (Rev. St. 1891, c. 116, §§ 6–29), which empowers courts of equity without a jury trial to establish title to land where the records have been destroyed, is not unconstitutional, as interfering with the right of trial by jury, even though the effect of a decree confirming title under said act is the same as that of a judgment in ejectment.—Harding v. Fuller, 141 Ill. 308, 30 N. E. 1053; Same v. Skinner, Id.; Same v. Donlan, Id., following (1884) Heacock v. Hosmer, 109 Ill. 245.

[e] (Ind. 1894) Rev. St. 1843, pp. 499, 500, § 78, provides that whenever any will shall have been lost or destroyed, and the fact is established by a court of chancery, the decree of such court shall be recorded by the clerk of the proper probate court. Rev. St. 1894, § 412 (Rev. St. 1881, § 409), provides that issues of law and fact in causes that prior to 1852 were of exclusive equitable jurisdiction shall be tried by the court. Held, that a jury trial could not be demanded as a matter of right in an action to establish a lost will.—Wright v. Fults, 138 Ind. 594, 38 N. E. 175.

[f] (Kan. 1866) Act Feb. 9, 1864, to restore the records of Douglas county, which had been destroyed by fire, is not unconstitutional, because a trial by jury is not authorized to determine what records had existed before the fire.—Kimball v. Connor, 3 Kan. 414.

[g] (Mo. 1871) The rule that in equitable suits a jury will not be called as a matter of right applied in a suit alleging the cancellation and delivery of a note by mistake, and asking for relief, brought under the Missouri Code of Procedure.—Well v. Kume, 49 Mo. 158.

[a] (U. S. 1893) The jurisdiction of a court of equity to set aside an assignment for the benefit of creditors cannot be defeated on the ground that, complainant's claim being for a money payment exceeding $20, the defendants are entitled to trial by jury under Const. Amend. 7, when such claim is recognized and provided for in the deed of assignment, and is not denied by the pleadings.—Talley v. Curtain, 54 Fed. 43, 4 C. C. A. 177, 8 U. S. App. 347.

[b] (Ala. 1845) A creditor who alleges fraud in the conveyance of a debtor by a mortgage or deed of trust cannot be prevented from trying this question in a court of law before a jury.—Marriott v. Givens, 8 Ala. 694.

[c] (Ind. 1882) Plaintiffs averred that they were creditors of one S., who had transferred his goods to other creditors, who were made defendants, under an agreement that, after payment of the latters' claims, the goods should be returned to him; and they averred, further, that, without any new consideration and to defraud plaintiffs, there was a modification of the original contract, whereby the absolute title vested in such defendants without providing for any return of the goods to S. Held, that the complaint was in the nature of a bill in equity seeking to charge defendants as trustees, and hence was not a case for a jury.—Hendricks v. Frank, 86 Ind. 278.

[d] (Ind. 1885) It is error to submit to a jury for trial as an action at law an equitable cause of action to subject lands fraudulently conveyed to the payment of the judgment, set up in a complaint at law to recover a sum of money.—Lake v. Lake, 99 Ind. 339.

[e] (Ind. 1887) A suit to set aside a mortgage on the ground of fraud, brought by creditors, is of equitable cognizance, and is triable by the court, not by a jury.—Stix v. Sadler, 109 Ind. 254, 9 N. E. 905.

[f] (Iowa, 1885) An action to subject real estate to the lien of a judgment against one of several defendants on the ground that he is the real owner of the property, and that the conveyance to his codefendant was a fraud on his creditors, is an equitable proceeding, and a refusal of a jury trial is not error.—Buckham v. Grape, 65 Iowa, 535, 17 N. W. 755.

[g] (Kan. 1877) Trial by jury is not a matter of right in an action to have a certain deed set aside and to have the land mentioned in such deed made subject to the payment of a certain judgment previously rendered in favor of the plaintiff and against one of the defendants.—McCardell v. McNay, 17 Kan. 433.

[h] (Ky. 1844) Under the statutes of 1838 and 1840 (3 St. Law, 376, 378), providing that, if an execution on a judgment rendered by a justice of the peace be returned unsatisfied, the justice may issue a summons against any third person indebted to the defendant, and make any orders necessary for the application of the debt, if any be found to exist, to the payment of the judgment, the proceedings are of an equitable nature, and the justice of the peace, or the circuit judge on appeal, may try the same without the intervention of a jury.—Kennedy v. Aldridge, 44 Ky. (5 B. Mon.) 141.

[i] (Neb. 1880) In a suit in equity to set aside a fraudulent conveyance, constituting a cloud on plaintiff's title to real estate owned by him, though not in his actual possession, defendants are not entitled to a trial by jury, though the court may submit special facts to a jury.—Harral v. Gray, 10 Neb. 186, 4 N. W. 1040.

[j] (Neb. 1895) In an action by a judgment creditor against the debtor and his vendee to set aside a transfer as in fraud of creditors, defendants were not entitled to a trial by jury.—Monroe v. Reid, 46 Neb. 316, 64 N. W. 983.

[k] (N. Y. 1888) An action to set aside a composition deed, and to vacate an order discharging an assignee on the ground of fraud, and to obtain an order for the payment in full of plaintiff's claim, and for the appointment of a receiver, is an equitable action, and the sending of issues to a jury is, under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 969–971, discretionary.—Blunt v. Hibbard (Com. Pl.) 3 N. Y. Supp. 121.

[l] (N. Y. 1889) An action by a receiver in supplementary proceedings to set aside a mortgage and foreclosure sale of the debtor's goods, made before the recovery of the judgment on which the proceedings were based, and to require the mortgagee to account for the value of the property, alleging that said mortgage was fraudulent as to creditors, is an equitable action, and triable by the court, and it is error to send it to the circuit, to be there tried as an action at law.—Mandeville v. Avery, 51 Hun, 636, 3 N. Y. Supp. 745.

[m] (N. Y. 1891) An action by a creditor against his debtor's assignee to compel the latter to account for the funds received, and to pay the balance found to be due, is equitable, and defendant's motion for a trial by jury is properly denied, notwithstanding the complaint avers an account stated between the assignee and plaintiff, and that a certain sum was found to be due from the assignee on such account.—Pendergast v. Greenfield, 127 N. Y. 23, 27 N. E. 388, reversing (1889) 55 Hun, 606, 7 N. Y. Supp. 829.

[n] (N. Y. 1891) After a creditor of an insolvent firm of wholesale clothiers had attached their entire stock, other persons claiming to be creditors for goods sold, whose claims had not matured, assumed to rescind the sales as having been induced by fraud, and replevied the goods, which they took from the possession of the sheriff. The attaching creditor then brought suit to restrain further proceedings in replevin, to have a receiver appointed, and compel the litigation of all the adverse claims to the property in one suit. Held, that it cannot be objected to this suit that plaintiffs in replevin are thereby deprived of a trial by jury; for, if they are as matter of right entitled to such trial, issues may be framed by which they may have the benefit of it.—National Park Bank v. Goddard, 62 Hun, 31, 16 N. Y. Supp. 343.

[a] (U. S. 1880) An action against the receiver of a railroad for the death of a person is not a "suit at law," within the provision of the constitution guarantying the right of trial by jury, and therefore the granting of a jury trial in such an action is within the discretion of the court.—Kennedy v. Indianapolis, C. & L. R. Co. (C. C.) 3 Fed. 97.

[c] (N. Y. 1857) The provisions of the constitution relative to trial by jury do not apply to proceedings to close the business of a corporation on the ground of insolvency.—In re Mechanics' Fire Ins. Co., 5 Abb. Prac. 444.

[d] (N. Y. 1858) The act of 1849, providing for the settling of the affairs of insolvent corporations and compelling contribution by their members, is not unconstitutional on the ground that it deprives stockholders of the right of trial by jury, since such proceedings existed before the adoption of the constitution and were within the jurisdiction of courts of equity.—United States Trust Co. v. United States Fire Ins. Co., 18 N. Y. 199.

[e] (N. Y.) Act April 21, 1862 (Sess. Laws 1862, p. 743), to facilitate the closing up of insolvent and dissolved mutual insurance companies, and which compels parties controverting any demand made against them by receivers of such companies to submit such controversies to the decision of a referee, to the exclusion of a jury, is not unconstitutional, under Const. art. 1, § 2, declaring that trial by jury in all cases in which it has been heretofore used shall remain inviolate forever, since broader references were sanctioned long before the adoption of the constitution.—(1863) Sands v. Kimbark, 39 Barb. 108, affirmed (1863) 27 N. Y. 147; Sands v. Tillinghast, 24 How. Prac. 435.

[f] (N. Y. 1865) Laws 1862, p. 743, c. 412, authorizing justices of the supreme court to refer controversies arising between receivers and members of mutual insurance companies, is not unconstitutional as impairing the right to a trial by jury.—Sands v. Harvey, 4 Abb. Dec. 147, 19 Abb. Prac. 248.

[g] (N. Y. 1878) An action by the receiver of an insolvent corporation against the maker of notes given to the corporation, but averred by the defendant to have been signed by him through fraudulent representations made by the president, held to be properly discontinued for the purpose of a reference under 2 Rev. St. p. 469, § 73. The defendant's charge of fraud did not entitle him to a trial by jury.—Crosby v. Day, 16 Hun, 291.

[i] (Ohio) Under Rev. St. § 6852, providing that creditors shall present their claims within a certain time after the publication of notice of assignment by an insolvent corporation, that the assignee shall indorse his allowance or rejection thereon, and that claimants whose claims are rejected shall bring suit against the assignee to enforce such claims within a certain time after they have been rejected, a suit to enforce the allowance of a claim by the assignee of an insolvent debtor is a civil action, in which the right to demand a jury does not exist.—(1892) Root v. Meader, 11 Ohio Dec. 747, 29 Wkly. Law Bul. 51; (1893) Id., 2 Ohio Dec. 547, affirmed Meader v. Root (1895) 5 O. C. D. 61.

[aa] (U. S. 1896) Act March 3, 1881, providing that if, in any action brought pursuant to Rev. St. § 2326, to settle claims to mining locations, title shall not be established by either party, the jury shall so find, and judgment shall be entered accordingly, does not absolutely require a jury trial.—Perego v. Dodge, 163 U. S. 160, 16 Sup. Ct. 971, 41 L. Ed. 113.

[b] (U. S. 1888) Laws Mich. 1887, No. 260, p. 337, extending the jurisdiction of equity to quiet titles to cases where the lands are unoccupied, does not illegally deprive defendant of trial by jury, secured by Const. art. 6, § 27, this provision extending only to cases where by the common law trial by jury was customary, and at common law ejectment not lying where defendant was not in possession.—Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Sparrow (C. C.) 36 Fed. 210, 1 L. R. A. 480.

[c] (Colo. 1892) Code Civ. Proc. § 1, abolishing the distinction between suits at law and in equity, and the forms of actions theretofore existing, does not abolish equity, or the nature and manner of determining a suit, but controls only its form; and a court, therefore, in proceeding under the "Town Site Act" (Gen. St. 1883, c. 108, § 14) to the determination of an adverse claim to a lot, commits no error in refusing a jury, and proceeding as in equity to a decree.—Rice v. Goodwin, 2 Colo. App. 267, 30 Pac. 330.

[d] (Conn. 1888) Gen. St. § 2356, providing that when any oyster bed is designated, contrary to that chapter, the superior court, as a court of equity, on petition, shall appoint a committee, who shall hear and report the facts to the court, which may order the removal of the stakes, is not unconstitutional, as denying the claimant a jury trial, since the case is an equitable one, and the committee is not a statutory tribunal, and the act requires the court to do what in other suits is left to its discretion.—Town of Clinton v. Bacon, 56 Conn. 508, 16 Atl. 548.

[e] (Idaho, 1887) A proceeding under Rev. St. U. S. §§ 2325, 2326, to determine the rights of adverse claimants to a mineral location, is an action at law, in which a jury may be demanded without regard to which party is in possession.—Burke v. McDonald, 2 Idaho, 310, 13 Pac. 351.

[f] (Ill. 1883) Laws 1871, § 50, providing that courts of chancery "may hear and determine bills to quiet title and to remove clouds from the title to real estate," do not interfere with the constitutional right of trial by jury, as the court has power to submit issues of fact to a jury.—Gage v. Ewing, 107 Ill. 11.

as of right; the action being statutory.—Trittipo v. Morgan, 99 Ind. 269.

[h] (Ind. 1886) A jury may be demanded, as matter of right, on the trial of an action to quiet title.—Johnson v. Taylor, 106 Ind. 89, 5 N. E. 732.

[i] (Ind. 1892) Rev. St. 1881, § 409, provides that issues of law and of fact in causes that, prior to June 18, 1852, were of exclusively equitable jurisdiction, shall be tried by the court, and all other issues of fact shall be triable as the same are now triable. Held, that since all civil actions were as of right triable by jury prior to this statute, and the action to quiet title was not on June 18, 1852, one of exclusive equitable jurisdiction, the case was properly submitted to a jury.—Puterbaugh v. Puterbaugh, 131 Ind. 288, 30 N. E. 519, 15 L. R. A. 341.

[j] (Neb. 1883) An action to remove a cloud from the title to land is equitable in its nature, and the parties are not therein entitled to a trial by jury, as of right.—Raggencamp v. Converse, 15 Neb. 105, 17 N. W. 361.

[k] (Ohio, 1866) In an action brought under a statute to determine the title to land of which the plaintiff has possession, the plaintiff has no constitutional right to a trial by jury.—Ellithorpe v. Buck, 17 Ohio St. 72.

[l] (Pa. 1862) The act of April 22, 1856, giving a tenant in common in coal or iron mines, whose right is denied or resisted, the power to apply by petition in equity to the court of common pleas of the county where the lands may lie, who should adjudicate and determine the rights of the several parties according to the course of a court of chancery, conflicts with the constitutional right of the citizen to have controverted questions of fact in common-law causes decided by a jury; and it is applicable only to cases in which the rights of the complainants are equitable.—North Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Snowden, 42 Pa. (6 Wright) 488, 82 Am. Dec. 530.

[a] (N. Y. 1874) An action brought pursuant to Laws 1853, c. 238, providing that heirs claiming under an ancestor who died in possession, whether they be in possession or not, notwithstanding any apparent devise, may prosecute an action for partition, notwithstanding any possession under the devise, provided they allege and establish that the apparent devise is void, is properly triable before a jury.—Hewlett v. Wood, 1 Hun, 478.

[b] (N. Y. 1893) The issue in an action for partition of real property is triable by jury, if either party so desires.—Larder v. Granger, 67 Hun, 649, 21 N. Y. Supp. 1107.

[c] (Ohio, 1886) In an action to recover land, either party is entitled to a jury trial, but when the pleadings set forth an action for partition, neither party is entitled to jury trial, except in the discretion of the court, on special issues, though the title, right of property, and possession be incidentally brought into the issues.—Barr v. Chapman (Com. Pl.) 30 Wkly. Law Bul. 264.

[d] (Va. 1895) Code, § 2562, providing that the circuit court, in its equity jurisdiction, may take cognizance of all questions of law affecting the legal title that may arise in suits for partition, does not conflict with Const. art. 1, § 13, guarantying trial by jury, because trial by jury in such case did not exist at the time of the adoption of the constitution.—Pillow v. Southwest Virginia Imp. Co., 92 Va. 144, 23 S. E. 32, 52 Am. St. Rep. 804.

[a] (U. S. 1847) An injunction, properly issued in support of the prima facie right or title of the party seeking it, does not affect or impair the right to a trial by jury.—Woodworth v. Rogers, Fed. Cas. No. 18,018 [3 Woodb. & M. 135, 2 Robb, Pat. Cas. 625].

[b] (U. S. 1894) Act July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. 209), relating to illegal combinations in restraint of trade, and conferring power on circuit courts "to prevent and restrain violations" of the act, is not an invasion of the right of trial by jury, as the jurisdiction so given to equity will be deemed to be limited to such cases only as are of equitable cognizance.—United States v. Debs (C. C.) 64 Fed. 724; Union Trust Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., Id.

[c] (Conn. 1892) An action for a temporary restraining order and damages for obstructing a right of way is triable by a jury.—Spencer v. New York & N. E. R. Co., 62 Conn. 242, 25 Atl. 350.

[d] (Ind. 1874) On trial of an action for a perpetual injunction, where issues of fact are joined, the parties, or either of them, are entitled to trial by jury.—Hopkins v. Greenburg, K. & C. Turnpike Co., 46 Ind. 187.

[e] (Ind. 1880) In an action to enjoin a sheriff from selling land upon which there is a judgment lien, until other land belonging to the plaintiff's grantor is exhausted, the parties are, under Code, § 340, entitled to a trial by jury.—Edwards v. Applegate, 70 Ind. 325.

[f] (Ind. 1883) Since only a court of equity can give relief by injunction, and such courts are the judges of the facts as well as of the law, no right to trial by jury exists in injunction proceedings.—Helm v. First Nat. Bank of Huntington, 91 Ind. 44.

[g] (Ind. 1890) A complaint in an action against a city alleged that plaintiff was the owner of certain land; that defendant had unlawfully taken possession of the same, and, without having condemned it, was threatening to do irreparable damage to the same by cutting down the trees, and grading it as a street; and judgment was prayed that plaintiff's title be quieted as against defendant, and that defendant be enjoined from further trespassing thereon. Held a complaint to obtain an injunction, and not to quiet title, and therefore a trial by jury was properly refused.—Miller v. City of Indianapolis, 123 Ind. 196, 24 N. E. 228.

[h] (Ind. 1895) Where the complaint, in an action to restrain a railroad company from making an embankment in its roadbed so as to thereby cut off plaintiff's easement of way under the track, fails to allege an adverse claim by defendant, the action is one for an injunction, and not to quiet title, and therefore a trial by jury is properly denied.—Davis v. Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 140 Ind. 468, 39 N. E. 495.

[i] (Kan. 1881) In an action for an injunction, a trial by jury cannot be demanded as matter of right.—City of Emporia v. Soden, 25 Kan. 588, 37 Am. Rep. 265.

[j] (La.) Injunctions are to be tried summarily and without a jury.—(1829) King v. Gayoso, 8 Mart. (N. S.) 370; (1842) Dabbs v. Hemken, 3 Rob. 123.

[k] (La. 1850) In all injunction suits, where security is required to be given, the parties are entitled to trial by jury if they comply with the legal requisites.—Cumming v. Police Jury of Rapides, 5 La. Ann. 634.

[l] (La. 1861) A jury trial will be refused in a suit for an injunction against an executory process, the case being a summary one within the provisions of Code Prac. arts. 739, 740.—Amacker v. Smith, 16 La. Ann. 361.

[m] (La. 1874) The parties to an injunction suit originating in a suit on a promissory note are not entitled to a trial by jury, since the action does not come under the exceptions contained in Code Prac. art. 494.—McCracken v. Wells, 26 La. Ann. 31.

[n] (N. Y. 1891) Where the principal object of an action was to restrain defendants from maintaining a railroad, although damages were also claimed for injuries to property caused by the railroad, a motion for a trial by jury, addressed to the whole case, was properly denied.—Jefferson v. New York E. R. Co., 58 Hun, 603, 11 N. Y. Supp. 488.

[o] (Ohio, 1877) An action to perpetually enjoin defendant from obstructing, and continuing existing obstructions on, an alleged road in which plaintiff claims a special use, and for damages occasioned by such obstructions, is in the nature of a bill in equity for injunction, and incidentally for an account, in which neither party is entitled to demand a jury trial.—Converse v. Hawkins, 31 Ohio St. 209.

Contempt proceedings, see ante, § 63 [a, d].
Enforcement of health regulations, see post, § 108.
Issues of fact, see ante, § 49.
Municipal regulations, see post, § 107 [b].

[a] (U. S. 1886) Code Iowa 1873, § 1543, provides that any building, etc., where intoxicating liquors are manufactured, sold, or given away, contrary to law, shall be a nuisance, and may, along with the vessels and contents, fixtures, etc., be abated by "an action in equity." The person proceeded against is also made liable to fine and imprisonment. Held, in a proceeding under this statute, where the defendant removed the case to the federal court on the grounds that, inasmuch as the supreme court of the state had declared the law to be valid, he was virtually deprived of his right to a trial by jury, and that he had at a large expense established the place sought to be declared a nuisance prior to the passage of the act, and that it was only fit for a saloon and brewery, that no federal question was involved, and that the case should be remanded to the state court.—Schmidt v. Cobb, 119 U. S. 286, 7 Sup. Ct. 1373, 30 L. Ed. 321.

[b] (Iowa) Acts 1885 (Laws 20th Gen. Assem.) c. 143, which provides for the abatement of places where liquors are illegally kept for sale by a proceeding in equity, is not a violation of Const. art. 1, §§ 9–12, which provide that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate," and that in all criminal prosecutions involving life or liberty the accused shall have a right to trial by jury, upon an indictment by a grand jury.—(1885) Littleton v. Fritz, 65 Iowa, 488, 22 N. W. 641, 54 Am. Rep. 19; (1885) Pontius v. Winebrenner, 65 Iowa, 591, 22 N. W. 646; (1885) Same v. Bowman, 66 Iowa, 88, 23 N. W. 277; (1885) Shermerhorn v. Weber, 67 Iowa, 278, 25 N. W. 160; (1886) Martin v. Blattner, 68 Iowa, 286, 25 N. W. 131; (1886) McLane v. Leicht, 69 Iowa, 401, 29 N. W. 327.

[d] (Iowa, 1887) The right to a trial by jury, in chancery cases, not being guarantied by any constitutional provision, and the courts of chancery in Iowa having had, prior to the enactment of the statute regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, a well-settled jurisdiction of suits to abate nuisances, that statute is not unconstitutional because it denounces the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors as a nuisance, and provides for its abatement by proceedings in chancery.—State v. Jordan, 72 Iowa, 377, 34 N. W. 285.

[e] (Mass. 1828) St. 1827, c. 88, which provides that a court of equity shall give relief in cases of waste and nuisance, is not in contravention of article 15 of the declaration of rights, securing a right of trial by jury in all controversies concerning property, and therefore a jury trial could not be had as of right in an action to restrain the building of a bridge over a navigable stream in which the plaintiffs had obtained a prescriptive right of travel.—Proprietors of Charles River Bridge v. Proprietors of Warren Bridge, 23 Mass. (6 Pick.) 376.

[f] (Minn.) An action to abate a milldam as a nuisance, and to recover damages for its overflow, not being within the exceptions of Gen. St. 1866, c. 66, § 198, is triable by the court, unless the parties otherwise consent.—(1871) Finch v. Green, 16 Minn. 355 (Gil. 315); (1875) Brown v. Lawler, 21 Minn. 327.

[g] (N. H. 1889) Laws 1887, c. 77, declaring the use of a building for prostitution, gambling, and illegal sale of liquor to be a common nuisance, abatable in equity, does not change the ordinary course of procedure on questions triable by jury, and is valid.—State v. Saunders, 66 N. H. 39, 25 Atl. 588, 18 L. R. A. 646.

[h] (N. Y. 1871) The constitutional right to a trial by jury applies to an action to abate a nuisance and recover the damages occasioned thereby, though the complaint is in form as for equitable relief and the prayer for damages may be regarded as incidental thereto.—Hudson v. Caryl, 44 N. Y. 553.

[i] (N. Y. 1879) An action to restrain a nuisance and recover the damages occasioned by it cannot be tried without a jury, unless the parties consent to trial by the court.—Dorr v. Dansville Gaslight Co., 18 Hun, 274.

[j] (N. Y. 1887) The complaint prayed judgment for damages and the abatement of a nuisance, and also for an injunction restraining the defendant from continuing the nuisance. Plaintiff sought a trial by jury on the ground that at common law there was the remedy by writ of nuisance for the recovery of damages and an abatement of the nuisance, and Const. art. 1, § 2, secures to a party the right to a jury trial in all cases where before its adoption this mode of trial was used. Held that, the plaintiff having elected to ask for equitable relief in his action, his case was not one of right triable by a jury under the constitution, and it was in the discretion of the court to have the issues tried by the court, or by the court with the aid of a jury.—Cogswell v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 105 N. Y. 319, 11 N. E. 518, reversing (1886) 54 N. Y. Super. Ct. (22 Jones & S.) 92.

[jj] (N. Y. 1891) Where a complaint seeks an injunction to restrain defendants from operating their elevated railroad in front of plaintiff's premises until payment of all damages sustained by the plaintiff by reason thereof, the cause of action is equitable only, and defendants will not be entitled to a trial by jury upon the ground that the complaint states a nuisance, when its allegations are as consistent with the action of trespass as with that of nuisance.—Sommer v. New York El. Ry. Co., 60 Hun, 148, 14 N. Y. Supp. 619; Bach v. Same, 60 Hun, 128, 14 N. Y. Supp. 620.

[k] (N. Y.) Where the complaint alleges that defendants have taken possession of the street in front of plaintiff's property for the maintenance and operation of an elevated railway, thereby appropriating his easement in the street and committing a trespass on his property, and prays an injunction and damages, the action is an equitable one, and is not an "action for a nuisance," within Code Civ. Proc. § 968, requiring the latter actions to be tried by a jury.—(1891) Johnson v. Manhattan Ry. Co., 61 Hun, 627, 16 N. Y. Supp. 434; (1892) Johnston v. Same, 60 N. Y. Super. Ct. (28 Jones & S.) 494, 17 N. Y. Supp. 953.

[m] (Pa. 1888) The intervention of equity to abate a milldam situated in a city, which causes inundations and ice gorges several times each year, thus injuring private property and impairing public travel, is not in contravention of Const. art. 1, providing that "trial by jury shall be as heretofore, and the right thereof remain inviolate."—City of New Castle v. Haney, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 87.

[n] (S. C. 1896) Dispensary Act, § 22, declaring the sale of intoxicating liquors without a license to be a nuisance, and providing process for the arrest of the offender, search of his premises, and seizure of intoxicants found thereon; an order restraining further sale by such offender; and summary proceedings to punish, as for contempt, one disobeying such order,—does not violate the constitutional provisions as to the right of trial by jury.—Ex parte Keeler, 45 S. C. 537, 23 S. E. 865, 55 Am. St. Rep. 785, 31 L. R. A. 678.

[a] (Ill. 1881) The act of 1874, providing for the issuance of an injunction to restrain an insolvent insurance company from doing business, and for the dissolution of the company if it appear proper, is not invalid, as not providing for a trial by jury.—Ward v. Farwell, 97 Ill. 593.

[b] (N. Y. 1889) Code Civ. Proc. § 968, provides that issues of fact must be tried by a jury, unless a reference is made or a jury waived, in an action for money only; in an action of ejectment; for dower, waste, nuisance, or to recover a chattel. Section 969 provides that an issue of law in any action, and an issue of fact in an action not specified in section 968, or wherein trial by jury is not expressly provided, must be tried by the court, unless a reference or a jury trial is directed. Held, that an action by a stockholder of a corporation to restrain its trustees from paying salaries they had voted to themselves, and requiring them to refund the amount already paid, was one triable by the court, and that neither party was entitled to a jury.—McNaughton v. Osgood, 114 N. Y. 574, 21 N. E. 1044.

[c] (Wis. 1874) The jurisdiction of equity to restrain corporations from abuse of franchise or violation of law was already established at the adoption of the state constitution, and hence Const. art. 1, § 5, declaring that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate and shall extend to all cases at law, has no application to it.—Attorney General v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 35 Wis. 425.

[d] (Wis. 1874) The exercise by the supreme court of its general jurisdiction under the constitution of injunctions to restrain railroad companies from exacting tolls in excess of the maximum rates established by Laws 1874, c. 273, is not an invasion of the right of trial by jury, which the constitution reserves and extends to all cases at law; for that provision does not comprehend cases of legal right determinable in a suit in equity.—Attorney General v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 35 Wis. 425.

Issue of damages, see ante, § 43 [g, h, i, ql. —— of fact, see ante, § 51.

[a] (Cal. 1893) In an action under Code Civ. Proc. § 738, authorizing an action against one claiming an interest in real property adversely to plaintiff, for the purpose of determining such adverse claim, defendant is not entitled to a trial by jury, where the only issue is whether defendant is entitled to a specific performance of a contract for the purchase of the land, made by plaintiff's grantor.—Crocker v. Carpenter, 98 Cal. 418, 33 Pac. 271.

[b] (Ohio, 1877) In a suit for the specific performance of a contract, neither party is entitled to a trial by jury as a matter of right, as the action is in equity.—Moore v. Moulton, 5 Ohio Dec. 534.

[c] (Ohio, 1896) An action to enforce the specific performance of a contract for the conveyance of land, and the payment of money, is not an action for the recovery of specific property, nor for money only, within the purview of Rev. St. § 5130, and neither party is entitled to demand a trial thereof by jury.—Hull v. Bell, 54 Ohio, 228, 43 N. E. 584.

§ 81. Opening or setting aside judgments or decrees.

On appeal in motion to set aside judgment, see post, § 95 [e].

[a] (N. Y. 1878) An action to vacate a judgment obtained against a corporation by collusion with its officers may be tried without a jury.—Whittlesey v. Delaney, 73 N. Y. 571.

[b] (N. Y. 1896) An action by an heir of a testator to set aside a judgment establishing the validity of the probate of the will as procured by collusion between plaintiff's attorney and the attorney for the executors, in order to cut off plaintiff's rights as an heir at law, is not triable by jury.—Ellensohn v. Keyes, 6 App. Div. 601, 39 N. Y. Supp. 774.

§ 82. Enforcement of judgments or awards.

Creditors' suits in general, see ante, § 73.

[a] (Ind. 1873) A jury trial may be claimed in an action upon a common-law award, but not in proceedings to enforce an award in a statutory arbitration.—Milner v. Noel, 43 Ind. 324.

[b] (Iowa, 1886) An action on an award upon matters in dispute between a township and its treasurer, and for money had and received by him for the township, and appropriated to his own use, is an action at law, authorizing a trial by jury, and it is error to refer it, against objection.—District Tp. of Grant v. Bulles, 69 Iowa, 525, 29 N. W. 439.

[c] (Ky. 1896) Where a creditor agrees by written contract to accept certain property from his debtor, at a valuation to be fixed by appraisers, an action by the debtor to recover the value of the goods as fixed above the debt is triable as an action at law, and not in equity.—Bank of Williamstown v. Webb, 33 S. W. 1109.

§ 83. Property rights of married women.

[a] (Mo. 1879) Rev. St. § 3296 (Acts 1875, p. 61), provides that any personal property belonging to any woman before her marriage, or which may have come to her during coverture by gift, shall be and remain her separate property, and under her sole control, and shall not be liable to be taken by any process of law for the debts of her husband. Held, that an action at law by a wife for the conversion of her personal property is a purely legal action, though she joins her husband with her as plaintiff, since her personal property belongs to her absolutely, and there is no relation of trust between herself and her husband respecting the same which would make the action of an equitable nature, and therefore such action was one for a jury.—Alt v. Meyer, 8 Mo. App. 198.

[b] (N. Y. 1855) A claim against the separate estate of a married woman is equitable in its nature, and, under the provisions of the Code, may be tried by the court without a jury.—Cheseborough v. House, 12 N. Y. Super. Ct. (5 Duer) 125.

[a] (Ga. 1888) On exception to an auditor's report in a law case, as being contrary to law and evidence, the court's action in overruling the exception, approving the report, and directing a verdict in accordance with it, is erroneous, as it deprives the exceptants of a jury trial.—Poullian v. Brown, 80 Ga. 27, 5 S. E. 107.

[b] (Mo.) In a proceeding under Wag. St. p. 291, § 13, which provides that, if an execution against a corporation has been returned unsatisfied, such execution may be used against any of the stockholders to the extent of the amount of stock held by such stockholder, provided that no execution shall issue against any stockholder, except on an order of the court in which the action shall have been brought made upon motion in open court, after sufficient notice in writing to the persons sought to be charged, the stockholder is not entitled to a trial by jury.—(1877) Schaeffer v. Phœnix Brewery Co., 4 Mo. App. 115; (1882) Erskine v. Lowenstein, 11 Mo. App. 595.

[c] (N. Y. 1857) On a nonenumerated motion, the court may set aside releases and overturn deeds and judgments, without the aid of a jury, if such questions arise. In cases, however, of importance and difficulty, the court may require the matters in controversy to be determined by action.—McLean v. Tompkins, 18 Abb. Prac. 24.

[d] (Okl. 1894) In proceedings for the arrest of a debtor under St. c. 66, art. 9, the debtor has no right to a jury trial on a motion to discharge the order of arrest, on the ground that it was granted on false allegations.—Light v. Canadian County Bank, 2 Okl. 543, 37 Pac. 1075.

[a] (U. S. 1877) In an action of tort in the federal court, where defendant suffers a default, plaintiff has no constitutional right to have the damages assessed by a jury, but such assessment may be made by the court.—Raymond v. Danbury & N. R. Co., Fed. Cas. No. 11,593 [43 Conn. 596, 14 Blatchf. 133].

[b] (Ala. 1862) In an action on an open account for goods sold and delivered, and to recover money paid by the plaintiff for the defendant, the court cannot render judgment final without the intervention of a jury.—Porter v. Burleson, 38 Ala. 343.

[c] (Conn. 1885) The provision of the constitution that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate does not apply to the assessment of damages on a default, as the provision secured the right of jury trial only where it already existed, and on default the practice had always been for damages to be assessed by the court.—Seeley v. City of Bridgeport, 53 Conn. 1, 22 Atl. 1017.

[f] (Iowa, 1854) Code, par. 1831, provides that the defendant may appear at the time of the assessment of damages in an action against him and cross-examine the plaintiff's witnesses, but for no other purpose. Paragraph 1824 provides that, where the defendant fails to answer or withdraws his pleading, he shall be deemed to be in default. Quære, whether paragraph 1831 is not unconstitutional, as depriving the defendant of the right of trial by jury, as applied to a case where he had answered and was not in default.—Hutchinson v. Sangster, 4 G. Greene, 340.

[g] (Iowa, 1862) Where an action of replevin has been dismissed by the plaintiff and reinstated by the defendants for the assessment of his damages, the plaintiff, under the statutes, is considered as a party in default, and is not entitled to demand a jury trial on the question of damages.—Wilkins v. Treynor, 14 Iowa, 391.

[h] (Iowa, 1882) A party who is in default is not entitled to a jury to assess damages. In such case the court is empowered to assess the damages, unless a jury be demanded by the party not in default.—Preston v. Wright, 60 Iowa, 351, 14 N. W. 352.

[i] (Ky. 1801) Act 1799, authorizing the court to award 15 per cent. damages for the nonperformance of a contract, is repugnant to the constitution, providing "that trial by jury should be as heretofore, and the right thereto remain inviolate."—Stidger v. Rogers, 2 Ky. (Ky. Dec.) 52.

[j] (Ky. 1801) Upon an attachment founded on an open account, it is error to take judgment without the intervention of a jury.—Demaree v. Jackson, 2 Ky. (Ky. Dec.) 68.

[k] (Ky. 1805) A law authorizing judgment to be entered on motion for a breach of a contract without the intervention of a jury, where the defendant is in default, is not unconstitutional.—Ewing v. Directors of Penitentiary, 3 Ky. (Hardin) 5.

[l] (Ky. 1848) In debt upon a constable's bond for a failure in his official duty, it is error for the court to assess the damages, since a jury should assess them.—Wells v. Commonwealth, 47 Ky. (8 B. Mon.) 459.

[m] (Ky. 1851) Where a sum is fixed by statute as a tax, interest thereon cannot be given without the intervention of a jury, though the court may enter judgment for the tax.—Portland Dry Dock & Ins. Co. v. Trustees of Portland, 51 Ky. (12 B. Mon.) 77.

[n] (La. 1851) In confirming a default, where the damages claimed are uncertain and to be valued by opinion, a jury must estimate them; otherwise, where they can be ascertained by precise evidence. It is often difficult to distinguish between these two classes of cases. The matter rests in the judge's discretion.—Brander v. Goodin, 6 La. Ann. 521.

[o] (Me. 1882) Where judgment is rendered for the plaintiff on demurrer, the defendant has no right to have damages assessed by a jury.—Hanley v. Sutherland, 74 Me. 212.

[p] (Md. 1870) A statutory provision that, when a judgment is taken by default, the court may assess the damages on proof thereof, without impaneling a jury, must be construed in subordination to a constitutional provision, that the right of trial by jury of all issues of fact in civil proceedings shall be inviolably preserved. Under such a statute, therefore, the court is empowered to assess the damages only when the defendant has not appeared in court and is in default; or when, having appeared, he waives or fails to assert his right to have the question referred to a jury.—Knickerbocker Life Ins. Co. v. Hoeske, 32 Md. 317.

[q] (N. M. 1882) A right given by statute to the court to assess the value of the property and damages in replevin, when plaintiff discontinues, is not an infringement of the constitutional right of trial by jury.—Lamy v. Remuson, 2 N. M. 245.

[r] (N. Y. 1852) On application for judgment in an action to recover against carriers for the loss of goods, it is irregular to order a reference to ascertain the damages, where it is not pretended that the case involves the examination of a long account. The damages should be assessed by a jury.—Hewitt v. Howell, 8 How. Prac. 346.

[s] (Ohio, 1881) In an action under Act April 20, 1874, (71 Ohio Laws, 146), giving a penalty of not less than $150 to the party aggrieved by a railroad corporation for overcharging for the transportation of passengers or property, where the case stands for judgment on the petition, it is not error to refuse to impanel a jury to assess damages.—Cincinnati, S. & C. R. Co. v. Cook, 37 Ohio St. 265.

[t] (Or. 1892) Hill's Code, § 249, subd. 2, as amended by Act 1891 (Sess. Laws, p. 173), which provides that in certain actions, including all actions sounding in damages or tort, if no answer be filed within the time specified, default may be entered against defendant, and plaintiff may apply at a subsequent term for the relief demanded in the complaint, and in all such cases "the court, without the intervention of the jury, shall assess the damages which he shall recover," etc., is not repugnant to the constitution (Hill's Code, art. 1, § 17), which declares that "in all civil cases the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate," since the assessment of damages on a confession by defendant of the cause of action is not a "trial" of the action.—Dean v. Willamette Bridge Ry. Co., 22 Or. 101, 29 Pac. 440, 15 L. R. A. 614.

§ 86. Enforcement of bonds and recognizances.

Procedure as denial of right, see post, § 210 [a].
Proceedings other than actions, see post, § 124½.

[a] (Ga. 1872) A statute which authorizes execution to be issued against a surety in an appeal bond upon rendition of judgment against the principal, without a jury trial as between the respondent and the surety, is not unconstitutional.—Young v. Wise, 45 Ga. 81.

[b] (Ky.) The statute which requires that, on dissolution of an injunction and when judgment is affirmed on an appeal or writ of error, the court shall render judgment against the security in the injunction bond or for the prosecution of the appeal, is unconstitutional, as it deprives the party of a trial by jury.—(1801) Gullion v. Bowlware's Adm'rs, 2 Ky. (Ky. Dec.) 76; (1826) Hughes v. Hughes, 20 Ky. (4 T. B. Mon.) 43.

[c] (Mo. 1881) Rev. St. § 3904, provides that in all cases where judgment is given in any court upon any bond, bill, or note for the payment of money or delivery of property, against the principal debtor and any surety therein, and such surety shall pay the judgment, or any part thereof, he shall be entitled, on motion, to a judgment in the same court against the principal debtor for the amount he has paid, etc. Held, that said section clothes the court in which such a motion is pending with jurisdiction to hear and determine all questions growing out of the motion, and will authorize the submission of an issue of fact to a jury if either party should demand it.—Schlicker v. Gordon, 74 Mo. 534.

[d] (Tex. 1847) The summary judgments on bonds taken for injunctions under the statute of 1841, after the conditions of the bond are forfeited, are not in derogation of the right of trial by jury or of any other constitutional rights.—Janes v. Reynolds, 2 Tex. 250.

[e] (Wis. 1860) Code, § 328, provides that when a judgment is rendered against a party in an action of replevin the judgment may be entered up against the party as well as against the surety who shall have signed the undertaking for the return of the property. Held, that such statute is not in violation of the clause of the constitution providing that trial by jury shall remain inviolate, in that it permits a judgment to be entered against a surety who is not a party to the action and has no notice of its pendency, since a surety whose name is signed to the undertaking is a quasi party to the suit.—Pratt v. Donovan, 10 Wis. 378.

§ 87. Assessment of damages for improvements on ouster of occupying claimant.

In equity, see ante, § 64.

[a] (U. S. 1829) The occupant claimant law of Ohio, which declares that an occupying claimant shall not be evicted or turned out of possession until he shall be paid for improvements, and directs the court, in a suit at law, to appoint commissioners to value the same, is repugnant to the seventh amendment to the federal constitution. The compensation for improvements is a suit at common law, and must be submitted to a jury, if the case be pending in a court of the United States.—Bank of Hamilton v. Dudley, 27 U. S. (2 Pet.) 492, 7 L. Ed. 496.

[b] (Ill. 1852) Rev. St. 1845, c. 36, §§ 47–57, known as the "occupying claimants' law," giving to every person who is evicted from land for which he can show a plain and connected title in law or equity deduced from the record of some public office, without actual notice of an adverse title in like manner derived from record, compensation for improvements made before receiving such actual notice, is not in conflict with the declaration of the constitution that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate, in that it provides that the value of the improvements therein mentioned shall be assessed by commissioners without the intervention of a jury.—Ross v. Irving, 14 Ill. (4 Peck) 171.

[c] (Ind. 1825) The statute for the relief of occupying claimants of land, which provides that the value of the improvements and of the land without the improvements shall be assessed by three persons to be appointed by the court, is unconstitutional, as depriving the parties of a right to trial by jury.—Armstrong v. Jackson, 1 Blackf. 374.

[d] (Mich. 1859) Where the defendant files a claim for improvements under the statute (Comp. Laws, § 4603) in an action of ejectment, the case may be tried without a jury by the court, unless a jury is demanded by one of the parties.—Rawson v. Parsons, 6 Mich. 401.

[e] (Ohio, 1831) The occupying claimants' law (St. 1833, c. 365, § 2), providing for the appointment of three disinterested freeholders to assess the value of improvements, does not contravene Const. art. 8, § 8, providing that the right of trial by jury shall be inviolable.—Hunt's Lessee v. McMahan, 5 Ohio (5 Ham.) 132.

§ 88. Plea in abatement or motion to dismiss.

On appeal, see post, § 95 [j].
Plea of nul tiel record, see ante, § 32.

[a] (La. 1848) Plaintiff cannot require that an exception to the jurisdiction of the court on the ground of the defendant's domicile being in another parish than that in which the action is pending should be submitted to the jury.—McGehee v. Brown, 3 La. Ann. 272.

[b] (Me. 1850) An issue joined on a plea of misnomer in abatement must be tried by the jury.—State v. Marston, 31 Me. 292.

[c] (Md. 1882) Defendant pleaded in abatement that he resided in another county and that there had been no non est returned on a summons issued in said county against him. Plaintiff traversed the facts and prayed they might be inquired of by the country. Defendant joined issue and moved that the issue should be submitted to the court without jury. Held, that under article 75, § 87, of the Code, where a plea was interposed and traversed, it was for the jury, unless by agreement it should be decided by the court.—Tyler v. Murray, 57 Md. 418.

[d] (Ohio, 1877) If, in an action to recover damages for causing death by wrongful act, neglect, or default, nonresident defendants file a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction over them, and support it by a verified answer, as provided by section 89, Civ. Code, traversing the allegations of the petition, by showing that such nonresidents are not rightfully joined as defendants, the issue of fact thus presented is one which either party has a right to have tried by a jury.—Drea v. Carrington, 32 Ohio St. 595.

[e] (Tenn. 1809) The constitution, securing a trial of facts by a jury, precludes the court, on a plea in abatement, from considering credits indorsed on a bond sued on; the question as to whether they should be allowed as payments being one of fact for the jury.—Bacon v. Parker, 2 Tenn. (2 Overt.) 55.

[f] (Tex. 1892) A plea in abatement being purely an issue of fact, plaintiffs are entitled to a jury to try such issue.—Howeth v. Clark (App.) 19 S. W. 433.

§ 89. Supplementary proceedings in aid of execution.

As criminal proceeding, see post, § 139 [f].

Nature of action to subject property fraudulently conveyed, see post, § 99 [e].

[a] (Ind. 1880) In proceedings supplementary to execution under Code, § 322, where issues of fact are formed, such as in ordinary cases are triable by jury, the party demanding it may have a trial by jury.—McMahan v. Works, 72 Ind. 19.

[b] (Ind. 1890) In proceedings supplementary to execution, issues of fact are properly tried by a jury as in ordinary civil cases.—American White Bronze Co. v. Clark, 123 Ind. 230, 23 N. E. 855.

[c] (Iowa, 1861) Revision, c. 126, relating to supplementary proceedings in aid of execution, and providing that if, on examination, it be found that a judgment debtor has property in his hands which he unjustly refuses to apply toward the payment of the execution, the court may order him to so apply it, and, if he disobey any order of the court duly served on him, he may be punished as for contempt, is in contravention of Const. art. 1, § 9, providing that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate, but the general assembly may authorize a trial by jury of a less number than 12 men in inferior courts; but no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law," and section 10, providing that "in all criminal prosecutions in cases involving the life or liberty of an individual the accused shall have a right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury."—Ex parte Grace, 12 Iowa, 208, 79 Am. Dec. 529.

[d] (Iowa, 1861) Revision, c. 126, authorizing supplementary proceedings in aid of execution, and providing that, if it be found that a debtor has property which he unjustly refuses to apply toward the satisfaction of the execution, the court may order him to apply the same in payment of the judgment, and that, if he fail to do so, he shall be guilty of a contempt, and may be arrested and imprisoned until he complies with the requirements of the law in this respect, is not in contravention of Const. art. 1, § 19, providing that "no person shall be imprisoned for debt in any civil action on mesne or final process, unless in case of fraud," since the act of the debtor in refusing to apply property liable to execution to the payment of the judgment is fraudulent in its nature.—Ex parte Grace, 12 Iowa, 208, 79 Am. Dec. 529.

[e] (Iowa, 1861) Revision, c. 126, relating to supplementary proceedings in aid of execution, and providing that a judgment debtor may be imprisoned for disobeying an order of the court relating to the application of property found in the hands of the judgment debtor liable to execution, is unconstitutional, in that it deprives the judgment debtor of the right to trial by jury. That right is not lost by the fact that the judgment debtor untruthfully states that the property ordered to be applied was exempt from execution.—Ex parte Grace, 12 Iowa, 208, 79 Am. Dec. 529.

[f] (Iowa, 1885) Code 1873, § 3145, authorizing the judge to commit a party who refuses to obey an order in proceedings auxiliary to execution directing him to turn over property in his possession to the court, is not a violation of Const. art. 1, § 9, providing that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate; for at the time the constitution was adopted no right to a trial by jury in such proceedings existed.—Farmer v. Hoffman, 67 Iowa, 678, 25 N. W. 848; Eikenberry v. Edwards, 67 Iowa, 619, 25 N. W. 832, 56 Am. Rep. 360.

[g] (Iowa, 1889) Code 1873, §§ 31, 37, 3146, 3148, which authorize a referee, appointed in proceedings supplementary to execution, to issue an order for the examination of the debtor, and also for his arrest when it appears that he is about to leave the state, is not unconstitutional because the debtor is deprived of the right of trial by jury.—Marriage v. Woodruff, 77 Iowa, 291, 42 N. W. 198.

[h] (Kan. 1885) Civ. Code, § 482, authorizing a judge, on proceedings in aid of execution, to commit the execution defendant to jail on finding that he has money which he neglects to apply, in accordance with the judge's order, to the satisfaction of the execution, is not unconstitutional, as violating right of trial by jury.—In re Burrows, 33 Kan. 675, 7 Pac. 148.

[i] (La. 1841) In proceedings under Act 1839, § 13, providing for the subjection of property in the hands of third persons belonging to a judgment debtor against whom an execution has been returned unsatisfied, persons who hold possession of property which the judgment creditor claims belongs to the judgment debtor and has been devested by fraud and simulation are entitled to trial by jury, as the purpose of the judgment creditor in such a case can be accomplished only by a revocatory action.—Samory v. Hebrard, 17 La. 555.

[j] (La. 1858) The act of 1855 (Sess Acts, p. 318, § 1) provides that any judgment creditor whose execution has been returned "No property found" may present his petition to compel his debtor to make a surrender of his property, etc.; that the judge thereupon order that the debtor show cause, etc., why he should not pay the debt of the complainant creditor or make a surrender of his property to his creditors; and that, should no good cause be shown and the debt remain unpaid, the judge shall order the debtor to make a surrender of his property to his creditors, etc. Held, that said section makes it the duty of the judge to decide upon the sufficiency of the cause for compelling the surrender, and the proceeding is therefore a summary one, to be tried without the intervention of a jury.—Savage v. Jeter, 13 La. Ann. 239.

[k] (Minn. 1877) Gen. St. c. 66, tit. 24, providing that, in proceedings supplementary to execution, the judgment debtor may be punished as for a contempt on disobedience of any order touching the disposition of his property, is not repugnant to Const. art. 1, § 4, which provides that the right to trial by jury shall remain inviolate and shall extend to all cases at law.—State v. Becht, 23 Minn. 411.

under the declaration of rights, to a trial by jury.—Kennesaw Mills Co. v. Walker, 19 S. C. 104.

[n] (Wash. 1882) A denial of a jury trial in supplementary proceedings is not a violation of a constitutional right of a party thereto, under the fifth and seventh amendments to the constitution of the United States.—Murne v. Schwabacher, 2 Wash. T. 131, 3 Pac. 899.

§ 90. Proceedings to enforce or discharge attachment or garnishment.

As equitable proceeding, see ante, § 73 [h].

Effect of existence of other remedy, see post, § 236 [c].

Right to appeal to jury in proceedings before justices of the peace, see "Justices of the Peace," vol. 31, cc. 1344, 1345, § 372.

[a] (U. S. 1881) Upon a motion to dismiss an attachment, upon ex parte testimony, the court will not decide whether the evidence preponderates for or against the truth of the charges upon which the attachment is founded, where those charges constitute the very matter upon which the action is based,—the sole issue between the parties,—and which the plaintiffs are entitled ultimately to have submitted to a jury. But the court will consider such testimony, to ascertain whether the proceeding has been taken in good faith, and whether there is respectable evidence, which, if believed, would warrant a jury in finding a verdict for the plaintiffs. In this case there is such evidence, and the plaintiffs are entitled to have the sole issue between the parties decided by a jury.—Perry v. Sharpe (C. C.) 8 Fed. 15.

[b] (Cal. 1855) The doctrine of garnishment, although partially regulated by statute in this state, is not the less a common-law proceeding, and the parties are entitled to a trial by jury.—Cahoon v. Levy, 5 Cal. 294.

[c] (Kan. 1880) On the trial of an issue upon an interplea filed by a party who claims title to real estate attached, neither party is entitled to a jury as a matter of right.—Bennett v. Wolverton, 24 Kan. 284.

[d] (Ky. 1853) Where an attachment is based on an affidavit charging fraud, and the fraud is denied in the answer, this makes an issue to be tried on a motion to discharge the attachment, which issue is to be tried by the court.—Talbot v. Pierce, 53 Ky. (14 B. Mon.) 195.

[e] (La. 1842) Property, seized in execution and claimed by an intervener, having been sold under a consent decree, and the sale set aside for irregularity, plaintiffs ruled the intervener to show cause why an alias writ should not issue. His answer, denying the right to proceed by rule and alleging the illegality of the judgment, prayed for a jury. Held, no jury can be allowed.—Hobson v. Bein, 2 Rob. 109.

[f] (La. 1874) Plaintiff, notwithstanding the negative answer of the garnishee, took a rule on the garnishee to show cause why he should not pay a certain judgment against defendant because he had in his possession property, rights, and money of defendant to pay said judgment. The garnishee, on the day named for the trial of the rule, excepted to it on the ground that, being a new suit against him, it could not be tried in vacation. The exception was overruled, and the garnishee filed an answer praying for a jury. Held, that the exception should have been maintained, as the issues were such as should have been submitted to a jury if desired.—Denouvion v. McNight, 26 La. Ann. 74.

[g] (Md. 1860) The court may entertain a motion to quash an attachment for matter dehors the proceedings, and hear the evidence relating thereto, and decide thereon, without a jury.—Gover v. Barnes, 15 Md. 576.

[h] (Minn. 1895) Neither party is entitled as a matter of right to a jury trial on issues formed by a supplemental complaint and answer in a garnishment proceeding.—Weibeler v. Ford, 61 Minn. 398, 63 N. W. 1075.

[i] (Mo. 1839) Rev. Code 1835, p. 867, giving to a constable, when he levies an execution on property claimed by a third person, power to summon a jury to try the right of property, applies only to executions; and therefore a constable has no authority to summon a jury to try the right of property attached.—Little v. Seymour, 6 Mo. 166.

[j] (Neb. 1880) A proceeding under the statute for a trial of the right of property taken under execution is not in a legal sense a civil action, and is therefore not properly triable by a jury.—State v. Powell, 10 Neb. 48, 4 N. W. 817.

[k] (Neb. 1883) Where there is nothing in the record of the proceedings on an attachment issued by a county judge to show the character of the action in which it was issued, it will be presumed to have been issued by the judge (ex officio justice of the peace) in the exercise of his general or enlarged jurisdiction, concurrent with that of the district court to a certain amount; and a person, other than defendant, claiming the property levied on, will be entitled to a jury for the trial of the issues raised, as provided by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 486, 487, in cases where the right of property in property seized under process issued from a court of record is involved.—Schell v. Husenstine, 15 Neb. 9, 16 N. W. 758.

[m] (N. C. 1884) The several provisions of the Code in respect to vacating attachments do not contemplate that the matters of fact arising therein shall be tried by a jury.—Pasour v. Lineberger, 90 N. C. 159.

[n] (Pa. 1872) An attachment was issued on a judgment in which there was no waiver of defendant's exemptions, and the assignee of defendant for creditors was summoned as garnishee. The garnishee answered, and defendant claimed his exemptions. Held, that plaintiff was entitled to an issue for trial by a jury.—Numbers v. Shelly, 3 Lanc. Bar, No. 50, p. 1.

[o] (S. C. 1821) A motion to set aside a foreign attachment was based on affidavits that defendant returned on the day, and before, the attachment issued; and the court, in its discretion, considering the question one of doubt, denied the motion. Held, that under such circumstances the issue should be tried by jury.—Shrewsbury v. Pearson, 1 McCord, 331.

[p] (Vt. 1832) A trustee has no right to a trial by jury on the question whether he has effects or not.—Huntington v. Bishop, 5 Vt. 186.

[q] (Va. 1879) Where persons claiming the property attached are admitted as parties in the cause, their claim must be tried, under Code 1873, c. 148, § 25, by a jury impaneled for the purpose.—Anderson v. Johnson, 32 Grat. 558.

[r] (Wash. 1891) Under Laws 1885–86, p. 45, §§ 31, 32, providing for dismissal of an attachment on motion to the court in which the action is brought, on the ground that it was improperly or irregularly issued, and that, if the motion is made on affidavits on defendant's part, plaintiff may oppose the same by affidavits or other evidence, the questions of fact raised by the motion are to be tried by the court, and, the attachment being merely ancillary to the action, a jury cannot be demanded.—Windt v. Banniza, 2 Wash. St. 147, 26 Pac. 189.

[s] (W. Va. 1877) Any party interested may be received to move to quash an affidavit and attachment, and in aid thereof may have an issue framed for jury trial to ascertain matters of fact.—Capehart's Ex'r v. Dowery, 10 W. Va. 130.

[t] (Wis. 1889) Garnishment proceedings to reach the nonleviable assets of a debtor, things in action, and evidence of debt, need not be tried by jury.—La Crosse Nat. Bank v. Wilson, 74 Wis. 391, 43 N. W. 153.

[u] (Wis. 1895) On the issue in garnishment as to whether the garnishee was indebted to the principal defendant at the time the former was served, the parties are not entitled to a jury trial as a matter of right.—Delaney v. Hartwig, 91 Wis. 412, 64 N. W. 1035.

[v] (Wyo. 1889) Neither the constitutional provision (Const. U. S. art. 7) for jury trial "in suits at common law," nor Rev. St. § 2517, providing that issues of fact in actions for the recovery of money only or specific real or personal property shall be tried by jury, entitles a defendant to a trial by jury of a motion to discharge an attachment.—Wearne v. France, 3 Wyo. 273, 21 Pac. 703.

Necessity of presenting issue of fact, see ante, § 29 [b].

Removal, see post, § 121 [c].

[a] A statute authorizing the court to punish a sheriff for neglect of duty without the intervention of a jury is not in contravention of the constitution requiring "the ancient mode of trial by jury to be held sacred, and the right thereto to remain inviolate."
—(Ind. 1822) Dawson v. Shaver, 1 Blackf. 204; (Ky. 1819) Wells v. Caldwell, 8 Ky. (1 A. K. Marsh.) 441.

[b] (Ala. 1833) It is not necessary that a jury be impaneled to try questions arising in proceedings against an officer for failure to return an execution, but such questions may be submitted to them.—Condry v. Henley, 4 Stew. & P. 9.

[c] (Ala. 1848) A sheriff or his sureties, proceeded against under the act of 1826, may insist on the fact of the receipt of the money being found by a jury.—Evans v. State Bank, 15 Ala. 81.

[d] (Ala. 1880) A motion for a summary judgment against a sheriff for failing to return an execution is not, within Code, § 3022, "an action founded on an instrument," etc.; and the issue must be determined by a jury.—Warwick v. Brooks, 67 Ala. 252.

[e] (Ind. 1822) St. 1823, p. 195, providing for proceedings against a sheriff and sureties on his official bond, by notice and motion, if, by implication, though not expressly, it authorizes judgment without a trial by jury, it is, in so far as it does away with a jury trial, unconstitutional.—Dawson v. Shaver, 1 Blackf. 204.

[f] (La. 1858) In a proceeding to render the sheriff liable for failing to return a writ of fieri facias before the return day, to which the sureties were made parties, the court properly allowed a trial by jury.—Holmes v. Dunn, 13 La. Ann. 153.

[g] (Miss. 1841) The statute providing that if any sheriff who has made return of a writ of fieri facias shall fail to immediately pay the money procured thereon to the party entitled thereto, or shall make a false return, a judgment may be rendered against such sheriff and his sureties, on motion made to the court by the party injured by such default, is not repugnant to the bill of rights declaring that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate, since such constitutional provision does not apply to summary proceedings of the nature mentioned in the statute.—Lewis v. Garrett's Adm'rs, 6 Miss. (5 How.) 434.

[h] (Miss. 1842) A law authorizing summary proceedings by motion against a sheriff for failing to return an execution, without the intervention of a jury, is constitutional.—Lewis v. Fellows, 7 Miss. (6 How.) 261.

[i] (Mo. 1837) A proceeding against a constable for failing to return an execution is in the nature of a proceeding for a contempt, and the trial must be had by the court without a jury.—Hart v. Robinett, 5 Mo. 11.

§ 92. Proceedings against attorneys.

[a] (Ga. 1877) Where a rule is granted against an attorney at law for not paying over money collected, his answer to the rule is traversable, and the issue thus formed is for trial by jury.—Smith v. Bush, 58 Ga. 121.

[b] (La. 1835) An attorney refusing to pay over money collected by him for his client, on being proceeded against summarily, under the statutes of 1809 and 1826, is not entitled to a jury trial.—West v. Carleton, 8 La. 253.

§§ 93, 94. Compensation and lien of attorneys.

[a] (Iowa, 1878) Code 1873, § 2961, authorizing the court to fix the amount of attorney's fees for defending against an attachment wrongfully sued out, is not unconstitutional, as depriving the parties of a right to trial by jury.—Weller v. Hawes, 49 Iowa, 45.

[b] (N. Y.) On application to the court to protect the lien of the attorney, the existence and extent of such lien may be determined in a summary way, as by a reference. The client cannot claim a right to have a trial by jury.—(1862) Ackerman v. Ackerman, 14 Abb. Prac. 229. Contra, see (1863) Fox v. Fox, 24 How. Prac. 409.

[c] (N. Y. 1875) On summary motion to compel an attorney to pay over money collected for his client, the attorney is not entitled to a jury trial, though he claims a lien on the fund for his services, but the court may direct a reference to determine how much is due him for such services, and order him to pay over the balance.—In re Fincke, 6 Daly, 111.

[a] (Ill. 1887) Defendant, whose land was assessed for a drainage tax, under the Illinois drainage act approved June 27, 1885, duly appealed to the county court and claimed a jury trial under the provision: "Appeals taken to the county court, under the provisions of this act, may be heard at any term thereof, * * * and trial shall be conducted as in other cases of appeals." Held, that he was entitled to a jury trial.—Mascall v. Drainage Com'rs, 122 Ill. 620, 14 N. E. 47.

[b] (Ind.) On appeal to the circuit court in a contested election, the appellant is not entitled to a jury trial.—(1857) French v. Lighty, 9 Ind. 477, note; (1878) Corey v. Lugar, 62 Ind. 60.

[c] (Ind. 1877) In an action to review the report of commissioners partitioning land, neither party is entitled to a trial by jury as a matter of right.—Allen v. Anderson, 57 Ind. 388.

[d] (Ind. 1877) Under 2 Rev. St. 1876, p. 183, § 356, which requires that on a complaint for a new trial the questions "shall be summarily decided by the court on the evidence produced by the parties," neither is entitled to a jury trial.—Houston v. Bruner, 59 Ind. 25.

[e] (Ind. 1894) A person is not entitled to a jury trial to determine the existence of facts relied on for setting aside a default judgment.—Quick v. Lawrence Nat. Bank, 10 Ind. App. 523, 38 N. E. 73.

[f] (Iowa, 1879) On petition for a new trial filed under Code 1873, § 3155, the court may, without jury, "first try and decide upon the grounds to vacate or modify the judgment," as provided in section 3160.—Carpenter v. Brown, 50 Iowa, 451.

[g] (Iowa, 1881) Upon an appeal to the circuit court from the board of equalization a party is not entitled to a jury trial.—Davis v. City of Clinton, 55 Iowa, 549, 8 N. W. 423; Dunleith & Dubuque Bridge Co. v. Dubuque County, 55 Iowa, 558, 8 N. W. 443.

[h] (La. 1813) No jury can be had on appeal in the supreme court.—Brooks' Syndics v. Weyman, 3 Mart. (O. S.) 9.

[i] (La. 1843) It is questionable whether a jury can be allowed on appeal from the parish to the district court.—Bouquevalte v. Young, 5 Rob. 162.

[j] (Mass. 1880) If, in a municipal court, in which no trial by jury can be had, an issue of fact is joined upon a plea in abatement, and judgment rendered for the plaintiff, and the defendant appeals to the superior court, he is entitled to a trial by jury in that court on the same issue, but on that only, unless that court orders or permits him to plead anew.—O'Loughlin v. Bird, 128 Mass. 600.

[k] (Mich. 1858) If necessary a venire may be issued for a jury to try the issue of fact on a trial of a writ of error in the supreme court, or it may be sent to the proper circuit for trial.—Teller v. Wetherell, 6 Mich. 46.

[l] (Minn. 1880) Under Gen. St. 1878, c. 1, § 52, providing that an appeal in an election contest from the decision of the board of county canvassers to the district court "shall be heard and tried by the district court of the proper county in the manner that civil actions are tried by that court," the district court may try such contests without a jury.—Newton v. Newell, 26 Minn. 529, 6 N. W. 346.

[m] (Wis. 1875) Although so much of the milldam act (Rev. St. c. 56, § 12) as provides that in a proceeding under that chapter on appeal to the supreme court from the circuit court's judgment "the cause shall be there heard and determined as it ought to have been in the circuit court" would, independently of the constitution, have probably required the supreme court to call a jury and try the case de novo, yet, under Const. art. 7, § 3, such court has no power to call a jury in any case removed to it, and hence causes arising under the milldam act, and brought up to the supreme court, are to be determined on exceptions, like other legal actions brought up by appeal or writ of error.—Kearns v. Thomas, 37 Wis. 118.

[a] (Ga. 1886) Under Code, § 4157a, an appeal from the judgment of a justice to a jury may be taken in all civil cases, whether the judgment was rendered upon questions of law or fact, or upon a combination of both.—Bates v. Messer, 76 Ga. 696.

[b] (N. H. 1852) A trustee was adjudged chargeable by a justice of the peace without a disclosure, and the case was appealed to the court of common pleas. Held, that the question of the trustee's liability should be tried in the latter court by a jury, though no disclosure had been taken.—Young v. Bride, 25 N. H. (5 Fost.) 482.

§ 97. Probate matters.

[b] (Del. 1878) On appeal from the register's decision on a petition of review affirming the probate of a will and grant of letters testamentary, because of the register's refusal to order an issue of devisavit vel non to be tried before a jury on the petitioner's application, after hearing the proof on both sides, the superior court will order such issue to be tried before a jury at the bar of the court on the trial of the appeal.—Hall v. Dougherty, 5 Houst. 435.

[c] (La. 1843) Recused cases, transferred under Act Feb. 27, 1841, No. 32, from the probate to the district court, are to be tried in the same manner as if not removed. There being no provision for a jury in the probate, none can be allowed by the special judge in the district court.—Penny v. Weston, 4 Rob. 165.

[d] (Me. 1858) In appeals from the probate court, when questions of fact arise, the proceedings are analogous to the proceedings in courts of equity, when issues of fact are prepared for the jury, under the direction of the court.—Withee v. Rowe, 45 Me. 571.

[e] (Me. 1874) Where an appeal is made from the decision of a probate court, neither party can, as a matter of right, claim a trial by jury.—Bradstreet v. Bradstreet, 64 Me. 204.

[g] (Neb. 1893) Under Comp. St. c. 20, § 47, providing that, in appeals in probate matters from the county court to the district court, the latter shall hear and determine the issues in the same manner as on appeals in civil cases, it is error, on appeal by the executor or heir at law from an order of the county court making an allowance out of the funds of the estate of a deceased person for the support of his widow, to refuse a jury trial upon the demand of either party to the controversy.—Sheedy v. Sheedy, 36 Neb. 373, 54 N. W. 560.

[h] (N. H. 1864) Upon an appeal from the decree of the judge of probate allowing a guardian's account, it is a matter of discretion, and not of right, whether any question of fact that may arise shall be submitted to a jury.—Patrick v. Cowles, 45 N. H. 553.

[i] (N. H. 1864) When an auditor is appointed by this court, on appeal from a decree of a court of probate allowing a guardian's account, to hear the evidence and report facts, he does not derive his powers from the statute providing for the appointment of auditors to state accounts between parties, and the parties have no right to try by a jury any facts thus found by the auditor.—Patrick v. Cowles, 45 N. H. 553.

[j] (N. M. 1889) An action on a contract, by which plaintiff delivered to defendant's intestate a number of sheep, to receive in return, at the end of a fixed period, a quantity of wool, and an equal number of sheep, is not of an equitable nature, requiring relief in chancery. After such an action has been removed from the probate to the district court on appeal, it is triable de novo before a jury, and the fact that it is an appeal from the probate court does not deprive a party of his right to a jury trial.—Lewis v. Baca, 5 N. M. 289, 21 Pac. 343.

[k] (N. Y. 1863) The supreme court has no power, under the statutes of that state, to award an issue of fact to be tried by a jury, upon an appeal from a decree of the surrogate on an application for letters of administration.—Devin v. Patchin, 26 N. Y. 441.

[l] (S. C. 1851) Where one of the parties to a proceeding before the ordinary for partition of land sets up an adverse title in himself, and the ordinary decides against the party setting up the title, and such party appeals, he is entitled to trial by jury.—Faust v. Bailey, 5 Rich. Law, 107.

[m] (S. C. 1878) The supreme court has jurisdiction, on the hearing of an appeal in a case transferred from the probate to the circuit court, to order an issue to be made up to determine a question of fact by the verdict of a jury.—Shaw v. Cunningham, 9 S. C. (9 Rich.) 271.

[n] (S. C. 1882) Upon an appeal from the decision of the probate court, except in those cases where a jury can be demanded, under Code, § 276, as a matter of right, it is within the discretion of the court to order or to refuse a jury, and the court's decision thereon is not reviewable on appeal.—Rollin v. Whipper, 17 S. C. 32.

[o] (S. C. 1892) Code Civ. Proc. § 274, provides that "an issue of fact, in an action for the recovery of money only, or of specific real or personal property, must be tried by a jury"; and section 60 provides that on appeal from the probate court the circuit court shall try the question according to the rules of law, and, if there shall be any question of fact or title to land to be decided, issue may be joined, and a trial had by jury. Held that, as section 60 recognizes a right to jury trial of only those issues required to be so tried by section 274, it was error for a circuit court, on motion of one of the parties to an appeal from the probate court, to grant an order framing and referring to a jury an issue as to whether or not there was a will, without notice to the opposite party, as required by Cir. Ct. Rule 28.—Ex parte Apeler, 35 S. C. 417, 14 S. E. 931; Apeler v. Hedderley, Id.

[p] (S. C. 1892) Code Civ. Proc. § 57, provides that any person interested in any final order or decree of the court of probate may appeal therefrom to the circuit court. Section 60 provides that when such appeal is perfected the circuit court shall proceed to the trial of the question, and, if there shall be any question of fact to be decided, issue may be joined thereon, and a trial had by a jury. Held that, on an appeal to the circuit court from an order of the probate court disallowing a claim against an estate, appellant is not entitled as of right to a trial by jury.—Hughes v. Kirkpatrick, 37 S. C. 161, 15 S. E. 912.

[q] (Tex. 1853) It is not error for the district court to try a case upon the record of the court of probate without a jury, especially if none be asked for.—Miller v. Miller, 10 Tex. 319.

[r] (Vt. 1826) On appeal from a decree in probate, if the objections to the decree are traversed, the issue is to be joined to the court, unless the issue is on the capacity of the testator or fraud in the procurement of a will.—Baker v. Goodrich, 1 Aikens, 395.

[s] (Wis. 1870) Where an appeal from a decision in probate was taken by one who claimed the right as widow of the testator, and a motion to dismiss the appeal, on the ground that she was not such widow, was based upon an exemplified copy of the record in a divorce suit in another state, the court did not err in deciding the question of fact without a jury.—Amory v. Amory, 26 Wis. 152.

[a] (Ind. 1857) On appeals to the circuit court from the assessment of damages to real estate taken for public works, the trial has uniformly been by jury; and such cases may be ranked as civil, within the above provision.—Lake Erie, W. & St. L. R. Co. v. Heath, 9 Ind. 558.

[b] (Ind. 1868) On appeal from a proceeding before a justice of the peace, to assess damages for land taken under the act incorporating the Evansville & Illinois Railroad Company (Loc. Laws, p. 1849), though the circuit court, sitting as a court of chancery, may take the opinion of the jury in such a case, the trial by jury is not a constitutional right.—Evansville & C. R. Co. v. M[illegible] 30 Ind. 209.

[c] (Ind. 1892) On an appeal from the commissioners' court to the circuit court, in a proceeding to establish a drain, either party is entitled to a trial by jury.—Bachelor v. Cole, 132 Ind. 143, 31 N. E. 569.

[d] (Iowa, 1866) A proceeding in the county court to appropriate land to the use of the public as a street, after an assessment of damages by a jury, was transferred by the defendant to the district court for review, under Revision, § 1067. Held, that the statute giving discretionary power in such a case to the district court to grant or refuse a new assessment by a jury of 12 men, depending on the inquiry by the court whether justice has or has not been done, is constitutional.—City of Des Moines v. Layman, 21 Iowa, 153.

[e] (Me. 1853) The appraisement by county commissioners of the damage done to the owner of land by the location of a railroad across it may be revised by a jury on the petition of the railroad corporation.—Kimball v. Kennebec. & P. R. Co., 35 Me. 255.

[f] (Me. 1853) In a proceeding against a party for overflow of land by a milldam, a report of commissioners being made, the case is to be tried by a jury, if either party request it.—Bryant v. Glidden, 36 Me. 36.

[g] (Mass. 1838) In the case of land taken for a railroad, if the county commissioners refuse to assess damages on the ground that the party applying for them does not own the land, he is entitled to have their judgment revised by a jury.—Carpenter v. Bristol County Com'rs, 38 Mass. (21 Pick.) 258.

[h] (Mo. 1890) Although the constitution, to insure a speedy assessment of damages for the taking of private property for public purposes, provides that such damages may be assessed in the first instance by a board of commissioners, yet it also provides that the right of trial by jury shall be held inviolate in such cases, and either party has the right to question the report of the commissioners by exception, or by demanding a jury, or by both.—Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. Randolph Town Site Co., 103 Mo. 451, 15 S. W. 437.

[i] (Mo. 1890) Plaintiff railroad company was organized under Laws 1857 and 1866, which provide that, in proceedings to condemn land for railroad purposes, the amount of compensation to the landowner shall be ascertained by viewers appointed for that purpose. Const. 1875, art. 12, § 4, provides that "the exercise of the power and right of eminent domain shall never be so construed or abridged as to prevent the taking by the general assembly of the property and franchises of incorporated companies already organized, or that may be hereafter organized, and subjecting them to the public use, the same as that of individuals. The right of trial by jury shall be held inviolate in all trials of claims for compensation, when, in the exercise of said right of eminent domain, any incorporated company shall be interested either for or against the exercise of said right." Section 1 of the schedule of said constitution declares that "the provisions of all laws which are inconsistent with this constitution shall cease upon its adoption, except that all laws which are inconsistent with such provisions of this constitution as require legislation to enforce them, shall remain in force until the first day of July, 1877, unless sooner amended or repealed." Held, in proceedings begun by plaintiff in 1885 to condemn a right of way through defendants' land, that defendants were entitled to have the amount of their compensation ascertained by a jury.—St. Joseph & I. R. Co. v. Cudmore, 103 Mo. 634, 15 S. W. 535.

[k] (Mo. 1891) Const. art. 2, § 21, provides that the compensation to be paid for private property taken for public use "shall be determined by a jury or board of commissioners of not less than three freeholders, in such manner as may be prescribed by law." Article 12, § 4, after declaring that the right of eminent domain shall never be so construed as to prevent the taking of property of incorporated companies, provides that "the right of trial by jury shall be held inviolate in all trials of claims for compensation, when, in the exercise of said right of eminent domain, any incorporated company shall be interested either for or against the exercise of said right." Held, that the report of the commissioners might be questioned by either party by demanding a jury.—Chicago, S. F. & C. Ry. Co. v. Bates, 109 Mo. 53, 18 S. W. 1133; Same v. Eubanks, 109 Mo. 54, 18 S. W. 1134.

[l] (Mo. 1893) Const. art. 12, § 4, provides that "the right of trial by jury shall be held inviolate in all claims for compensation, when, in the exercise of eminent domain, any incorporated company shall be interested either for or against the exercise of said right." Rev. St. 1889, § 2738, provides that either party may have the assessment made by commissioners reviewed, "and the reviewal of such appraisement * * * shall, at the request of either party, be made by a jury." Held, that a corporation exercising the right of eminent domain is entitled to a reassessment by a jury.—Chicago, S. F. & C. Ry. Co. v. McGrew, 113 Mo. 390, 21 S. W. 201.

[m] (Mo. 1893) Const. art. 12, § 4, provides that the right of trial by jury shall be inviolate in all trials of claims for compensation, when any corporation shall be interested for or against the exercise of the right of eminent domain. Rev. St. 1889, § 2738, provides that, on the filing of the report of commissioners in condemnation proceedings, the court may order a new appraisement on good cause shown, which new appraisement shall, at the request of either party, be made by a jury. Held, that in a proceeding by a railroad company to condemn a right of way, across another company's track, defendant is entitled to a jury trial on the question of compensation only, and cannot have the commissioners' report set aside as a whole, and the question as to the manner of the crossing also determined by the jury.—Kansas City Suburban Belt R. Co. v. Kansas City, St. L. & C. R. Co., 118 Mo. 599, 24 S. W. 478.

[n] (N. Y. 1871) Const. art. 1, § 7, requiring compensation for the taking of private property for public use to be ascertained by a jury, does not preclude an appeal to the supreme court from an assessment made by a jury.—Rochester Waterworks Co. v. Wood, 60 Barb. 137.

[o] (Pa. 1859) Where an act grants an "appeal and a hearing from the report of viewers in condemnation proceedings," it is to be construed as meaning "an appeal to the court," and "a hearing before the court." The case is not of that class contemplated by the constitution in which the right of trial by jury is secured.—In re Pennsylvania Ave., 2 Pittsb. R. 1.

[p] (Pa. 1861) In a proceeding to obtain the use of a landing or wharf for a lateral railroad, under the act of April 24, 1843, an appeal lies from the action of the viewers to the court to which their report is to be made, there to be tried by a jury.—In re Horner & Roberts Lateral R. R., 37 Pa. (1 Wright) 333.

[q] (Pa. 1874) The act of 1873, authorizing a railroad company to take property near Delaware avenue, construed to allow but one jury of damages.—Fitzpatrick v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 10 Phila. 107.

[r] (Pa. 1877) Under the charter of the Pennsylvania R. Co. (Act April 13, 1846, and its supplements), the power and manner of assessing damages for property taken for the railroad are conferred upon five viewers, whose report is made on their own view, and is subject, where returned, to the confirmation of the court of common pleas, and neither the corporation nor the owner have the right of trial by jury, or of appeal into the common pleas on the facts.—Long v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Com. Pl.) 9 Lanc. Bar, 98.

[s] (Pa. 1879) Const. art. 16, § 8, secures an appeal and trial by jury for damages wherever private property is taken by a municipal corporation for public use, and the act of June 13, 1874, furnishes the remedy thus secured to owners where no sufficient provision for trial by jury already existed.—Appeal of Bachler, 90 Pa. 207.

[t] (Pa. 1882) A taking by the Chester Rolling Mills of lands for the construction of the lateral railroad is a taking, by a corporation invested with power from the state, for public use, and the eighth section of article 16 of the constitution, providing that the legislature shall not deprive any person of an appeal from a preliminary assessment of damages against such corporation, and that, on appeal, either party may demand a jury, applies.—Chester Rolling Mills v. Granahan, 1 Del. Co. R. 379.

[u] (Pa. 1895) Act June 13, 1874 (P. L. 283), providing that, in all cases of damages assessed against any municipality for property taken, "whether such assessment shall have been made by viewers or otherwise than on a trial by jury," and an appeal is not provided for or regulated by existing laws, an appeal may be taken by either party to the court of common pleas, authorizes a trial by jury.—Bechtel v. Bechtelsville Borough (Com. Pl.) 3 Pa. Dist. R. 713.

[v] (Vt. 1847) The provision in the charter of the Vermont Central Railroad Company, which authorizes a person whose land has been taken for the use of the company, and who feels aggrieved by the appraisal of the damages by the commissioners appointed in pursuance of the charter, to appeal to the county court, and which provides that the decision of the county court shall be final in the matter, does not entitle the person thus appealing to have his damages assessed in the county court by a jury.—Gold v. Vermont Cent. R. Co., 19 Vt. 478.

[b] (Ariz. 1894) The action of claim and delivery, being but a modification of the common-law action of replevin, is a case cognizable at common law, within the meaning of Rev. St. U. S. § 1868, providing for the right of trial by jury in such cases.—Carroll v. Byers, 36 Pac. 499.

[c] (Ga. 1860) A claim case must be submitted to a jury, unless the claimant waives that right, though the verdict must, as matter of law, be against him.—Hodges v. Holiday, 29 Ga. 696.

[d] (Ind. 1869) The right of trial by jury exists in an action on a common-law award.—Goodwine v. Miller, 32 Ind. 419.

[e] (Ind. 1874) An action by a judgment creditor to subject property fraudulently sold to the payment of his judgment, which but for such fraud would have been subject to levy on execution, is not a proceeding supplementary to execution, and the plaintiff is entitled to a jury trial.—Scott v. Indianapolis Wagon Works, 48 Ind. 75.

[f] (Iowa, 1849) Act Wis. T. Jan. 16, 1838, as supplemented by Act June 22, 1838, appoints commissioners to investigate and report upon titles to the "half-breed lands," with a view to partition and sale of the same. Act Iowa Jan. 25, 1839, repeals said act, but provides that the commissioners appointed thereunder may commence actions for their several accounts for services rendered, under said act, against the owners of the "half-breed lands," and declares that the trial of said suits shall be before the court, and not by jury. Held, that the repealing act is in violation of the constitution and the ordinance of 1787, as destroying the right of trial by the jury.—Reed v. Wright, 2 G. Greene, 15.

[g] (Iowa, 1868) Revision, § 3794, authorizing the court, on dissolution of an injunction enjoining proceedings on a judgment, to hear the evidence and assess the damages in a summary way, or, at the request of either party, have them assessed by a jury, does not authorize the court, in an action at law on the injunction bond, to discharge the jury and try the cause himself.—Parker v. Slaughter, 24 Iowa, 252.

[h] (Ky. 1807) A jury is necessary in case of attachment whenever it would be if there were an original writ.—McDaniel v. Sappington, 3 Ky. (Hardin) 94.

[i] (S. C. 1817) The act of 1786, provides for the submission of a disputed right to dower to a jury.—Righton v. Righton's Heirs, 1 Mill. Const. 130.

Suit to recover penalty for smuggling, see post, § 102 [a].

[a] (U. S. 1811) An information in rem against the thing itself, in a case of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, is not a suit at common law, but an admiralty proceeding, and does not require a trial by a jury.—Clark v. United States, Fed. Cas. No. 2,837 [2 Wash. C. C. 519].

[b] (U. S. 1832) As the seventh amendment to the constitution of the United States preserving the right of trial by jury excludes admiralty jurisdiction over contracts regulated by the common law, no set-off (not otherwise within admiralty jurisdiction) is allowable on a libel for seamen's wages, unless it is a payment on account thereof.—Bains v. The James & Catherine, Fed. Cas. No. 756 [Baldw. 544].

Gillet v. Pierce, Fed. Cas. No. 5,437 [Brown, Adm. 553].

[d] (U. S. 1875) Congress did not intend, by Act 1845, granting admiralty jurisdiction, and saving the right of trial by jury, to grant a new right, but to save one already supposed to exist. —Gillet v. Pierce, Fed. Cas. No. 5,437 [Brown, Adm. 553].

[e] (U. S. 1875) By Rev. St. § 566, however, the law is changed, and the right to a trial by jury is expressly given in the class of cases specified in Act 1845.—Gillet v. Pierce, Fed. Cas. No. 5,437 [Brown, Adm. 553].

[f] (U. S. 1875) The act of 1845, extending the jurisdiction of the federal courts to certain cases arising on the Lakes and navigable waters connecting the same, having been passed on the erroneous assumption that admiralty jurisdiction was limited by the act of 1789 to tide waters, is wholly inoperative, and therefore the clause in the act of 1845 saving a right to trial by jury is also inoperative.—Gillet v. Pierce, Fed. Cas. No. 5,437 [Brown, Adm. 553].

[g] (U. S. 1883) In admiralty causes of contract or tort arising upon the Lakes, if either vessel concerned in such action be of 20 tons burden and upwards, enrolled and licensed for the coasting trade, and employed in navigation between different states, either party to such action may demand a trial by jury, under Rev. St. § 566; but if both vessels be foreign, or engaged in trade between places in the same state, or the action be other than one of contract or tort, it seems that neither party is entitled to a jury trial.—The Erie Belle (D. C.) 20 Fed. 63.

[i] (U. S. 1896) In the act of 1845, purporting to extend the admiralty jurisdiction of the federal courts over the interior lakes and rivers, the provision, now embodied in Rev. St. § 566, saving to the parties a right to demand a jury trial of issues of fact in certain cases, is inoperative to do more than make the verdict advisory, and does not change the powers of the admiralty judge, who is still responsible for the decree rendered.—Sanderson v. The City of Toledo (D. C.) 73 Fed. 220.

[j] (U. S. 1896) The statute, by its terms, does not apply to controversies arising in respect to a vessel plying between ports in the same judicial district, and not engaged in commerce and navigation between places in different states.—Sanderson v. The City of Toledo (D. C.) 73 Fed. 220.

[b] (N. H. 1875) In an action against a town to recover damages for an injury caused by a defect in a highway, the right of trial by jury is secured by the constitution of 1792.—Copp v. Henniker, 55 N. H. 179, 20 Am. Rep. 194.

[c] (N. Y. 1861) An action to recover damages for a tortious conversion of property can be tried in no other way than by a jury, unless the parties waive that mode of trial in the manner prescribed by law.—Lewis v. Varnum, 12 Abb. Prac. 305.

[d] (N. Y. 1889) An action against the clerk of a county to recover money paid him upon false and fraudulent claims for services and money expended for the county, founded on Code Civ. Proc. c. 16, tit. 1, art. 4, allowing an action in the name of the people for the misappropriation of public property, is an action sounding in tort; and hence the court is not authorized to compel a reference.—People v. Wood, 54 Hun, 438, 7 N. Y. Supp. 712.

[e] (Vt. 1860) Declaration of Rights, section 12, provides that "when an issue of fact proper for the cognizance of a jury is joined in a court of law the parties have a right to trial by jury, which ought to be held sacred." Const. § 31, provides that "trials of issues proper for the cognizance of a jury in the supreme or county courts shall be by jury, except where the parties otherwise agree." Held, that such constitutional provisions apply to controversies fit to be tried by jury according to the rules of the common law, notwithstanding the particular right for the violation of which the action is brought did not exist by common law, but was created by a statute passed subsequent to the adoption of the constitution; and an action against a town to recover damages occasioned by the insufficiency of a highway is of that character. —Plimpton v. Town of Somerset, 33 Vt. 283.

[a] (U. S. 1870) In a suit to recover the penalty for smuggling against a master of a vessel, he is entitled to a trial by jury.—United States v. The Queen, Fed. Cas. No. 16,107 [4 Ben. 237].

[b] (Ga. 1848) Const. art. 4, § 5, declaring that "trial by jury, as heretofore used in this state, shall remain inviolate," does not apply to pecuniary penalties imposed by municipal corporations of towns and cities, for a breach of their local by-laws and police regulations, for the security, welfare, and good government of such towns or cities.—Williams v. City Council of Augusta, 4 Ga. 509.

[c] (N. J. 1880) The charter of Passaic provides for the recovery of penalties incurred for a violation of municipal ordinances, by an action of debt in the name of the city of Passaic, for the use of the city, before any justice of the peace of said county. Held, that this meant an action of debt before a justice sitting as a court for the trial of small causes, and that the defendant was entitled to the trial by jury provided by the justice's court act.—Greely v. City of Passaic, 42 N. J. Law (13 Vroom) 429.

[d] (N. Y. 1876) Laws 1873, c. 370, § 40, providing that the police justice of the village of Port Jervis should hear and determine all cases arising under the charter, by-laws, and ordinances of said village, does not authorize such justice to refuse defendant's demand for a jury trial in an action by the village for a penalty for violation of a municipal ordinance. —People v. Cox, 9 Hun, 146, affirmed (1879) 76 N. Y. 47.

ble to a suit for divorce, as the right of trial by jury did not exist in such cases at common law.—Cassidy v. Sullivan, 64 Cal. 266, 28 Pac. 234.

[b] (Ind. 1873) A party to a suit for a divorce is not entitled, as a matter of right, to a trial by jury.—Musselman v. Musselman, 44 Ind. 106.

[c] (Iowa, 1875) In an action for divorce, commenced before Code 1873 took effect, and tried afterwards, either party had the right to demand a jury trial.—Wadsworth v. Wadsworth, 40 Iowa, 448.

[e] (N. Y. 1849) Code, § 225, providing that "all or any of the issues in the action, whether of fact or of law, or both, may be referred, upon the written consent of the parties," does not repeal 2 Rev. St. p. 145, § 40, requiring the court to submit to a jury a question in a divorce action as to whether defendant is guilty of adultery, notwithstanding the consent of the parties that the case may be referred.—Whale v. Whale, 1 Code Rep. 115.

[f] (N. Y. 1850) A jury trial in suits for divorce for adultery is no longer, since the Code of Procedure, a matter of course.—Anonymous, 5 How. Prac. 306.

[g] (N. Y. 1856) 2 Rev. St. § 39, required a feigned issue to be made upon a charge of adultery in a divorce action. Code, §§ 253, 254, provided that every issue is triable to the court, except issues of fact in actions for the recovery of money only or of specific real or personal property, but permitted the submission of issues to a jury. Section 72 declared that feigned issues are abolished, and that, instead thereof, where the power now exists to order a feigned issue, an order for a trial to a jury may be made. Held, that an issue on adultery in an action for divorce must be submitted to a jury on an order made.—Forest v. Forest, 13 N. Y. Super. Ct. (6 Duer) 102, 3 Abb. Prac. 144.

[h] (N. Y. 1874) An issue of fact in a suit for divorce for adultery must be tried by a jury, unless the trial is waived, and a reference therein can only be ordered by the consent of both parties.—Dietz v. Dietz, 48 How. Prac. 114, 4 Thomp. & C. 565.

[i] (N. Y. 1877) Under 2 Edm. St. p. 150, § 40, in force before 1846, making it the duty of the court, if the adultery charged be denied, to direct a feigned issue to be made up for the trial of the facts contested by the pleadings by a jury, and Const. 1846, art. 1, § 2, providing that the trial by jury, in all cases in which it has been heretofore used, shall remain inviolate forever, either party to an action for a divorce, on the ground of adultery, has a right to a jury trial of the issues of fact.—Batzel v. Batzel, 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. (10 Jones & S.) 561.

[j] (N. Y. 1887) The right of a party to a divorce suit to have a trial by jury on the issue of adultery is a constitutional right.—Conderman v. Conderman, 44 Hun, 181.

[k] (N. C. 1854) In a petition for a divorce and alimony, the material facts charged in the petition must be submitted to a jury, on whose verdict, and not otherwise, the court shall make their decree.—Miles v. Miles, 55 N. C. 21.

[l] (Pa. 1849) A respondent, denying the material allegations of a libel for divorce, and claiming in writing a trial by jury, has a right to such trial.—Butler v. Butler, 4 Clark, 284, 1 Am. Law J. (N. S.) 389.

[a] (U. S. 1819) Act Assem. Md. 1793, § 14, incorporating the bank of Columbia, and giving it summary process by execution, in the nature of an attachment against debtors who have, by express consent in writing, made the notes and bills by them drawn or indorsed negotiable to the bank, is not unconstitutional, as taking away the right to trial by jury.—Bank of Columbia v. Okely, 17 U. S. (4 Wheat.) 235, 4 L. Ed. 559.

[b] (U. S. 1868) In the trial of informations founded on seizures of land or upon land, under the act of August 6, 1861, issues of fact are decided by a jury according to the course of the common law, and not by the judge, as in admiralty.—United States v. Athens Armory, Fed. Cas. No. 14,473 [2 Abb. (U. S.) 129, 35 Ga. 344].

[c] (U. S. 1884) Where the "justice, judge, or commissioner" finds that the petitioner is a Chinese laborer, prohibited by law from landing or from being or remaining in the United States, and, if the ship were in port, and about to return to China, would remand him to the ship to be carried to the country from whence he came, such a finding amounts to a finding in effect that he is unlawfully in the United States, and the court should order him to be remanded by the marshal to the custody from which he was taken, and, when the marshal returns that the ship has sailed, a supplemental order may be passed committing him to the custody of the marshal, to be held for a reasonable time to await the direction of the president, and a Chinaman thus brought before the court has no right to a trial by jury, in the investigation before the "justice, judge, or commissioner," to ascertain whether he is unlawfully within the United States.—In re Chow Goo Pooi (C. C.) 25 Fed. 77.

[e] (Ala. 1858) Sess. Acts 1853, tit. 5, pp. 51, 53, authorizing the tollgates of any plank road company to be thrown open on the report of commissioners appointed to ascertain such fact that the road is out of repair, deprives such a plank road company of its constitutional right to a trial by jury.—Powell v. Sammons, 31 Ala. 552.

[f] (Fla. 1848) The statute passed Jan. 7, 1847, giving a summary process to those who have claims upon steamboats for services done and supplies furnished, so far as it interferes with the right of trial by jury, is void.—Flint River Steamboat Co. v. Roberts, 2 Fla. 102, 48 Am. Dec. 178.

[g] (Ind. 1875) On the hearing of a motion for the writ, provided for in 3 St. 1863, p. 415, § 5, to require an agent, conductor, etc., of a railroad company, against which a judgment for the value of an animal killed has been rendered under such statute, to appear and answer as to the amount of money in his hands, etc., the defendant is not entitled to a jury trial.—Logansport, C. & S. W. Ry. Co. v. Patton, 51 Ind. 487.

[h] (Mass. 1814) The statute which directs that questions as to the settlement of paupers shall be decided by the court of common pleas without the intervention of a jury is not in contravention of the fifteenth article of the declaration of rights, providing that, "in a controversy concerning property and in all suits between two or more persons, except in cases in which it has heretofore been otherwise used and practiced, the parties have a right to a trial by jury; and this method of procedure shall be held sacred."—Inhabitants of Shirley v. Inhabitants of Lunenburgh, 11 Mass. 379.

[i] (Mass. 1876) Under the exception, in Const. art. 15, of cases in which the right of trial by jury "has heretofore been otherways used and practised," St. 1874, c. 205, so far as it provides that when a wife is living apart from her husband, for justifiable cause, and he fails to support her, this court may make such order as it deems expedient for the support of the wife and the maintenance of the minor children, is constitutional, although it makes no provision for a trial by jury.—Bigelow v. Bigelow, 120 Mass. 320.

[j] (Mo. 1822) Under the charter of the Bank of Missouri (section 27), permitting the collection of bank notes by summary proceedings on motion, the parties are entitled, in such proceedings, to a trial by jury.—Bank of Missouri v. Anderson, 1 Mo. 244.

[k] (N. Y. 1864) The constitutional provisions relative to the right of trial by jury do not apply to proceedings taken by corporations for the removal of a member for offenses against the corporation.—People v. New York Commercial Ass'n, 18 Abb. Prac. 271.

[l] (N. Y. 1891) Const. 1846, art. 1, § 2, which provides that the trial by jury, in all cases in which it has been heretofore used, shall remain inviolate forever, does not apply to a summary proceeding to test the validity of a corporate election, provided for by Rev. St. pt. 1, c. 18, tit. 4, § 5.—In re Newcomb (Sup.) 18 N. Y. Supp. 16.

[m] (Ohio, 1873) An action for the recovery of money only, on the substitution, under Civ. Code, § 42, of a new party for the original defendant, does not thereby become a "special proceeding," in which a jury trial cannot be demanded.—Maginnis v. Schwab, 24 Ohio St. 336.

[n] (Pa. 1847) St. 1836, authorizing the appointment of a jury of six to ascertain and determine, out of court, the amount of damages occasioned to property by mobs, is not in violation of Const. art. 9, § 6, which declares that the "trial by jury shall be as heretofore, and the rights thereof remain inviolate," since the remedy given is statutory, and no right of trial by jury ever existed therefor.—In re Pennsylvania Hall, 5 Pa. (5 Barr) 204.

[q] (Pa. 1879) Acts 1851, p. 354, which confers upon the board of port wardens a jurisdiction over controversies in regard to wharfage between adjoining wharf owners, is not in derogation of the right of trial by jury.—Simpson v. Neill, 89 Pa. 183.

[r] (Tex. 1867) In an action, under Act Feb. 4, 1858, authorizing proceedings to ascertain what land certificates have been illegally issued by the county courts of counties in Peters' colony, etc., the parties are not entitled to a jury trial.—Pelham v. State, 30 Tex. 422.

he is not within the protection of Const. art. 1, § 12, providing that the right to trial by jury shall remain inviolate; and Code, § 428, providing that a contest of an election for the office of judge of probate must be heard and decided by the "judge" of the circuit court of the county where the election is held, is therefore not violative of the constitutional provision.—Taliaferro v. Lee, 97 Ala. 92, 13 South. 125; Hilliard v. Brown, Id.

[b] (Ark. 1870) As the right of trial by jury did not, at common law, extend to a civil proceeding, such as quo warranto, against a public officer, a refusal by the court to submit to a jury questions of fact arising in such a proceeding is not a violation of a constitutional provision that the right of trial by jury shall be preserved inviolate.—State v. Johnson, 26 Ark. 281.

[c] (Ark. 1877) The legislature has power, under Const. art. 7, § 52, to establish a special tribunal, and prescribe a particular form of procedure for determination of contested elections, and may do this without providing a trial by jury.—Govan v. Jackson, 32 Ark. 553.

[d] (Ark. 1880) A summary proceeding, under Act Jan. 23, 1875, §§ 67, 68, 72–75, for the determination of an election contest, being a proceeding in the nature of quo warranto, and, as such, not triable by jury at common law, is not triable by jury.—Wise v. Martin, 36 Ark. 305.

[f] (Colo. 1890) In quo warranto to try title to office the court may, against respondent's objection, call a jury, and submit special issues to them to aid him in his finding of facts, under Civ. Code, § 173, which provides that in actions other than for the recovery of property, or money due on contract, or for damages for breach of contract, or for injuries, the issues of fact must be tried by the court, subject to its power to order any issue to be tried by a jury.—Londoner v. People, 15 Colo. 557, 26 Pac. 135.

[g] (Conn. 1888) Sess. Laws 1878, c. 102, providing for the final determination of the question of the election of a city officer in a proceeding before the judge of the superior court by petition and notice, whose determination should be conclusive, and that the certificate of the judge should entitle the prevailing party to the office, is not unconstitutional, in not giving the right of trial by jury.—State v. Lewis, 51 Conn. 113.

[i] (Fla. 1894) A jury trial of questions purely of fact arising in quo warranto is a constitutional right.—Van Dorn v. State, 34 Fla. 62, 15 South. 701.

[j] (Idaho, 1889) Code Civ. Proc. § 536 (Act Jan. 30, 1885), provides that an action to try title to an office, and to oust a usurper and impose a fine on him, "shall be heard and determined by the judge of the district court in chambers and without the intervention of a jury." Held, that this is unconstitutional and in violation of Rev. St. U. S. § 1868, which provides that the territorial legislatures shall not deprive a party of trial by jury "in cases cognizable by the common law."—People v. Havird, 2 Idaho, 498, 25 Pac. 294.

[k] (Ind. 1878) In proceedings on information in the nature of quo warranto to determine the right of relator to an office, the denial to either party of a trial by jury is reversible error, under Bill of Rights (Const. 1851) § 20, though it appears that substantial justice was done.—Reynolds v. State, 61 Ind. 392.

[l] (Ind. 1878) A proceeding on information in the nature of quo warranto to contest the right of the relator to an office is a civil action, within the meaning of Bill of Rights (Const. 1851) § 20, providing that in all civil cases the right to trial by jury shall remain inviolate.—Reynolds v. State, 61 Ind. 392.

[m] (Mass. 1895) Pub. St. c. 150, § 3, giving the supreme judicial court the right to issue quo warranto and other writs, does not give the right of trial by jury to one whose right to a public office the attorney general seeks to test by such a writ.—Attorney General v. Sullivan, 163 Mass. 446, 40 N. E. 843.

[n] (Mass. 1895) An information in the nature of a quo warranto filed by the attorney general in the supreme judicial court to test one's right to a public office is not a controversy concerning property, or a suit between two or more persons, within the meaning of Declaration of Rights, art. 15, securing the right of trial by jury in all "controversies concerning property," and in all suits "between two or more persons."—Attorney General v. Sullivan, 163 Mass. 446, 40 N. E. 843.

[o] (Mich. 1867) When an issue in quo warranto is sent down to the circuit court to be tried, the parties cannot be denied a jury.—People v. Doesburg, 16 Mich. 133.

[p] (Minn. 1889) Proceedings on information in the nature of quo warranto belong to the class designated "remedial cases" in Const. § 2, art. 6, and are not included in the class denominated "cases at law" in section 4, art. 1, of the same instrument, in which trial by jury is demandable as of right.—State v. Minnesota Thresher Mfg. Co., 40 Minn. 213, 41 N. W. 1020.

[q] (Mo.) The defendant in a proceeding by information in the nature of quo warranto has no constitutional right of trial by jury.—(1873) State v. Vail, 53 Mo. 97; (1877) State ex rel. Norton v. Lupton, 64 Mo. 415, 27 Am. Rep. 253.

[r] (N. Y. 1869) The issues of fact, in proceedings by information in the nature of quo warranto, under the Code, are, in the first instance, triable by the court, which may, however, order the whole issue, or any specific question of fact involved therein, to be tried by jury.—People v. Albany & S. R. Co., 55 Barb. 344, 38 How. Prac. 228, 1 Lans. 308, 7 Abb. Prac. (N. S.) 205.

[s] (Okl. 1893) A proceeding by information in the nature of quo warranto is a suit at common law, within the meaning of Const. U. S. Amend. 7, providing for the right of trial by jury in such suits.—Bradford v. Territory, 1 Okl. 366, 34 Pac. 66.

[t] (Wis. 1861) In a proceeding in the nature of a quo warranto, instituted in the supreme court for the purpose of removing defendant from the office of circuit judge, where the questions of fact were few and simple, in order to expedite a determination a jury should be called.—State v. Messmore, 14 Wis. 115.

Issues involved with injunction, see ante, § 49 [a].

Jurisdiction of supreme court dependent on power to impanel jury, see "Mandamus," III.

[a] (Ark. 1870) Authority conferred upon a court by a state constitution to issue writs of mandamus and to hear and determine the same carries with it the power to pass upon the facts without the intervention of a jury.—State v. Johnson, 26 Ark. 281.

[aa] (Cal. 1858) On an application for a mandamus in a capital case, to the supreme court, to compel a district judge to sign a bill of exceptions, to which he answers that he has signed a true bill, and that the one presented is not such, it was held that the relator was not entitled to a jury, under section 472 of the practice act.—People v. Judge of Tenth Judicial Dist., 9 Cal. 19.

[b] (Cal. 1889) Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1090, providing that if, in an application for a writ of mandate, a question of fact essential to the determination of the motion be raised, and affecting the substantial rights of the parties, the court may order the question to be tried before a jury, the question whether a board of education had a semblance of cause for rejecting plaintiff's claim under a contract with the board is properly left to the determination of a jury, though St. 1871–72, p. 846, § 1, subd. 12, gives the board power to reject any demand against it "for good cause, of which said board shall be sole judge."—Raisch v. Board of Education, 81 Cal. 542, 22 Pac. 890.

[c] (Conn. 1879) The trial of the issue of fact as to the truth of a return to an alternative writ of mandamus is not required by the constitution to be by jury.—Castle v. Lawlor, 47 Conn. 340.

[cc] (Fla. 1884) In mandamus proceedings, issues of fact are triable by the court, and not by a jury.—State v. Suwannee, 21 Fla. 1.

[d] (Ill. 1865) On a petition for a mandamus, where the issue involves facts outside of the record, it must be sent to some circuit court, or other court of appropriate jurisdiction, where the issue can be tried by a jury, and the verdict certified back to the supreme court.—People v. Young, 40 Ill. 87; Same v. Logan County, Id.

[dd] (Ind. 1884) Mandamus being a proceeding at law, and not in equity, any issue of fact must be tried by the jury if either party demands it.—State v. Burnsville Turnpike Co., 97 Ind. 416.

[e] (Ind. 1896) Since mandamus is a proceeding at law, either party may demand a trial by jury of an issue of fact arising therein.—Mott v. State, 145 Ind. 353, 44 N. E. 548.

[f] (Minn.) Const. art. 1, § 4, which provides that the right of trial by jury shall "extend to all cases at law," does not extend to and include proceedings by mandamus.—(1870) State v. Sherwood, 15 Minn. 221 (Gil. 172), 2 Am. Rep. 116; (1879) Same v. City of Lake City, 25 Minn. 404.

[g] (Mont. 1875) The act of congress of April 7, 1874 (18 U. S. Stat. 27), concerning the practice in territorial courts in recognizing the right of trial by jury in cases cognizable at common law, does not include proceedings in mandamus.—Chumasero v. Potts, 2 Mont. 242.

[h] (Ohio, 1884) On mandamus in the common pleas to compel a municipal council to order an election on the question of a surrender of the town's municipal powers, the main issue being whether the requisite number of qualified persons had petitioned. held, that this issue was not of right triable by a jury.—Dutten v. Village of Hanover, 42 Ohio St. 215.

[i] (Okl. 1894) Where an issue of fact is joined in mandamus, the parties are entitled, as a matter of right, to a trial by jury.—Territory v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 2 Okl. 108, 39 Pac. 389.

[j] (Utah, 1875) Article 7 of the amendments to the constitution of the United States, which provides that "in suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed $20, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved," embraces proceedings by mandamus, where there is an issue as to damages.—Chamberlain v. Warburton, 1 Utah, 267.

§ 107. Municipal regulations in general.

Restraining violation of building regulations, see ante, § 78 [kk].

[a] (Ill. 1867) An ordinance of a town, declaring that if the owner of stock which have been impounded shall fail to remove them within a certain time and pay all costs of impounding and the damages which the stock may have done, to be appraised by three disinterested men, the pound master should sell them and satisfy such costs and damages, is in violation of Const. art. 13, § 6, declaring that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate without regard to the amount in controversy.—Bullock v. Geomble, 45 Ill. 218.

[b] (Me. 1867) Chapter 177, Pub. Laws 1860, and chapter 187, Pub. Laws 1863, relating to buildings adjudged to be nuisances, are not unconstitutional, in that they take away the right of jury trial.—Swett v. Sprague, 55 Me. 190.

[c] (Miss. 1855) An ordinance of the mayor and council of the city of Vicksburg directed the city marshal to seize and sell all hogs found running at large in the city, and to pay over half the proceeds to the use of the city hospital, and to retain the other half for his services. Held, that the ordinance was void as a violation of the constitutional provision that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate."—Donovan v. City of Vicksburg, 29 Miss. (7 Cushm.) 247.

§ 108. Enforcement of health regulations.

[a] (Mass. 1878) The legislature can constitutionally make the action of its delegate, in revoking a license, final, and not subject to be reviewed by a jury, although St. 1871, c. 167, does not expressly give to a person aggrieved, by an order of the state board of health, under section 2, adjudging his business to be a nuisance, a right of appeal therefrom to a jury, yet he has such right.—Sawyer v. State Board of Health, 125 Mass. 182.

[c] (N. Y. 1868) Act 1866, c. 74, creating the metropolitan sanitary district of the state of New York, is not in violation of the article of the constitution on providing for the right of trial by jury in all cases "in which it has heretofore been used," as a jury has not been the original tribunal to determine upon questions affecting the public health.—Metropolitan Board of Health v. Heister, 37 N. Y. 661.

§ 109. Proceedings for adjustment of rights between contractors and municipal corporations.

Mandamus, see ante, § 106 [b].

[a] (N. J. 1876) The legislature may designate any impartial tribunal to ascertain what compensation should be made to contractors for services rendered and materials furnished, in good faith, to a city, though the charter formalities have not been complied with, and the city cannot complain that the right of trial by jury has been violated.—Cleveland v. Board of Finance & Taxation of Jersey City, 38 N. J. Law (9 Vroom) 259.

[b] (N. Y. 1862) Acts April, 1860, § 4, providing that the damages which the contractors, to whom the gate houses, etc., were awarded by the Croton aqueduct board, etc., may be equitably entitled to recover from the city of New York, shall be ascertained by three arbitrators, one to be chosen by the mayor, one by the parties claiming the damages, and the third by these two, is void and unconstitutional, as depriving the corporation of the right to trial by jury to assess such damages.—People v. Haws, 15 Abb. Prac. 115.

[c] (N. Y. 1865) The legislature has no power, where a claim is made by individuals on a municipal corporation for damages on account of the failure of the corporation to award a contract to them, to direct that the damages the claimants have sustained shall be ascertained by arbitrators, to be appointed as prescribed in the act, without requiring the assent of the corporation, instead of by a trial by jury.—Baldwin v. City of New York, 45 Barb. 359.

§ 110. Administration of estates of decedents.

Effect of provision for jury trial on appeal, see post, § 240.

Necessity of presenting issue of fact, see ante, § 29 [s].

Right to jury trial on appeal, see ante, § 97.

[a] (Ark. 1882) A probate court has no right to have exceptions to an account tried by a jury.—Crow v. Reed, 38 Ark. 482.

[b] (Cal. 1887) Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1716, 1717, providing for trial by jury in probate proceedings, is not to be considered as granting an absolute right to a jury trial in cases of the settlement of accounts of executors and administrators, in view of the fact that the language of the Code in many places implies that the settlement is to be by the court.—In re Moore, 72 Cal. 359, 13 Pac. 885.

[c] (Cal. 1887) Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1713–1716, provides that, except when otherwise enacted, the provisions of part 2 of the Code, relating to ordinary actions, shall constitute the rule of proceeding in probate matters, and that issues of fact joined in such proceedings must be tried as provided for the trial of contested wills by section 1312. Sections 1635–1638 provide that any person interested in an estate may file exceptions to the account in writing, and a method of settling the account. Held, that exceptions to an account are aids to the court in his duty of scrutinizing it, but are not issues of fact to be submitted to a jury on demand of a party in interest.—In re Sanderson, 74 Cal. 199, 15 Pac. 753.

[d] (D. C. 1893) Exceptions to an administrator's account on the ground that certain claims made by him were unjust, and that he acted in bad faith, involved a controversy of fact, which, under St. 1798, c. 101, subc. 15, §§ 16, 17, the parties have the absolute right to have submitted to a jury, on an issue duly framed therefor.—In re Atwood's Estate, 2 App. D. C. 74.

[e] (Ga. 1875) Code, §§ 1839–1844, 2598, 2599, authorizing executors, etc., to be cited before the ordinary for settlement, and authorizing the ordinary to enforce his judgment by attachment or execution, are not in violation of that provision of the United States constitution permitting the right of trial by jury in suits at common law when the amount involved is over $20.—Davis v. Harper, 54 Ga. 180.

[f] (Ga. 1875) Code, §§ 1839–1844, 2598, 2599, authorizing executors, etc., to be cited before the ordinary to enforce his judgment by attachment or execution, are not in violation of that clause of the constitution which declares that the right of trial by jury shall be inviolate.—Davis v. Harper, 54 Ga. 180.

[g] (Ill. 1889) Const. 1870, art. 2, § 5, which declares that the "right of trial by jury as heretofore enjoyed shall remain inviolate," does not entitle one to trial by jury in a proceeding in the county court sitting in probate for the discovery of, and to obtain information concerning the possession of, certain notes belonging to the estate of a decedent; such proceeding being unknown to the common law.—Seavey v. Seavey, 30 Ill. App. 625.

[h] (Ill. 1895) The constitutional right of trial by jury does not apply to proceedings by way of citation to compel an administrator to make a proper report and settlement of the estate, in which proceedings the court exercises equitable or discretionary power.—Boyd v. Swallows, 59 Ill. App. 635.

[i] (Ind. 1861) Where an executor's claim against the estate is set down in the form of a suit on the issue docket, the defendants have a right to claim a trial by jury.—Hubbard v. Hubbard, 16 Ind. 25.

[j] (Ind. 1883) Under section 188 of the act then in force concerning the settlement of decedents' estates, any issue of fact concerning such a settlement was triable by jury prior to September 19, 1881, at the request of either party.—Clouser v. Ruckman, 89 Ind. 65.

[k] (Ind. 1884) A proceeding arising on exceptions to the report of an executor or administrator is not a civil case, within the meaning of Const. art. 1, § 20, giving the right of trial by jury in civil cases.—Taylor v. Wright, 93 Ind. 121.

[m] (Iowa, 1882) In a proceeding in the circuit court, sitting as a court of probate, to establish a claim against an estate, either party is entitled to a trial by jury, under Code 1873, § 2411, providing that "the court may hear and allow the same, or may submit it to a jury; and on such hearing, unless otherwise provided, all provisions of law applicable to an ordinary proceeding shall apply."—Ingham v. Dudley, 60 Iowa, 16, 14 N. W. 82.

[n] (La. 1850) On a claim by an heir against the succession, made by opposing the executor's final account, the parties cannot claim a jury trial.—Succession of Bozant, 5 La. Ann. 709.

[o] (La. 1866) Under Code Prac. art. 1036, providing that "all causes tried before a court of probate shall be decided without the intervention of a jury, even if the parties wish one," a suit against a succession, being a probate proceeding, cannot be submitted to a jury.—Devall v. Succession of Watterston, 18 La. Ann. 136.

[p] (Mo. 1891) Where a claim is made for a widow's allowance in the course of the administration of an estate, the issue made by the denial of the administrator that the claimant is the widow of the decedent is not triable by jury.—Bradley v. Woerner, 46 Mo. App. 371.

on complaint of an administrator against a party suspected of embezzling or selling the property of an estate, the court has no jurisdiction to render judgment against accused, except for such property as he admits he took, as the accused cannot be deprived of his right to a trial by jury, as to property which he denies taking. —Howell v. Fry, 19 Ohio St. 556.

[r] (Pa.) There is no law that requires the orphans' court to order an issue to try facts arising in the settlement of an administrator's account.—(1858) In re Beehler's Estate, 3 Phila. 254; (1859) Appeal of Sharp, 3 Grant, Cas. 260.

§ 111. Probate and contest of wills.

As equitable action, see ante, § 71 [c].
Establishment of lost will, see ante, § 72 [e].
On appeal, see ante, § 97.
Second trial of same issue, see ante, § 14 [d].
Suit in equity to contest will, see ante, § 66 [d].

[a] (Fla. 1889) Act 1853 (McClel. Dig. p. 986, § 5), conferred upon the circuit courts jurisdiction over will contests, and provided for a jury trial. Const. 1868 gave the circuit courts jurisdiction in all cases in equity and at law, and gave the county courts "full surrogate or probate powers," subject to appeal. Held, that these provisions negatived the idea that the act of 1853 was continued in force, nor was the right to jury trial in will contests in the county courts preserved by the bill of rights of 1868, which declared that "the right of trial by jury shall be secured to all, and remain inviolate forever," as the right to jury trial did not exist in the probate court, independent of statute.—Lavey v. Doig, 25 Fla. 611, 6 South. 259.

[b] (Iowa, 1875) Upon the probate of a will, a jury trial cannot be demanded as a matter of right; and, where one has been granted, it is not error to set aside the finding of the jury. —Gilruth v. Gilruth, 40 Iowa, 346.

[c] (Md. 1864) Act 1798, c. 101, securing the right to a trial by jury to certain issues in the orphans' court, is not varied by Code, art. 93, § 249 et seq., so as to deprive the parties to such trial, on demand therefor in a proceeding to contest a will.—Humes v. Shillington, 22 Md. 346.

[d] (Minn. 1891) Const. art. 1, § 4, declaring that the right of trial by jury should remain inviolate, and should extend to all cases at law without regard to the amount in controversy, merely continued unimpaired and inviolate the right to a jury trial as it existed prior to the adoption of the constitution, and as, under the statutes then in force, a party had no absolute right to a jury trial of an issue as to the validity of a will, it does not render invalid Gen. St. 1878, c. 66, §§ 216, 217, so far as they allow such an issue to be tried by the court without a jury.—Schmidt v. Schmidt, 47 Minn. 451, 50 N. W. 598.

[e] (Mo. 1895) A proceeding to contest a will is an action at law in which the parties are entitled to a trial by jury.—Garland v. Smith, 127 Mo. 567, 28 S. W. 191, 29 S. W. 836.

[f] (Tex. 1886) A party to a contest of the probate of a will, begun in the county court and removed to the district court because of the disqualification of the county court judge, is entitled to a trial by jury.—Cockrill v. Cox, 65 Tex. 669.

§ 112. Guardianship of infants and incompetents.

On appeal, see ante, § 97.

[a] (Ind. 1880) A jury trial is not a matter of right in the case of exceptions to a guardian's report, or in the trial of any matter connected with the administration of the trust, except in certain cases provided for by statute. —Glidewell v. Snyder, 72 Ind. 528.

[b] (N. J. 1793) Act Dec., 1784 (Patterson's Laws, p. 459) section 7, vesting the orphans' court with power to determine all disputes respecting the existence of wills, the fairness of inventories, the right of administration, the allowance of the accounts of executors, administrators, and trustees, and to award process, and to cause to come before it all persons who, as executors, administrators, guardians, trustees, and otherwise, shall be intrusted with, or in any way accountable for, any lands belonging to "any orphan, or person under age," is not unconstitutional, as taking away the right of trial by jury, as the constitution does not extend the right of trial by jury to cases which did not fall within its province before the adoption thereof.—Wood v. Tallman's Ex'rs, 1 N. J. Law (Coxe) 153.

[c] (Ohio, 1847) A guardian can be legally appointed by the probate court for a deaf and dumb person of full age, who is found by the court to be incapable of managing his affairs, without submitting the question of his incapacity to a jury.—Shroyer v. Richmond, 16 Ohio St. 455.

[d] (Ohio, 1876) St. 1871, authorizing the appointment of guardians for inebriates without trial by jury, does not violate Const. art. 1, § 5, providing that the right to trial by jury shall be inviolate.—Hageny v. Cohnen, 7 Ohio Dec. 88, 1 Wkly. Law Bul. 104, affirmed Hagany v. Cohnen (1876) 29 Ohio St. 82.

[e] (Pa. 1888) Act May 4, 1855, giving the custody and earnings of children to the mother, where the father, from drunkenness or other cause, neglects to provide for them, without a trial by jury, is not in violation of Const. art. 1, § 6, providing that the right to trial by jury as heretofore shall remain inviolate.—Van Billiard v. Van Billiard, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 333.

[f] (Wis. 1857) A proceeding for the appointment of a guardian for an insane person is not a "case at law," within Const. art. 1, § 5, providing for the right of trial by jury.—Gaston v. Babcock, 6 Wis. 503.

§ 113. Inquisition in lunacy.

Concurrence of less than whole number of jurors in verdict, see post, § 224 [f].
Defects in number of jurors as infringement of right, see post, §§ 221 [a], 222 [b].
In criminal prosecution, see post, § 142 [a].
Procedure in criminal cases as infringement of right, see post, § 216 [j, k].

[a] (Iowa, 1882) Const. art. 1, § 10, providing that, in criminal prosecutions and cases involving life or liberty, the accused shall be entitled to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury, etc., does not apply to a statutory inquest of lunacy before commissioners.—Black Hawk County v. Springer, 58 Iowa, 417, 10 N. W. 791.

[b] (Iowa, 1891) Const. art. 1, §§ 9, 10, providing that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate, and in all criminal prosecutions, and in cases involving the life or liberty of an individual, the accused shall have the right to a trial by an impartial jury, applies only to criminal prosecutions for offenses against the criminal law, where it is sought to punish defendant by fine or imprisonment, and does not apply to an inquest of lunacy.—In re Bresee, 82 Iowa, 573, 48 N. W. 991.

[c] (Iowa, 1891) A proceeding to adjudge a person insane, and commit her to the asylum, is a special proceeding, and not a civil action, within the meaning of Code 1873, § 2505, defining a civil action as a proceeding in which one party, known as "plaintiff," demands against another party, known as "defendant," the protection of a private right or the redress of a private wrong, and a jury cannot be demanded therein to try the question of insanity, under section 2740, providing that an issue of fact in an action by ordinary proceeding must be tried by a jury, unless the same is waived, and that all other issues shall be tried by the court.—In re Bresee, 82 Iowa, 573, 48 N. W. 991.

[d] (Mo. 1893) An inquiry of lunacy, held by the court, and not by a jury, as required by statute, is coram non judice, and void.—Kiehne v. Wessell, 53 Mo. App. 667.

As equitable proceedings, see ante, § 74.

[a] (Ill. 1895) An insolvent has no right to have the question whether property, claimed as a homestead, passed by the assignment for the benefit of his creditors, determined by a jury; since Rev. St. 1893, c. 10a, § 8, under which the question is to be decided, does not so provide, and the constitutional guaranty of trial by jury applies only to actions at common law.—Holnbeck v. Wilson, 159 Ill. 148, 42 N. E. 169.

[b] (La. 1820) A party has a right to a jury on a motion, in a concurso, to obtain an order for the payment of a claim, as privileged.—Meeker's Assignee v. Williamson's Syndics, 7 Mart. (O. S.) 315.

[c] (La. 1822) When the amount due a creditor who has voted for syndics is disputed, the party opposing has a right to demand a jury.—Planters' Bank v. Lanusse, 10 Mart. (O. S.) 690.

[d] (La. 1867) A jury trial is not allowed on an opposition to the proces verbal of the deliberations of the creditors of an insolvent succession. Such proceedings must be tried summarily.—Guion v. Guion's Creditors, 19 La. Ann. 81.

[e] (Mass. 1829) Where the assignee of the defendant's property, for the benefit of creditors, is summoned as trustee, the plaintiff is not, under St. 1817, c. 148, entitled to a trial by jury, to try the validity of the assignment.—Hawes v. Langton, 25 Mass. (8 Pick.) 67.

[f] (Mass. 1855) The provision of the insolvent laws, which authorizes the issuing of a warrant to take possession of all the estate of the debtor, on the petition of a creditor, without a trial by jury on the facts alleged in the petition, is constitutional.—O'Neil v. Glover, 71 Mass. (5 Gray) 144.

[g] (Mich. 1884) Laws 1883, No. 193, provides that, if any insolvent shall confess judgment, or do any act whereby any one of his creditors shall be given a preference over any other of them, any two or more creditors, owning debts aggregating $200, may make a petition to the circuit court or a judge thereof, setting forth such facts, that, after notice given, "in pursuance of the order of the court" to the debtor and preferred creditors, the court in term time, or the judge in vacation, "shall proceed summarily upon such petition," and that "if it shall appear to the court or judge" that the debtor is insolvent, or has given such preference, the court or judge shall appoint a receiver, who shall "take possession of all the debtor's property," and "convert the same into money," and "marshal and distribute the same among the several creditors," etc. Held, that the act is unconstitutional, in that provision is not made for trial by jury.—Risser v. Hoyt, 53 Mich. 185, 18 N. W. 611.

[h] (Minn. 1883) That the insolvency act of 1881 (Laws 1881, c. 148) does not give the creditor a right of trial by jury on the question whether the debtor's property may be distributed among his creditors without their filing releases, where the debtor has fraudulently concealed or disposed of any of it, is not a violation of Const. art. 1, § 4, which declares that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate, and shall extend to all cases at law," although the right to such a trial was given under the insolvency law in force when the constitution was adopted; as the issue to be determined under the act of 1881 is different, and for a different purpose, from that under the old act, and the proceedings of the tribunal created by the act of 1881 are not "at law," but special, corresponding more nearly to the proceedings in a court of equity.—Wendell v. Lebon, 30 Minn. 234, 15 N. W. 109.

[i] (Minn. 1888) In proceedings under section 2 of the insolvent act (Laws 1881, c. 148), on petition of creditors for the appointment of a receiver of the estate of a nonresident insolvent, doing business and owning property in this state, on the ground that he had made a preferential conveyance of his personal property situated in this state, whether the conveyance constituted an act of insolvency must be determined by the laws of this state where the proceedings are instituted and the property situated, and not by the laws of the domicile of the debtor, where the conveyance was executed; and the insolvent is not entitled, under Const. art. 1, § 4, to a trial by jury, such right not having existed at the time of the adoption of the constitution, and the proceedings not being a "case at law," within the meaning of the action referred to.—In re Howes, 38 Minn. 403, 38 N. W. 104.

[j] (Ohio, 1889) Under Rev. St. § 5130, providing that trial by jury may be demanded in actions for the recovery of money or specific property, a suit to enforce the allowance of a claim, by the assignee of an insolvent, is not an action in which the right to demand a jury exists, since the court could not determine the amount due plaintiff, but could merely find that he was entitled to participate in the distribution of the trust estate.—Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Little, 2 O. C. D. 496.

On appeal, see ante, § 95 [a].

[a] (Ill. 1890) Rev. St. 1889, c. 42, § 37, which provides that drainage commissioners may assess benefits in lieu of a jury when the court so orders, is constitutional.—Hosmer v. Hunt Drainage Dist., 135 Ill. 51, 26 N. E. 587.

[b] (Ill. 1892) Rev. St. 1891, c. 42, § 37, which provides that, "in case a court so orders, the commissioners may make any assessment of benefits, or damages and benefits," caused by a proposed ditch, is not obnoxious to the constitutional guaranty of trial by jury.—Briggs v. Union Drainage Dist., 140 Ill. 53, 29 N. E. 721.

[c] (Ill. 1895) Where a valid ordinance provides that a local improvement shall be paid for by special taxation, the property owners have no right to have the question of benefit to their property submitted to a jury.—Davis v. City of Litchfield, 155 Ill. 384, 40 N. E. 354.

[d] (Kan. 1876) Under Bill of Rights, § 5, providing that the right of trial by jury shall be inviolate, proceedings to correct assessments are not rendered void because there is no provision for a trial by jury.—Ross v. Crawford County Com'rs, 16 Kan. 411.

[e] (Mass. 1878) St. 1869, c. 390, empowering the city counsel of Worcester to construct sidewalks, and assess the cost on the abutters, is not unconstitutional for omitting to provide for a trial by jury.—Chapin v. City of Worcester, 124 Mass. 464.

[f] (R. I. 1887) Assessments for sewers are regarded as a species of taxation, and are not in conflict with the constitution which declares that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate.—Bishop v. Tripp, 15 R. I. 466, 8 Atl. 692.

[g] (S. C. 1821) An act conferring on a city council power to lay assessments for the purposes of drains, without the intervention of a jury, is constitutional.—Cruckhanks v. City Council, 1 McCord, 360.

[b] (U. S. 1885) The act of congress approved July 15, 1882, to increase the water supply of the city of Washington, is not unconstitutional for the reason that it does not provide that ascertainment of the compensation for property taken shall be by the verdict of a jury.—Great Falls Mfg. Co. v. Garland (C. C.) 25 Fed. 521.

[c] (U. S. 1891) In a proceeding taken by the government, under Act Cong. Aug. 18, 1890, to condemn lands to the use of the United States, the owner of the land is not entitled as a matter of right to a trial by jury. —United States v. Engerman (D. C.) 46 Fed. 176.

[d] (Ark. 1877) The provision of Const. 1868, requiring that damages for the appropriation of a right of way should be assessed by a jury of 12 men, as shall be prescribed by law, did not execute itself, but required legislation; and, where no law was passed applicable to railroads chartered before 1868, a landowner had a right, on his lands being appropriated for such a road, to have an assessment according to the mode prescribed by the statute in force before the constitution, although it prescribed a jury of five men. —Cairo & F. R. Co. v. Trout, 32 Ark. 17.

[e] (Cal. 1860) Act March 29, 1860, providing for the condemnation of land for a state capitol site, and the appointment of commissioners to assess the damages for the property taken, is not unconstitutional, as depriving the owner of the property of the right to trial by jury.—Koppikus v. State Capitol Com'rs, 16 Cal. 248.

[f] (Del. 1846) An act providing that the owners of land lying on a certain stream should have the right to issue out a writ in the nature of a writ of ad quod damnum, to inquire by a jury of 12 men what damages have been sustained by such owners by reason of unauthorized obstructions placed in such stream, is a constitutional mode of proceeding, and does not violate the right of trial by jury.—Bailey v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co., 4 Har. 389, 44 Am. Dec. 593.

[g] (Ill. 1872) Const. 1870, art. 2, § 13, providing that "private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation," which, "when not made by the state, shall be ascertained by a jury, as shall be prescribed by law," and thereby repealing the statute then in force as to taking property for a public road, so far as it authorized an assessment of damages by the commissioners or supervisors, renders void such assessment made in a proceeding commenced after the adoption of the new constitution, although there was then no mode "prescribed by law" for the ascertainment of the compensation by a jury, as required therein.—Kine v. Defenbaugh, 64 Ill. 291.

[h] (Ind.) Rev. St. 1881, § 4276, providing that questions of fact in drainage proceedings shall be tried without a jury, is not repugnant to Const. art. 1, § 20, which provides that "in all civil cases the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate."—(1883) Anderson v. [i] (Ind. 1890) Under Act 1833, § 2 (Elliott's Supp. par. 1176), providing that a petition for the establishment of a ditch shall be docketed as an action pending, it is not an action at law, but a special proceeding, and the parties are not entitled to a trial by jury therein.—Baltimore & O. & C. R. Co. v. Ketring, 122 Ind. 5, 23 N. E. 527.

[j] (Mich. 1866) Where the state constitution requires a jury of 12 freeholders to determine the "necessity for using private property and the just compensation therefor," and also requires a jury in all cases where property is taken for public improvements in cities and villages, and an amendment is made exempting from the operation of the first provision "the action of commissioners of highways," the amendment does not include the municipal authorities of cities under the designation of "commissioners of highways."—Campau v. City of Detroit, 14 Mich. 276.

[l] (Mo. 1891) Const. 1875, art. 12, § 4, provides that "the right of trial by jury shall be held inviolate in all trials of claims for compensation," where an incorporated company shall seek to exercise the right of eminent domain. The schedule (section 1) declares that "the provisions of all laws which are incon sistent with this constitution shall upon its adoption cease." Held, that all laws, general and special, which provided for the ascertainment of compensation for land taken by virtue of the right of eminent domain otherwise than by a jury, existing at the time the constitution was adopted, were thereby repealed.—St. Joseph & I. R. Co. v. Shambaugh, 106 Mo. 557, 17 S. W. 581.

[m] (Mo. 1895) Under Const. art. 12, § 4, providing that "the right of trial by jury shall be held inviolate in all trials of claims for compensation, when, in the exercise of the right of eminent domain, any incorporated company shall be interested either for or against such right," the fact that, in a condemnation proceeding by a city, certain of the defendants are incorporated companies, does not give other defendants the right to demand a trial by jury.—City of Kansas City v. Vineyard, 128 Mo. 75, 30 S. W. 326.

[n] (Mo. 1895) A municipal corporation is not an "incorporated company," within Const. art. 12, § 4, providing that "the right of trial by jury shall be held inviolate in all trials of claims for compensation, when, in the exercise of the right of eminent domain, any incorporated company shall be interested either for or against such right."—City of Kansas City v. Vineyard, 128 Mo. 75, 30 S. W. 326.

[o] (Mo. 1895) The fact that the city is plaintiff, and that there are corporate defendants in proceedings to condemn property for street purposes, does not entitle the other parties thereto, whose lands are sought to be condemned, to demand a trial by a jury of 12 men, where such right is waived or not asserted by the corporate plaintiffs or defendants, under Const. art. 12, giving the right of jury trial in all trials of claims for compensation in eminent domain proceedings, in the result of which an incorporated company should be interested; Const. art. 2, § 21, providing in all other cases for a jury of three.—In re Independence Avenue Boulevard, 128 Mo. 272, 30 S. W. 773; Appeal of Smart, Id.

[p] (N. C. 1837) The assessment of damages to be paid to private individuals for property directed by the legislature to be taken for public use need not be made by a jury of 12 freeholders; it not being a controversy respecting property, within the Bill of Rights, § 14, securing in such event a trial by jury.—Raleigh & G. R. Co. v. Davis, 19 N. C. 451.

[q] (Ohio, 1836) The charter of the Pennsylvania & Ohio Canal Co., § 9, provided that in case the company and the owner of land taken could not agree as to its value, and cannot agree on persons to appraise the same, then the legislature shall appoint commissioners to assess the value, is not an invasion of the constitutional guaranty that the right to trial by jury shall be preserved inviolate.—Willyard v. Hamilton, 7 Ohio (7 Ham.) 111, pt. 2d, 30 Am. Dec. 195.

[r] (Ohio, 1854) An act authorizing assessment of damages in condemnation cases, by summary method and without a jury, is in violation of the constitutional guaranty of trial by jury.—City of Cincinnati v. Board of Com'rs of Hamilton County, 1 Disn. 4.

[s] (Ohio, 1893) The commissioners, in making a finding that a proposed ditch will be conducive to the public health, etc., and in determining which is the best route therefor, and in making an order for the location of such ditch and for its construction, are exercising a political power delegated to them by statute, and in which no private right is affected as to which a trial by jury is guarantied by the constitution, while their findings and orders as to the value of the land taken, and the damages which will result from the construction of the proposed ditch, are steps in a proceeding to appropriate property to a public use, in which a trial by jury is so secured.—Vornholt v. Gordon, 30 Wkly. Law Bul. 33.

See ante, § 116 [s].

On appeal, see ante, § 98.

[a] (Mich. 1889) Act 1883, No. 124, relative to the taking of private property by municipal corporations for public purposes, provides (section 7) that the jury shall be sworn to "determine whether there is necessity for taking, for the use and benefit of the public, the private property which the petition describes and prays may be taken." Section 8 provides that "the jury shall determine in their verdict the necessity for taking such private property for the use and benefit of the public, for the proposed improvement, and, in case they find that such necessity exists, they shall award" compensation to the owner. Held, that the act is not objectionable for failure to require the necessity of the proposed improvement to be determined by the jury, as prescribed by Const. art. 18, § 2.—City of Detroit v. Beecher, 75 Mich. 454, 42 N. W. 986, 4 L. R. A. 813.

[b] (Mich. 1892) Loc. Act 388 of 1889, relating to the condemnation of lands for a boulevard, and providing, in section 16, that "a jury may be impaneled to determine the necessity for taking such lands," and in section 21 that such jurors shall determine the necessity for taking the lands, and to award to each person entitled thereto the proper compensation, leaves for the determination of the jury the question of the public necessity for the contemplated improvement, and therefore does not contravene Const art. 18, § 2, providing that, when private property is taken for the use and benefit of the public, the necessity for using such property shall be ascertained by a jury.—Commissioners of Parks and Boulevards v. Moesta, 91 Mich. 149, 51 N. W. 903.

[c] (N. Y. 1860) The constitutional provisions in regard to taking of private property for public uses, and to trial by jury, do not relate to the question whether or not it is needed for the public use.—People v. Smith, 21 N. Y. 595.

[d] (R. I.) An act in relation to the laying out, enlarging, straightening, or otherwise altering the streets of a city, is not unconstitutional, because it does not permit an appeal to the jury as to the propriety of opening streets.—(1856) In re Dorrance St., 4 R. I. 230; (1857) Deblois v. Barker, Id. 445.

[e] (Wis. 1854) The towns in this state organized for the purpose of township government are not such municipal corporations as are forbidden by article 11, § 2, of the constitution to take land for public use without the consent of the owner, before the necessity thereof shall be established by the verdict of a jury.—Norton v. Peck, 3 Wis. 714.

of eminent domain, is not secured by the constitution.
—(Ind. 1859) Dronberger v. Reed, 11 Ind. 420; (Minn. 1878) Bruggerman v. True, 25 Minn. 123.

[b] (Cal. 1881) Act March 18, 1874, providing that where property is taken for a public road the damages shall be ascertained by the examination of the report of the road viewers, has been abrogated by Const. art. 1, § 14, which provides that private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation, which shall be ascertained by a jury, unless a jury be waived as in other civil cases in a court of record.—Weber v. Santa Clara County Sup'rs, 59 Cal. 265.

[c] (Mich. 1878) Sess. Laws 1861, p. 256, providing for the condemnation of private ways, is unconstitutional, since it does not provide for a jury, which is rendered indispensable by Const. art. 18, § 18.—People v. Richards, 38 Mich. 214.

[d] (Minn. 1886) As no right of action existed at common law for damages to property resulting from a change of grade of a street by a city, the only remedy for such a change ordered by the council of the city of St. Paul is the appeal from the order of the council, provided for by the city charter (Sp. Laws 1874, c. 1, subc. 7, § 16), and that provision of the charter is not unconstitutional because it does not give a right of trial by jury.—Genois v. City of St. Paul, 35 Minn. 330, 29 N. W. 129.

[e] (N. H.) On a petition by a party aggrieved by an assessment by the selectmen of damages for the laying out of a road, neither party is entitled to a trial by jury, under the twentieth article of the bill of rights; it being within the exceptions contained in such article.—(1840) Backus v. Lebanon, 11 N. H. 19, 35 Am. Dec. 466; (1849) Dalton v. Town of North Hampton, 19 N. H. 362.

[f] (N. H. 1857) Act July 1, 1853, authorizing a corporation to build a road for the use of the public on payment of a uniform and fixed toll, and to take land for the purpose of building a road, and providing that, in case the amount of damages to be paid for the land could not be agreed upon, the question should be referred to the road commissioners of the county to assess such damage, is within the exceptions provided for in Const. Bill of Rights, art. 20, declaring that in all controversies concerning property the parties shall have the right of trial by jury, "except in cases in which it has been heretofore otherwise used and practiced."—In re Mt. Washington Road Co., 35 N. H. 134.

[g] (Ohio, 1855) The statute providing for the appropriation of land for laying out township ways is fatally defective in making no provision for a jury, in the proper sense of the term, to assess the damages of the property holder.—Shaver v. Starrett, 4 Ohio St. 494.

[h] (Ohio, 1857) A landowner held entitled to have the damages sustained through the location of a county road assessed by a jury.—In re Wells County Road, 7 Ohio St. 16.

[i] (Ohio, 1886) As there is no provision for the assessment of damages by a jury in Rev. St. § 4715, allowing a supervisor to take private material for use in repairing a road, the section is repugnant to section 19 of the bill of rights, and therefore invalid.—Hendershot v. State, 44 Ohio St. 208, 6 N. E. 245.

[j] (Ohio, 1893) Rev. St. §§ 4914, 4916, 4918, so far as they authorize the probate court to declare a turnpike road vacated as a toll road, thereby becoming a free road, without the intervention of a jury, or the right of appeal, on which a jury could be had to determine whether the road, or a part thereof, has been out of repair for the preceding six months, within the statutory meaning, are in conflict with Const. art. 1, § 5, declaring the right of trial by jury inviolate.—Salt Creek Val. Turnpike Co. v. Parks, 50 Ohio St. 568, 35 N. E. 304, 28 L. R. A. 769; West Alexandria & E. Turnpike Road Co. v. Gay, 50 Ohio St. 583, 35 N. E. 308.

[k] (Or. 1879) Misc. Laws, c. 50, § 29, which provides for the assessment of damages for taking stone or other materials to repair the public roads, is not unconstitutional because it authorizes the county court to assess the damages without a trial by jury.—Kendall v. Post, 8 Or. 141.

[l] (Wash. 1895) Act March 15, 1893 (Laws 1893, p. 301), providing for the location and construction of new roads and the improvement and maintenance of old ones, and that the assessment of damages and benefits shall be made in ex parte proceedings, so far as it relates to new roads, violates Const. art. 1, § 16, prohibiting the taking of private property without compensation ascertained by a jury, unless waived.—Senor v. Board of Com'rs of Whatcom County, 13 Wash. 48, 42 Pac. 552.

[a] (U. S. 1830) An act of the legislature of New Jersey incorporating a railroad company, which provides for the assessment of damages to the owners of the land through which the road passes, is not repugnant to the state or United States constitution, although the proceeding prescribed for the mode of ascertaining compensation does not provide for a trial by jury. The right of trial by jury applies only to civil and criminal cases where a right is to be tried at law, and not to a mere collateral question of damages, where no suit is pending and the right of both parties admitted.—Bonaparte v. Camden & A. R. Co., Fed. Cas. No. 1,617 [Baldw. 205].

[b] (Cal. 1891) Since Civ. Code, § 499, provides that two lines of street railway under different managements may use the same street for the distance of five blocks, each paying an equal portion for the construction of the road used by them jointly, a street railway company, on receiving a franchise, has an absolute right to use so much of the tracks of another company, and does not thereby take the property of the other company, so that the laws relating to ascertaining the compensation to be paid on taking property under the right of eminent domain do not apply; and where the property of the first company is in the hands of the court through its receiver, the court may, on application of the second company, without the intervention of a jury, determine the amount of one-half the cost of constructing so much of the road as is sought to be used jointly, and allow such use on payment of the same.—Pacific Ry. Co. v. Wade, 91 Cal. 449, 27 Pac. 768, 25 Am. St. Rep. 201, 13 L. R. A. 754.

[c] (Md. 1891) Inasmuch as the special jury provided for in Code, art. 23, § 167, to determine the amount of damages to be awarded for land taken by a railroad company, was recognized by statute long prior to the adoption of the constitution of Maryland, the constitutional provision that no law shall authorize the taking of private property without compensation agreed on, or awarded by a jury, does not relate exclusively to the common-law jury, but leaves it to the legislature to determine, therefore said section is not unconstitutional.—Baltimore Belt R. Co. v. Baltzell, 75 Md. 94, 23 Atl. 74.

[d] (Tex. 1871) The provisions in a railway charter granted by the legislature, which provides for the appointment by the district court of appraisers to determine the compensation due to owners of land taken by the company, is not in conflict with the constitutional guaranty of trial by jury.—Houston Tap & B. Ry. Co. v. Milburn, 34 Tex. 224.

[b] (Ala. 1832) The statute of 1819 enacts "that all charges against clerks for misbehavior in office shall be exhibited to the court in writing, and the court shall direct the facts to be tried by a jury; and on conviction thereof, such clerk shall be fined or removed from office, as the court of which he is clerk shall think proper." Since this statute, a clerk cannot be removed unless charges are so exhibited, and the facts found by a jury, even for contumacy in the face of the court.—Callahan v. State, 2 Stew. & P. 379.

[c] (Ala. 1850) It is competent for the legislature to create an office not specially provided for in the constitution, and subject the incumbent to a trial for his defaults without the intervention of a jury. In such case the right of trial by jury never existed; and hence no constitutional provision is thereby violated.—Boring v. Williams, 17 Ala. 510.

[d] (Ga. 1848) An act of the legislature which authorizes the issuing of execution to collect money belonging to the public in the hands of a collector, receiver, or depositary, or any other legally appointed public monetary agent, without the intervention of a jury, is not in violation of the constitutional right of trial by jury; but the act of 1796, authorizing such issue of execution, for money belonging to the county for county purposes, is unconstitutional, except as to such collectors, receivers, or other legally appointed public monetary agents.—Tift v. Griffin, 5 Ga. 185.

[f] (Ga. 1872) Code, §§ 991, 996, providing that the comptroller general, on ascertaining that there has been a default by any agent or person intrusted with funds of the Western & Atlantic Railroad, owned by the state, shall issue executions against such defaulter and his sureties, does not impair the right of trial by jury required by the constitution to "remain inviolate," because the process, being virtually one for the collection of public revenues of the state, is not such as entitled the defendant to a jury trial at the time of the adoption of the constitution.—Scofield v. Perkerson, 46 Ga. 325, 350.

[g] (Tenn. 1841) The collector of county taxes, against whom a motion is made for an unpaid balance, under Act 1835, c. 15, § 14, is entitled to a trial of the facts of his case by a jury, under the provisions of said section.—Miller v. Moore, 21 Tenn. (2 Humph.) 421.

[h] (Vt. 1881) Gen. St. c. 84, §§ 50, 51, authorizing proceedings against a collector of taxes in default, is not unconstitutional as depriving the collector of all rights of a jury trial, as issues of fact in matters connected with offenses against the revenue at the time of the revolution were not tried by a jury, and were not understood by the framers of the constitution as being "proper for the cognizance of a jury."—In re Hackett, 53 Vt. 354.

§ 121. Suspension and removal of officers.

Conviction of misdemeanor as prerequisite, see post, § 145 [f].

Prosecution and impeachment, see post, § 141.

Quo warranto, see ante, § 105.

[a] (Cal. 1890) The right to a trial by jury, in a proceeding under Pen. Code, § 772, to remove defendant from office, is excluded by the provision for a summary hearing, which is valid; Const. art. 4, § 18, providing for the impeachment of certain officers, and that "all other civil officers shall be tried for misdemeanors in office in such manner as the legislature may provide."—Woods v. Varnum, 85 Cal. 639, 24 Pac. 843.

[b] (Idaho, 1894) Rev. St. 1877, § 7459, providing for a summary hearing and removal of an officer for misdemeanors or corruption in office, and a judgment including costs in favor of the informer, does not violate Const. U. S. Amend. 7, giving the right of trial by jury in all suits where the amount in controversy exceeds $20.—Rankin v. Jauman, 36 Pac. 502.

[c] (Tex. 1872) A sheriff is not entitled to a trial by jury upon a proceeding by the district judge for his removal from office, under Const. art. 5, § 18.—Davis v. State, 35 Tex. 118.

§ 122. Issuance or cancellation of licenses and permits.

[a] (Conn. 1882) The act of 1881, constituting the county commissioners in each county a court for the trial of complaints for the revocation of liquor licenses, and giving them all the powers of justices of the peace, does not constitute a court, within the meaning of the state constitution, and therefore is not unconstitutional in not providing for a trial by jury.—La Croix v. Fairfield County Com'rs, 49 Conn. 591.

[b] (Ga. 1830) Summary proceedings, under Act 1799, § 7, for the revocation of a pilot's license, on the ground of incompetency or negligence do not violate Const. U. S. Amend. 7.—Low v. Pilotage Com'rs, 1 R. M. Charlt. 302.

[c] (Iowa, 1885) The hearing by the court, without a jury, of an information brought, under Code 1873, § 1535, to revoke a permit to sell liquor, on the ground that it is sold for unlawful purposes, is not a violation of article 1, § 9, of the constitution, declaring that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate.—State v. Schmidtz, 65 Iowa, 556, 22 N. W. 673.

[d] (Iowa, 1885) A hearing by the court without a jury, under Code 1873, § 1535, of an information brought to revoke a permit to sell liquor, on the ground that its sale was for unlawful purposes, is not a violation of Const. art. 1, § 9, declaring that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate.—State v. Schmidtz, 65 Iowa, 556, 22 N. W. 673.

[e] (N. Y. 1874) The provision of the excise law (Laws 1873, c. 549, § 8), providing for the cancellation by boards of excise of licenses granted for the sale of intoxicating liquors, is not in contravention of the constitutional provisions preserving the right of trial by jury. The power to license and to cancel licenses is vested in the legislature, and the mode and manner in which it shall be done rests in its discretion.—People v. Brooklyn Police & Excise Com'rs, 59 N. Y. 92.

[a] (Ill. 1874) On the hearing of objections to the report of surveyors appointed pursuant to Act March 25, 1869, to fix disputed boundaries of land, it was error for the court to refuse a jury trial.—Huston v. Atkins, 74 Ill. 474.

[b] (Iowa) While the statute (Miller's Code, p. 81) authorizing proceedings for the establishment of boundaries does not contemplate a jury trial, it is not unconstitutional on that account.—(1882) Gates v. Brooks, 59 Iowa, 510, 6 N. W. 595, 13 N. W. 640; (1885) Coombs v. Quinn, 66 Iowa, 469, 23 N. W. 928; (1886) Caldwell v. Nash, 68 Iowa, 658, 27 N. W. 812.

[c] (Mass. 1873) The legislature, when changing boundaries of cities and towns, in dividing among the cities the property, or in intrusting such division to the courts, need not provide for a trial by jury.—Stone v. City of Charlestown, 114 Mass. 214.

[d] (Mo. 1845) When the calls of a survey are all ascertained, and no resort to extrinsic evidence is necessary, it is for the court to fix the boundary; but, where parol evidence has to be resorted to to identify the calls, the facts must be ascertained by a jury.—Ott v. Soulard, 9 Mo. 581.

[e] (N. C. 1877) In a case of lappage, if the claimant under the senior grant is driven to show actual possession, an issue of fact is thereby raised, which must be submitted to a jury.—McAllister v. Devane, 76 N. C. 57.

§ 124. Seizures, penalties, and forfeitures.

Actions, see ante, § 102.
As criminal prosecution, see post, § 146 [a].
Assessment of damages, see ante, § 85 [s].
Fixing amount of penalty as invading province of jury, see post, § 234 [j].
Imposition of fines, see post, § 136.

[a] (U. S. 1796) A proceeding for a forfeiture for exportation of arms, etc., against the statute of May 22, 1794, is a civil cause, the process being of the nature of a libel in rem, and does not in any degree touch the person of the offender, who is not, therefore, entitled to trial by jury.—United States v. La Vengeance, 3 U. S. (3 Dall.) 297, 1 L. Ed. 610.

[b] (U. S. 1796) A proceeding for the forfeiture of a foreign vessel illegally fitted out as a privateer in the United States is a civil cause in the nature of a libel in rem, and does not, therefore, entitle the claimant to a trial by jury.—United States v. La Vengeance, 3 U. S. (3 Dall.) 297, 1 L. Ed. 610.

[c] (U. S. 1800) Act Ga. May 4, 1782, inflicting penalties on, and confiscating the estate of, such persons as are guilty of treason, is not repugnant to the constitution of that state (article 61) which provides that a trial by jury shall remain inviolate.—Cooper v. Telfair, 4 U. S. (4 Dall.) 14, 1 L. Ed. 721.

[d] (U. S. 1808) A seizure of a vessel of more than 10 tons burden on navigable waters for violation of the act of February 28, 1806, entitled "An act to suspend the commercial intercourse between the United States and certain parts of the island of San Domingo," is to be tried without a jury.—United States v. The Betsey, 8 U. S. (4 Cranch) 443, 2 L. Ed. 673.

[e] (U. S. 1812) Cases of seizure upon waters navigable from the sea by vessels of more than 10 tons burden for breach of the laws of the United States are civil cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, and are to be tried without a jury.—Whelan v. United States, 11 U. S. (7 Cranch) 112, 3 L. Ed. 286.

[f] (U. S. 1823) In cases of seizures made on land, under the revenue laws, the district court proceeds as a court of common law, according to the course of the exchequer on information in rem, and the trial of facts is by a jury; but in cases of seizures on waters navigable from the sea by vessels of 10 or more tons burden, it proceeds, as an instance court of admiralty, by libel, and the trial is by the court.—The Sarah, 21 U. S. (8 Wheat.) 394, 5 L. Ed. 644.

[g] (U. S. 1824) Act Dec. 31, 1792, c. 1, relative to the forfeiture of vessels for failure to register transfers, in the proviso to the seventh section enacts that if such vessel shall be owned in part only, and "it shall appear to the jury before whom the trial shall be had" that any other owner was ignorant of the transfer, his share shall not be forfeited. Section 29 declares that all penalties and forfeitures shall be sued for in the manner that penalties are recovered for violations of Act Aug. 4, 1790, c. 35. Act Aug. 4, 1790, c. 35, provides for the prosecution of penalties in the same general terms which are employed in Revenue Act March 2, 1799, c. 128. The judiciary act of 1799 confers jurisdiction of seizures for forfeitures made under laws of impost, navigation, and trade on waters navigable from the sea by vessels of 10 tons burden and upwards, and provides that such cases are to be tried by the court, but that all other seizures are to be tried by jury. Held, that a proceeding under the act of 1792 against a vessel of more than 10 tons engaged in navigable waters should be tried by the court, and proceedings against other seizures only should be tried by jury.—The Margaret, 22 U. S. (9 Wheat.) 421, 6 L. Ed. 125.

[h] (U. S. 1824) The right to a jury trial in proceedings for the forfeiture of vessels, under the act of December 31, 1792, for failure to register a transfer of a ship, should be insisted upon in time by the parties claiming the benefit of it.—The Margaret, 22 U. S. (9 Wheat.) 421, 6 L. Ed. 125.

[i] (U. S. 1872) Where a seizure of goods has been made on land for an infringement of the internal revenue laws, the claimant is entitled to a trial by jury, if he appears and files an answer denying the facts charged in the information; and the court cannot strike out his answer, thus depriving him of his right to trial by jury.—Garnharts v. United States, 83 U. S. (16 Wall.) 162, 21 L. Ed. 275.

[j] (U. S. 1811) Though the nonimportation law (volume 9, Laws, p. 243) provides that the recovery for forfeitures incurred thereunder shall be by action of debt by indictment or information, the information may be of the nature of a libel in rem, so that the respondent is not entitled to a trial by jury.—Clark v. United States, Fed. Cas. No. 2,837 [2 Wash. C. C. 519].

[k] (U. S. 1865) In a proceeding in a federal district court against property seized as forfeited under the internal revenue laws, to which a claim is interposed, the claimant has a constitutional right to a trial by jury. The provision of Act June 30, 1864, § 68 (13 Stat. 233), declaring that "the proceeding to enforce said forfeiture of said property shall be in the nature of a proceeding in rem," is not to be construed as authorizing a trial on strict admiralty rules, and without the intervention of a jury.—United States v. One Hundred and Thirty Barrels of Whisky, Fed. Cas. No. 15,938 [1 Bond, 587].

[l] (U. S. 1880) A trial by jury is not necessary on a libel for the penalty imposed by law for the failure of the master of a vessel from a foreign port to report his vessel to the consul, or enter the manifest required by law.—The Paolina S. (C. C.) 11 Fed. 171.

[m] (Ky. 1818) Act Jan. 1810 (4 Litt. Laws, p. 161), authorizing the county court to impose a fine without trial by jury, for giving in a false and fraudulent list of taxable property, is unconstitutional as depriving the taxpayer of the right to trial by jury.—Carson v. Commonwealth, 8 Ky. (1 A. K. Marsh.) 290.

[n] (Mo. 1879) Wag. St. p. 1165, § 34, which imposes the penalty of paying treble the amount of taxes he would otherwise be liable to pay on a person who shall, at a hearing before a county board of equalization of which due notice has been given, be found guilty of having delivered a false list of his property to the tax assessor, does not contravene the constitutional requirements as to right of trial by jury.—State ex rel. Ferguson v. Moss, 69 Mo. 495.

[p] (N. C. 1822) The revenue law authorizing the sheriff to collect by distress a penalty for peddling without a license, is not unconstitutional as depriving the party of a jury trial.—Cowles v. Brittain, 9 N. C. 204.

[q] (Ohio, 1891) Laws 1890, p 327, § 13, imposing a fine on persons (parents and school teachers, etc.) failing to perform their duties in respect to the enforcement of the compulsory school law, and making such fine recoverable before a mayor, justice of the peace, or probate judge, is not in conflict with Const. U. S. Amend. art. 5, and Const. art. 1, §§ 5, 10, preserving the right of trial by jury.—Quigley v. State, 5 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 638.

[r] (Pa. 1854) The act of April 14, 1851, prohibiting the sale of spirituous liquors under a penalty, and providing for the recovery of the same by summary proceedings before an alderman or justice of the peace, is not unconstitutional for the reason that it does not provide for a trial by jury.—Van Swartow v. Commonwealth, 24 Pa. (12 Harris) 131.

[s] (Pa. 1864) The act of 1862, §§ 1, 2, to prevent the disturbance of religious worship, is unconstitutional in providing for the forfeiture of property without granting a trial by jury.—Fetter v. Wilt, 46 Pa. (10 Wright) 457.

[t] (S. C. 1822) The statute imposing a penalty of $10,000 on those who sell lottery tickets in lotteries not authorized by the laws of the state, or keep open an office for that purpose, is unconstitutional, so far as it authorizes the tax collector to issue execution for the penalty without a conviction by a jury.—State v. Allen, 2 McCord, 55.

[u] (Vt. 1883) Intoxicating liquor, seized and condemned according to law, is without rights; and a claimant of such liquor is not entitled to a trial by jury.—State v. Smith, 55 Vt. 82.

§ 124½. Enforcement of bonds and recognizances.

Proceedings in civil actions, see ante, § 86.

[a] The statute authorizing a judgment against the sureties of a sheriff without a jury is constitutional.
—(Ind. 1822) Dawson v. Shaver, 1 Blackf. 204; (Ky. 1819) Wells v. Caldwell, 8 Ky. (1 A. K. Marsh.) 441; (1831) Murry v. Askew, 29 Ky. (6 J. J. Marsh.) 27.

[b] (Ky.) The statute giving the right to sureties to recover by summary process money paid by them for their principal is constitutional. The court of equity had jurisdiction, and the trial was without a jury, before the constitution was formed.—(1817) Creighton v. Johnson, 16 Ky. (Litt. Sel. Cas.) 240; (1817) McCord v. Same, 7 Ky. (4 Bibb) 531; (1821) Watts v. Griffin, 16 Ky. (Litt. Sel. Cas.) 244.

[c] (La.) In proceedings by motion against bail, he has a right to demand a jury.—(1821) Labarre v. Fry's Bail, 9 Mart. (O. S.) 381; (1831) Gale v. Quick's Bail, 2 La. 348.

[d] (Miss. 1834) Rev. Code, p. 142, § 160, authorizing a surety who has been compelled to pay the debt to recover the amount paid by motion against the principal without a jury trial, is void as violating the constitutional provision that the right of a jury trial shall remain inviolate.—Smith's Adm'r v. Smith, 2 Miss. (1 How.) 102.

[e] (Mo. 1894) A proceeding to enforce a recognizance in a criminal case is not an original action, in which the defendant is entitled to a jury trial.—State v. Murmann, 124 Mo. 502, 28 S. W. 2.

[f] (N. C. 1856) Where, in a summary proceeding by motion for judgment on a jail bond, the defendant pleads matter in pais, he is entitled to a trial by jury.—Whitley v. Gaylord, 48 N. C. 286.

§ 125. Levy, collection, and abatement of taxes.

Fines and penalties, see ante, § 124 [k, m, n].

[a] (Ga. 1857) The constitution does not give a jury trial in cases in which jury trial had not previously been used, such as a levy for a tax.—Harper v. Town of Elberton Com'rs, 23 Ga. 566.

[b] (Ill. 1877) An application for judgment for delinquent taxes is governed by the revenue act, and the act relating to trial by jury has no application.—Mix v. People, 86 Ill. 312.

[c] (La. 1875) A suit for taxes is summary, and is not to be tried by a jury.—City of New Orleans v. Cassidy, 27 La. Ann. 704.

[d] (Minn. 1875) The provision of Const. art. 1, § 4, preserving the right to trial by jury in "all cases at law," does not give parties to proceedings to enforce payment of delinquent taxes, under Laws 1874, c. 1, the right to a jury trial of any issue except the questions whether the tax has been paid, or whether the property is exempt from taxation.—Mille Lacs County Com'rs v. Morrison, 22 Minn. 178.

[e] (N. H. 1871) Under the provisions of the constitution and statutes as to petitions, etc., on a petition to abate taxes assessed by the selectmen of a town, there is no right to a trial by jury; but the court in such case may, in its discretion, send an issue to the jury.—Cocheco Mfg. Co. v. Strafford, 51 N. H. 455.

[f] (Vt. 1886) An act requiring tax listers to list the property of one who refuses to return a sworn inventory thereof at double its estimated value, is not unconstitutional as imposing a penalty without jury trial.—Bartlett v. Wilson, 59 Vt. 23, 8 Atl. 321.

§ 126. Admission or disbarment of attorneys.

—(Mich. 1896) In re Shepard, 109 Mich. 631, 67 N. W. 971;
(Tenn. 1829) Smith v. State, 9 Tenn. (1 Yerg.) 228; (1893) State v. Davis, 92 Tenn. 634, 23 S. W. 59.

[b] (U. S. 1883) A proceeding to disbar an attorney is one within the proper jurisdiction of the court of which he is an attorney, and does not violate the constitutional provisions which require an indictment and trial by jury in criminal cases, as it is not a criminal proceeding to punish the attorney, but intended to protect the court from the ministrations of persons unfit to practice as attorneys.—Ex parte Wall, 107 U. S. 265, 2 Sup. Ct. 569, 27 L. Ed. 552, 27 Alb. Law. J. 406, 5 Ky. Law Rep. 2.

[c] (Ind. 1869) Where a motion is made to suspend from practice an attorney, and issue joined, the defendant is entitled, under the Code, to demand that such issue shall be tried by a jury.—Reilly v. Cavanaugh, 32 Ind. 214.

[d] (Okl. 1894) In proceedings to revoke an order of a court, admitting an attorney to practice law, obtained by fraud, defendant is not entitled to a trial by a jury as a matter of right.—Dean v. Stone, 2 Okl. 13, 35 Pac. 578.

§ 127. Bastardy proceedings.

Issues of fact, see ante, § 29 [o].

[a] (Ky. 1831) A jury is neither necessary nor proper in a case of bastardy.—Scantland v. Commonwealth, 29 Ky. (6 J. J. Marsh.) 585.

[b] (Tenn. 1825) Acts 1741, c. 14, and Acts 1822, c. 29, § 1, authorizing the court without the intervention of a jury to adjudge a man the father of a bastard child and order him to maintain it, are not violative of the constitutional provision that no man shall be deprived of property without a judgment of his peers.—Goddard v. State, 10 Tenn. (2 Yerg.) 96.

§ 128. Summary proceedings for recovery of possession of land.

Effect of provision for jury trial on appeal, see post, § 237 [b–d].
Restrictions on right of appeal, see post, § 212 [i].

[a] (U. S. 1858) Act N. Y. March 31, 1821, making it unlawful for any person other than Indians to settle and reside on lands belonging to or occupied by any tribe of Indians, and providing that if any persons should so settle on Indian lands, the judge of any county court where they were situated, on complaint made to him, with due proof of such residence, should issue his warrant directing the sheriff to remove such persons, was not in violation of the federal constitution, as excluding such persons from a right, according to the course of the common law, to the trial of their property interests in such lands by a jury, but was a valid exercise by the state of its power to preserve the peace; that being one of the powers reserved to the states.—New York v. Dibble, 62 U. S. (21 How.) 366, 16 L. Ed. 149.

[b] (La.) In summary proceedings to eject a tenant and recover possession of leased premises, the parties are not entitled to a jury trial.—(1853) Wallace v. Smith, 8 La. Ann. 376; (1870) Pesant v. Heartt, 22 La. Ann. 292.

[c] (Mo. 1891) The landlord and tenant statute for the recovery of possession for the nonpayment of rent provides a full procedure in such action, and that its hearing shall be before the justice; but contains no requirement for a jury, and none is permitted.—State v. Allen, 45 Mo. App. 551.

[d] (Nev. 1867) A party in possession claiming title cannot be ousted without a trial before a common-law court and jury.—Stonecifer v. Yellow Jacket Silver Min. Co., 3 Nev. 38.

[e] (N. J. 1898) In summary proceedings by a landlord to recover the possession of land from a tenant, whose term had expired, the tenant is entitled to a trial by jury, notwithstanding the act of April 23, 1888.—Fry v. Myers, 56 N. J. Law (27 Vroom) 115, 28 Atl. 425.

[f] (N. Y. 1851) In a case of "summary proceedings to recover possession of land" before a county judge, the issue must be tried by a jury.—Benjamin v. Benjamin, 5 N. Y. (1 Seld.) 383.

[g] (N. Y. 1854) Act March 31, 1821, making it unlawful for persons other than Indians to settle or reside on Indian lands, and avoiding leases, contracts, and agreements made with Indians with respect to such lands, and providing for the removal of such persons by summary process in a court of common pleas on a complaint filed, is not unconstitutional, as the provision of the constitution and bill of rights respecting a trial by jury are not applicable to cases of a disturbance of the friendly relations between the state and the Indian nations or tribes within the state.—People v. Dibble, 16 N. Y. 203, 18 Barb. 412.

[h] (N. Y. 1858) A judgment debtor who continues in possession of land after a sale on execution against him has a right to a jury trial in summary proceedings, under 2 Rev. St. p. 512, to remove tenants.—Spraker v. Cook, 16 N. Y. 567.

[i] (S. C.) Gen. St. § 1819, providing a summary mode of ejecting tenants who either hold over after the expiration of their leases, or fail to pay rent when due, and conferring jurisdiction on justices of the peace in such cases, is not unconstitutional as violating the right to a trial by jury guarantied by Const. art. 1, § 11, for the reason that previous to the adoption of the constitution no right to a jury trial existed in such proceeding.—(1887) Frazee v. Beattie, 26 S. C. 348, 2 S. E. 125; (1890) Swygert v. Goodwin, 32 S. C. 146, 10 S. E. 933.

Effect of provision for other remedy, see post, § 236 [b].

[a] (Fla. 1887) St. 1879, c. 3131, providing that "all claims for rent shall be a lien on agricultural products raised on the land rented," and prescribing a summary remedy for its enforcement, is not unconstitutional, in that it withholds the right of trial by jury.—Jones v. Fox, 23 Fla. 454, 2 South. 700.

[b] (Ky. 1835) The acts which give landlords prior liens for rent and the remedy by distress are constitutional.—Burket v. Boude, 33 Ky. (3 Dana) 209.

[c] (N. C. 1800) A warrant of distress for rent is unconstitutional as depriving a tenant of trial by jury.—Dalgleish v. Grandy, 1 N. C. 249.

Mandamus to compel election, see ante, § 106 [h].
On appeal, see ante, § 95 [b, l].
Quo warranto, see ante, § 105.

[a] (Ga. 1884) Act Sept. 21, 1883, providing that in cases of contested elections for certain offices testimony should be taken before some judicial officer, after notice had been given to the opposite party, and should be submitted to the judge of the circuit, was not rendered unconstitutional by failure to provide for a trial of issues of fact by a jury.—Freeman v. State, 72 Ga. 812.

[b] (Ind.) A party in a contested election case has no right to demand a jury trial.—(1878) Corey v. Lugar, 62 Ind. 60; (1887) Pedigo v. Grimes, 113 Ind. 148, 13 N. E. 700.

[c] (La. 1870) Under Acts 1868, No. 156, relating to contests for public offices and providing that all cases may be tried before a judge at chambers, and, if required by either party, the judge may order a special jury, either party has a right to a trial by jury.—State v. Head, 22 La. Ann. 54.

[d] (Minn.) An action to contest the election of a county officer, under Gen. St. 1866, c. 1, §§ 46–52, is a special proceeding, and not a civil action, wherein a party is entitled to a jury trial.—(1860) Whallon v. Bancroft, 4 Minn. 109 (Gil. 70); (1868) Ford v. Wright, 13 Minn. 518 (Gil. 480).

§ 131. Fugitive slave laws.

Issues of fact or law, see ante, § 29 [a].

[a] (U. S. 1851) The rendition of a fugitive slave, under the acts of 1793 and 1850, is an executive, and not a judicial, proceeding, and trial by jury is not necessary therein under the federal constitution.—United States v. Scott, Fed. Cas. No. 16,240b.

[c] (Ky. 1833) The statute of 1808, by which persons of color may be compelled to depart from the state, is unconstitutional so far as it dispenses with the trial by jury.—Doram v. Commonwealth, 31 Ky. (1 Dana) 331.

[d] (Mass. 1851) Act Cong. 1850, c. 60, concerning fugitives from service, being substantially like Act Cong. 1843, c. 7, the constitutionality of which has been settled by the supreme court of the United States, was constitutional, though it confers on commissioners of the circuit court authority to return fugitives to service without provision for trial by jury.—In re Sims, 61 Mass. (7 Cush.) 285.

[e] (S. C. 1844) Act 1836, § 6 (7 St. at Large, p. 472), providing that any person who has carried a slave out of the state for a time, and during that time visited any state north of the Potomac, shall, upon again introducing such slave into the state, be liable to forfeiture of the slave, after certain summary proceedings, which were not sanctioned by the law existing at the adoption of the constitution, is in violation of Const. art. 9, § 6, which declares that a trial by jury, as heretofore used in this state, shall be forever inviolably preserved.—State v. Simons, 2 Speers, 761.

[f] (Wis. 1854) Act Cong. Sept. 18, 1850, known as the fugitive slave act, and providing for reference to the United States commissioner, for decision, questions of fact which must be established before the alleged fugitive can be delivered up, is unconstitutional and void, in that it withholds from the person claimed the right of trial by jury.—In re Booth, 3 Wis. 1.

§ 133. Scire facias.

[a] (Mo. 1884) Under Rev. St. § 3600, providing that an issue of fact for the recovery of money only, or of specific real and personal property, must be tried by a jury, unless waived, the defendant is entitled to a jury by scire facias to revive a judgment.—Simpson v. Watson, 15 Mo. App. 425.

[b] (Mo. 1894) As a proceeding by scire facias upon a forfeited recognizance is not a civil action, a surety is not entitled, under either Const. art. 2, § 28, providing that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate, or under Rev. St. § 2131, providing that an issue of fact in an action for the recovery of money only must be tried by a jury, to have the issues of fact raised by his answer tried by a jury.—State v. Hoeffner, 124 Mo. 488, 28 S. W. 1.

[c] (Pa. 1890) To a sci. fa. to enforce a municipal lien for a street assessment, the affidavit of defense alleged that the liens filed for the assessment were insufficient for uncertainty; that the street never had been legally opened; that the liens were not authorized by the statute under which they were issued; that Federal lane was laid out under an act of the general assembly, and recognized in patents to abutting owners, and was accepted and directed to be opened by the city; that the city was attempting to open and widen an extension of the lane, partly outside of its proper limits, and by conspiracy between the city engineer and certain abutting owners, the assessment was to pay them damages for taking part of the lane which they had wrongfully fenced in, which was unnecessary, and practically destroyed the lane as established by the commonwealth; and that such extension was unauthorized by the ordinance. Held, that defendant was entitled to a jury trial.—City of Allegheny v. McCaffrey, 131 Pa. 137, 18 Atl. 1001, 25 Wkly. Notes Cas. 213.

[a] (Ala. 1855) The constitutional guaranty of a trial by jury "in all prosecutions by indictment or information" (article 1, § 10) does not apply to offenses created by statute since the adoption of the constitution, except in the specified cases; but it is within the power of the legislature to make such offenses triable before a justice of the peace, without indictment.—Tims v. State, 26 Ala. 165.

[b] (Cal.) The constitutional provision securing the right of trial by jury applies only to civil and criminal cases in which an issue of fact is joined.—(1860) Koppikus v. State Capitol Com'rs, 16 Cal. 248; (1862) People v. Blake, 19 Cal. 579.

[c] (Colo. 1892) A particular offense, which was unknown before the adoption of the constitution, is now triable by jury or not, according to its status, as naturally falling within a class of offenses that were or were not theretofore so tried.—McInerney v. City of Denver, 17 Colo. 302, 29 Pac. 516.

[d] (Colo. 1892) The provisions of the constitution guarantying trial by jury and the like in criminal cases were adopted with reference to the procedure theretofore generally existing; and if, in a given class of offenses, trials without a jury were the prevailing rule, this rule is not changed by the constitution.—McInerney v. City of Denver, 17 Colo. 302, 29 Pac. 516.

[e] (Ky.) The right of trial by jury in criminal and penal cases existed before the adoption of the constitution.—(1802) Caldwell v. Commonwealth, 2 Ky. (Ky. Dec.) 129; (1828) Harris v. Wood, 22 Ky. (6 T. B. Mon.) 641; (1833) Doram v. Commonwealth, 31 Ky. (1 Dana) 331.

[f] (N. Y. 1895) Const. art. 1, § 2, declaring that trial by jury in all cases in which it has been heretofore used shall remain inviolate, does not apply to an offense thereafter created, and tried in a court not then existing.—People v. Van Houten (Sess.) 13 Misc. Rep. 603, 35 N. Y. Supp. 186.

[g] (Vt. 1869) The clause in Bill of Rights, § 10, "all prosecutions for criminal offenses," means all prosecutions for crimes and misdemeanors, in the trial of which the "issue in fact" is proper for the cognizance of a jury.—State v. Peterson, 41 Vt. 504.

[h] (Wis. 1863) The provision in the constitution that secures to the accused, in prosecutions by indictment or information, a trial by a jury of the county or district wherein the offense was committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, refers only to such crimes as are committed within the state, and does not imply a prohibition against punishing crimes committed by a citizen of the state against its laws when out of its limits.—State v. Main, 16 Wis. 398.

[a] (Ala. 1892) Act March 19, 1875 (Acts 1874–75, p. 235), conferred on the county courts of Butler and other counties power to try indictment for all misdemeanors except violations of the revenue law, and provided for the transfer of such indictment from the circuit court. Section 2 provided that on the transfer and delivery of such indictment to the county court "the jurisdiction of the circuit court shall cease, except in cases of appeals hereinafter provided for, and exclusive jurisdiction thereof shall vest in the county court." Section 3 provides for a trial by jury, and, on conviction, appeal to the circuit court. Section 4 provides for impaneling a jury. Acts 1875–76, p. 361, repeals sections 3 and 4 of the act of March 19, 1875, as to Butler county. Held that, as by the repeal of sections 3 and 4 there is no provision for a trial by jury in the county court of an indictment transferred from the circuit court, the act is void as to Butler county, under Const. art. 1, § 7, which guaranties a trial by jury to one charged with crime.—Reeves v. State, 96 Ala. 33, 11 South. 296.

[b] (Ga. 1893) Acts 1892, p. 65 (Code, § 4711), providing for trial by jury before imprisonment for contempt, is prospective in its scope, and does not apply where a party was, previously to its passage, adjudged guilty of contempt, and was undergoing punishment therefor when the act was passed.—Kingsbery v. Ryan, 92 Ga. 108, 17 S. E. 689.

§ 136. Prosecutions in general.

[a] (Ill. 1895) The act of June 17, 1893, providing that no person shall be imprisoned for nonpayment of a fine or judgment in any civil, criminal, quasi criminal, or qui tam action, except upon conviction by jury, unless he waives such jury by executing a formal waiver in writing, does not apply to cases where the defendant has been sentenced to imprisonment, and no fine or money judgment entered up against him.—Sloncen v. People, 58 Ill. App. 315.

[b] (La. 1882) Act No. 9 of 1847, relating to the sale of lottery tickets, does not violate the constitutional provisions as to the right to a jury trial.—Augusti v. Louisiana Lottery Co., 34 La. Ann. 504.

pany with the superintendence of the road. Held that, on such an inquisition, the criminal court had no power to grant the turnpike company a jury trial, as its only duty was to enter up a judgment in accordance with the finding of the inquisition. — Francis v. Weaver, 76 Md. 457, 25 Atl. 413.

[d] (Mich. 1871) Comp. Laws, c. 166, providing for the imprisonment of a debtor who has disposed of his property with intent to defraud his creditors, is not a criminal prosecution within the meaning of Const. art. 6, par. 28, guarantying the right of trial by jury in criminal cases. — Johnson v. Maxon, 23 Mich. 129.

[e] (N. C. 1854) The act of the general assembly giving to the intendant of police of a town the power to try assaults and batteries is in violation of Const. § 8, providing that no freeman shall be convicted of any crime but by the unanimous verdict of a jury of good and lawful men, in open court, as heretofore used.—State v. Moss, 47 N. C. 66.

§ 137. Crimes committed within the jurisdiction of the United States.

In what courts allowable, see ante, § 21.

[a] (U. S. 1890) The fact that the offense is committed on an American vessel does not give the offender, when tried before a consular tribunal, the right to invoke the constitutional guaranty of trial by jury, on the ground that the deck of the vessel is territory of the United States.—Ross v. McIntyre, 140 U. S. 453, 11 Sup. Ct. 897, 35 L. Ed. 581.

[b] (D. C. 1892) A person charged with receiving stolen goods is entitled to trial by jury. —United States v. Jackson, 20 D. C. 424.

[c] (D. C. 1892) Gaming, being punishable under 22 Stat. 412, by imprisonment and fine, is a crime, and a person accused thereof is entitled to a jury trial.—United States v. Herzog, 20 D. C. 430.

[d] (D. C. 1892) Petty larceny is a felony, and one charged therewith is entitled to trial by jury.—In re Fauldan, 20 D. C. 433.

[e] (D. C. 1892) Assault and battery is a crime triable by jury, within the meaning of the United States constitution, and cannot be tried by a police court without a jury.—In re Robinson, 20 D. C. 570.

§ 138. Commitment to industrial schools and reformatories.

Effect of provision for jury trial on appeal, see post, § 241 [g].

[a] (Cal. 1876) The action of a police magistrate, in committing a minor child to an industrial school for his training and reformation, does not amount to a criminal prosecution, nor to proceedings according to the course of common law; and the minor is not entitled to a trial by jury.—Ex parte Ah Peen, 51 Cal. 280.

[b] (Ill. 1882) Act May 29, 1879 (Laws 1879, p. 309), relating to industrial schools for girls, and providing for a jury of only six on a trial to determine whether a girl is a proper person to be sent to such school, does not conflict with the constitutional provision that the right of trial by jury, as heretofore established, shall remain inviolate.—In re Ferrier, 103 Ill. 367.

[d] (Ohio, 1869) A proceeding under the statute (1 Swan & C. St. p. 690) providing that the grand jury instead of filing an indictment against a person under 16 years of age may return to the court that in their judgment the accused is a suitable person to be committed to a house of refuge, and directing that the court shall thereupon order his commitment accordingly, is not a criminal proceeding within the meaning of Const. art. 1, §§ 5, 10, relating to the rights of trial by jury, and to the rights of the accused under criminal prosecutions.—Prescott v. State, 19 Ohio St. 184, 2 Am. Dec. 388.

[e] (Pa. 1839) The acts of March 23, 1826, and April 10, 1835, authorizing the committing of infants to the house of refuge without trial by jury, are constitutional.—Ex parte Crouse, 4 Whart. 9.

In equity, see ante, § 63.

Statutory provisions, see ante, § 135 [b].

—(U. S. 1895) In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 15 Sup. Ct. 900, 39 L. Ed. 1092; (1801) United States v. Duane, Fed. Cas. No. 14,997 [Wall. Sr. 102]; (1877) King v. Ohio & M. Ry. Co., Fed. Cas. No. 7,800 [7 Biss. 529]; (Okl. 1894) Burke v. Territory, 2 Okl. 499, 37 Pac. 829.

[b] (Conn. 1890) Sess. Laws 1889, c. 167, making it the duty of the magistrate before whom a person is found guilty of intoxication to commit him to jail for contempt of court if he refuses, on request of the prosecuting officer, to disclose when, where, and from whom he procured the liquor, is not unconstitutional on the ground that it deprives the prisoner of the right to a trial by jury in violation of Const. art. 1, § 21.—In re Clayton, 59 Conn. 510, 21 Atl. 1005, 21 Am. St. Rep. 128, 13 L. R. A. 66.

[c] (Ga. 1896) Act Dec. 22, 1892, amending Code, § 4711, so as to confer a right of trial by jury in certain cases of contempt, has no application to a proceeding pending before a judge of the superior court to enforce the payment of alimony by a husband to his wife; hence defendant in such a proceeding is not entitled to demand a jury to pass upon the question of his ability to comply with an order of the judge directing the payment by him of certain sums as alimony.—Lee v. Lee, 97 Ga. 736, 25 S. E. 174.

[d] (Ill. 1890) Rev. St. 1889, c. 51, § 36, which authorizes the circuit court to punish summarily, as in cases of contempt, a refusal to obey a subpœna issued by a notary public, is in conflict with Const. art. 2, § 9, which preserves trial by jury in all criminal cases, since such refusal is not a contempt of the circuit court.—Puterbaugh v. Smith, 131 Ill. 199, 23 N. E. 428, 19 Am. St. Rep. 30.

[e] (Iowa) Under Iowa practice, a person required to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt of court is not entitled to a jury trial.—(1886) Manderscheid v. District Court, 69 Iowa, 240, 28 N. W. 551; (1888) McDonnell v. Henderson, 74 Iowa, 619, 39 N. W. 512.

[f] (Minn. 1877) Gen. St. c. 66, tit. 24, providing that a judgment debtor may be examined touching his property on the return of an execution unsatisfied, and may be punished for contempt for disobedience of any order of the court made in respect thereto, is not repugnant to Const. art. 1, § 6, providing that in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a jury trial.—State v. Becht, 23 Minn. 411.

[g] (N. J. 1868) The infliction of summary punishment for a contempt of court, consisting of improper conduct towards a juror not in the presence of the court, is not an infringement of that clause of the constitution of this state which guaranties to the citizen a trial by jury. —State v. Doty, 32 N. J. Law (3 Vroom) 403, 90 Am. Dec. 671.

[h] (N. Y. 1875) The power to punish for contempt is an exception to the constitutional provision against depriving a man of his liberty without a jury, and without a regular trial, and therefore it should not be extended beyond the limits imposed by statutes, especially by courts which are not of general jurisdiction.—Rutherford v. Holmes, 5 Hun, 317, affirmed (1876) 66 N. Y. 368.

[i] (Ohio, 1888) In a proceeding for contempt in refusing to answer as a witness, the witness is not entitled to a trial by jury under the constitutional provision that the party accused of crime shall have a speedy public trial by an impartial jury; the contempt is not a crime.—Ammon v. Johnson, 3 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 263, 2 O. C. D. 149.

§ 140. Habitual criminals and vagrants.

Restrictions on right of appeal, see post, § 217 [i].

[a, b] (Cal. 1895) The legislature not having provided for summary proceedings without a jury in prosecutions for vagrancy, a jury trial, when demanded, cannot be refused.—In re Fife, 110 Cal. 8, 42 Pac. 299.

[c] (La. 1868) Act 1855, §§ 120, 121, empowering recorders of the city of New Orleans to try and sentence vagrants without a jury, are authorized by Const. art. 124, and must therefore be considered an exception to the rule prescribed by article 103, requiring prosecution to be by jury.—State v. Noble, 20 La. Ann. 325.

[d] (N. Y. 1873) The habitual criminal act, providing that where a professional thief, burglar, pickpocket, or forger attends a public place he may be arrested, brought before a magistrate, and if it appear to the satisfaction of the magistrate that such person was frequenting the place in question for an unlawful purpose, and that he has prior thereto been convicted of any one of certain offenses, he shall be deemed a disorderly person, and committed to jail for a stated period, is not repugnant to Const. art. 1, providing that trial by jury shall remain inviolate.—People v. McCarthy, 45 How. Prac. 97.

[e] (Pa. 1862) The act of March 13, 1862, authorizing the arrest of professional thieves, burglars, etc., in the city of Philadelphia, and their commitment to prison by the mayor, or public magistrate of the central station, is not in conflict with the constitutional right of trial by jury, nor prohibited by section 9 of the bill of rights.—Byers v. Commonwealth, 42 Pa. (6 Wright) 89.

[f] (S. C. 1837) The act of 1836, relating to vagrants, does not violate the constitutional provision that "the trial by jury as heretofore used in this state shall be forever inviolably preserved."—State v. Maxcy, 1 McMul. 501.

§ 141. Prosecution and impeachment of officers.

[a] (Ala. 1855) The third section of the act of February 7, 1854 (Pamph. Acts 1853–54, p. 247), which makes defaulting overseers of roads triable before a justice of the peace, is not violative of the right to a trial by jury, as secured by the tenth and twenty-eighth sections of the first article of the constitution.—Tims v. State, 26 Ala. 165.

[aa] (Ala. 1875) Although under the constitution impeachment is a criminal prosecution, yet it is not of such a character as to confer upon the accused a constitutional right to a jury trial, and a statute providing for the impeachment of certain officers, under article 7, § 2, of the constitution, is not unconstitutional because no provision is made therein for a jury trial.—State v. Buckley, 54 Ala. 599.

[b] (Tex. 1873) On an information against an officer for malfeasance in office, the officer is entitled to a trial by jury.—Wilson v. State, 38 Tex. 548.

[c] (Tex. 1875) An information against a district clerk to remove him from office is not a "criminal prosecution" within Bill of Rights, § 8, declaring that in such cases the accused shall have a speedy public trial by jury.—Glavecke v. State, 44 Tex. 137.

§ 142. Particular proceedings in criminal prosecutions.

As infringement of right, see post, § 216.

[a] (La. 1896) Defendant having been convicted of murder, and sentenced to be hanged, the trial judge appointed, at his instance, a committee of medical experts to examine into his mental condition, a majority of which reported him to be of a mind sound, though of a low grade. Held, that defendant was not entitled thereafter, on application, to a trial by jury on the issue of insanity vel non.—State ex rel. Armstrong v. Judge of Eighth Judicial Dist., 48 La. Ann. 503, 19 South. 475.

[b] (Minn. 1893) Where a convict who has been conditionally pardoned is arrested for an alleged violation of the conditions of the pardon, the court may, in its discretion, if in doubt as to the facts, take the verdict of a jury, but the party is not entitled to a jury trial as a matter of right, except on the question whether he is the same person who was convicted, if he pleads that he is not.—State v. Wolfer, 53 Minn. 135, 54 N. W. 1065, 39 Am. St. Rep. 582, 19 L. R. A. 783.

[c] (N. H. 1850) A justice of the peace throughout the state may, upon a complaint for an assault made before him in the county of Rockingham, order the respondent to recognize for his appearance at the court of common pleas for the county of Strafford; as the proceedings do not constitute a trial, within the meaning of article 17 of the bill of rights.—State v. Thompson, 20 N. H. 250.

[d] (Wis. 1886) Rev. St. § 4791, authorizing the municipal judge on determining that a complaint in a criminal proceeding was malicious and without probable cause to enter judgment against the complainant for costs, is not unconstitutional as permitting judgment without a trial by jury.—State v. Smith, 65 Wis. 93, 26 N. W. 258.

§ 143. Assessment of punishment.

Province of court and jury, see "Criminal Law," vol. 15, c. 291, § 2495.

[a] (Ala. 1871) One indicted for an assault with intent to murder, who confesses himself guilty of an assault and battery with a pistol, must have the amount of the fine fixed by a jury; the court not having power to fix the fine in such case.—Nelson v. State, 46 Ala. 186.

[b] (Ala. 1877) Code 1876, §§ 4453, 4484, provide that, on plea of guilty in cases of misdemeanor, punishment is fixed by the court, and not by the jury.—Drake v. State, 60 Ala. 42.

[c] (Cal. 1862) The proceeding to determine the degree of the crime of murder, after a plea of guilty, is not a trial requiring a jury, but is a question for the court.—People v. Noll, 20 Cal. 164.

[d] (Ill. 1874) On a plea of guilty of manslaughter, the court has the same power to fix the punishment that the jury would have upon finding the defendant guilty upon trial.—Coates v. People, 72 Ill. 303.

[e] (Ind. 1886) Since murder in the first degree may be punished capitally, the court cannot assess defendant's punishment without the intervention of a jury.—Frazier v. State, 106 Ind. 562, 7 N. E. 378.

[f] (Iowa, 1858) A justice of the peace has no authority to render a judgment against a prisoner who has demanded, under Code, § 3333, a trial by jury, for fine and costs, until he is found guilty by a jury.—Dupont v. Downing, 6 Iowa (6 Clarke) 172.

[g] (Ky. 1849) A defendant may be tried and fined by the court, without a jury, where the fine to be imposed does not exceed £5.—Frost v. Commonwealth, 48 Ky. (9 B. Mon.) 362.

[h] (Mass. 1866) Gen. St. c. 160, §§ 1, 2, divide murder into two degrees, making one degree capital and the other not, and section 3 provides that there shall be a verdict of a jury before a sentence of death can be passed. Held not to prevent the court from passing sentence of death after a plea of guilty of murder in the first degree was voluntarily entered by defendant, under an indictment for murder in the common-law form, when such sections are construed with Gen. St. c. 158, § 5, providing that no person indicted for an offense shall be convicted thereof, unless by confession of his guilt, or by admitting the truth of the charge against him, "or by the verdict of a jury," and with chapter 171, § 29, providing that "if on arraignment a person refuses to plead or answer, or does not confess the indictment to be true, the court shall order a plea of not guilty to be entered, and thereupon the proceedings shall be the same as if he had pleaded not guilty," clearly implying that a plea of guilty, or a confession, supersedes the necessity of a trial.—Green v. Commonwealth, 94 Mass. (12 Allen) 155.

[i] (Mass. 1871) A statute providing for sentence of an appellant from a police court, on his default, is not unconstitutional, as depriving him of the right of trial by jury; his failure to prosecute is a waiver thereof.—Commonwealth v. Whitney, 108 Mass. 5.

[k] (Ohio, 1892) Rev. St. § 7316, which provides that "if the offense charged is murder, and the accused be convicted by confession in open court, the court shall examine the witnesses, and determine the degree of the crime, and pronounce sentence accordingly," is constitutional and valid.—Craig v. State, 49 Ohio St. 415, 30 N. E. 1120, 16 L. R. A. 358.

[l] (Tex. 1894) Where defendant, in a criminal trial, persists in pleading guilty, if the punishment of the offense is not absolutely fixed by law, and beyond the direction of the jury to graduate, a jury must be impaneled to assess the punishment, and evidence submitted to enable them to decide thereupon. Code Cr. Proc. art. 519.—Josef v. State, 33 Tex. Cr. R. 251, 26 S. W. 213.

[m] (W. Va. 1888) Code, c. 152, § 22, authorizing the court to fix punishment when a prisoner has been found guilty of a felony, is not in violation of the constitutional provision that no person shall be deprived of his liberty without the "judgment of his peers."—State v. Davis, 31 W. Va. 390, 7 S. E. 24.

§ 144. Trial on appeal.

[a] (Iowa, 1855) On appeal from justice's court, the party complaining has no right to a trial by jury de novo until the court is satisfied that the judgment below was against the evidence.—Baurose v. State, 1 Iowa (1 Clarke) 374.

[b] (Iowa, 1856) Code, § 3361, giving the district court on appeal power to grant or refuse a jury trial, applies to the liquor law of January 22, 1855, notwithstanding section 10 of that law.—Santo v. State, 2 Iowa (2 Clarke) 165, 63 Am. Dec. 487.

[c] (Va. 1873) When a person is tried by a justice of the peace for petit larceny, and convicted, he has an absolute right of appeal to the county court, and in that court the cause is to be heard de novo upon the evidence; and the accused is entitled to be tried by a jury as in like cases originating in that court.—Read v. Commonwealth, 24 Grat. 618.

[d] (Wis. 1895) When one charged with crime is brought before a justice for preliminary examination, and makes affidavit that the justice is prejudiced, the determination by the justice, in complying with Rev. St. § 4809, which requires him to "transmit all the papers in the case to the nearest justice * * * qualified by law to conduct the examination," as to who is such nearest justice is a question for him as the court, and not one of fact for a jury.—Jackson v. State, 91 Wis. 253, 64 N. W. 838.

Courts in which required, see ante, §§ 19–24.

[a] (Ala. 1889) An act conferring jurisdiction to try misdemeanors on indictment, without a constitutional provision for a trial by jury, is void.—Collins v. State, 88 Ala. 212, 7 South. 260.

[b] (Iowa, 1859) Ordinance 1787, art. 2, does not secure to defendant the right to require a jury trial for all offenses in the first instance, and before all courts; the lesser offenses may be punished without a jury.—State v. Beneke, 9 Iowa, 203.

[c] (La. 1860) The act of March 17, 1859 (Sess. Acts, p. 168) providing for the punishment of a certain offense by a summary proceeding, pursuant to Const. 1852, art. 124, conferring on the recorder's court in New Orleans such criminal jurisdiction as may be necessary for the punishment of minor offenses, and as the police and good order of the city may require, does not contravene article 103, providing that prosecutions shall be by indictment or information, and guarantying accused the right of trial by jury, such provision having no application to the class of offenses which are to be tried summarily.—State v. Gutierrez, 15 La. Ann. 190.

[d] (Md. 1880) The constitutional provision, securing to the accused the right to a speedy trial by an impartial jury, must be understood to refer to prosecutions which, by regular course of law, had been the subject of jury trial, and does not prohibit the prosecution and trial of minor offenses without a jury.—In re Glenn, 54 Md. 572.

[e] (N. Y. 1855) Act April 9, 1855, § 5, requiring magistrates therein named to hold special sessions for the trial of offenses arising thereunder and to proceed to trial as soon as the complainant can be notified, is not violative of Const. art. 1, § 2, declaring that a trial by jury in all cases shall remain inviolate, since section 6, providing that no person shall be held to answer for any infamous crime unless on presentment or indictment of the grand jury, leaves the trial of all misdemeanor cases to be provided for by the legislature, by a jury, or without a jury.—People v. Fisher, 11 How. Prac. 554.

[f] (Tenn. 1824) Under Acts 1817, c. 132, § 6, making the failure of the clerk of the probate court to perform any of his official duties a misdemeanor for which he shall be removed from office by the court, a removal cannot be legally made except on his conviction of the misdemeanor, either by confession, or by the verdict of a jury, since by the term "misdemeanor" a criminal charge was intended to which he could not be compelled to answer, under Const. art. 11, § 14, except on presentment, indictment, or impeachment.—Sevier v. Justices of Washington County, 7 Tenn. (Peck) 334.

[b] (Ala. 1892) Acts 1876-77, p. 197, gives justices of the peace in Madison county concurrent final jurisdiction of all misdemeanors. 2 Code, § 4237, provides that, in all trials before a justice of the peace, he must determine both the law and the facts without a jury. Section 4239 provides that if accused does not demand a trial by jury the trial must proceed before the justice. Held, that where defendant, charged in Madison county with removing seed cotton between the hours of sunset and sunrise, which is made a misdemeanor by section 4141, did not demand a trial by jury, it was the duty of the justice to try the charge himself, instead of holding defendant to the circuit court, though sections 4255 et seq. provide generally for preliminary examinations before magistrates, and binding the accused over to the court having jurisdiction of the offense.—Ex parte Pruitt, 99 Ala. 225, 13 South. 317.

[d] (Mass. 1866) Gen. St. c. 116, § 14, conferring on police courts jurisdiction of larcenies where the property stolen does not exceed the value of $50, and giving that court power to impose a punishment by fine or by imprisonment in a house of correction, is not in violation of Declaration of Rights, § 12, providing that no man shall be arrested, imprisoned, or deprived of his life, liberty, or estate, but by the judgment of his peers, or the law of the land, as it does not empower the police court to impose an infamous punishment.—Lewis v. Robbins, 95 Mass. (13 Allen) 552.

[e] (Mo. 1832) Act 1831, providing that assaults shall not be punished by indictment, but must be punished in a summary way before justices of the peace, does not violate Const. art. 13, § 9, providing that the accused shall have the right to trial by an impartial jury.—State v. Ledford, 3 Mo. 102.

[f] (Mo. 1891) Act Gen. Assem. (Sess. Acts 1891, p. 159, § 1), providing that "every person who shall obtain board or lodging in any hotel * * * by means of any trick or deception, or false or fraudulent representation, * * * and shall fail or refuse to pay therefor, shall be held to have obtained the same with intent to cheat and defraud such hotel keeper, * * * and shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor," does not deprive accused of a right to jury trial, as guarantied by Const. art. 2, § 22.—State v. Kingsley, 108 Mo. 135, 18 S. W. 994.

[g] (N. Y. 1824) 2 Rev. Laws, pp. 507, 508, creating a special session of justices for the trial of petit larceny without a jury, is not repugnant to Const. art. 7, pars. 2-7, prescribing that trial by jury in capital or otherwise infamous crime shall remain inviolable.—Murphy v. People, 2 Cow. 815; Jackson v. Wood, Id. 819, note.

[h] (N. Y. 1857) The act providing that keepers of houses of ill fame may be punished summarily as disorderly persons is unconstitutional and void; the offense being indictable at common law, the accused having the right of trial by jury.—Warren v. People, 3 Parker, Cr. R. 544.

[i] (N. Y. 1880) Laws 1879, c. 390, provides that courts of special sessions shall, in addition to the powers now possessed by them, have exclusive jurisdiction in the first instance to hear and determine charges for petit larceny not charged as a second offense. Const. art. 6, § 26, as amended in 1869, provides that "courts of special sessions shall have such jurisdiction of offenses of the grade of misdemeanor as may be prescribed by law." Held, that the act of 1879 is not unconstitutional, as depriving one accused of petit larceny not constituting a second offense of the right of trial by jury, since such an offense is a misdemeanor.—Devine v. People, 20 Hun, 98; People v. Dutcher, Id. 241.

[j] (Ohio, 1883) Bill of Rights, art. 1, § 5, provides that the "right of trial by jury shall be inviolate." Section 10 provides that no person shall be allowed to answer to any criminal charge without indictment or presentment by the grand jury except in petit larceny and other inferior offenses, and that in any trial, in any court, the party accused will be allowed to appear and to defend in person and with counsel, and to have a speedy public trial by an impartial jury. Held, that a person charged with the offense of gaming, made a misdemeanor by Rev. St. § 6938, was entitled to a trial by jury.—Hoffner v. Village of Oberlin (D. C.) 9 Wkly. Law Bul. 239.

[k] (Va. 1814) In a prosecution for unlawful gaming the defendant is entitled to a trial by jury, although the penalty is only $20.—Commonwealth v. Horton, 1 Va. Cas. 335.

§ 147. Violation of license laws.

[a] (Cal. 1895) One charged with practicing medicine, without having procured a certificate, in violation of Act April 3, 1876, as amended, is entitled to a trial by jury.—Ex parte Wong You Ting, 106 Cal. 296, 39 Pac. 627.

[b] (N. J. 1880) A provision in the charter of Passaic directing prosecutions for the unlicensed sale of malt liquors to be held before any justice of the peace of Passaic county does not confer upon defendant the right of trial by jury.—State v. City of Passaic, 42 N. J. Law (13 Vroom) 87.

§ 148. Sunday laws.

Municipal ordinances, see post, § 153 [e].

[a] (Conn. 1838) A complaint for a breach of the Sabbath, exhibited by a tithingman to a justice of the peace, is not an information within Const. art. 1, § 9, and consequently the party accused is not, on the prosecution of such complaint before the justice, constitutionally entitled to a trial by jury.—Goddard v. State, 12 Conn. 448.

[b] (Pa. 1891) A defendant who is tried before a magistrate for keeping his barber shop open on Sunday is not entitled to a jury trial of the issue whether shaving is a work of necessity.—Commonwealth v. Waldman, 140 Pa. 89, 21 Atl. 248, 27 Wkly. Notes Cas. 333, 11 L. R. A. 563.

[c] (Va. 1889) The constitutional right of trial by jury does not extend to the petty offense of laboring on the Sabbath, punishable by a small fine, and cognizable by a justice.—Ex parte Marx, 86 Va. 40, 9 S. E. 475.

§ 149. Disorderly conduct and drunkenness.

Declaring certain persons to be common drunkards as infringement of right, see post, § 236 [g].

[a] (N. J. 1889) In a prosecution under Revision, p. 305, § 6, for the use of loud and indecent language on the streets of a town, the refusal of a trial by jury is proper, such right not being given by the act.—Bassette v. State, 51 N. J. Law (22 Vroom) 502, 18 Atl. 354.

[b] (N. Y. 1843) The statute authorizing a magistrate to convict one who abandons or neglects to provide for his wife as a disorderly person is constitutional, though no trial by jury is given.—Duffy v. People, 6 Hill, 75, affirming (1841) 1 Hill, 355.

[c] (N. Y. 1855) Act April 9, 1855, entitled "An act for the prevention of intemperance, pauperism, and crime," and making criminal acts which were before innocent, does not, by provision for trial by courts of special sessions, violate Const. art. 1, § 2, declaring that "the trial by jury, in all cases in which it has been heretofore used, shall remain inviolate forever."—People v. Fisher, 20 Barb. 652, 11 How. Prac. 554, 2 Parker, Cr. R. 402, overruled Wynehamer v. People (1856) 13 N. Y. (3 Kern.) 378.

§ 150. Disturbance of public assembly.

[a] (N. Y. 1881) Laws 1834, c. 78, allowing one arrested for disturbing a religious meeting to have a jury, as in courts of special sessions, is valid.—People v. Clark, 23 Hun, 374.

[b] (Ohio, 1884) Act Feb. 17, 1831, providing for the imposition of a fine on any one disturbing a religious society, without a trial by jury, and for the enforcement of such a fine by imprisonment, is not repugnant to Const. art. 10, § 5, providing that "the right of trial by jury shall be inviolate," as one accused of such offenses was not entitled to a jury trial prior to the adoption of the constitution.—Inwood v. State, 42 Ohio St. 186.

Prescribing weight of evidence as invading province of jury, see post, § 234 [f, i, o].

Procedure as infringing right, see post, § 216 [h].

Restrictions on right of appeal, see post, § 217.

[a] (La. 1860) Act March 17, 1859, for prevention and punishment of selling liquor to slaves, is not unconstitutional, as authorizing summary proceeding in recorder's court without a jury.—State v. Gutierres, 15 La. Ann. 190.

[b] (Miss. 1884) Under Const. art. 1, § 31, providing that "the legislature, in cases of * * * drunkenness, * * * and other misdemeanors of like character, may dispense with an inquest of a grand jury, and may authorize prosecutions before justices of the peace," an act authorizing prosecutions before a justice of the peace for the illegal sale of liquor was constitutional, though it provided for a trial "without the intervention of a jury."—Ex parte Wooten, 62 Miss. 174.

[c] (N. Y. 1877) A jury trial is a matter of right in prosecutions for unlawful sales of intoxicating liquor.—People v. Baird, 11 Hun, 289.

[d] (R. I. 1858) Rev. St. c. 73, prohibiting the sale, or keeping for sale, of liquors, is not in conflict with the clauses of the state constitution securing to accused persons the right of trial, because it makes an offense out of facts which do not at common law constitute an offense.—State v. Paul, 5 R. I. 185.

[e] (Vt. 1855) Bill of Rights, art. 10, respecting trial by jury, was not intended to apply to small offenses against the police regulations of the state, such as a prohibitory liquor law is.—State v. Conlin, 27 Vt. (1 Williams) 318; In re Dougherty, Id. 325.

§ 152. Application of constitutional and statutory provisions in general.

(Mo. 1887) City of Marshall v. Standard, 24 Mo. App. 192;

[b] Offenses against ordinances passed in the exercise of the express or implied powers vested in municipal corporations, and relating to acts not included in the criminal statutes of the state, are not "crimes" to which the constitutional provision for trial by jury refers.—(Ga. 1853) Floyd v. Eatonton's Com'rs, 14 Ga. 354, 58 Am. Dec. 559;

(La. 1883) City of Monroe v. Meuer, 35 La. Ann. 1192.

[c] (Cal. 1891) Where defendant is prosecuted under a city ordinance for an offense which is declared a misdemeanor by the city charter and Penal Code, he is entitled to a jury trial, under Pen. Code, § 1042, providing that issues of fact in criminal cases must be tried by a jury unless the right be waived in cases not amounting to felony.—Taylor v. Reynolds, 92 Cal. 573, 28 Pac. 688.

[d] (Colo. 1892) Violations of municipal ordinances constituted a class of offenses that were, in general, proceeded against summarily before the constitution was adopted, and the right of trial by jury in connection therewith does not now exist, even where the act constituting the local offense is also a public misdemeanor, under a statute.—McInerney v. City of Denver, 17 Colo. 302, 29 Pac. 516.

[e] (Fla. 1894) A city ordinance is not void because it does not provide for a trial by jury of an alleged violation thereof, as municipal cases were not triable by jury before the adoption of the constitution (Declaration of Rights, § 3), providing that "the right of trial by jury shall be secure to all, and remain inviolate forever."—Hunt v. City of Jacksonville, 34 Fla. 504, 16 South. 398, 43 Am. St. Rep. 214.

[f] (Kan. 1886) Const. § 10 (Bill of Rights), providing that "in all prosecutions the accused shall be allowed * * * to have * * * a speedy public trial, by an impartial jury," applies only to criminal prosecutions for violations of the laws of the state, and does not apply to prosecutions for violations of ordinary city ordinances, which have relation only to the local affairs of the city.—State v. City of Topeka, 36 Kan. 76, 12 Pac. 310, 59 Am. Rep. 529.

[g] (La. 1893) Violations of municipal ordinances constitute a class of offenses that are proceeded against summarily, and hence a trial by jury cannot be demanded.—State v. Fourcade, 45 La. Ann. 717, 13 South. 187, 40 Am. St. Rep. 249.

[h] (Minn. 1886) The legislature may, in establishing municipal courts, provide for the trial and hearing of complaints and causes involving merely the violation of municipal ordinances in a summary manner, without a jury, and, with respect to such prosecutions, the act establishing the municipal court of the city of Mankato (Sp. Laws 1885, c. 119) is constitutional.—City of Mankato v. Arnold, 36 Minn. 62, 30 N. W. 305.

[i] (Neb. 1889) The provision of a city charter, requiring the police judge of such city to hear prosecutions for violations thereof without a jury, is not in violation of the constitutional provision that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate," such prosecutions being of a quasi criminal nature, and for acts which are not made crimes by the criminal laws of the state, or are made offenses only for the better protection of the health and peace of the municipality in the exercise of its police power.—Leiberman v. State, 26 Neb. 464, 42 N. W. 419.

[j] (N. J. 1889) Certain acts which are indictable as offenses against the state may also be, by the legislature, constituted offenses against the police regulations of municipalities so as to subject the offender to the mode of trial incident to proceedings for the violation of ordinances. Where, in such cases, the legislature has not made special provision for a trial by jury, it cannot be demanded as matter of right.—State v. City of Trenton, 51 N. J. Law (22 Vroom) 498, 18 Atl. 116, 5 L. R. A. 352.

[k] (N. Y. 1879) In a prosecution before a police justice for violation of an ordinance prohibiting certain acts which are not offenses at common law, the accused is entitled to be tried by a jury, in the absence of any express provision in the charter as to the mode of trial.—People v. James, 16 Hun, 426.

[l] (N. Y. 1895) Code Cr. Proc. § 702, relative to proceedings before courts of special sessions and police courts, providing that, before the court hears any testimony, defendant may demand a jury, does not apply to cases for violation of village ordinances before police justices.—People v. Van Houten (Sess.) 13 Misc. Rep. 603, 35 N. Y. Supp. 186.

[m] (Or. 1886) The enforcement of a penalty for the violation of a city ordinance is not a criminal prosecution, within the meaning of the provision of the constitution on the subject of the right of trial by jury in criminal prosecutions, and it is not error in the police court to refuse a jury trial in such an action.—Wong v. City of Astoria, 13 Or. 538, 11 Pac. 295.

[n] (S. D. 1896) The charter of the city of Watertown (sections 25, 27), authorizing a police justice to try certain cases for violation of ordinance without a jury, and allowing an appeal in such cases only when imprisonment exceeding 10 days or a fine exceeding $20 is imposed, violates Const. art. 6, § 6, declaring and extending the right of trial by jury to all cases at law irrespective of the amount in controversy, and section 7, declaring the right to trial by an impartial jury in all criminal prosecutions.—Belatti v. Pierce, 8 S. D. 456, 66 N. W. 1088.

[o] (Tenn. 1869) Offenses under municipal ordinances, of a class which, before the adoption of the constitution, were usually considered triable in a summary manner, may be authorized to be so tried, notwithstanding constitutional provision that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate.—Trigally v. City of Memphis, 46 Tenn. (6 Cold.) 382.

[p] (Tex. 1856) Where power is given to a mayor, by an ordinance, to fine and imprison without a jury, the grant of such power is unconstitutional and void. The accused need not demand a jury to set aside a summary conviction; having merely excepted to the mayor's jurisdiction.—Smith v. City of San Antonio, 17 Tex. 643.

[a] (U. S. 1890) The breach of ordinance No. 478 of the city of New Orleans, prohibiting the keeping of a private market within six blocks of a public market, is an offense against municipal police regulations, which may be punished by summary proceedings before a magistrate without trial by jury.—Natal v. State, 139 U. S. 621, 11 Sup. Ct. 636, 35 L. Ed. 288, affirming State v. Natal (1887) 39 La. Ann. 439, 1 South. 923.

[b] (Iowa, 1879) Const. art. 1, § 9, provides that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate; and art. 1, §§ 10, 11, that in all criminal prosecutions, and in cases involving life or liberty, the accused shall have a right to a trial by jury, and that all offenses less than felony, and in which the punishment does not exceed a fine of $100 or imprisonment for 30 days, shall be tried summarily before a justice or other officer authorized by law. Code 1873, § 543, provides that police judges shall have the criminal jurisdiction of justices of the peace, and shall have jurisdiction of all violations of city ordinances; section 542, that city councils shall provide by ordinance for impaneling juries for the police courts; and section 4672, that in a criminal case before a justice defendant may demand a trial by jury. Held, that one who is arrested and brought before a police court for selling liquor in violation of a city ordinance is not entitled to a jury trial, and that the right to such a trial cannot be conferred by any ordinance.—Zelle v. McHenry, 51 Iowa, 572, 2 N. W. 264.

[c] (Kan. 1895) A prosecution in the police court under an ordinance prohibiting the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors, and the keeping of any place for conducting the sales of the same, is criminal in character, so as to entitle the defendant therein to a trial by jury.—In re Jahn, 55 Kan. 694, 41 Pac. 956.

[d] (La. 1894) One charged with carrying a concealed weapon, in violation of a city ordinance, is not entitled to a trial by jury.—Town of Opelousas Board of Police v. Giron, 46 La. Ann. 1364, 16 South. 190.

[e] (Minn. 1892) It is competent for the legislature, in establishing municipal courts, to provide for the trial of complaints and causes involving merely the violation of municipal ordinances, as for selling liquor on Sunday, in a summary manner without a jury; and Sp. Laws 1889, c. 34, § 7, relating to such summary proceedings, in the municipal court of Minneapolis, is valid.—State v. Harris, 50 Minn. 128, 52 N. W. 387; Same v. O'Brien, Id.; Same v. Jevne, Id.; Same v. Loomis, Id.; Same v. Wood, Id.; Same v. Brown, Id.; Same v. Gallagher, Id.; Same v. Lyons, Id.

[f] (Ohio, 1883) Rev. St. § 6938, provides, that whoever plays at any game whatever, for any sum of money or property of any value, shall be fined not more than $100, or imprisoned not more than 6 months nor less than 10 days, or both. An ordinance of the Village of Oberlin (section 4) provides "that, if any person shall play at any game whatever, for any money or any valuable thing, such person shall, on conviction thereof, be fined in any sum not less than $10, nor more than $50." Held, that such ordinance defined an offense substantially the same as mentioned in the statute; and the accused being entitled to a trial by jury of the offense described in the statute, he was likewise entitled to a trial by jury of the offense mentioned in the ordinance.—Hoffner v. Village of Oberlin (D. C.) 8 Ohio Dec. 710, 9 Wkly. Law Bul. 239.

[g] (Pa. 1889) In proceedings for the violation of a borough ordinance relating to corner lounging, the defendant is entitled to introduce evidence in his behalf, and the justice is constituted a judge to hear the case without the intervention of a jury, and determine upon all the evidence whether the defendant is liable to pay the fine imposed by the ordinance.—Commonwealth v. Lynch, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 536.

[h] (S. C. 1888) Under Const. art. 1, §§ 11, 13, 14, 19, which provide that the right of jury trial "shall remain inviolate"; that no law shall be enacted "subjecting any person to punishment without trial by jury"; that a person "accused of any crime or offense shall have a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury"; and that "all offenses less than felony, and in which the punishment does not exceed a fine of $100, or imprisonment for 30 days, shall be tried summarily before a justice of the peace or other officer authorized by law,"—an act authorizing the trial of a violation of a municipal ordinance against the sale of liquor, before the mayor without a jury, is valid.—City Council of Anderson v. O'Donnell, 29 S. C. 355, 7 S. E. 523, 13 Am. St. Rep. 728, 1 L. R. A. 632.

[i] (Tex. 1856) The charter of the town of La Grange provides that the mayor shall, in a summary way, try all offenses against the laws passed by the council, without a jury. The constitution provides that in all cases where judicial officers of inferior tribunals shall have jurisdiction in the trial of causes where the penalty is fine and imprisonment, the accused shall have the right of trial by jury. In this case the defendant was accused of assault and battery, and fined $30 by the mayor. Held, that said clause in the charter is unconstitutional and void.—Burns v. Town of La Grange, 17 Tex. 415.

§ 154. Right to demand jury in general.

[a] (Ind. 1837) In criminal cases, except petit misdemeanors, etc., the state, as well as the defendant, may insist on a trial by jury.—State v. Mead, 4 Blackf. 309, 30 Am. Dec. 661.

[b] (Mo. 1859) Where a case is properly triable by the court, it is not for the parties, as a matter of course, to require a jury.—Morris v. Morris, 28 Mo. 114.

[c] (Mo. 1863) A defendant in a St. Louis law commissioners' court can demand a jury of 12 persons.—Aka v. Anderson, 34 Mo. 74.

[d] (Mo. 1865) A party to an action in the circuit court is entitled to trial by a jury of 12 men, if he demands it.—Henning v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co., 35 Mo. 408.

[dd] (Mo. 1890) On exceptions by a landowner to the report of commissioners in proceedings to condemn a right of way for a railroad company, such owner is entitled to a trial by jury, under Const. art. 12, § 4, providing that the right of trial by jury shall be held inviolate in all trials of claims for compensation for land taken, when any incorporated company shall be interested for or against the exercise of the right to take such land, though the report of the commissioners has not been set aside for good cause shown, as provided by Rev. St. 1879, § 2738.—Kansas City, Ft. S. & S. E. Ry. Co. v. Cox, 41 Mo App. 499.

[e] (N. Y. 1820) Under Act April 10, 1818, extending the jurisdiction of justices of the peace, where the demand exceeds $25, either party has a right to demand that the jury should consist of 12; but he must make his demand for that purpose before the venire issues.—Strong v. Beardslee, 18 Johns. 130.

[f] (W. Va. 1891) When an order is made by the chancellor directing an issue of quantum damnificatus in a suit between the owner of property and an internal improvement company, the order should state that the issue is to be tried by a jury of 12 freeholders, if either party desires it, as the constitution guaranties such right.—Ward v. Ohio River R. Co., 35 W. Va. 481, 14 S. E. 142.

[b] (Ala. 1862) Where a party is liable on motion, if the defendant does not tender an issue and demand a jury trial, the court, on proof of the requisite facts, may render judgment for the plaintiff.—Andrews v. Keep, 38 Ala. 315.

[c] (Ala. 1874) When a claim filed against an insolvent estate is contested, if neither party demands a trial by jury (Rev. Code, § 2203), the court may try the contest without a jury.—Blankenship's Adm'r v. Nimmo's Adm'r, 50 Ala. 506.

[d] (Ala. 1894) The act amending the act creating the city court of Anniston (section 6), providing that questions of fact in civil actions shall be tried without a jury, unless one be demanded by the plaintiff at the commencement of the suit, or by defendant on his appearance, "by endorsing such demand in writing on the plea or demurrer or other pleadings," and providing the failure to demand a jury "as above directed" shall be deemed a waiver of the right to jury trial, is mandatory.—Ex parte Ansley, 107 Ala. 613, 18 South. 242.

[e] (Cal. 1890) The court proceeded with the trial of the case at the same time with another case against the same defendant, allowing the testimony, so far as applicable, to be used in both cases, though the witnesses were separately sworn, in each case. Defendant claimed that counsel who went to the court to demand a jury in this case, were thus prevented from doing so. Held, that the course pursued by the court was within its discretion, and, that as no demand for a jury and a continuance was made, it could not be said that defendant was injured thereby.—McGuire v. Drew, 83 Cal. 225, 23 Pac. 312; Towle v. Clunie, 23 Pac. 314.

[f] (Ind. 1837) If neither party require a jury, the cause may be tried without one, although the amount in controversy exceed $20.—Minton v. Moore, 4 Blackf. 315.

[g] (Iowa, 1861) Since Revision, c. 126, relating to summary proceedings in aid of execution, and providing for the imprisonment of a judgment debtor who disobeys any order of the court or judge relating to the application of his property to the payment of the debt, is unconstitutional, as depriving the judgment debtor of the right to trial by jury; that right is not waived by a failure to demand a jury, since the county judge before whom the examination is had has no power to impanel a jury.—Ex parte Grace, 12 Iowa, 208, 79 Am. Dec. 529.

[h] (Mass. 1878) After a railroad company has filed a discontinuance of its petition under Gen. St. c. 43, § 41, for a jury, and accepted the award of the commissioners assessing damages for taking land, etc., the respondent, not having applied for a jury, nor entered into a recognizance, under section 24, to pay costs, is not entitled to insist on a trial by jury.—Fall River R. Co. v. Chase, 125 Mass. 483.

[i] (Mich. 1879) Although Const. art. 6, § 27, provides that the right to a jury trial is to be deemed waived if not demanded in the manner prescribed by law, there is no waiver where no method is prescribed, or the conditions are such as to render execution of the provision impossible.—Odell v. Reynolds, 40 Mich. 21.

[j] (Minn. 1875) In an action before a justice, under Gen. St. c. 84, in regard to forcible entry and detainer, if defendant fails to call for a jury trial he will be deemed to have waived his right thereto.—Gibbens v. Thompson, 21 Minn. 398.

[k] (Mo. 1845) The statute authorizing courts to try issues of fact where neither party requires a jury applies only where both parties are present and are in a situation to make an election.—Sutton v. Clark, 9 Mo. 559.

[l] (Mo. 1886) Where, in an action for cancellation of deeds, and to vest title in plaintiff, the court, without a jury, has determined the issues of law, and fixed the damages and rents and profits, and no objection has been taken thereto at the trial, nor exception then saved, the defendants must be held to have waived a jury trial as to the law issues.—Pike v. Martindale, 91 Mo. 268, 1 S. W. 858.

[m] (Mo. 1890) The right to a trial by jury in condemnation proceedings, given by the constitution, is waived by a failure to demand it.—Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Randolph Town Site Co., 103 Mo. 451, 15 S. W. 437.

[n] (N. J. 1881) If a party goes to trial before a justice, without demanding a jury, under statutes which provide that, on appeal from the decision of the justice, the cause shall be heard and determined by the appellate court without a jury, he thereby waives any right to jury trial on appeal.—Wanser v. Atkinson, 43 N. J. Law (14 Vroom) 571.

[o] (N. Y. 1825) Under Act 1818, c. 94, § 41, on appeal from a justice of the peace, the court of common pleas need not try the case with a jury, where none is demanded.—Flower v. Allen, 5 Cow. 654.

[p] (N. Y. 1862) Where the evidence is nowise doubtful or contradictory, the judge, if not requested to submit any question to the jury, has a right himself to decide the case upon the evidence.—Wilklow v. Lane, 37 Barb. 244.

[q] (N. Y. 1888) A defendant in foreclosure who counterclaims money due and damages for breach of a contract, asking an affirmative judgment thereon, cannot demand a jury trial of the issues thus raised as of course, under Code Civ. Proc. § 974, providing that where defendant interposes a counterclaim, and thereon demands an affirmative judgment against the plaintiff, the mode of trial of an issue of fact arising thereon is the same as if it arose in an action brought by the defendant against the plaintiff for the cause of action stated in the counterclaim, and demanding the same judgment, since such case is within Code, § 970, which provides that where a party is entitled to a jury trial in an action not specified in section 968, he may apply on notice to the court for an order directing issues.—Mackellar v. Rogers, 109 N. Y. 468, 17 N. E. 350, affirming MacKellar v. Same (1885) 52 N. Y. Super. Ct. (20 Jones & S.) 468.

[s] (Ohio, 1866) Where the defendant in an action under Code, § 557, to determine an adverse estate or interest in land takes issue with the plaintiff, and claims in his answer that he is the legal owner and in possession of the land in dispute, and asks that his title thereto may be quieted, and suffers the cause to be tried by the court without objection, he thereby waives his right to demand a jury trial.—Ellithorpe v. Buck, 17 Ohio St. 72.

[t] (S. C. 1883) The legal right to a jury trial of an issue of title to land is not waived by a failure to demand a jury.—De Walt v. Kinard, 19 S. C. 286.

[u] (Tex. 1853) It is not error for the district court to try a case upon the record of the court of probate without a jury, if none is asked for.—Miller v. Miller, 10 Tex. 319.

[v] (Tex. 1878) Where neither party demands a jury, it is competent for the court to try and determine a question of damages.—Burnett v. Gunter, 1 White & W. Civ. Cas. Ct. App. § 664.

[w] (Tex. 1888) Where neither party demands a jury trial, it is the duty of the court to hear the evidence, and determine the facts as well as the law.—Brooks v. Pegg (Sup.) 8 S. W. 595.

§ 156. —— Criminal prosecutions.

[a] (Ala. 1823) A party who would avail himself of the privilege of a trial by jury must appear and claim it.—Armstrong v. State, Minor, 160.

[b] (N. J. 1877) The right to a jury trial is waived by defendants who were present at a trial before a police justice and permitted the case to be tried without intimating any desire for a jury.—State v. Mills, 39 N. J. Law (10 Vroom) 587.

[c] (N. Y. 1887) Code Cr. Proc. § 202, relating to proceedings in courts of special sessions, provides that before the evidence is heard defendant may demand a trial by jury, and section 701 that if defendant do not demand such trial the court must proceed to try the issue. Defendant pleaded not guilty, and on being asked by the court if he was ready for trial he replied that he was, and the court proceeded to try him forthwith, without objection on his part. Held, that this was a consent to be tried by the court.—People v. Cook, 45 Hun, 34.

[d] (Tex. 1856) The accused need not have demanded a jury to entitle him to have set aside a summary conviction before a mayor; he having merely excepted to the mayor's jurisdiction.—Smith v. City of San Antonio, 17 Tex. 643.

§ 157. Excuses for failure to make demand.

[a] (Mass. 1805) The docket showed that defendant duly filed a notice claiming a trial by jury, but the cause was placed on the "jury waived" list. Defendant's attorney searched for the notice, but, being unable to find it, concluded that his clerk had not filed it, and, without making a motion to transfer the case, proceeded to trial without a jury. After the trial, but before the findings of the court had been entered, the justice found the notice in the files, and called counsel's attention to it, and he then asked that the case be transferred to the jury list. Held, that the court properly refused to make the transfer.—Walcott v. O'Connor, 163 Mass. 21, 39 N. E. 345.

[b] (Tenn. 1879) Where a citizen of another state sues in Tennessee, appears by counsel, and fails to demand a trial by jury within the time required by Acts 1875, c. 4, a subsequent application for a trial by jury should not be granted on the ground that he was ignorant of the above provision.—Coulter v. Weed Sewing Mach. Co., 71 Tenn. (3 Lea) 115.

[c] (Tex. 1886) It is a sufficient excuse for not demanding a jury on the first day of the court that there was at that time no judge competent to receive the demand and enter the order.—Hays v. Hays, 66 Tex. 606, 1 S. W. 895.

[d] (Tex. 1893) It was error for the court to refuse defendants a jury trial on the ground that they had waived their right by failing to call for one when the appearance docket was called for orders, and that the demand came too late after a motion for a continuance had been overruled, it appearing that no jury was in attendance when the docket was called, and that such jury had been discharged because of failure to demand a jury trial.—Cook v. Cook, 5 Tex. Civ. App. 30, 23 S. W. 927.

§ 158. Notice of demand.

As infringement of right, see post, § 208.
Struck jury, see post, § 171 [g–i].

[a] (Cal. 1865) A jury trial is waived by a party, if he fails to file a notice six days before the commencement of the term that a jury will be required; but the court has a right, notwithstanding such waiver, to direct an issue of fact to be tried by a jury.—Doll v. Anderson, 27 Cal. 248.

[b] (Mass. 1882) By consent of counsel an answer was filed in which the right to file an amended one was reserved, but defendant afterwards gave plaintiff notice that he should not file one. Held, that the parties were then "at issue," within a statute requiring a party desiring a jury trial to file a notice to that effect within 10 days after the parties are "at issue," and that plaintiff, by not filing a notice within the time, had waived a trial by jury.—Bailey v. Joy, 132 Mass. 356.

[c] (Mass. 1892) Pub. St. c. 167, § 69, provides that, where a trial by jury is desired, notice thereof shall be filed "before the parties are at issue, or within such time thereafter as the court may direct." Super. Ct. Rule 22 provides that "the notice that a party desires a trial by jury, required by the statute, shall be filed not later than ten days after the filing of the answer or plea, unless the court shall restrict or extend the time." While a cause was on trial without a jury, defendant asked to amend his answer, and plaintiff claimed the right to a trial by jury on the allowance of the amendment. Held, that it was within the discretion of the court to allow the amendment without allowing plaintiff's demand for a jury.—Cleverly v. O'Connell, 156 Mass. 88, 30 N. E. 88.

[d] (Mass. 1894) After the death of plaintiff's intestate, answer was filed in an action brought by him, and his death suggested. A year later plaintiff was appointed his administratrix, and was admitted to prosecute the action. On the same day she was allowed to file a claim for jury trial. Held, that the claim was seasonably filed, since Pub. St. c. 167, § 69, provides for notice before the parties are at issue, and the parties were not at issue until the substitution of plaintiff.—McGivern v. Wilson, 160 Mass. 370, 35 N. E. 864.

[e] (N. Y. 1807) Where a prisoner on his arraignment suggests that he is an alien, and claims the privilege of a trial by jury de medietate linguæ, the court of oyer and terminer may order such jury to be summoned instanter, as 1 Laws, p. 377, relative to the venire and the eight days to be allowed for summoning them, applies only to jurors drawn out of the box by the county clerk as qualified jurors, and not to such a case.—People v. McLean, 2 Johns. 381.

[f] (N. Y. 1891) Laws 1891, c. 208, which permits motions under it to be made at any time, supersedes general rule of practice No. 31, providing that, in cases where the trial of issues of fact is not provided for by the Code, the party desiring a trial by jury "shall, within 10 days after issue joined, give notice of a special motion that the whole issue * * * be tried by a jury."—Eggers v. Manhattan Ry. Co. (Super. N. Y.) 18 N. Y. Supp. 181, 27 Abb. N. C. 468, 21 Civ. Proc. R. 403.

[g] (N. Y. 1894) Gen. Rule Prac. 31, providing that, in cases where the trial of issues of fact is not provided for by the Code, a party desiring jury trial shall, within 10 days after issue joined, give notice of a motion therefor, does not apply to issues on a counterclaim, since the motion in such case is provided for by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 970, 974.—Bradley & Currier Co. v. Herter (Super. N. Y.) 30 N. Y. Supp. 270, 23 Civ. Proc. R. 408.

[h] (Vt. 1825) Appellant may alter the issue from the court to the jury, without notice to the appellee.—Stanton v. Loyd, 1 Aikens, 35.

Special or struck jury, see post, § 171.

[a] (Ala. 1858) A failure to apply for a jury when a will is contested (Code, § 1634) is not a waiver of the right which will authorize the court to refuse it when demanded at the trial.—Stedham's Heirs v. Stedham's Ex'r, 32 Ala. 525.

[b] (Ind. 1872) Under 1 Gav. & H. St. p. 475, § 7, in a proceeding before a justice to condemn lands for a highway as well as on appeal, three viewers are to be appointed who are to be sworn as jurors to assess damages, and when such have been appointed without any objection from the owner of the land, and on appeal to the circuit court three other viewers were appointed, the owner only making a general objection to the appointment of viewers, and not claiming a jury of 12, it was held that, after a report by viewers appointed by the court on appeal, it was too late to demand a jury.—Beynon v. Brandywine, B. & S. C. Turnpike, 39 Ind. 129.

[c] (Iowa, 1880) Failure to object to the trial of a cause as an equitable action within the time prescribed by law is a waiver of the right to a trial by jury.—Gibbs v. Coonrod, 54 Iowa, 736, 7 N. W. 146.

[d] (La. 1838) Either party has a right to pray for a jury at any time before the cause is set for trial; and this right cannot be denied, though delay be evidently the object. Code Prac. arts. 494, 495.—Reynolds' Curator v. Mahle, 12 La. 424.

[e] (La. 1843) A prayer for a jury on a motion for a new trial of an appeal from the parish comes too late.—Bouquevalte v. Young, 5 Rob. 162.

[f] (La. 1866) A party is entitled to a trial by jury, who prays for it before the cause is set for trial.—Simpson v. Richardson, 18 La. Ann. 121.

[g] (La. 1874) The plaintiff, a judgment debtor of the defendant, issued execution and instituted garnishment process against the city, the latter being a judgment debtor of the defendant, by virtue of a judgment and decree of the United States circuit court. The plaintiff then moved that the city show cause why it should not be condemned and ordered to pay to the sheriff the amount of plaintiff's judgment, on the ground that it was shown by the answer that the city had sufficient funds to pay it. Held, that the city could not object that it was entitled to a trial by jury, in the absence of any application made before trial.—Foulhouze v. Gaines, 26 La. Ann. 84.

[h] (Md. 1866) An objection to the court's taking cognizance without a jury, and upon a motion to quash an attachment, of a claim of a third party, comes too late on appeal, when no such objection was raised below, and there was an agreement for its trial by the court.—Howard v. Oppenheimer, 25 Md. 350; Dean v. Same, Id. 368.

[i] (Mo. 1888) A demand by a landowner for a jury, after the report of commissioners in proceedings to condemn land for a railway has been filed, is in time if the owner has excepted to the report.—Kansas City, C. & S. R. Co. v. Story, 96 Mo. 611, 10 S. W. 203.

[j] (N. J. 1840) It is time enough to elect to have a trial by jury when the cause is ordered on for trial, on an appeal to the common pleas, if there is no rule to the contrary.—Field v. Ten Eyck, 18 N. J. Law (3 Har.) 195.

[k] (N. Y. 1857) In an action seeking to avoid a settlement of accounts alleged to have been obtained in fraud, and seeking an accounting in reference to transactions covering a period of eight years, the plaintiff moved, at special term, to settle the issues for trial by jury. Held, that the application should be denied; that it must be left to the court, on the trial of the cause, to determine the mode of trial.—Church v. Freeman, 16 How. Prac. 294.

[l] (N. Y. 1879) The claim under Laws 1869, p. 932, c. 410, for a jury of 12 may be made at any time before trial.—Power v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 7 Abb. N. C. 371.

[m] (N. Y. 1881) The right to a jury trial is lost by a failure to urge it before or at the trial.—Derham v. Lee, 60 How. Prac. 334.

[n] (N. Y. 1893) Where an adjudged lunatic has refused to avail himself of two opportunities given him to have the question of his sanity tried by a jury, his third application for a supersedeas of the commission on substantially the same affidavits as on his prior applications, again asking for a hearing before a jury, is properly denied.—In re Blewitt, 138 N. Y. 148, 33 N. E. 820.

[o] (N. Y. 1896) A right to try by jury the title to land devised by a will is not waived by failure of the devisee to demand a jury trial before the surrogate on an application for probate of the will.—Corley v. McElmeel, 149 N. Y. 228, 43 N. E. 628, affirming (1895) 87 Hun, 23, 33 N. Y. Supp. 862.

[p] (R. I. 1895) Judiciary Act, c. 26, § 1, provides that in all answered causes there shall be a decision of the court and a judgment. Chapter 19, § 17, provides that entries on the docket or papers are deemed to be a decision. Held, when the only entry on the papers is defendant's submission to judgment for a certain sum, and there is no entry of judgment, his application within two days for a jury trial should be granted.—Lavelle v. Kimball, 18 R. I. 786, 31 Atl. 166.

[q] (R. I. 1895) Right to claim jury trial in an action of account does not exist after the court has noted its decision on the report of the auditor.—White v. Eddy, 19 R. I. 108, 31 Atl. 823.

[r] (Tenn. 1841) The collector of county taxes against whom a motion is made for unpaid balances, under Act 1835, § 14, is entitled to a trial by jury, and the fact that the court had discharged the jury at the time the application was made is not good ground for refusal, as a continuance could be ordered.—Miller v. Moore, 21 Tenn. (2 Humph.) 421.

[s] (Tex. 1878) Under the present jury law, in cases filed before its passage, a jury must be demanded before the jury for the term is dismissed, even if not before the time fixed for calling the docket of jury cases.—Cushman v. Flanagan, 50 Tex. 389.

§ 160. —— Term at which demand must be made.

Effect of demand made at previous term, see post, § 169.

[a] (Iowa, 1879) A rule (1878) of the circuit court provides that no cause shall be tried before a jury unless entered upon the clerk's docket of causes to be tried by a jury, and if a cause is not upon such docket at any term when it is called for trial, a jury trial shall be deemed waived, unless the court continue the cause; but continuances must be transferred to the docket during vacation or on the first day of any term. Held, that a jury trial may be had by any party in a continued cause, when demand therefor is made on the first day of any term, though other terms may have intervened in which no jury trial was demanded.—Rogers v. Martin, 51 Iowa, 709, 2 N. W. 262.

[b] (N. H. 1885) Whether the questions are so complicated that a jury trial is impracticable must be determined at the trial term.—Dole v. Pike, 64 N. H. 22, 3 Atl. 743.

[c] (Tenn. 1890) Under Acts 1889, c. 220, § 1, which entitles any litigant to a jury trial, "provided he call for same on the first day of any term at which the suit stands for trial," a jury may be demanded in a suit appealed from a justice at the second term after the appeal is perfected, when the suit stands for trial at such term, though no jury was demanded at the first term.—Swink v. McKnight's Ex'rs, 88 Tenn. (4 Pickle) 765, 14 S. W. 311.

[d] (Tex. 1890) Though both parties fail to demand a jury on appearance day, it is not error to grant a jury trial at a subsequent term.—Noel v. Denman, 76 Tex. 306, 13 S. W. 318.

[e] (Tex. 1892) It is not error for a trial court to refuse to place a cause on the jury docket, and allow it to be tried by a jury, where the jury docket for the term has been disposed of before the demand for a jury is made, and two terms of the court had passed without such a demand.—Petri v. First Nat. Bank, 83 Tex. 424, 18 S. W. 752, 29 Am. St. Rep. 657.

§ 161. —— First day of term.

[a] (Tex. 1881) A party who does not, as required by Rev. St. Arts. 3060-3066, demand a jury trial on the first day of the term, is not afterwards entitled thereto, at least without showing a sufficient excuse for not making the demand in time.—McFaddin v. Preston, 54 Tex. 403.

[b] (Tex. 1892) There was no error in the trial court refusing to grant defendant's demand for a jury after the jury docket had been disposed of for the term, and the regular panel discharged; Sayles' Civ. St. §§ 3064, 3066, providing that a demand for a jury shall be made on the first day of the term.—Denton Lumber Co. v. First Nat. Bank (Sup.) 18 S. W. 962.

[c] (Tex. 1892) Sayles' Civ. St. art. 3061, provides that any party, desiring to have the suit tried by a jury, shall make application therefor on the first day of the term at which it is to be tried. Held, that where the court, at the first day of the term, orders that no cases on the jury docket shall be called at that term, an application for a jury trial, not made till the day on which a case is set for trial, is properly refused.—Petri v. Lincoln Nat. Bank, 84 Tex. 153, 19 S. W. 379.

[d] (Tex. 1894) Under Rev. St. art. 3061, providing that any party desiring a trial by jury shall make application therefor on the first day of the term, unless it be an appearance case, in which event the application shall be made on "default day," read in connection with articles 1280, as amended by Act April 13, 1891, and 1281, 1282, "default day" is "appearance day," which is the second day of the term.—Cruger v. McCracken (Civ. App.) 26 S. W. 282.

[e] (Tex. 1894) An application for trial by jury after the jury service for the term has ended, and the jury discharged, was properly denied, under Rev. St. art. 3061, providing that one desiring a jury trial "shall make application therefor in open court on the first day of the term of the court at which the suit is to to be tried."—Barton v. American Nat. Bank, 8 Tex. Civ. App. 223, 29 S. W. 210.

[f] (Wis. 1886) Rev. St. § 2477, which provides that, if a jury shall not be demanded when the action shall be "called for trial," a jury trial shall be waived, does not require a jury to be demanded at the usual call of the docket on the first day of the term.—State v. Clark, 67 Wis. 229, 30 N. W. 122.

§ 162. —— After continuance or adjournment.

[a] (N. Y. 1823) An assistant justice is bound to issue a venire, if demanded, on the same day on which an adjournment is made, after issue, and before proceeding to inquire into the merits of the cause. An adjournment is not a proceeding to inquire into the merits.—Bayless v. Crany, 1 Cow. 86.

[b] (N. Y. 1855) Issue having been joined upon a return of the summons, a demand for a jury in the marine court, made after the appearance of the parties on an adjourned day for trial, is too late.—Dempsey v. Paige, 4 E. D. Smith, 218.

[c] (N. Y. 1856) Under Sess. Laws 1840, p. 123, providing that, in the absence of a justice of the district court on the return day, the clerk may adjourn a cause, where the clerk so adjourns it, the demand for a jury must be made on the adjourned day upon joining issue before the justice.—Meech v. Brown, 1 Hilt. 257, 4 Abb. Prac. 19.

[d] (N. Y. 1857) After issue has been joined in the district court, and the trial adjourned, it is too late on the day of trial to demand a jury. —Mason v. Campbell, 1 Hilt. 291.

§ 163. —— After setting for trial by court.

[a] (La.) An application for a jury comes too late after the cause is fixed or called for trial. Code Prac. arts. 494, 495.—(1837) Morgan v. Police Jury of Pointe Coupee, 11 La. 157; (1842) Menefee v. Johnson, 2 Rob. 274.

[b] (La. 1847) A prayer for a trial by jury is not too late, though made after the case has been set for trial and continued, if it be not actually fixed for trial at the time of the prayer. —Louisiana State Bank v. Duplessis, 2 La. Ann. 651.

[c] (La. 1849) After a case has been set down for trial, it is too late for one of the parties to file an application for trial by jury.—Wood v. Lyle, 4 La. Ann. 145.

[d] (La. 1876) In district courts it is the settled practice to refuse application for a jury after the case has been once fixed, and continued by preference: the case having been set down for trial, the application for a jury is too late. —Wheeless v. Fisk, 28 La. Ann. 731.

[e] (La. 1882) Although a case has already been fixed for trial, an application for a jury is in time, if, at the moment it is made, the case does not stand fixed for trial.—Gallagher v. Hebrew Congregation of Baton Rouge, 34 La. Ann. 526.

§ 163½. —— After commencement of trial.

[a] (La. 1846) A court may, at the instance of a party, order a case to be tried before a jury, even after the trial had been commenced before the court alone.—Hoffman v. Western Marine & Fire Ins. Co., 1 La. Ann. 216.

[b] (Md. 1887) The garnishee and claimant in an attachment suit, who has elected to try his case upon motion to quash before the court, may, even after the evidence has been partly taken, dismiss his motion, and, by filing a plea, have the same question tried before a jury.—Ferrall v. Farnen, 67 Md. 76, 8 Atl. 819.

[c] (N. J. 1818) By statute, the court for the trial of small causes cannot, after the cause is in part tried, award a venire, and proceed to try it by jury.—Tilton v. Brand, 4 N. J. Law (1 Southard) 289.

[d] (N. Y. 1806) The mere inspecting of the note on which the action is founded by the court is not such a commencement of the trial as to preclude a party from demanding a jury, as provided by statute in cases before justices of the peace.—Olney v. Bacon, 1 Johns. 142.

[e] (N. Y. 1823) Where, after both parties have avowed themselves ready, the justice tells the plaintiff to go on, and the defendant admits a part of the plaintiff's account, and a witness for the plaintiff is partly sworn, it is too late for the defendant to demand a venire.—Gale v. Barnes, 1 Cow. 235.

[f] (N. Y. 1867) To wait until the trial is entered upon before making an application for a jury trial is a waiver.—McKeon v. See, 27 N. Y. Super. Ct. (4 Rob.) 449.

[g] (N. Y. 1894) Where defendant goes to trial before the special term without objecting to the power of the court, and proceeds with the trial to its close, submitting requests to find, a claim, made for the first time in such requests, that he was entitled to a trial by jury, is too late.—Rogers v. Straub, 75 Hun, 264, 26 N. Y. Supp. 1066.

[h] (S. C. 1886) A demand for a jury in a trial justice's court should properly be made before the trial has commenced; and it is not error to refuse such a demand made after the state has closed its case.—State v. Mays, 24 S. C. 190.

[i] (S. D. 1896) A request by defendant for a trial by jury, made after plaintiff has closed his evidence,—the parties having noted the case for trial by the court,—comes too late.—Webster v. White, 8 S. D. 479, 66 N. W. 1145.

[j] (Tenn. 1896) Under Acts 1889, c. 220 (enacting that a party desiring a jury trial shall be entitled thereto if he calls for the same on the first day of the term), if the case is called for trial on the first day of the term, neither party, after announcement of ready for trial, without demand for jury, can demand a jury trial.—McGuire v. North Carolina & St. L. Ry., 95 Tenn. (11 Pickle) 707, 33 S. W. 724.

§ 164. —— Particular issues.

[a] (Md. 1883) An application by the complainant, in a bill in equity, for issues to be framed and sent to a court of law for trial by jury, comes too late, after an answer to the bill has been filed and the testimony is all in.—Chase v. Winans, 59 Md. 475.

[b] (Mass. 1876) Generally, a motion for a trial by jury on issues of fact is made too late after the coming in of the master's report.—Atlanta Mills v. Mason, 120 Mass. 244.

[c] (Mass. 1883) In an action for the breach of the condition of a bond, if a trial by jury is not claimed, as provided by Pub. St. c. 167, § 69, it is too late, after a finding by the court that the condition is broken, to move to have the damages assessed by a jury.—Vitrified Wheel & Emery Co. v. Edwards, 135 Mass. 591.

[d] (N. H. 1864) If either party desires a jury trial, the motion for issues should be made before the appointment of an auditor.—Patrick v. Cowles, 45 N. H. 553.

[e] (N. Y. 1874) In an action brought by the attorney general to determine which one, if either, of two boards of railroad directors is entitled to office, and to have a new election ordered if neither was elected, an application for a jury to try issues of fact, made after the attorney general had rested, is not made too late.—People v. Albany & S. R. Co., 57 N. Y. 161.

[f] (N. Y. 1891) A motion, under Code Civ. Proc. § 970, for the submission of issues to a jury for the determination of the amount of damages, in an action to enjoin the construction of an elevated railroad, will not be denied on the ground that it is premature, because the question as to the amount of damages may not, for some reason, be reached.—Eggers v. Manhattan Ry. Co. (Super. N. Y.) 18 N. Y. Supp. 181, 27 Abb. N. C. 463, 21 Civ. Proc. R. 403.

[g] (Pa. 1851) After the court in an election contest have heard several hundred witnesses, including all the testimony on one side and nearly all that on another, a motion will not be entertained to frame an issue for a jury.—In re Contested Election of District Attorney, 1 Phila. 159, 8 Leg. Int. 39; In re Kneass, 2 Pars. Eq. Cas. 553.

[i] (Pa. 1891) An auditor's refusal to award an issue in a case tried before him is not error where the demand for the issue was not made until the case had been before him for two years, and a large amount of testimony taken, and some days after the parties had been notified by the auditor that his report was ready for filing.—Second Nat. Bank v. Lackawanna & S. Coal & Iron Co., 140 Pa. 628, 21 Atl. 412; Appeal of Jenkins, Id.

[j] (S. C. 1818) Where a bond is given for performance of covenants, after judgment by default, execution issued, and levy and sale, it is too late for the defendant to avail himself of the privilege given in the act of 1792 to compel the plaintiff to submit the condition of the bond and the special matter to a jury.—Durkey v. Hammond, 2 Mill, Const. 151.

§ 165. —— In actions before justices of the peace.

[a] (Iowa, 1884) Code 1873, § 3537, provides that in actions before a justice, "unless one of the parties demand a trial by jury at or before the time for joining issue, the trial shall be by the justice." In an action before a justice the notice was made returnable at 9 o'clock a. m. Within 15 minutes thereafter defendant filed answer. The trial was postponed until after 10 o'clock to wait for one of plaintiff's attorneys, and at 10 minutes after 10, and before trial had commenced, plaintiff demanded a jury trial. By the provisions of section 3525 plaintiff is not required to appear or give any attention to the answer until 10 o'clock. Held, that the demand was in time, plaintiff being entitled to a reasonable time after 10 o'clock within which to make it.—Hall v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 65 Iowa, 258, 21 N. W. 596.

[b] (Ohio, 1880) Rev. St. § 6607, provides that "if the suit be not continued, place of trial changed, or either party demands a jury upon the return day of the summons, the justice shall try the cause." Section 6547 provides that "in all civil actions," after defendant's appearance, and before proceeding to inquire into the merits, either party may demand a jury. Held, that forcible entry and detainer is a civil action within the meaning of section 6547; section 6607 must be read as if the comma after the word "summons" was placed after the word "jury," and it was error for a justice of the peace to refuse a demand for a jury on the trial day, though it was some days after the return day.—Hill v. Hollister (Com. Pl.) 8 Ohio Dec. 116, 5 Wkly. Law Bul. 757.

[c] (Ohio, 1883) In an action of forcible detainer defendant may demand a jury on the appearance day, though it was subsequent to the return day of the summons.—Bonham v. Mills, 39 Ohio St. 534.

§ 166. Form and sufficiency of demand.

Special jury, see post, § 171 [d].

[a] (Ill. 1889) Where the petitioner in condemnation proceedings voluntarily appears before a judge, and offers testimony on the question of title, without objecting to the mode of procedure, an exception to the decree only raises the question of the sufficiency of the evidence, and does not avoid the waiver of jury trial caused by the voluntary introduction of testimony.—Chicago, S. F. & C. Ry. Co. v. Ward, 128 Ill. 349, 18 N. E. 828.

[b] (Ind. 1881) A bastardy case, being governed by the rules regulating the trial of ordinary civil actions, must be tried by a jury if one be properly demanded by either party; and defendant, though not personally present, may appear by attorney, and demand a trial by jury.—Alley v. State, 76 Ind. 94.

[c] (Ind. 1893) A demand for a jury trial on all the issues joined in an action was properly refused as to all the issues where some of them were only triable by the court, since a motion must include only such relief as the party making it is entitled to.—Peden v. Cavins, 134 Ind. 494, 34 N. E. 7, 39 Am. St. Rep. 276.

[d] (Iowa, 1890) In an action to recover an amount claimed to be due under a contract dissolving a partnership, and for certain items alleged to have been omitted from the settlement of the partnership through fraud, accident, or mistake, a motion was made by defendant to transfer the cause from the equity to the law docket, but was not ruled upon until the final decision of the case, when it was overruled. It did not appear that the motion was ever called to the court's attention until after the trial, nor that defendant made any objection to proceeding to try the case in the manner in which it was tried. Each party asked an accounting as to many items omitted through fraud or mistake. Held, the motion was properly overruled.—Donahue v. McCosh, 81 Iowa, 206, 46 N. W. 1008.

[e] (La. 1851) Where, after the death of a curator ad hoc who had prayed for a jury, another is appointed, but the minutes do not show his acceptance or who was present at the trial by the court, the case will be remanded; defendant could not, without his consent, be deprived of his right to a jury.—Fellows v. Reid, 6 La. Ann. 724.

[f] (Minn.) Where part of the issues are triable by a jury and part by the court, a demand for a jury trial of the whole action is properly denied.—(1883) Greenleaf v. Egan, 30 Minn. 316, 15 N. W. 254; (1885) Chadbourne v. Zilsdorf, 34 Minn. 43, 24 N. W. 308; (1888) Lace v. Fixen, 39 Minn. 46, 38 N. W. 762.

[g] (N. J. 1873) A demand for trial by jury should be made to the court, and not by mere entry in the minutes.—Halsey v. Paulison, 36 N. J. Law (7 Vroom) 406.

[h] (N. Y. 1852) This court will not reverse a judgment of a district court, for the refusal of the justice to order a jury, where the defendant makes such a demand in the absence of the plaintiff, and subsequently goes to trial without objection and without the plaintiff being apprised of what had taken place, and where the defendant, after a trial upon the merits, raises this objection for the first time in the plaintiff's hearing, on the appeal.—Shannon v. Kennedy, 1 E. D. Smith, 346.

[i] (N. Y. 1857) A justice has the right to allow a defendant to appear and answer in the plaintiff's absence, before proof taken, and that appearance carries with it all the usual incidents of an appearance as the right to demand a jury.—Mead v. Darragh, 1 Hilt. 395.

[j] (N. Y. 1894) A recital in the record of an action that "defendant renewed the motion to send this case to the circuit" does not show that he asked for a trial by jury, in the absence of any other showing as to a request for a jury, or that the case be sent to circuit.—Hartman v. Manhattan Ry. Co., 82 Hun, 531, 31 N. Y. Supp. 498.

[k] (N. C. 1895) Where, against defendant's objection, the issues were sent to a referee for trial, and the referee filed 14 findings of fact, some of which related to questions of fact not in issue under the pleadings, and defendant filed exceptions to the findings, a demand at the end of his exceptions for a jury trial on all the issues raised thereby was too general to entitle him to such a trial.—Keystone Driller Co. v. Worth, 117 N. C. 515, 23 S. E. 427.

[l] (N. C. 1896) Where an exception to a referee's report reserving a jury trial fails to specifically demand it on an issue of fact raised by the pleadings and passed on by the referee in the finding excepted to, and to specify the precise issue on which testimony will be offered, the right to jury trial will be forfeited.—Taylor v. Smith, 118 N. C. 127, 24 S. E. 792.

[m] (Pa. 1858) To secure a trial by jury on an issue in the orphans' court, it must be shown by evidence that there exists in regard to the claim involved some disputed fact, for the determination of which the intervention of a jury is necessary.—In re Beehler's Estate, 3 Phila. 254.

[n] (Tex. 1886) Rev. St. arts. 3064–3066, providing that a party desiring a trial by jury must make application therefor, accompanying such application with a jury fee, on the first day of the term of the court, or on the appearance day, if the case be an appearance, must be strictly complied with, or a jury trial will be denied.—Fields v. Crescent Ins. Co., 3 Willson, Civ. Cas. Ct. App. § 125.

§ 167. —— Allegations in or indorsement on pleadings or other papers.

[a] (Ala. 1890) Acts 1888–89, pp. 316–323, establishing the city court of Decatur, which provide that a plaintiff in a civil action, who wishes a jury trial, must demand the same "at the commencement of the action" by indorsing such demand in writing on the summons or complaint, are sufficiently complied with on appeal from a justice's court to the city court, by a plaintiff who indorses a demand for a jury on the complaint filed by him in the city court before any trial could possibly have taken place under the rules and practice of that court.—Nixon v. Killain, 90 Ala. 484, 7 South. 761.

[b] (La. 1811) Defendant sued on a promissory note, though he have not indorsed the word "defense" on his answer, is entitled to a jury if he pray for it.—Kelly v. Barbin, 2 Mart. (O. S.) 47.

[c] (La.) A jury may be prayed for in a supplemental answer, but its allowance rests in the court's discretion, and will be refused where it would delay the trial a whole term; the jurors summoned for the term having been discharged.—(1827) Davis' Heirs v. Prevost, 6 Mart. (N. S.) 265; (1828) Green v. Boudurant, 7 Mart. (N. S.) 229; (1841) Hooper v. Hyams, 1 Rob. 90.

[d] (La. 1842) One of two debtors in solido cannot avail himself of the other's prayer for a jury.—Smith v. Scott, 3 Rob. 258; Mulhollan v. Henderson, Id. 297.

[e] (La. 1871) The intrusion act (Act No. 156 of 1868) accords to defendant, in a contest thereunder for the right to an office, the right of trial by jury, if a jury is asked for in the answer to the suit. Held, that defendant, who was allowed to file an answer in which he asked for a jury, was entitled thereto, though he had previously filed an exception in which he did not claim such right, which was subsequently decided to be substantially an answer.—State v. Gilmore, 23 La. Ann. 606.

[f] (Pa. 1895) Under the court rule providing that if respondent in a divorce case desires a trial by jury he must make his demand in his answer, where the answer is filed without request for a jury, and plaintiff is present with counsel and witnesses before a commissioner at the time fixed for hearing, defendant is not entitled to a jury trial.—Johnson v. Johnson (Com. Pl.) 16 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 427, 4 Pa. Dist. R. 460.

[g] (Tenn. 1883) Under Acts 1875, c. 4, when a suit is originally instituted in a court of record, the party demanding a jury must do so in his first pleading, or will be deemed to have waived a jury.—Franklin v. McCorkle, 79 Tenn. (11 Lea) 190.

[h] (Tenn. 1886) Under the act of February 19, 1875, which provides that, when a suit is originally instituted in a court of record, the party demanding a jury shall do so in his first pleading, and in case of all other suits within the first three days of the trial term, or he shall be deemed to have agreed to try the case without a jury; no demand of the clerk, nor mere notice to him that a jury is demanded, nor entry by him upon a rule docket or other docket, at the instance of one of the parties to a suit, is sufficient, but the demand should be made of the court.—East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Martin, 85 Tenn. (1 Pickle) 134, 2 S. W. 381.

[i] (Tenn. 1887) The act of 1875 (Mill. & V. Code, § 3602), providing that "either party desiring a jury must make the demand in his first pleading tendering an issue triable by jury," etc., applies to pleadings alike at common law and under the Code, and requires a party, in terms, to make the demand, if he desires the issue tendered to be tried by a jury. A conclusion to the plea, "and of this he puts himself upon the country," is not equivalent to such demand.—Gleaves v. Davidson, 85 Tenn. (1 Pickle) 380, 3 S. W. 348.

[j] (Tenn. 1890) A jury trial having been asked for under Laws 1875, c. 4, providing that it shall be demanded in the first pleading tendering an issue triable by jury, a demand need not be made under the act of April, 1889, providing that either party shall be entitled to a jury if he calls for it on the first day of the trial term, and that unless such demand is made the case shall be tried without a jury.—Arlington Ins. Co. v. Caldwell, 88 Tenn. (4 Pickle) 758, 14 S. W. 221.

§ 168. —— Verification of pleading or affidavit of defense.

As infringement of right, see post, § 209.

[a] (La.) Defendant's affidavit for a jury, under Act March 20, 1839, No. 53, § 24, must show that his defense is certain and unequivocal and will affect plaintiff's right to recover.—(1840) Amado v. Breda, 16 La. 257; (1842) Smith v. Scott, 3 Rob. 258.

[b] (La.) The maker of a promissory note, to obtain a jury, must make affidavit as required by Act 1839, No. 53, § 24.—(1844) Kennard v. Gustine, 9 Rob. 170; (1846) Hennen v. Bourgeat, 12 Rob. 522.

[c] (La. 1855) Defendant who, sued on a note, does not set up want or failure of consideration, supported by affidavit as required by the act of 1839, is not entitled to a jury.—Foster v. Levinson, 10 La. Ann. 584.

[d] (La. 1860) It is sufficient for a party who is sued on a promissory note to obtain a trial by jury to swear that all the allegations in his answer are true, where want or failure of consideration are substantially set forth in the answer.—Frellson v. McDonald, 15 La. Ann. 536.

[e] (La. 1866) To entitle a defendant who is sued upon a promissory note to the right of trial by jury, he must swear to the truth of the allegations in his pleas of want of consideration.—Letten v. Durbridge, 18 La. Ann. 129.

[f] (La. 1866) In a suit brought on a contract of lease (an unconditional obligation to pay a specific sum of money), the defendant, in order to obtain a trial by jury, must make oath to the truth of the allegations of the answer.—Gallot v. McCluskey, 18 La. Ann. 259.

[g] (La. 1866) An affidavit by the defendant in an action on a promissory note stated that the facts set forth in the answer were true, to the best of the affiant's knowledge and belief, and that he believed it essential to his rights that the case should be tried by a jury. Held, that the affidavit was insufficient to entitle the defendant to a trial by jury, as he did not swear that he expected to prove that the note had been obtained through error.—Williams v. Boozeman, 18 La. Ann. 532.

[h] (La. 1885) Under Code Prac. art. 494, providing that suits brought on unconditional obligations to pay money shall be tried without a jury unless the defendant pleads want of consideration, or sets up a reconventional demand and makes oath to the truth of the allegations of his defense, in the absence of such oath to the averments of a defense, the case is properly stricken from the jury docket, and passed upon by the court itself.—Meyer v. Weil, 37 La. Ann. 160.

[i] (Pa. 1887) As, to entitle a party to demand a jury trial in a divorce proceeding, there must, under the act of assembly, be "a matter of fact affirmed by the one, and denied by the other," of the parties, a denial which is not under oath, and without evidence to support it, is not a denial, within the meaning of the act.—Uhrich v. Uhrich, 3 Del. Co. R. 281.

[j] (Pa. 1888) Under Act March 13, 1815, § 2 (Purd. Dig. p. 614), requiring an issue to be formed and tried to a jury, where either of the parties shall desire any matter of fact affirmed by one and denied by the other party tried by a jury, a prayer for an issue in divorce will not be granted to respondent, unless the answer contains a specific and absolute denial of the cause of the complaint set forth in the libel.—Cain v. Cain, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 366.

§ 169. Effect of demand made at previous trial or term of court.

Term at which demand must be made, see ante, § 160.

[a] (Iowa, 1877) A demand for a jury trial at a former term of court, when the case was continued, will be deemed waived by the party's failure to again demand a jury at the time of trial.—Davidson v. Wright, 46 Iowa, 383.

[b] (La. 1812) A party, who has prayed for a jury below, is entitled to one without praying for it in the appellate court, before which the case is tried de novo. Where a party is without laches, his application for the trial of a matter of fact by jury should always be favored.—Bayon v. Rivet, 2 Mart. (O. S.) 148.

[c] (N. J. 1887) The justice's court act, § 33, provides that either party in any action, after the defendant has pleaded, and before the justice has begun to inquire into the merits of the action, may demand a jury. Section 41 provides that, if the jury disagree, other writs of venire may issue in the cause until a verdict is obtained. In an action where the jury disagreed, neither party asked for a new jury. The justice proceeded to try the case. Held, that the failure to call for a new jury was a waiver of the right to it, and the justice had power to proceed in due course to trial and judgment.—White v. Hathaway, 50 N. J. Law (21 Vroom) 119, 11 Atl. 343.

[d] (N. Y. 1896) An action for specific performance of a contract to mortgage certain land, and to enjoin defendants from doing certain acts prejudicial to plaintiff's rights under the contract, was, on failure of the trial court to retain the action for the purpose of awarding damages for breach of the contract (a decree for specific performance being unavailing, for want of title in defendants), sent back to the trial court. The complaint alleged that defendants had, by fraud, included in the mortgage other property than that agreed to be mortgaged. The answer denied the fraud, but did not set up an inability to perform, alleging, on the contrary, a full compliance with the contract. Held, that it was proper, on the second trial, to refuse a trial by jury, demanded by defendants before their inability to perform was disclosed.—O'Beirne v. Bullis (Sup.) 38 N. Y. Supp. 4.

[e] (N. C. 1879) Where, after the issues are framed, but before any evidence is adduced, the jury is discharged without verdict, the parties stand as before the jury were sworn, and the judge cannot pass upon the issues, except on a waiver of jury trial, under Code, § 240.—Chasteen v. Martin, 81 N. C. 51.

[f] (Tex. 1894) The court may try a case without a jury, unless one is demanded and the jury fee paid; and the mere fact that a former trial, before another judge and in another venue, was by jury, will not entitle a party to a jury on the second trial.—Ellis v. Bonner, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 539, 27 S. W. 687.

§ 170. Effect of previous trial by court.

[a] (Miss. 1849) Where the decree of a probate court is upon an issue which that court had the right to try only by consent of parties, and which peculiarly requires the finding of a jury, it seems that on a rehearing either party may insist upon a trial by jury.—Ratcliff v. Ratcliff, 20 Miss. (12 Smedes & M.) 134.

[b] (N. Y. 1860) Where an action is tried by the judge without a jury, and the case is finally submitted for determination, an order thereafter made directing certain questions in relation to which testimony was conflicting to be tried by jury is erroneous.—O'Brien v. Bowes, 17 N. Y. Super. Ct. (4 Bosw.) 657.

[c] (N. Y. 1896) Under Consolidation Act, § 1372, as amended by Laws 1891, c. 378, providing that the justice may, at any stage, direct a trial by jury, where a judgment of a justice has been reversed he may order a jury for the second trial.—New York Small Stock Co. v. Third Ave. R. Co., 16 Misc. Rep. 64, 37 N. Y. Supp. 637.

Waiver of right see post, § 191.
—— to object to trial by struck jury, see post, § 172 [o].

[a] (Ala. 1858) Code, § 2264, does not require the court to be active in assigning a struck jury. It is only when one of the parties makes the necessary demand that the court is required to order it, and that must be made before the organization of the jury is entered on.—McArthur v. Carrie's Adm'r, 32 Ala. 75, 70 Am. Dec. 529.

[b] (Ala. 1895) After the parties have announced themselves ready for trial, and a jury has been impaneled and accepted by plaintiff, defendant is not entitled, as a matter of right, to demand a struck jury.—Goodson v. Brothers, 111 Ala. 589, 20 South. 443.

[c] (Ind. 1894) A party who has demanded a struck jury, and who, in pursuance of a notice from the clerk, appears before him, for the purpose of striking the jury, cannot, after examining the list of jurors, withdraw his demand, and insist on a trial by the regular panel.—Dorsey Mach. Co. v. McCaffrey, 139 Ind. 545, 38 N. E. 208, 47 Am. St. Rep. 290.

[d] (La. 1876) A supplemental petition calling for a special jury, will not be entertained, if filed after issue joined and after the case has been set down for trial on the summary docket.—State ex rel. Attorney General v. Carey, 28 La. Ann. 49.

[e] (Minn. 1876) Under Gen. St. c. 71, § 16, which provides, with respect to struck juries, that "in no case shall it be necessary to strike such jury more than six days previous to the term of the court at which the action * * * is to be tried," proceedings to obtain a struck jury must be instituted before the commencement of the term at which it is tried.—O'Brien v. City of Minneapolis, 22 Minn. 378.

[f] (Minn. 1884) The provision of Laws 1881, c. 45, § 1, that in Hennepin county petit jurors shall be summoned to appear on the second Tuesday of each general term of the district court, does not change or amend the previous statute requiring struck juries to be selected six days before the commencement of the term of court, though it may have removed one of the reasons for such requirement as to that county.—Mark v. St. Paul, M. & M. Ry. Co., 32 Minn. 208, 20 N. W. 131.

[g] (N. J. 1843) Where the plaintiff applies for a struck jury, no notice of the application need be given to the defendant, unless the latter have a rule by proviso, in which case two days' notice of the intended application must be given.—Fuller v. Saxton, 20 N. J. Law (Spencer) 61.

[h] (N. J. 1843) The defendant, unless he have a rule by proviso, cannot enter a rule for a struck jury without giving two days' notice to the plaintiff.—Fuller v. Saxton, 20 N. J. Law (Spencer) 61.

[i] (N. Y. 1796) After notice of a motion for a struck jury, it is irregular for a party to proceed to trial.—Franklin v. Nore, Colem. Cas. 46.

[j] (Ohio, 1859) Where the record showed that the grand jury were impaneled only on the twelfth day of the trial term, and that the right to a struck jury, given by Swan's Rev. St. § 492, as matter of right, was formally demanded on the day of trial, and it did not appear how long before that day the indictment was found, it was a fatal error to refuse the demand on the ground of waiver of the right by unreasonable delay in demanding it.—Whitehead v. State, 10 Ohio St. 449.

[k] (Ohio, 1859) The right to demand a struck jury, given to either a prisoner or the state by Swan's Rev. St. 492, in all criminal cases, except when either party is entitled to more than two peremptory challenges, is waived by failure to claim it before the day of trial, unless excused by special circumstances.—Whitehead v. State, 10 Ohio St. 449.

[l] (Pa. 1808) The time for applying for a special jury is not limited. To entitle a party to a special jury, no certificate of counsel is necessary that the motion is not intended for delay.—Neff's Lessee v. Neff, 1 Bin. 350.

[m] (Pa. 1845) A party is entitled to a struck jury without applying to the court therefor.—Brown v. O'Brien, 4 Pa. Law J. 501.

[n] (Pa. 1887) Defendant had struck a jury under a rule of court. On the day of trial, the rule of court was repealed. The requisite number of struck jurors not being obtained, a jury was called without reference to the struck list. Held not error.—Powell v. Whitaker, 7 Atl. 597.

[o] (Tenn. 1890) Under M. & V. Code, § 4805, providing that on motion of either party, in any civil action, a special jury may be ordered and summoned, if in the opinion of the court it is proper, it is not within the power of the circuit court to summon such special jury on its own motion.—McDaniel v. Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 88 Tenn. 542, 13 S. W. 76.

[p] (Va. 1895) The granting of a special jury is correctly refused where the application is made only after the denial of a motion for a continuance, and the case is tried by a competent jury.—Goodell's Ex'rs v. Gibbons, 91 Va. 608, 22 S. E. 504.

§ 172. Objection to submission to jury.

[a] (Ala. 1830) Where issue is joined to the country in an action where the amount in controversy is less than $20, the judgment will not be reversed on appeal because the issue was tried to the jury instead of by the court.—McGrew v. Adams, 2 Stew. 502.

[b] (Ga. 1892) Acts 1882–83, p. 538, creating a city court, declares that the trial of all issues of fact shall be by the court without a jury, except where either party in a civil case or the defendant in a criminal case shall, in writing, demand a trial by jury, and that the failure to file such demand at or before the beginning of the trial shall be a waiver of the right. Held, where no written demand had been made, that by submitting, without objection, to be tried by a jury, the prisoner waived the right to be tried by the judge.—Taffe v. State, 90 Ga. 459, 16 S. E. 204.

[c] (Idaho, 1887) In proceedings, under Rev. St. U. S. §§ 2325, 2326, to determine the right of adverse claimants to mineral locations, where the complaint is open to the objection that it states two causes of action, one legal and one equitable, it is too late, after trial by jury has been had, for the plaintiffs to move to have the case declared a proceeding in equity, and to have it decided as such without the intervention of a jury.—Burke v. McDonald, 2 Idaho, 310, 13 Pac. 351.

[d] (Ind. 1892) Where there were two defenses, one legal and one equitable, and plaintiffs objected to trial by jury without confining their objection to the equitable issue, it was not error to allow a jury, even if evidence was offered, and the trial proceeded on the equitable issue only.—Lindley v. Sullivan, 133 Ind. 588, 32 N. E. 738, 33 N. E. 361.

[e] (Minn.) An action to abate a milldam as a nuisance, and to recover damages for its overflow, being not within the exceptions of Gen. St. 1866, c. 66, § 198, is properly triable by the court, unless parties otherwise consent; and acquiescence in the calling and swearing of the jury is a substantial consent to the trial of the issues of fact in the case by jury, and their verdict for plaintiff, ascertaining his damages, will sustain a money judgment in his favor in such case.—(1871) Finch v. Green, 16 Minn. 355 (Gil. 315); (1875) Brown v. Lawler, 21 Minn. 327.

[f] (Minn. 1875) In a case triable by the court, subject to the right of the parties to consent, or of the court to order, that the case be tried by a jury, if either party allow a jury to be impaneled without objection, it will be held a consent that the jury should try the case instead of the court.—Brown v. Lawler, 21 Minn. 327; Same v. Nagel, Id. 415.

[g] (Neb. 1880) A proceeding under the statute for a trial of the right of property taken under execution is not in a legal sense a "civil action," and is therefore not properly triable by a jury; but where a jury was impaneled by agreement, or at the instance of one of the parties, he cannot complain on that ground.—State v. Powell, 10 Neb. 48, 4 N. W. 317.

[h] (N. Y. 1851) It is too late, after verdict, to make the objection that the cause was tried by a jury, or that there was irregularity in summoning or impaneling it.—Dayharsh v. Enos, 5 N. Y. (1 Seld.) 531.

[i] (N. Y. 1873) On a cause being moved for trial before a court without a jury, defendant objected that the question was one of fact, and that he was entitled to a jury trial. The objection was overruled. Held, that this was not error, and that though the case may have been one entitling defendant to a jury trial, yet having based his objection on untenable ground, he must be confined to it.—McKeon v. See, 51 N. Y. 300, 10 Am. Rep. 659.

[j] (N. Y. 1879) The "assent" of the opposite party to a jury trial by 12 men, under Laws 1869, p. 932, c. 410, is sufficiently manifested by any conduct that satisfies the justice. The statute is to be liberally construed in favor of trial by jury.—Poyer v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 7 Abb. N. C. 371.

[k] (N. Y. 1886) Where the claim for damages is merely incidental to the equitable relief sought by the action, it is error to refuse, on defendant's motion, to have the case tried as an equity case, instead of by a jury; and defendant does not waive his right so to insist by having waited in uncertainty as to whether plaintiff might not waive his claim to equitable relief.—Watson v. Manhattan Ry. Co., 53 N. Y. Super. Ct. (21 Jones & S.) 137, 17 Abb. N. C. 289.

[l] (N. Y. 1888) In an action to reform a contract and to recover damages for its breach, a motion to dismiss on the grounds that plaintiffs have shown no equities; that, under the contract as made, defendants have paid plaintiffs all they were entitled to; that plaintiffs have not shown that the real contract was otherwise than as it was drawn; or that there was mutual mistake or fraud requiring its reformation, upon which their cause of action depended,—is too broad to raise the objection that the action should be tried to a jury, and not to the court, though a reformation of the contract was not necessary to enable plaintiffs to recover; and their proper remedy should have been an action at law for damages.—Little v. Webster, 48 Hun, 620, 1 N. Y. Supp. 315, judgment affirmed (1890) 122 N. Y. 670, 26 N. E. 755.

[m] (N. Y. 1894) Where an order for a trial by jury, in an action to enjoin the operation of an elevated railroad in front of plaintiff's premises, and for damages, was made under Code Civ. Proc. § 970, and the party proceeded to trial without objection, the verdict is conclusive until set aside, though the order was erroneous because not applicable to such action; and it is error for the court to render judgment in disregard thereof.—Danziger v. Metropolitan El. Ry. Co., 81 Hun, 5, 30 N. Y. Supp. 580.

[n] (N. C. 1883) Whether, under the constitution as amended, a party to a suit formerly cognizable only in equity has a right to insist upon a trial by the court or not, after he has voluntarily accepted a trial by jury, he cannot afterwards insist upon having the same facts passed upon by the court.—Leggett v. Leggett, 88 N. C. 108.

[o] (Ohio, 1839) A party moving for a struck jury cannot object that it is ordered without sufficient notice to the opposite party, who may waive it.—Sutton v. State, 9 Ohio (9 Ham.) 133.

[p] (Wash. 1895) The objection that plaintiff had a jury trial, to which he was not entitled, cannot be raised for the first time on appeal.—Weigle v. Cascade Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 12 Wash. 449, 41 Pac. 53.

§ 173. Determination of right.

[a] (Iowa, 1858) A justice of the peace has no authority to try a prisoner himself after the prisoner, as authorized by Code, § 3333, has demanded a trial by jury.—Dupont v. Downing, 6 Iowa (6 Clarke) 172.

[b] (Minn. 1883) A motion, made before the commencement of the trial of an action, for a jury trial of the issues, must be decided on the pleadings, and the decision cannot be affected by the character of the case subsequently made by the evidence.—Greenleaf v. Egan, 30 Minn. 316, 15 N. W. 254.

[c] (N. Y. 1811) Where a venire has been issued by a justice of the peace, he cannot proceed to try the cause without a jury.—Sebring v. Wheedon, 8 Johns. 460.

[d] (N. Y. 1886) Code Civ. Proc. § 2083, requiring an issue in a mandamus proceeding to be tried by a jury, as if it were joined in an action specified by section 968, abrogates the necessity for an order directing the issue to be tried by a jury, such an application being required, by section 970, in all actions where a party is entitled to a jury trial not specified in section 968.—People v. Order American Star, 53 N. Y. Super. Ct. (21 Jones & S.) 66.

[e] (N. Y. 1889) After an action was at issue at the special term of the New York supreme court, on defendants' motion to send it to the circuit court for trial by jury as a law action, the court ordered that the case be "stricken from the calendar, and sent to the next circuit court for trial of the issues therein." Held, that this was not an adjudication that defendants were entitled to have all the issues of fact tried by a jury.—Olmsted v. Rich, 53 Hun, 638, 6 N. Y. Supp. 826.

[f] (N. Y. 1891) Where the issues in an equitable action, triable by jury as a matter of right, are so tried, the special term has no inherent power, as a court of equity, to disregard the verdict rendered on such trial.—Mellen v. Mellen (Sup.) 16 N. Y. Supp. 191, 27 Abb. N. C. 99, 21 Civ. Proc. R. 301.

[g] (N. Y. 1891) In actions by abutting owners to enjoin the operation of an elevated railroad, and for damages, the procedure will be as follows: The cases will be tried as they are reached at special term, and, if it be found that plaintiff is entitled to relief, the issue as to past damages will be framed, and placed on the circuit calendar as a preferred case, unless plaintiff elects to proceed without asking a decree for past damages. The judge presiding at special term shall at the same time exercise his discretion as to whether an issue as to fee damage shall be coupled with the issue as to past damages, and be also placed on the circuit calendar for trial, or whether he will himself proceed with the supplemental inquiry as to fee damage, or refer such inquiry; and if plaintiff, after the order is made, framing the issue as to past damages, shall elect not to ask a decree for such damages, such order may be vacated by the judge at special term.—Underhill v. Manhattan Ry. Co. (Sup.) 18 N. Y. Supp. 43, 27 Abb. N. C. 478, 21 Civ. Proc. R. 441; Oswald v. Metropolitan El. Ry. Co. (Sup.) 18 N. Y. Supp. 44, 21 Civ. Proc. R. 445.

[h] (N. Y. 1891) Where the plaintiff in an action against an elevated railway company does not waive his claim to past damages, there must be formulated: (1) An issue as to such past damages, as follows: "What amount of damages, if any, did plaintiff in this action sustain in the use or rental value of the premises described in the complaint from the day of ——, in the year ——, to the day of the trial of this issue, by reason of the construction, maintenance, and operation of the elevated railway in front of said premises?" (2) A question as to the value of the property taken by defendant, as follows: "What is the value of the property taken by the elevated railway company or companies from plaintiff by reason of the construction, maintenance, and operation of the elevated railway in front of plaintiff's premises described in the complaint?"—Eggers v. Manhattan Ry. Co. (Super. N. Y.) 18 N. Y. Supp. 181, 27 Abb. N. C. 463, 21 Civ. Proc. R. 403.

[i] (N. C. 1887) Under Const. art. 4, § 18, which provides that parties may waive a jury trial, and that all issues of fact shall be found by the judge, when a jury trial has not been waived, and issues have been presented to the jury, but without response, it is error for a judge to find the issues of fact.—McCanless v. Flinchum, 98 N. C. 358, 4 S. E. 359.

[j] (Ohio, 1860) Under Act March 1, 1859 (56 Ohio Laws, p. 93), amending the second trial act of April 12, 1858, providing that whenever notice is entered on the record of a party's demand for a second trial the same shall not be allowed, unless the court is of the opinion that the case is one in which a trial by jury may be demanded by either party, it is unnecessary that the order awarding a second trial should show that the court was of the opinion that the case was one in which a trial by jury might be demanded by either party.—Powers v. Seaton, 2 Ohio Dec. 365.

[k] (Tenn. 1896) On appeal to the circuit court, where plaintiff has duly demanded a jury, and the cause has been placed on the jury docket, as provided by Mill. & V. Code, §§ 3603, 3604, defendant's right to a jury is also thereby determined, and the cause cannot be subsequently changed to a nonjury cause without the consent of both parties, as required by section 3605.—Warren v. Scudder-Gale Grocery Co., 96 Tenn. 574, 36 S. W. 383.

§ 174. Payment or deposit of jury fee.

See ante, § 166 [n].

Compensation of jurors in general, see post, §§ 392–399.

Requirement as infringement of right in civil cases, see post, § 213.

—— in criminal cases, see post, § 219.

Right of officer serving venire to demand his fees in advance, see "Sheriffs and Constables," II.

—— to attack constitutionality of statute providing for deposit of jury fees, see "Constitutional Law," vol. 10, c. 1288, § 39 [z].

[a] (Colo. 1891) Act Feb. 10, 1883, § 3, provides that superior courts shall exercise such jurisdiction in civil actions, and be governed by such practice and pleadings, as are applicable to district courts. Section 15 provides that, in any action in which a party is entitled to a jury, such party may have a jury summoned in the manner provided for summoning juries in the county court. Held, that the right of trial to a jury in the superior court must be determined by Gen. St. § 1097, which provides that district courts shall have jurisdiction in all causes for divorce and alimony, and such cause must be tried by jury when charges in the bill are denied in the answer; but when such right exists the jury will be drawn and summoned pursuant to the practice in the county court, and it is not necessary that the party demanding a jury shall prepay the fees as required by the county court act.—Pleyte v. Pleyte, 1 Colo. App. 70, 28 Pac. 23.

[b] (Colo. 1892) The failure of the court to compel plaintiffs to prepay the jury fee, under Act 1891 (Sess. Laws 1891, p. 248, § 9), as a prerequisite to his right to demand a jury, is not ground for reversing the judgment in favor of plaintiffs.—Pitkin County Com'rs v. Brown, 2 Colo. App. 473, 31 Pac. 525.

[c] (Colo. 1893) As Acts 1891, p. 248, provide that, in actions in a county court in a county of the first class, either party shall be entitled to a jury without advancing the fees therefor, it is not in the power of the court to refuse a jury for failure to advance the fees.—Woods v. Tanquary, 3 Colo. App. 515, 34 Pac. 737.

[d] (Colo. 1895) Gen. St. § 504, providing that one may have a jury trial in the county court by advancing the jury fees, applies only to causes to be heard when no regular panel is in attendance, and does not affect the right to have a cause tried by a jury impaneled under Sess. Laws 1891, p. 248, § 2, providing that when a jury is required in a county court the clerk shall so notify the clerk of the district court, who, with the sheriff, shall draw the names of the jurors from the persons certified to him by the board of county commissioners to act as jurors, and shall certify such names to the clerk of the county court, who shall issue a venire for such jurors.—Pitkin County Com'rs v. First Nat. Bank, 6 Colo. App. 423, 40 Pac. 894.

[e] (Mich. 1854) Debt for a forfeiture incurred by a violation of the law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating drinks is not such a criminal action as entitles the defendant to a jury without paying fees.—People v. Hoffman, 3 Mich. 248.

[f] (Mich. 1874) Where a jury trial was demanded in justice court, and the jury fees were paid, the person demanding such trial cannot, after the first jury has disagreed, insist upon a trial by another jury without paying an additional jury fee.—McGraw v. Sturgeon, 29 Mich. 426.

[g] (N. J. 1893) Where no jury was demanded on the trial below, the question whether relator was entitled to a jury trial without prepayment of the jury fees cannot be considered in the appellate court.—Joy & Seliger Co. v. Blum, 55 N. J. Law (26 Vroom) 518, 26 Atl. 861.

[h] (N. J. 1893) In an action in the district court, where the matter in dispute is above $200, a demand for a jury, made by defendant at the proper time, entitles him to a trial by jury without prepayment of costs.—Clayton v. Clark, 55 N. J. Law (26 Vroom) 539, 26 Atl. 795.

[i] (N. Y. 1856) Where a party demands a jury trial in justice court, and neglects to pay the jury fees in proceedings for the issuing of the venire, such failure is a waiver of the right to a jury trial.—Kilpatrick v. Carr, 3 Abb. Prac. 117.

[j] (N. Y. 1882) The justice may, if the venire is left with him to be delivered to a constable agreed on, require the fees to be deposited with him for the constable and jurors, to be handed to the officer with the venire. If an excessive amount is demanded and refused, proceeding to try the case without a jury is ground for a reversal.—Powens v. Jones, 10 Abb. N. C. 458.

[k] (N. Y. 1895) Code Civ. Proc. § 3328, providing that a "justice of the peace, or a constable, juror, or a witness before a justice of the peace, is not obliged to render any services * * * without previous payment or tender of his fee therefor," only authorizes the officers mentioned to require prepayment of the fees to which they may be entitled, respectively, and does not authorize the justice to refuse to issue a venire unless the party asking for it first pays or secures the fees of the jurors.—Bellappi v. Hovey, 90 Hun, 135, 35 N. Y. Supp. 624.

[l] (N. Y. 1895) The failure of a party to tender fees within the time specified by Laws 1882, c. 410, § 1377, so as to entitle him to a jury trial, does not render it improper for the justice to allow a jury trial, over the objection of the adverse party, since section 1372, as amended by Laws 1891, c. 378, provides that the justice, in the absence of a demand, may, in his discretion, direct a trial by jury.—Equitable Gaslight Co. v. French, 10 Misc. Rep. 749, 31 N. Y. Supp. 812.

[m] (N. Y. 1895) Where defendant, in a district court of New York City, within the time specified by Laws 1882, c. 410, § 1377, in order to entitle him to a jury trial, tenders the jury fee to the assistant clerk, who, through some mistake, refuses to receive it, and he afterwards, before trial, tenders the fee to the clerk, plaintiff is not prejudiced by the action of the justice in allowing a jury trial.—Equitable Gaslight Co. v. French, 10 Misc. Rep. 749, 31 N. Y. Supp. 812.

[n] (Tex. 1889) Rev. St. art. 3066, which provides for the payment of $5 in the district and $3 in the county court when a jury is demanded, does not require a defendant who pays the jury fee of $3 in the county court to pay an additional fee when the case is removed to the district court, because the county judge is related to one of the parties.—Warner v. Crosby, 75 Tex. 295, 12 S. W. 745.

[o] (Tex. 1895) Where appellant, on appeal from a justice's to a county court, refuses to pay the jury fee required by Rev. St. art. 3066, the court properly refused to allow the case to be put on the jury docket, though a trial by jury was had before the justice.—Wood v. Gamble (Civ. App.) 32 S. W. 368.

[p] (Utah, 1896) Comp. Laws 1876, § 1091, was not repealed by the Code of Civil Procedure of 1884; and hence a justice of the peace should require a party demanding a jury to deposit the fees to which they may be entitled.—People v. Van Tassel, 13 Utah, 9, 43 Pac. 625.

§ 175. —— Time for payment.

[a] (Cal. 1887) Where in a civil action the defendant demands a trial by jury, but fails to deposit the jury fees required by the rules of the court to be paid in advance, the case may be tried without a jury.—Conneau v. Geis, 73 Cal. 176, 14 Pac. 580, 2 Am. St. Rep. 785.

[b] (Iowa, 1856) A defendant is entitled to a jury trial without paying the fees in advance.—Hine v. Sweney, 3 G. Greene, 511.

[c] (Iowa, 1856) The refusal of a defendant, demanding a jury, to pay jury fees in advance, confers no jurisdiction upon the court to try a question of fact.—Hine v. Sweney, 3 G. Greene, 511.

[d] (La. 1844) Where a party having prayed for a jury, but, failing to advance the jury fee (Act Feb. 10, 1841, No. 16, § 17), the case is transferred to the court docket and taken up as a court case, it will be too late, at the moment of trial, to tender the fee and move for a retransfer.—Daniels v. Andrews, 7 Rob. 160.

[e] (La. 1848) The jury fee may be paid at any time before the trial is fixed, but until paid the prayer for a jury will be disregarded. Act 1841, No. 16, § 17.—Wilson v. State Bank, 3 La. Ann. 196.

[f] (Mich. 1879) Payment of the jury fee at the time the demand for a jury trial is made is not necessary to make the demand valid.—Odell v. Reynolds, 40 Mich. 21.

[g] (Mich. 1888) When a jury is demanded on joining issue, and the jury fee tendered before the trial is begun, the right to a jury is not waived by the failure to pay the fee on joining issue.—Pontiac & Lapeer Plank Road Co. v. Hopkinson, 69 Mich. 10, 36 N. W. 797.

[h] (Minn. 1893) Under Gen. St. 1878, c. 70, § 30, as amended by Laws 1891, c. 83, a party calling for a jury in a justice's court must pay the jurors' fees into court in advance, and, if he refuses to do so, the justice may proceed to try the case without a jury.—Rollins v. Nolting, 53 Minn. 232, 54 N. W. 1118.

[i] (Tex. 1885) The depositing of the jury fee on the second instead of the first day of the term, as provided for in Rev. St. art. 3066, no parties being injured, is no ground for refusing the jury claim, as said statute is not mandatory.—Gallagher v. Goldfrank, 63 Tex. 473.

[j] (Tex. 1885) Where, upon defendant's demanding a jury and having the cause placed on the jury docket, no jury fee is deposited by or on the first day of the term, it is improper to grant a motion by plaintiffs to strike the cause from the jury docket, notwithstanding the jury fee has been deposited before the filing of the motion; and in such case an objection by plaintiffs, upon the cause being called in its regular order to its trial, on the ground that all the jury cases have not been disposed of, is properly overruled.—Allyn v. Willis, 65 Tex. 65.

[k] (Tex. 1886) Rev. St. arts. 3064, 3066, directing that a demand for a jury shall be made and the jury fee paid upon the first day of the term, are not strictly mandatory; and, where a plaintiff demands a jury on the first day of the term, it is error to try the case without a jury, although the jury fee is not paid until the next day, the jury docket not having at that time been disposed of; and it is immaterial that granting a jury trial will cause the case to be postponed until the next term.—Allen v. Plummer, 71 Tex. 546, 9 S. W. 672.

[l] (Tex. 1891) Where a party does not pay the jury fee until 34 days after he has demanded a jury, and until the time allotted for jury cases has passed, he waives his right to a jury trial.—Cabell v. Hamilton Brown Shoe Co., 81 Tex. 104, 16 S. W. 811.

[m] (Tex. 1895) Though defendant, on the call of the docket, demands a jury, yet where the jury fee is not paid till after the jury docket is disposed of for the term, so that to allow trial by jury would require a continuance over the term, the right to a jury is lost.—Wood v. Kieschbaum (Civ. App.) 31 S. W. 326.

[a] (Ala. 1829) A party may waive his right of trial by jury by executing a power of attorney to confess judgment.—Johnston v. Atwood, 2 Stew. 225.

[b] (Ala. 1883) A jury trial is not waived by the admission of facts on a motion to dismiss the suit.—Moore v. Helms, 74 Ala. 368.

[c] (Cal. 1891) After the court had denied defendant's written application for a jury trial, failure to repeat the application did not waive defendant's right to such trial.—Swasey v. Adair, 88 Cal. 179, 25 Pac. 1119.

[d] (Iowa, 1893) Where a party states in open court that it is immaterial to him whether the case is tried as a proceeding at law, or in equity, merely directing a trial as in equity is not a denial of a trial by jury, as it was his duty to demand such trial, if he wished it.—Lothian v. Lothian, 88 Iowa, 396, 55 N. W. 465.

[e] (Kan. 1892) A defendant by not appearing at the time a case is assigned for trial waives his right to a trial by jury.—Weems v. McDavitt, 49 Kan. 360, 30 Pac. 481.

[f] (Kan. 1893) Where the issues joined by the pleadings would require the granting of a jury trial on demand, but the parties state to the court, at the time of demand, that the only matters in issue are the priorities of certain alleged liens, the refusal of a jury trial is not error.—Wiscomb v. Cubberly, 51 Kan. 580, 33 Pac. 320.

[g] (La. 1816) Leave to defendant, whose exceptions are overruled, to answer over without delaying the trial, does not deprive him of his right to a jury, though the trial be thereby delayed.—Tricou v. Bayou, 4 Mart. (O. S.) 169.

[h] (Me. 1862) The defendant waives a jury trial by an agreement that the action shall abide the result in another case.—Bradstreet v. Erskine, 50 Me. 407.

[i] (Mass. 1834) If, after the county commissioners have laid out a highway, and assessed the damages sustained by the owner of the land, such owner removes his fences, and rebuilds them on the line of the highway so laid out, he does not thereby deprive himself of his right to a jury to reassess the damages.—In re Endicott, 41 Mass. (24 Pick.) 339.

[j] (N. H. 1855) Where an auditor's report is transferred to the superior court, under an agreement that judgment shall be rendered on the report according to the opinion of such court, a trial by jury is waived.—Beebe v. Dudley, 30 N. H. (10 Fost.) 34.

[k] (N. J. 1807) It is not the duty of the defendant to see that the venire is served, in an action before a justice.—Morelander v. Hays, 2 N. J. Law (1 Penning.) 161.

[l] (N. J. 1830) Defendant in an action before a justice, on his motion for adjournment being denied (two previous continuances having been had), asked a jury trial, which being granted, he agreed voluntarily to get a constable to serve the venire. Shortly before the time appointed for the jury to convene, defendant reported that he had seen two constables, but it was not his place to get them to serve the venire, and the justice at the time set for trial tried the case without a jury and rendered judgment for plaintiff. Held, that defendant was not entitled to a reversal for being deprived of a jury trial, since his failure to secure it was due to his own misconduct.—Daniels v. Scott, 12 N. J. Law (7 Halst.) 27.

[m] (N. Y. 1822) Where, in a cause in the justice's court, a venire is demanded by either party, the justice may deliver it himself to the constable to be executed; but if he delivers it to the party, and he does not appear at the time to which the cause was adjourned for trial, and the venire is not returned, the justice may consider the suppression of the venire by the party as a waiver of a trial by jury, and proceed to hear and decide the cause himself, as if no venire had been demanded or issued.—Coon v. Snyder, 19 Johns. 384.

[n] (N. Y. 1860) After a trial had begun before a justice's jury, one juror was taken sick. The defendant asked an adjournment to procure testimony, which was properly refused. He refused to go on with five jurors, or to have a talesman called, or to have a new venire issued and a jury brought in at once, and insisted on a full jury on a future day. Held, that his conduct amounted to a waiver of a jury for any trial properly had on that day, and a judgment by the justice without a jury was sustained.—Babcock v. Hill, 35 Barb. 52.

[o] (N. Y. 1889) Defendants desired a trial by jury, but finally consented in open court that if the case, which was then placed on the calendar of the circuit court, might go over, it should be tried at the ensuing special term; and, in pursuance of an order to that effect, it was afterwards tried at the special term without a jury. Held, that such agreement constituted a waiver in open court of a trial by jury.—Third Nat. Bank v. Shields, 55 Hun, 274, 8 N. Y. Supp. 298.

[p] (N. Y. 1894) A party in a condemnation proceeding who agrees on commissioners to be appointed, and appears before them, and examines witnesses, waives any right he may have to a trial by jury, and cannot afterwards object that the court had no authority to appoint the commissioners.—Akin v. Water Com'rs of Amsterdam, 82 Hun, 265, 31 N. Y. Supp. 254.

[q] (N. C. 1875) Issues in an action to abate a nuisance are triable by jury; and this is of right notwithstanding a former mistrial.—Hyatt v. Myers, 73 N. C. 232.

[r] (Ohio, 1885) Where a jury is properly demanded and selected, in a trial before a magistrate, the constable's refusal to serve the summons on the persons so selected as jurors does not authorize the magistrate to try the cause without a jury.—Moriarity v. Devine, 1 O. C. D. 49, 1 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 82.

[s] (Pa. 1856) The error of the clerk of the common pleas and district courts in entering a report of viewers to assess damages for injuries caused by the construction of the works of defendant in the latter instead of the former court will not deprive a party, who has complied with the requirements of law, of his trial by jury.—Ihmsen v. Monongahela Nav. Co., 27 Pa. (3 Casey) 267.

[t] (Tex. 1895) Where defendant insisted that he was entitled to a jury trial, and that the jury offered was not lawful, the court cannot, by adopting his view of the legality of the jury, force him to trial without a jury.—Western Union Tel. Co. v. Everheart, 10 Tex. Civ. App. 468, 32 S. W. 90.

[u] (Va. 1868) Where, on a motion to abate an attachment, the plaintiff refuses to express any desire as to whether the issues of fact should be tried by a jury, and the defendant desires the issues tried by the court, it is the duty of the court to hear and decide the motion without a jury.—Claflin v. Steenbock, 18 Grat. 842.

[a] (Cal. 1855) The legislature alone has the power of determining in what cases a jury trial may be waived; and the words, "prescribed by law," look to actual legislation upon the subject, and in no just sense can be extended to a permission of the exercise of this power by the court.—Exline v. Smith, 5 Cal. 112.

§ 178. Right to waive jury.

Number of jurors, see post, § 189.

[a] (U. S. 1832) The right to trial by jury secured by the federal constitution is for the benefit of the parties litigating in courts of justice, and may be waived by them.—United States v. Rathbone, Fed. Cas. No. 16,121 [2 Paine, 578].

[b] (U. S. 1874) Act Cong. March 3, 1865, providing that a jury may be waived on issues of fact in civil cases "in circuit courts," does not extend to district courts.—Blair v. Allen, Fed. Cas. No. 1,483 [3 Dill. 101].

[c] (Ill. 1869) A statutory provision for a jury, on a trial of the right of property, of not less than six nor more than twelve persons, does not prevent the parties waiving a jury altogether.—Kreuchi v. Dehler, 50 Ill. 176.

[d] (Ill. 1886) In condemnation proceedings, under the eminent domain act, the parties may waive the jury, and consent to have the case tried by the court, and a trial and judgment by the court will be valid. The provision of the constitution of 1870, art. 2, § 13, that such compensation "shall be ascertained by a jury," secures a privilege merely, which may be waived under paragraph 42 of the practice act (2 Starr & C. St. c. 110, par. 42).—Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. Hock, 118 Ill. 587, 9 N. E. 205.

[e] (Ill. 1896) In a contest under Rev. St. c. 148, § 7, conferring on courts of chancery jurisdiction to hear bills to contest wills, and providing that in case of contest "an issue shall be made up whether the writing produced be the will * * * which shall be tried by a jury," etc., trial by jury may be waived.—Whipple v. Eddy, 161 Ill. 114, 43 N. E. 789.

[f] (Ind. 1857) The trial by jury may be waived by a party.—Lake Erie, W. & St. L. R. Co. v. Heath, 9 Ind. 558.

[g] (Mich. 1894) A property owner may waive his right to a trial by jury to determine the value of property taken by a city for a public use.—Borgman v. City of Detroit, 102 Mich. 261, 60 N. W. 696.

[h] (Mo. 1884) A party may waive his constitutional right to demand a jury, or have it resworn, in a suit in which plaintiffs and defendant are the only interested parties.—Merrill v. City of St. Louis, 83 Mo. 244, 53 Am. Rep. 576, affirming (1882) 12 Mo. App. 466.

[i] (Mo. 1895) A party may waive his constitutional right to a jury trial.—O'Day v. Conn, 131 Mo. 321, 32 S. W. 1109.

[j] (Neb. 1877) A jury may be waived and damages assessed by the court in actions in replevin.—Baker v. Daily, 6 Neb. 464.

[k] (N. H. 1852) In a case tried before an auditor, a party by express agreement, or by his acts, may waive his right to a trial by jury.—King v. Hutchins, 26 N. H. (6 Fost.) 139.

[l] (N. J. 1811) The legal number of jurors cannot be dispensed with even by consent.—Mitten v. Smock, 3 N. J. Law (2 Penning.) 911.

[m] (N. Y. 1824) It is erroneous for a court of common pleas to proceed as a court of error, on appeal from a justice, and try the case without a jury, even though both parties elect this form of trial.—Cowen v. Bush, 3 Cow. 343.

[n] (N. Y. 1860) It is competent for a party in an action in a justice's court, who has demanded a trial by jury, to waive that mode of trial by consent in open court.—Hosford v. Carter, 10 Abb. Prac. 452.

[o] (N. Y. 1876) In a case where it is the right of either party to go to the jury upon a question of fact, the parties may waive the right, and make the court the judge of the fact as well as the law.—Hagaman v. Burr, 41 N. Y. Super. Ct. (9 Jones & S.) 423.

[p] (N. Y. 1892) In an action for divorce on the ground of adultery, the right of the party accused of adultery to a jury trial or a trial in open court may be waived.—Chase v. Chase, (Sup.) 19 N. Y. Supp. 268.

[q] (Pa. 1888) So far as Act July 22, 1874, providing for the submission of cases to the decision of the court, expressly excepts parties "acting in a fiduciary capacity," it is in violation of Const. art. 5, § 27, providing that "the parties, by agreement filed, may, in civil cases, dispense with trial by jury."—Campbell v. Fayette County, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 132.

[r] (Wis. 1868) It is clearly competent for parties to any litigation or controversy, not a proceeding for crime, to waive their constitutional rights with regard thereto. They may waive their right to trial by the courts and juries; hence it is competent for the legislature to prescribe by statute how such right may be waived, or what should be the evidence of waiver, if they leave it optional with the parties to waive a trial before the court and a jury, or not to waive it, as they see fit.—Home Ins. Co. v. Security Ins. Co., 23 Wis. 171.

§ 179. Necessity of formal waiver.

[a] (U. S. 1869) A reasonably strict conformity to the regulations of Act Cong. March 3, 1865 (13 Stat. 501) § 4, providing that the issues of fact in civil cases in the United States courts may be tried and determined by the court, when the parties or attorneys of record file a stipulation in writing with the clerk of the court waiving a jury, and providing that the court's finding shall have the same effect as the verdict of the jury, and may be reviewed the same as a jury trial, is required to save to parties the rights and privileges which belong to them in common-law jury trials; and hence they must file a stipulation, as the act requires, to entitle them to its privileges.—Flanders v. Tweed, 76 U. S. (9 Wall.) 425, 19 L. Ed. 678.

[b] (U. S. 1884) The stipulation to submit a case to the court without a jury must distinctly waive a jury according to the terms of Rev. St. Tenn. § 649.—Kelly v. Town of Milan (C. C.) 21 Fed. 842.

[c] (Cal. 1852) The right to trial by a jury cannot be waived by implication.—Smith v. Pollock, 2 Cal. 92.

[d] (Cal. 1886) The right to a jury trial is a constitutional right, and no act on the part of a litigant shall be deemed a waiver of the right, except such as are so constituted by express law. In this connection, a new rule of court has not the force of such a law.—Biggs v. Lloyd, 70 Cal. 447, 11 Pac. 831.

[e] (Ind. 1858) The statute having provided a certain way of waiving a jury, no other act can be a waiver.—Shaw v. Kent, 11 Ind. 80.

[f] (Md. 1881) Without the consent of both parties, a cause cannot be tried before the court without a jury, under Const. art. 4, § 4.—Desche v. Gies, 56 Md. 135.

[g] (N. Y. 1878) The constitutional clause declaring that a jury trial may be waived in the manner to be prescribed by law does not preclude courts from holding parties to have waived their right thereto by their conduct or silence.—Baird v. City of New York, 74 N. Y. 382.

[h] (N. C. 1879) The provisions of the Code destroying the distinction between actions at law and suits in equity do not make it competent for the judge in the trial of a civil action, in which a jury has been sworn and impaneled and issues have been framed, but no evidence has been adduced on either side, the jury being discharged without a verdict, to pass on the issues, as was formerly his right, where defendant, by answer, admitted the equity of the bill and set up matter of avoidance, and, on replication taken, allowed the case to be brought in for hearing without proof of the matter of avoidance.—Chasteen v. Martin, 81 N. C. 51.

[i] (Ohio, 1890) Where both parties appear at the trial of a civil action for the recovery of money only, in which issues of fact have been joined, it is error for the court to try the cause and render judgment therein without a jury having first been waived, and such waiver entered on the journal.—Longstreth & Ayer Mfg. Co. v. Halsey, 4 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 307.

[j] (Or. 1890) A circuit court has no authority to try an issue of fact without a jury, unless a jury trial is waived in the manner provided by the Civil Code, though the only evidence offered was the written stipulations of the parties; the proper method in such case being to direct a verdict.—American Mortg. Co. v. Hutchinson, 19 Or. 334, 24 Pac. 515.

[k] (S. C. 1886) By Code, § 288, a jury trial may be waived by failing to appear at the trial, by written consent in person or by attorney filed with the clerk, and by oral consent in open court entered on the minutes; but there is no provision for a waiver by conduct.—Sale v. Meggett, 25 S. C. 72.

§ 180. Form and sufficiency of waiver.

[a] (U. S. 1880) A stipulation in writing, signed by the parties and filed with the clerk, that the case shall be tried by the court, is equivalent to waiver of a jury.—Bamberger v. Terry, 103 U. S. 40, 26 L. Ed. 317; Wayne County Sup'rs v. Kennicott, 103 U. S. 554, 26 L. Ed. 486.

[b] (Cal. 1894) A case was continued on account of the absence of defendant's attorney, and afterwards called, when defendant appeared with a new attorney, and demanded a jury. Held that, by his failure to demand a jury on the first call defendant did not waive his right to it, under Code Civ. Proc. § 631, providing for such waiver (1) by failing to appear at the trial; (2) by written consent; and (3) by oral consent in open court.—Farwell v. Murray, 104 Cal. 464, 38 Pac. 199.

[c] (Ind. 1894) Where a jury may be waived by oral consent in open court, entered on the record (Rev. St. 1881, § 550), an oral agreement to waive a jury, made by the attorneys of the parties the day before the case was called for trial, in open court, and entered on the record, is binding on the parties.—Whitestown Milling Co. v. Zahn, 9 Ind. App. 270, 36 N. E. 653.

[d] (Md. 1893) Under Const. art. 4, § 8, providing that the parties to a cause may submit it to the court for determination without the aid of a jury, a promise to relinquish the constitutional right to a jury trial is a sufficient consideration for an agreement to submit a civil case to the court.—Lanahan v. Heaver, 77 Md. 605, 26 Atl. 866, 20 L. R. A. 759.

[e] (Neb. 1882) It is not necessary that a waiver of trial by jury in open court shall be in writing.—Gregory v. City of Lincoln, 13 Neb. 352, 14 N. W. 423.

[f] (N. M. 1888) Under Comp. Laws, § 2000, providing that, on issue joined in mandamus, trial and further proceeding shall be had as in a civil action, if a jury trial is intended, it is waived by the conclusion of an answer asking "the court to inspect the evidence so offered with this answer," and to dismiss the alternative writ, and by respondent's failure to request a jury, or to object or except to its absence.—Territory v. Board of County Com'rs of Bernalillo County, 4 N. M. (Johns.) 204, 16 Pac. 855.

[g] (N. Y. 1891) Where plaintiff in an action against an elevated railway company for injunction and damages elects to waive his claim for past damages, the waiver must be filed in the form of a stipulation, and must be general, unconditional, and unqualified.—Eggers v. Manhattan Ry. Co. (Super. N. Y.) 18 N. Y. Supp. 181, 27 Abb. N. C. 463, 21 Civ. Proc. R. 403.

§ 181. Submission to court.

[a] (Ark. 1893) In an action to quiet title, where both plaintiff and defendant claim to be in possession of the land, if defendant has a right to a trial by jury of the issue of fact as to whether he or plaintiff is in possession, he waives such right by voluntarily submitting to a trial of all the issues by the court sitting in equity.—Love v. Bryson, 57 Ark. 589, 22 S. W. 341.

[aa] (Ill. 1891) Where a motion is made by defendant for judgment on stipulation, and the court enters judgment accordingly, after hearing affidavits for and against the motion, plaintiff cannot object on appeal that the court did not compel defendant to present the stipulation by plea so that the plaintiff might have had the question of its execution tried by jury, and might have cross-examined defendant's witnesses, where plaintiff did not, in the trial court, demand a jury trial, or object to the evidence presented by affidavit.—Washington v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 136 Ill. 49, 26 N. E. 653, affirming (1890) 34 Ill. App. 658.

[aaa] (Ind. 1886) In a case triable by jury, it is not error to refuse to submit one particular question of fact to a jury, and the request to do so may be considered a waiver of the right to try the whole case by jury.—Spencer v. Robbins, 106 Ind. 580, 5 N. E. 726.

[b] (Mass. 1858) The submission of a case in writing to the judgment of the superior court or court of common pleas upon evidence, "to be tried without the intervention of a jury," is a waiver of a trial by jury, pursuant to St. 1857, c. 267.—Bass v. Haverhill Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 76 Mass. (10 Gray) 400.

[bb] (Minn. 1891) Where the complaint contains both an equitable and legal cause of action, the defendant is entitled to a trial by jury of the latter; but, if the case proceeds to trial by the court without objection, he will be deemed to have waived a jury.—Peterson v. Ruhnke, 46 Minn. 115, 48 N. W. 768.

[c] (Minn. 1891) The equitable action for a rescission is entirely distinct from the legal action for damages for fraudulent representations or a breach of warranty; hence defendant does not, by submitting to a trial on the merits in the equitable action, waive his right to a jury trial on the question of damages.—Marshall v. Gilman, 47 Minn. 131, 49 N. W. 688.

[d] (N. H. 1873) A party waives his right to a jury trial, on the filing of an auditor's report, by submitting the questions raised by the report for the decision of the court, without reserving the right to a trial by jury.—Plummer v. Meserve, 54 N. H. 166.

[e] (N. Y. 1874) Where a complaint is based on theory that the cause of action therein set forth is one of equitable jurisdiction, and the demand is for equitable relief, but the complaint contains allegations of fact sufficient, if proved, to entitle the plaintiff to recover in an action at law, the defendant, by proceeding with the trial before the court without a jury, without objection, and claiming a right to a trial by jury, waives his right to insist, at the close of the evidence, that, no equitable cause of action having been established, the complaint must be dismissed, although it contains allegations of fact, which, having been established, entitles the plaintiff to recover in an action at law, on the ground that as to the legal cause of action he is entitled to a trial by jury.—Black v. White, 37 N. Y. Super. Ct. (5 Jones & S.) 320.

[f] (N. Y. 1880) One who was engaged to teach 20 weeks, but was discharged before the end of the term, sued the district trustee in the county court and was nonsuited. Afterwards he appealed from the trustee's refusal to pay him his wages to the superintendent of public instruction, who reversed the trustee's decision and directed him to pay the claim. Held, that the trustee, by submitting the case to the superintendent, without objection, waived any right to a trial by jury.—People v. Eckler, 19 Hun, 609.

[g] (N. Y. 1890) Where each party requests the court to direct a verdict in his favor, and on direction of the court a verdict is rendered which has evidence to support it, the defeated party cannot then insist upon going to the jury on a controverted question of fact, since, by moving for a verdict, he has submitted the question to the court.—Howell v. Wright, 122 N. Y. 667, 25 N. E. 912.

[h] (N. C. 1881) Where the judge determines the facts involved in a question of estoppel, with the tacit consent of the counsel for the defense, who argues the facts before the court, the defendant cannot complain on appeal that he was denied a trial by jury.—Crump v. Thomas, 85 N. C. 272.

[i] (N. C. 1884) On motion to vacate an attachment, it is competent for the court to find the facts from the affidavits and other proper evidence; and a party consenting to this mode of trial cannot afterwards demand a jury trial.—Pasour v. Lineberger, 90 N. C. 159.

[j] (Pa. 1811) Where plaintiff does not object to a peremptory nonsuit, but merely asks the court to give his opinion in writing, and objects to such opinion, he waives his right to have the case submitted to the jury.—Hayes v. Grier, 4 Bin. 80.

[k] (S. D. 1894) Where defendant tries the case on the theory that it presents questions of law only, it cannot, after they have been decided adversely, object that there were questions of fact for a jury.—Grigsby v. Western Union Tel. Co., 5 S. D. 561, 59 N. W. 734.

[l] (Tex. 1894) Where defendant demurs to plaintiff's evidence, and plaintiff joins in the demurrer, defendant is not entitled, in case the demurrer is overruled, to have the question of plaintiff's right to recover submitted to the jury.—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Templeton, 87 Tex. 42, 26 S. W. 1066.

§ 182. Submission to arbitration.

Consenting to reference, see post, § 188.

[a] (D. C. 1881) A party's right to a jury trial may be waived by a regular reference to arbitrators, and its equivalent obtained by a proper final award.—Strong v. Barbour, 1 Mackey, 209.

[b] (Ind. 1877) After the submission of a cause for arbitration and the return of the award, a party to such submission cannot demand a trial by jury.—Spencer v. Curtis, 57 Ind. 221.

[c] (Mass. 1890) By entering into a submission to arbitration in person or by attorney duly authorized, a party waives the right to a jury trial of the controversy submitted, and also of all questions of fact involved in the inquiry, whether the award should be accepted, rejected, or recommitted.—Boyden v. Lamb, 152 Mass. 416, 25 N. E. 609.

[d] (Pa. 1884) Where there is a prospective agreement to submit disputes to arbitrators, and either party is to fix the time and place of choosing arbitrators, the right of trial by jury is not taken away.—Rogers v. Davidson, 4 Penny. 472.

§ 183. Noticing case for trial on court or jury docket.

[a] (Iowa, 1872) Under Revision, § 2615, providing for the transfer of an equitable proceeding to the law docket, upon motion; and section 2619, making the want of such motion a waiver, etc.; and section 2619, relating to the trial of law issues,—the defendant, by failing to have a cause transferred to the law docket within the statutory time, will be held to have waived his right to a jury trial.—Richmond v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 33 Iowa, 422.

[b] (Ky. 1854) That the record shows an action for the recovery of money or specific real or personal property to have been transferred in entirety to the equity docket amounts to a waiver of a jury trial.—Smith v. Moberly, 54 Ky. (15 B. Mon.) 70.

[c] (Ky. 1884) It being essential that an ordinary action should go to equity that it might be heard with a pending equitable action, a party, by consenting to the transfer, does not waive his right to a jury, but is entitled to have the legal issue submitted to a jury; the exercise of equity jurisdiction being dependent on the result of the legal issue.—Betz v. Newport Provision Mart. Ass'n, 6 Ky. Law Rep. 222.

[d] (Mich. 1888) Where a case was called for jury trial, defendant's counsel, being engaged in a trial in another court, asked to have the case set down for trial by the court at a later day, which was done, and trial had by the court, without any objection or exception by defendant, and there was no application by him to have the trial adjourned; and he cannot object that he did not voluntarily waive his right to jury trial.—Hudson v. Roos, 72 Mich. 363, 40 N. W. 467.

[e] (Minn. 1891) A case having been by consent set for trial by the court on a day certain, the right to a jury is waived, and cannot be asserted when the cause is called for trial.—St. Paul Distilling Co. v. Pratt, 45 Minn. 215, 47 N. W. 789.

[f] (Minn. 1893) In a proceeding in garnishment, where the court went on the theory that the suit was a "court case," but one in which it might order specific questions of fact to be tried by a jury, claimants, by failing to object, and by proceeding on the same theory, waive the right to a jury trial, if such existed.—Smith v. Barclay, 54 Minn. 47, 55 N. W. 827.

[g] (N. Y. 1878) A defendant in a case where an equitable cause of action is joined with others purely legal, does not waive his right to a trial by jury by consenting that the case be placed on the calendar for trial at the special term, and by noticing the case for trial at that term.—Wheelock v. Lee, 74 N. Y. 495.

[h] (N. Y. 1886) On the trial of a case, defendant stated that it was an equity case. Plaintiff did not reply, and the court announced that it would put a jury in the box, to which it might submit any specified question of fact. Held, that plaintiff did not thereby waive his right to a jury trial, since there was a jury impaneled capable of trying the whole issue.—Clark v. Mosher, 5 N. Y. St. Rep. 84.

[i] (N. Y. 1888) Where defendant fails to apply for a direction of issues to the jury, but notices the case for trial at special term, where no jury can be had, he waives his right to jury trial.—Mackellar v. Rogers, 109 N. Y. 468, 17 N. E. 350, affirming Mackellar v. Same (1885) 52 N. Y. Super. Ct. (20 Jones & S.) 468.

[j] (N. Y. 1889) Noticing an action for trial at special term is not a waiver by the moving party of the right of trial by jury; that not being one of the modes enumerated in Code Civ. Proc. § 1009.—Brown v. Brown, 52 Hun, 532, 5 N. Y. Supp. 893.

[k] (N. Y. 1891) Where an action which is triable by jury is noticed by both parties for the special term, and no issues are stated, the right to a jury trial is waived.—Collins v. Collins, 59 Hun, 620, 13 N. Y. Supp. 28, judgment affirmed (1892) 131 N. Y. 648, 30 N. E. 863.

[l] (N. Y. 1891) Code Civ. Proc. § 970, provides that "where a party is entitled, by the constitution, or by express provision of law, to a trial by jury of one or more issues of fact," the court must, on motion, cause "those issues to be distinctly and plainly stated for trial accordingly." Laws 1891, c. 208, amending this section, extends this right so as to embrace all actions "where one or more questions arise on the pleadings as to the value of property, or as to the damages which a party may be entitled to recover." Held, that the right to a jury trial under this amendment is not waived by the mere service of a notice of trial for the special term.—Underhill v. Manhattan Ry. Co., (Sup.) 18 N. Y. Supp. 43, 27 Abb. N. C. 478, 21 Civ. Proc. R. 441; Eggers v. Manhattan Ry. Co. (Super. N. Y.) 18 N. Y. Supp. 181, 27 Abb. N. C. 463, 21 Civ. Proc. R. 406.

[m] (N. Y. 1892) Where an action which is triable by jury is noticed by both parties for the special term, and no issues are stated, the right to a jury trial is waived.—Collins v. Collins, 131 N. Y. 648, 30 N. E. 863, affirming (1891) 59 Hun, 620, 13 N. Y. Supp. 28.

[n] (N. Y. 1894) Where an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien, noticed for trial by plaintiff, appeared on the calendar on April 6th, and was set down for trial on April 17th, defendant did not waive his right to jury trial of questions of fact arising on a counterclaim by delaying to move therefor till April 9th, as he did not notice the case for trial himself, nor wait until the case was reached for trial before making the motion.—Bradley & Currier Co. v. Herter (Super. N. Y.) 30 N. Y. Supp. 270, 23 Civ. Proc. R. 408.

[o] (N. Y. 1895) The answer in an action for damages admitted plaintiff's cause of action, and set up a counterclaim for equitable relief. The cause was placed on the circuit court calendar, and was noticed for trial by both parties. Two months afterwards defendant moved to strike the cause from the circuit court calendar and place it on the special term calendar. Held, that the motion was properly denied, though there was no issue of fact requiring trial by jury, as defendant's conduct was equivalent to a consent to a trial at circuit.—Tubbs v. Embree, 89 Hun, 475, 35 N. Y. Supp. 820.

[p] (N. Y. 1895) Where defendant has waived his right to jury trial by noticing the cause for an equity term, it is discretionary with the court to deny an application for a jury trial.—Boyd v. Boyd (Com. Pl.) 12 Misc. Rep. 119, 33 N. Y. Supp. 74, 2 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 30.

[q] (N. Y. 1895) A cause was noticed for the October equity term, and when it was reached it was marked "Ready," and passed from day to day, and finally set out for trial on October 25th, when, on defendant's motion, it was marked off, because of the illness of his attorney. Held, that defendant thereby waived his right to a jury trial and that such waiver was not affected by a notice served, after the term, stating that he thereby withdrew his notice of trial.—Boyd v. Boyd (Com. Pl.) 12 Misc. Rep. 119, 33 N. Y. Supp. 74, 2 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 30.

[r] (Ohio, 1866) Where a case has been sent to the court of common pleas, and the defendant procures its reinstatement in the district court, where he cannot have a jury without leave of court, and the case is there tried without a jury, the defendant has waived his right to a jury trial.—Ellithorpe v. Buck, 17 Ohio St. 72.

[s] (Tex. 1886) Where parties consent to set a case for trial on a day of the term after the jurors are discharged under an order of court, no demand being then or previously made for a jury, though the case has been pending for several years, the absence of a jury is no ground for a continuance.—Cole v. Terrell, 71 Tex. 549, 9 S. W. 668.

[t] (Tex. 1895) Where a cause was put on the jury docket by the court after an agreement setting it in the week fixed for nonjury trials, and no objection was made to a jury trial either by the court or the opposite party, defendant should be allowed a jury, although an irregular jury had been discharged in consequence of the setting of the case after jury trials, when he demanded one on the first day of the term, paid the jury fee on the first day set for the trial of juries, and the failure to pay on the day required by Rev. St. art. 3060, did not prejudice the plaintiff, or disturb the business of the court.—Western Union Tel. Co. v. Everheart, 10 Tex. Civ. App. 468, 32 S. W. 90.

[u] (Vt. 1860) A party who has set a cause down, "Not for the jury," and has failed to show to the court good cause of continuance, is not entitled to have the damages assessed by the jury.—Briggs v. Gleason, 32 Vt. 472.

§ 184. Failure to appear or participate in trial.

[a] Jury trial may be waived, and, defendant failing to appear, plaintiff may have the cause heard by the court.
—(Colo. 1883) Leahy v. Dunlap, 6 Colo. 552;
(Ind. 1857) Willets v. Ridgway, 9 Ind. 367.

[b] (Cal. 1854) Under Prac. Act, § 179, providing that a trial by jury shall be waived "by failing to appear at the trial," the mere act of filing an answer does not operate as an appearance at the trial.—Zane v. Crowe, 4 Cal. 112.

[c] (Cal. 1858) Under Prac. Act, § 179, the failure of the defendant in replevin to appear when called is a waiver of a jury.—Waltham v. Carson, 10 Cal. 178.

[d] (Cal. 1890) In a case in which defendant was not represented at the trial, it was immaterial that a jury was not ordered on defendant's demand, as the court was authorized, by Code Civ. Proc. § 631, to dispense with a jury, on failure of defendant to appear in person or by counsel.—McGuire v. Drew, 83 Cal. 225, 23 Pac. 312; Towle v. Clunie, 23 Pac. 314.

[e] (Ind. 1856) By failing to appear at the trial of an action for the tortious taking of personalty, a jury is waived.—Langdon v. Bullock, 8 Ind. 341.

[f] (Ind. 1881) Under 2 Rev. St. 1876, p. 173, § 340, a defendant who has pleaded to the action, but fails to appear at the trial, waives his right to have the issues tried by a jury.—Love v. Hall, 76 Ind. 326.

[g] (Iowa, 1879) Where plaintiff is in default for failure to file a reply to a counterclaim, it is not error to refuse a jury for the trial of the counterclaim.—Chute v. Hozleton, 51 Iowa, 355, 1 N. W. 672.

[h] (Ky. 1854) Where a party, having appeared and pleaded an insufficient plea, failed to answer further, held, that this did not show such a failure to appear as amounted to a waiver of his right to a trial by jury.—Burgess v. Jacobs, 53 Ky. (14 B. Mon.) 517.

[i] (Mich. 1883) Where a defendant, though present, refuses to take part in the trial, he cannot complain that the trial should not have been by jury; he having made no objection thereto.—Lymburner v. Jenkinson, 50 Mich. 483, 15 N. W. 562.

[j] (Mich. 1883) Where defendant has demanded of a justice a jury trial, he is entitled to it, and, though he absents himself from the court room and from further proceedings in the case, this is not a waiver which will authorize the justice to proceed without a jury.—Boats v. Berg, 51 Mich. 8, 16 N. W. 184.

[k] (Mich. 1886) The jury, before which a trial was had, were discharged by the justice on failing to agree, and another trial set for the following day, of which the defendant's attorney had knowledge. The latter informed the justice that his client was gone, and said that he should not further appear in the action, but did not ask for a jury, nor pay the fees therefor, nor did he ask a continuance. Defendant had originally demanded the jury. Held, that defendant waived the right to a jury trial, and it was not error for the justice to retry the case on the next day, without a jury, defendant still failing to appear.—Tremayne v. Roberts, 61 Mich. 284, 28 N. W. 113.

[l] (Mo. 1873) Where defendant objected to going into the case, and took no further action in the case, except to watch its progress, and the clerk's entry was, "neither party requiring a jury the cause is submitted to the court." Held, that this was a sufficient waiver of a trial by jury. A party must either appear at a trial and abide the consequences or not appear. He cannot occupy an ambiguous position, partly appearing and partly not appearing.—Tower v. Moore, 52 Mo. 118.

[m] (N. H. 1876) A party, by failing to appear before a referee in a referred case, does not lose his right to a jury trial.—Kelley v. Simonds, 57 N. H. 308.

[n] (N. Y. 1856) Where a party demands a jury trial in a justice's court, and neglects to appear on the adjourned day, the justice may proceed to hear the cause without a jury.—Kilpatrick v. Carr, 8 Abb. Prac. 117.

[o] (N. Y. 1856) Where an action is at issue on issues of fact only, and is noticed for trial and placed upon the calendar, and the defendant fails to appear, the cause must be tried by the court and jury or by the court alone, if the plaintiff elects to treat the defendant's nonappearance as a waiver of his right to a trial by jury.—Giberton v. Fleischel, 12 N. Y. Super. Ct. (5 Duer) 652.

[p] (N. Y. 1865) The "waiver" of a trial by jury, provided for in the Code, subd. 1, § 266, by the failure of one of the parties to appear, implies the voluntary relinquishment, not the enforcement, of a right by the several parties, not by one, unless the other avails himself of it.—Hendricks v. Carpenter, 27 N. Y. Super. Ct. (4 Rob.) 665.

[q] (Tex. 1880) Where a party has demanded a jury, the mere absence of himself and his attorney, when the case is reached and called for trial, is not a waiver or forfeiture of his right to trial by jury.—Lacroix v. Evans, 1 White & W. Civ. Cas. Ct. App. § 749.

[r] (Tex. 1895) Under Rev. St. art. 3072, providing that, when one party has applied for a jury trial, he shall not be permitted to withdraw such application without the consent of the other parties, where plaintiff so applies, defendant is entitled to a jury trial as a matter of right, which is not waived by his failure and that of his attorney to be present at the trial.—Jones v. Hamby (Civ. App.) 29 S. W. 75.

[s] (Wis. 1856) An issue of fact, where an issue is formed and remains on record, must be tried by a jury, unless the parties agree to a trial by the court, whether the defendant defends at the trial or not.—Haskins v. Wilson, 5 Wis. 106.

§ 185. Participating in proceedings after grant or refusal of jury.

[a] (Cal. 1895) In proceedings to revoke the probate of a will, petitioner, by going to trial after his request for a trial by jury was erroneously refused, does not waive the error.—In re Robinson's Estate, 106 Cal. 493, 39 Pac. 862.

[b] (Minn. 1873) Where a party objected to a compulsory reference of an action at law, and on his objections being overruled a reference was ordered, his thereafter agreeing that a certain person might act as referee under such order, and going to trial before such referee, cannot be deemed a waiver of his right to a jury trial; the record showing that he intended to save his objection.—St. Paul & S. C. R. Co. v. Gardner, 19 Minn. 132 (Gil. 99).

[c] (N. Y. 1869) The fact that a defendant excepts to findings of facts and conclusions of law by the judge is not a waiver of his right to a jury trial.—Fasnacht v. Stehn, 53 Barb. 650, 5 Abb. Prac. (N. S.) 338.

[d] (N. Y. 1874) In an action upon a policy of insurance upon a single stock of goods, it appeared that such stock consisted of 51 items. Held, that the demand of the insured did not constitute an account such as to authorize a compulsory reference, and that by appearing and proceeding to trial under a compulsory order of reference, the party not consenting to the order did not waive his right to a jury trial.—Brink v. Republic Fire Ins. Co., 2 Thomp. & C. 550.

[e] (N. Y. 1880) The party, being entitled to a jury trial and having demanded it, the court reserving its decision on the subject, waives his right to such a trial by proceeding without objection with the trial before the court to completion, and failing to insist on a ruling on the question reserved.—Hand v. Kennedy, 83 N. Y. 149.

[f] (Wis. 1885) Where the court has erroneously held that a case is one at law, and submitted it to trial by a jury, a party objecting waives no right by going to trial before the jury.—Fraedrich v. Flieth, 64 Wis. 184, 25 N. W. 28.

§ 186. Choice of remedies.

[a] (Ind. 1879) Where an action was brought against a board of county commissioners in their own county, and they, refusing to move for a change of venue, challenged every juror for cause, and refused to submit the case to any jurors drawn from the county, the court could try the case without a jury.—Fountain County Com'rs v. Loeb, 68 Ind. 29.

[b] (Mass. 1894) Declaration of Rights, art. 15, preserving the right of trial by jury, does not apply to one who voluntarily avails himself of a statute which provides for a determination of his rights in another manner.—Citizens' Gaslight Co. of Reading, South Reading, & Stoneham v. Inhabitants of Wakefield, 161 Mass. 432, 37 N. E. 444, 31 L. R. A. 457.

[c] (Mo. 1888) In proceedings to condemn land for railway purposes, the right of trial by jury as to the amount of compensation, guarantied by Const. art. 12, § 4, is not waived by the appearance of the owner before the judge in vacation pursuant to notice, and the appointment of commissioners at his request.—Kansas City, C. & S. R. Co. v. Story, 96 Mo. 611, 10 S. W. 203.

[d] (N. M. 1889) The fact that an action on a contract has been wrongfully commenced in the probate court, and removed to the district court on appeal, does not deprive the plaintiff of his right to a jury trial.—Lewis v. Baca, 21 Pac. 343.

[e] (N. Y. 1891) Under Code Civ. Proc. par. 970, as amended by Laws 1891, c. 208, providing that where one or more questions arise on the pleadings as to the value of property, or as to the damages which the party may be entitled to recover, such issues shall be submitted to a jury where the claim for past damages in an action to enjoin the construction of an elevated railroad has been unconditionally waived, a motion to submit the issues to a jury will be denied.—Eggers v. Manhattan Ry. Co. (Super. N. Y.) 18 N. Y. Supp. 181, 27 Abb. N. C. 463, 21 Civ. Proc. R. 403.

[f] (Ohio, 1890) One who, in a justice's court, moves to dismiss an attachment, and files affidavits in support thereof, waives any right he may have had to a trial of the attachment by a jury.—Strauss v. Cooch, 47 Ohio St. 115, 24 N. E. 1071.

§ 187. —— Legal and equitable issues.

[a] (U. S. 1892) Where, after the passage of the act of March 3, 1887 (24 St. p. 554), authorizing suits against receivers without leave of the courts appointing them, a person seeks damages for personal injuries by intervening in the suit wherein the receiver was appointed, he cannot afterwards complain that the matter was determined by a master instead of a jury. —Furrer v. Ferris, 145 U. S. 132, 12 Sup. Ct. 821, 36 L. Ed. 649.

[b] (U. S. 1893) One who files a bill asking equitable relief, procures the appointment of an examiner, takes testimony before him, submits the same to the court, and argues the case on the theory that it is an equity suit, thereby waives any right he may have to a jury trial. —Book v. Justice Min. Co. (C. C.) 58 Fed. 827.

[c] (U. S. 1894) Where an insurance company brings suit to enjoin an action on a policy, it thereby waives the right to a jury trial.—North British & Mercantile Ins. Co. v. Lathrop (C. C.) 63 Fed. 508; Lathrop v. North British & Mercantile Ins. Co., Id.

[d] (Cal. 1852) A party, by filing an "undertaking" preliminary to obtaining an injunction, waives his right to a trial by jury.—Russell v. Elliott, 2 Cal. 245.

[e] (Ind. 1884) One does not waive his right to a trial by jury by agreeing that his action may be consolidated with another proceeding triable by the court.—Orr v. Miller, 98 Ind. 436.

[f] (Mass. 1855) A plaintiff electing to proceed at equity instead of at law, under Rev. St. c. 35, § 3, to recover threefold the amount of usurious interest paid to defendant, does not thereby waive his right to a trial by jury.—Ward v. Hill, 70 Mass. (4 Gray) 593.

[g] (Mo. 1886) Where a petition is framed with a view of obtaining equitable relief, a failure to submit the issue to a jury is not error.—Nelson v. Betts, 21 Mo. App. 219.

[h] (N. Y. 1858) When the allegations and the prayer of the complaint present a case in equity, proper to be tried by the court at special term without a jury, and on such trial it appears that plaintiff's cause of action, if any, is one for the recovery of money only, which could only be tried by jury, except by consent, quære, whether the special term has jurisdiction to order judgment for plaintiff.—Saltus v. Genin, 16 N. Y. Super. Ct. (3 Bosw.) 250.

[i] (N. Y. 1863) In an action for injunction and damages, if the complaint contains allegations appropriate to both legal and equitable relief, and the defendant answers and goes to trial without asking to compel the plaintiff to elect or amend, he cannot object that he was entitled to a trial by jury.—Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Delaware & H. Canal Co., 3 Abb. Dec. 470.

[j] (N. Y. 1867) Where, on the motion of the plaintiff, the court erroneously proceeds to try, without a jury, a cause which should be tried by one, it will not operate as a waiver of the legal rights of the plaintiff, who, failing to show himself entitled to equitable relief, may yet have his claim tried by jury as an action at law.—Davis v. Morris, 36 N. Y. 569.

[k] (N. Y. 1877) A plaintiff, by stating in his complaint an action of a distinctly equitable character, waives the right of trial by jury.—Davison v. Jersey County Associates, 71 N. Y. 333.

[l] (N. Y. 1892) Where plaintiff includes in his complaint a cause of action of which he is not entitled to jury trial as well as one of which he is so entitled, he cannot, as a matter of right, demand a jury trial.—Shenfield v. Bernheimer, 63 Hun, 630, 17 N. Y. Supp. 881.

[m] (N. Y. 1892) The complaint, in an action against an elevated railroad to recover damages for injuries to property, having been so drawn that the action might be regarded as one at law for a nuisance, or in equity to restrain the continuance of a trespass, and defendant's motion that it be sent to the circuit for trial having been overruled, without a motion on its part to require plaintiff to elect whether to try the case as an action for nuisance or for a trespass, defendant could not object that it was denied a jury trial.—Barrett v. Manhattan Ry. Co., 63 Hun, 630, 18 N. Y. Supp. 71.

[n] (Pa. 1891) Under Act April 20, 1846, § 2 (P. L. 411), which provides that when the right of a lien creditor to share in the proceeds of a judicial sale of land purchased by himself is objected to by any person interested, the court shall either refer the matter to an auditor, who shall report as to the proper distribution of the fund, or direct an issue to determine the validity of the purchaser's lien, one who has elected between the two remedies by applying for the appointment of an auditor waives his right to have the matter tried before a jury.—Second Nat. Bank v. Lackawanna & S. Coal & Iron Co., 140 Pa. 628, 21 Atl. 412; Appeal of Jenkins, Id.

[o] (Wash. 1896) A defendant, by allowing, without objection, equitable issues to be made up by the cross complaints of his codefendants, waives any right to demand a jury trial.—Frye v. Hill, 14 Wash. 83, 43 Pac. 1097.

§ 188. Consenting to reference.

[a] Agreeing on a reference is a waiver of a right to a jury trial, and one party cannot afterwards demand it.

—(Ill. 1891) Garrity v. Hamburger Co., 136 Ill. 499, 27 N. E. 11, affirming (1890) 35 Ill. App. 309, and affirmed on rehearing (1891) 28 N. E. 743;

(Ind. 1865) Goodwin v. Hedrick, 24 Ind. 121;

(Iowa, 1872) Hewitt v. Egbert, 34 Iowa, 485;

(La. 1823) Hatch v. Watkins, 1 Mart. (N. S.) 154;

(N. J. 1878) Beattie v. David, 40 N. J. Law (11 Vroom) 102;

(N. Y. 1840) Lee v. Tillotson, 24 Wend. 337, 35 Am. Dec. 624; (1858) Woodruff v. Commercial Mut. Ins. Co., 2 Hilt. 130;

(N. C. 1874) Armfield v. Brown, 70 N. C. 27; Keener v. Finger, Id. 35; (1875) Armfield v. Brown, 73 N. C. 81; (1877) Perry v. Tupper, 77 N. C. 413; (1880) Grant v. Reese, 82 N. C. 72; (1885) Harris v. Shaffer, 92 N. C. 30;

[b] (U. S. 1848) Where defendant acquiesces in a reference, and appears before the auditor, and contests the claim, he cannot object that the case should have been tried by jury.—Kelly v. Smith, Fed. Cas. No. 7,675 [1 Blatchf. 290].

[c] (Fla. 1894) Where defendant in an action for partition of land, without objection, allowed the cause to be tried by the referee, he waived any right he might have had to try the question of title to a jury.—Rivas v. Summers, 33 Fla. 539, 15 South. 319.

[d] (Ga. 1876) Where a person filing exceptions of fact to the report of an auditor, to whom the case has been referred, fails for any cause to convince the court, he is entitled to trial by jury, with the report as prima facie evidence against him.—White v. Reviere, 57 Ga. 386.

[e] (Ill. 1891) Where, after a trial in assumpsit has been commenced before a jury, defendant consents to the discharge of the jury, and to an accounting before an auditor, he cannot afterwards object to the order of reference on the ground that it required disputed questions of fact and law to be decided by the auditor, and therefore invaded his right to a jury trial, since it will be presumed that he waived such right.—Garrity v. Hamburger Co. (Sup.) 28 N. E. 743, affirming on rehearing (1891) 136 Ill. 499, 27 N. E. 11, which affirms (1889) 35 Ill. App. 309.

[f] (Ill. 1891) Even if the right to a jury trial on all questions of fact which might arise in the hearing before the auditor were not waived by defendant, he should, if he desired a jury on any question of fact, have claimed his right before the introduction of evidence in regard thereto, and the finding of the auditor thereon.—Garrity v. Hamburger Co. (Sup.) 28 N. E. 743, affirming on rehearing (1891) 139 Ill. 499, 27 N. E. 11.

[g] (Ind. 1871) Where a party to a suit was present by his attorneys, when the court made an order referring the cause to a master in chancery, and submitted not only to the order of reference, but to an order requiring him to furnish the master with a bill of particulars, making no objection thereto, and appeared before the master, and offered evidence, and was present by his attorneys when the report of the master was filed, and finally when the court ordered the report of the master to be spread upon the order book, together with the evidence, all which he permitted to be done without objection, held, that it was too late for him to demand a jury trial, as the record of these facts disclosed such "oral consent in open court," as shown by the entries on the record, as amounted to a waiver by a jury trial.—Hauser v. Roth, 37 Ind. 89.

[h] (Iowa, 1888) When, on exceptions to a report containing findings of facts and conclusions of law, the report is modified in respect to the latter only, a trial by jury will not be granted at the instance of a party who agreed to the appointment of the referee, and moved to confirm the report.—In re Hooker's Estate, 75 Iowa, 377, 39 N. W. 652.

[i] (Kan. 1890) Where a party objects to the reference of a cause, and demands a jury trial, which objection and demand are overruled, but subsequently consents to the appointment of a referee, he abandons the objection and demand, and waives the jury trial, and the right to insist on the error in denying such trial.—Smith v. Burlingham, 44 Kan. 487, 24 Pac. 947.

[j] (Minn. 1886) Leave to amend his answer was granted to defendant upon condition that he stipulate to try the action before a referee. Held, that a subsequent stipulation by defendant for the appointment of the referee is a waiver of any right which he might have had to demand a jury trial, or to object to the imposing of the condition as an abuse of judicial discretion.—Deering v. McCarthy, 36 Minn. 302, 30 N. W. 813.

[k] (N. H. 1854) Where an auditor has had the question as to the comparative value of keeping chattels pledged, and of their use received by the trustee, submitted to him, and he has passed on it without objection being made, if the right to have that question submitted to a jury ever existed, plaintiff will be deemed to have waived it.—Hills v. Smith, 28 N. H. (8 Fost.) 369.

[l] (N. H. 1876) Defendants moved for a reference, and stipulated to waive jury trial. The action was referred, but the referee signified his inability to act. Held, that defendants could not then revoke their waiver, and claim jury trial.—Marsh v. Brown, 57 N. H. 173.

[m] (N. H. 1877) By consenting to a reference, under Act 1874, c. 97, § 13, a party does not waive his right to a jury trial, as provided for in such act.—Smith v. Fellows, 58 N. H. 169.

[n] (N. Y. 1878) A party who makes no objection to an order of reference and proceeds with the trial before the referee cannot afterwards object to the referee or claim a jury trial.—Baird v. City of New York, 74 N. Y. 382.

[o] (N. C. 1877) Where, after the issues are joined, a reference is ordered on plaintiff's motion, without opposition from defendant, there is a reference by consent which waives the right of trial by jury.—Atkinson v. Whitehead, 77 N. C. 418.

[p] (N. C. 1887) While a party has a constitutional right to have an issue of fact tried by a jury, yet he waives the right by failing to reserve it, or to make the proper demand at the time a reference of such issue is ordered.—Grant v. Hughes, 96 N. C. 177, 2 S. E. 339.

[q] (N. C. 1889) Under Const. art. 4, § 13, providing that in all issues of fact parties may waive the right to a jury, the court may refuse to submit issues to a jury after a voluntary reference.—Nissen v. Genesee Gold Min. Co., 104 N. C. 309, 10 S. E. 512.

[r] (N. C. 1894) Where reference by consent was vacated without objection, and at the next term the case was again referred, against the objection of both parties, such reference is compulsory, entitling plaintiff to a jury trial.—McDaniel v. Scurlock, 115 N. C. 295, 20 S. E. 451.

[s] (N. C. 1896) An order of reference, made at plaintiff's request, is a waiver of his right to a jury trial, and cannot be recalled, except by consent of both parties.—Collins v. Young, 118 N. C. 265, 23 S. E. 1005.

[t] (Ohio, 1869) Where issues of fact relating to accounts have been referred by consent to a master, who has filed his report, and a motion is pending to confirm it, neither party has a right to a trial of the same issues to a jury afterwards.—Butler v. Lee, 2 Cin. R. 5.

[u] (S. C. 1886) One who has, expressly or by implication, consented to a reference to the master, of the issues raised as to the ownership of mortgaged land, cannot afterwards object to the trial of such issue by the court without a jury.—Martin v. Martin, 24 S. C. 446.

[v] (S. C. 1888) Under Code Civ. Proc. § 292, providing that the issues in an action may be referred by consent, and section 274, providing that a jury may be waived, or a reference be ordered, in an action brought by an executor to have the rights of legatees adjusted, a consent to an order of reference is a waiver of a jury, and one who has consented to such reference cannot claim to have the issue tried by jury.—Trenholm v. Morgan, 28 S. C. 268, 5 S. E. 721.

[w] (Wash. 1893) Trial by jury having been once waived, and a reference agreed on, a party cannot demand a jury trial when the judgment on the report has been reversed for failure of the report to state the account, and the case referred for that purpose.—Park v. Mighell, 7 Wash. 304, 35 Pac. 63.

§ 189. Number of jurors.

Infringement of right, see post, §§ 221-225.

[a] In civil cases a trial by less than 12 men as a jury may be good, by agreement between the parties.

[b] (Cal. 1861) In the absence of the plaintiff, defendant consented to a trial before four jurors only. Held, that the consent was invalid without consent of the adverse party, express and entered at the time on the minutes of the court, and that, in default of this, a jury must be either altogether waived or must consist of twelve men.—Gillespie v. Benson, 18 Cal. 409.

[c] (Colo. 1894) In the trial of a civil case before a justice of the peace, the jury may consist of any number of jurors the parties agree upon, or accept without objecting.—Corthell v. Mead, 19 Colo. 386, 35 Pac. 741.

[d] (Ill. 1869) A statutory provision for a jury, on a trial of the right of property, of not less than six nor more than twelve persons, does not prevent the parties from excusing a juror by consent, after the trial has commenced.—Kreuchi v. Dehler, 50 Ill. 176.

[e] (Ill. 1869) A statutory provision for a jury of not less than six nor more than twelve persons, on a trial of the right of property, does not prevent the parties agreeing on a less number than six.—Kreuchi v. Dehler, 50 Ill. 176.

[f] (Ind. 1853) Where a party goes to trial with less than the regular number of jurors without objecting thereto, until after a motion for a new trial, his consent, at least in a civil case, cures the error.—Durham v. Hudson, 4 Ind. 501.

[g] (Ind. 1864) That a cause was tried by a jury of 11 men without the consent of the parties is waived by a failure to object.—Mitchell v. Stephens, 23 Ind. 466.

[h] (Ind. 1872) Under 1 Gav. & H. St. p. 475, § 7, in a proceeding before a justice to condemn lands for the use of a road, as well as on appeal, three viewers are to be appointed, who are to be sworn as jurors to assess the damages, and when such had been appointed without any objection from the owner of the land sought to be condemned, and, on appeal to the circuit court, three other viewers were appointed, the owner only making a general objection to the appointment of viewers, and not claiming a jury of twelve, held, that the right of trial by a jury of twelve was waived, even if the owner otherwise had that right.—Beynon v. Brandywine, B. & S. C. Turnpike Co., 39 Ind. 129.

[i] (Iowa, 1858) It is a duty of the court to see to it that the jury is properly constituted, and the question to a party whether he has any objection to the jury means whether he has any challenge to make. His answer in the negative is not an express waiver of the defect that there were only 11 jurors, he not knowing that such was the fact.—Cowles v. Buckman, 6 Iowa (6 Clarke) 161.

[j] (Ky.) It is no objection to a verdict that the jury was composed of 13 instead of 12 jurors, where the defendant was present in the court below, and did not there object.—(1828) Ross v. Neal, 23 Ky. (7 T. B. Mon.) 407; (1844) Berry v. Kenney, 44 Ky. (5 B. Mon.) 120.

[k] (Ky. 1831) A judgment rendered upon the verdict of less than 12 jurors, unless the defendant waives objection, is erroneous.—Ayres v. Barr, 28 Ky. (5 J. J. Marsh.) 286; Oldham v. Hill, 28 Ky. (5 J. J. Marsh.) 300.

[l] (Minn. 1871) The record of a justice showed that certain persons were sworn as a jury to try a cause, by agreement of parties. Held, that defendant was estopped by his consent to object, on appeal, that the jury did not consist of the proper number, or was, for any cause, illegally constituted.—Clague v. Hodgson, 16 Minn. 329 (Gil. 291).

[m] (Mo. 1860) A party has the constitutional right to a jury of 12 men, in any jury trial before a court of record, but he may waive this right and consent to a trial with a smaller number, in which case the consent should be entered of record.—Vaughn v. Scade, 30 Mo. 600.

[n] (Mo. 1867) In all trials in courts of record it is the constitutional right of a party to demand a jury of 12 men; and, if no exceptions are taken to the action of the court in proceeding to trial with a less number, the party may still take advantage of the error, by a motion in arrest of judgment. The defect will not be considered as waived or consent presumed, unless entered of record.—Scott v. Russell, 39 Mo. 407.

[o] (Mo. 1894) The right of property owners to a jury of twelve men in the county court, on an issue as to damage caused by the establishment of a highway, is waived by an appeal by them, from the judgment of such court on a verdict of six men, to the circuit court, where they waive their right to a jury.—In re Essex Ave., 121 Mo. 98, 25 S. W. 891; Hughes v. Mermod. Id.

[p] (N. Y. 1845) An agreement by the parties in a justice's court, for the trial of a cause by a jury of less than six jurors, is good, though not made until after the return of the venire, and when the jury is drawn, if the parties proceed to trial pursuant to such agreement.—Carman v. Newell, 1 Denio, 25.

[q] (Tex. 1880) A party submitting to a trial before 11 jurors, without objecting thereto, waives the defect.—Williams v. Mudgett, 2 Posey, Unrep. Cas. 254.

[r] (Wis. 1853) Unless a party shows affirmatively that he objected to a jury of six instead of twelve, as prescribed in Rev. St. c. 86, § 17, he will be presumed to have waived his right to a jury of twelve, and will not be heard to dispute the constitutionality of the 16th section of this chapter, providing for a jury of six in the county court.—Millett v. Hayford, 1 Wis. 401.

[s] (Wis. 1874) By agreement of the parties to a bastardy proceeding in the circuit court, one of the jurors was discharged and the case allowed to proceed with the remaining eleven jurors. Held, that the verdict was not thereby rendered illegal.—Rindskopf v. State, 34 Wis. 217.

§ 190. At trial de novo on appeal.

Necessity of demanding in appellate court, see ante, § 155 [o]

[a] (Md. 1855) By section 46, art. 3, of the present constitution, it is declared that the legislature shall enact no law for the taking of private property for public use without just compensation agreed on or awarded by a jury being first paid or tendered to the owner. Held, that the failure to appeal, as allowed by Act 1838, c. 226, and the ordinance of Baltimore City of 1850, No. 17, and of 1853, No. 58, making provision for the previous payment or tender of compensation, and giving the right to secure a trial by jury by appeal, operates as a waiver of the right to a jury trial.—Steuart v. City of Baltimore, 7 Md. 500.

[b] (N. J. 1881) There is no constitutional right to trial by jury on appeal from the courts for trial of small causes, where no jury was demanded below.—Wanser v. Atkinson, 43 N. J. Law (14 Vroom) 571.

[c] (Pa. 1877) The fact that a landowner had permitted his case, on appeal to the court of quarter sessions from an assessment of benefits from the opening of a street, to go before a board of viewers without objection, held to be no waiver of his constitutional right to a trial by jury, on appeal to the court of common pleas, this being effectuated by Act 1874, p. 283, giving an appeal "whether such assessments shall have been made by viewers or otherwise than upon a trial in court; and an appeal is not provided for or regulated by existing laws."—Appeal of Pusey, 83 Pa. 67.

[d] (Pa. 1884) Under Const. 1874, art. 16, § 8, providing that, on appeal from an assessment of damages for the taking of private property for a public use the amount of damages shall be determined by a jury; and Act May 24, 1878, declaring that, if no exceptions are filed within a specified time to the report of viewers assessing damages caused by a change in the grade of a street, the court shall enter judgment of confirmation, from which either party may appeal, etc.,—the right to file exceptions to such report is limited to questions of jurisdiction, regularity of the proceedings, and misconduct of the viewers, and, as the appellate tribunal has no right to hear exceptions relating to the amount of damages, exceptions of that character are nugatory; and hence the filing thereof is not a waiver of the right of appeal and trial by jury.—Rodgers v. Borough of Freemansburg, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 523.

[e] (Pa. 1886) A landowner who has been awarded damages for the appropriation of his land for a public road, and who has had his day in court, on exceptions to the award, has no standing to petition the court for a jury to assess his damages.—In re West Whiteland Road, 4 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 511.

§ 191. Special or struck jury.

[a] (Ohio, 1878) Where a party demands a struck jury, and the clerk serves the panel on the parties and notifies them of the time to strike, and they fail to strike during the term, such neglect waives that right, and it is too late to claim it at the trial of the cause at a subsequent term.—Hutchins v. Wick, 4 Ohio Dec. 170, 1 Cleve. Law Rep. 89.

§ 192. Evidence of waiver.

[a] A waiver of the right of trial by jury cannot be implied.

[b] (U. S. 1832) The right of trial by jury, secured by the constitution of the United States, is for the benefit of parties litigating in courts of justice, and is a privilege they may waive; but every reasonable presumption should be made against the waiver of a right deemed so valuable as to be secured by the constitution.—United States v. Rathbone, Fed. Cas. No. 16,121 [2 Paine, 578].

[c] (Ill. 1849) Where the record shows that a case was tried by the court in the presence of the parties without objection, it will be presumed that a trial by jury was waived.—Burgwin v. Babcock, 11 Ill. (1 Peck) 28.

[d] (Mich. 1888) When a justice of the peace is not able to certify positively that no jury was demanded at the time provided by statute, he should allow a jury trial.—Pontiac & Lapeer Plank Road Co. v. Hopkinson, 69 Mich. 10, 36 N. W. 797.

[e] (Minn. 1873) A constitutional right to a jury trial may be waived, but such waiver should plainly and explicitly appear; otherwise, every reasonable presumption should be made against it.—St. Paul & S. C. R. Co. v. Gardner, 19 Minn. 132 (Gil. 99).

[f] (N. Y. 1891) Where a jury is impaneled in an action for waste, and is afterwards discharged, and the cause tried by the court, without exception from plaintiff, it will be presumed that plaintiff waived her right to a trial by jury; Code Civ. Proc. § 968, providing that in such action "an issue of fact must be tried by a jury, unless a jury trial is waived."—Eysaman v. Small, 61 Hun, 618, 15 N. Y. Supp. 288.

§ 193. Record of waiver.

[a] (U. S. 1847) Where the laws permit a waiver of a trial by jury, it is too late to raise an objection that the waiver was not made a matter of record, after the case has proceeded to a hearing.—Phillips v. Preston, 46 U. S. (5 How.) 278, 12 L. Ed. 152.

[b] (Ark. 1884) The record entry, "Neither party requiring a jury," may be construed to import a waiver.—Chapline v. Robertson, 44 Ark. 202.

[c] (Cal. 1891) Where the record shows that two special questions were submitted to the jury which they answered, but gave no general verdict, and that these questions did not cover all the issues in the case; that the trial proceeded, and both parties introduced evidence; and that the case was submitted to the "court for decision and judgment," which was rendered against defendant.—the right to trial by jury was waived by defendant, under Code Civ. Proc. § 631, providing that jury trial may be waived by oral consent in open court entered in the minutes, or by failure to appear at the trial.—Montgomery v. Sayre, 25 Pac. 552.

[d] (Ill. 1864) A waiver of a jury trial must appear from the record, to support a trial and judgment by the circuit court without a jury.—Ware v. Nottinger, 35 Ill. 375.

[e] (Ind. 1845) Where a cause has been tried by the court instead of a jury, the record should show that the cause was submitted to the court by the parties.—Mahan v. Sherman, 7 Blackf. 378.

[f] (Ohio, 1893) The journal entry recited that, "the cause coming on for trial, came thereupon the parties and their attorneys, and neither party demanded or waived the interposition of a jury, but without objection submitted the cause to the court upon the pleadings, evidence, and argument of counsel." Held, that the journal shows that trial by jury was waived, within the meaning of Rev. St. § 5204, subd. 3, providing that such waiver may be, by "oral consent in open court, entered on the journal."—Bonewitz v. Bonewitz, 50 Ohio St. 373, 34 N. E. 332, 40 Am. St. Rep. 671.

[g] (W. Va. 1878) A recital in a record that "neither party required a jury, and the court is substituted in lieu of a jury to try the case," held to be "consent entered of record," waiving a jury, within Act 1872, c. 47, § 35.—King v. Burdett, 12 W. Va. 688.

§ 194. Operation and effect of waiver.

[a] (Cal. 1859) Where a jury has been waived, it is immaterial whether the action, under Prac. Act, § 254, be a legal or equitable proceeding.—Smith v. Brannan, 13 Cal. 107.

[b] (Cal. 1890) A defendant cannot demand a trial by a jury after having waived his right thereto in consideration of an agreement to transfer a cause to another department of the court.—Hawes v. Clark, 84 Cal. 272, 24 Pac. 116.

[c] (Ill. 1884) Where a jury trial was waived by both parties after the cause was at issue, and there is no subsequent change of the issues before the cause is called for trial, the court properly denied defendant's demand when the case was called for a jury trial.—Heacock v. Lubukee, 108 Ill. 641.

[d] (Ill. 1893) Waiving a jury, and submitting a cause on the short-cause calendar to trial by the court without objection, is a waiver of the objection that the case was improperly placed on such calendar, even though the party on a previous day moved to strike the case from the short-cause calendar, and excepted to the denial of his motion.—Belford v. Beatty, 145 Ill. 414, 34 N. E. 254, affirming (1892) 46 Ill. App. 539, and following Jensen v. Fricke (1890) 133 Ill. 171, 24 N. E. 515.

[e] (Iowa, 1879) Where an appeal in the circuit court is by consent consolidated with another case between the same parties, brought from the district court, an entry on the judge's docket of a stipulation to try "by the court" does not bind the parties, when made before the consolidation.—Rogers v. Martin, 51 Iowa, 709, 2 N. W. 262.

[f] (Iowa, 1888) Where parties agree to a trial by the court, and the jury is afterwards discharged for the term, amendments to the petition not materially changing the issues do not entitle defendant to a trial by jury.—Foster v. Hinson, 75 Iowa, 291, 39 N. W. 682.

[g] (Md. 1893) An agreement, under Const. art. 4, § 8, to submit a civil cause to the court for determination without the aid of a jury, will not, in the absence of an expression to the contrary, be construed as an agreement to try the case only before the judge who happened to be on the bench when the agreement to submit was made and entered on the docket.—Lanahan v. Heaver, 77 Md. 605, 26 Atl. 866, 20 L. R. A. 759.

[h] (Mass. 1859) An agreement, under St. 1857, c. 267, waiving a trial by jury, submits the facts to the determination of the presiding judge.—Loring v. Whittemore, 79 Mass. (13 Gray) 228.

[i] (Mass. 1886) Where the defendant in a suit in equity set down the cause for hearing before a single justice, and by lapse of time lost his right to have issues framed for a jury, and afterwards agreed with the plaintiff for a postponement of the case, he is not entitled thereby to a trial by jury unless it was so stipulated by him, in his agreement with plaintiff, as a condition of postponement.—Dole v. Wooldredge, 142 Mass. 161, 7 N. E. 832.

[j] (Minn. 1893) The waiver of a jury when a cause is called for trial is a waiver only as to the issues then formed, and not an agreement to waive it as to all new and different issues that may thereafter be formed under amended pleadings.—McGeagh v. Nordberg, 53 Minn. 235, 55 N. W. 117.

[k] (N. Y. 1891) Plaintiff brought an action in equity for the reformation of a lease and for damages. Plaintiff showed himself entitled to common-law relief, and the court sent the cause to the circuit to have such right tried before a jury, where, a jury trial being waived, the issues were tried by the court without a jury, and damages awarded plaintiff. Held, that defendant, having waived a trial by jury, could not object that, only monetary damages having been awarded plaintiff and equitable relief denied him, the action should have been dismissed.—Phelps v. City of New York, 61 Hun, 521, 16 N. Y. Supp. 321.

[l] (N. Y. 1895) Code Cr. Proc. § 701, provides that on a plea in the court of special sessions, other than one of guilty, if defendant does not demand a jury, the court must proceed to try the issue. Section 702 provides that, before the court hears any testimony on the trial, defendant may demand a jury. Held, that an express waiver, at the time of the plea, of a jury, not being necessary, it, having been made, did not affect defendant's right thereafter, before hearing the testimony, to demand a jury.—People v. Molinet, 13 Misc. Rep. 301, 34 N. Y. Supp. 1114.

[m] (S. C. 1888) Where both parties waive jury, and consent to trial by the court on testimony taken by a referee, after the chief issue has been so tried and determined neither party has the right to demand a jury for a subordinate issue; and it is error to order trial by jury on such issue without consent of both parties.—State v. Pacific Guano Co., 28 S. C. 63, 5 S. E. 167.

[n] (S. C. 1892) While, under Code Civ. Proc. § 288, the judge cannot, in an action on contract, withdraw the trial of issues of fact from the jury without the consent of the several parties, the party requesting that the case be heard by the judge without the aid of the jury cannot complain that it was so tried.—Stepp v. National Life & Maturity Ass'n, 37 S. C. 417, 16 S. E. 134.

[o] (S. C. 1895) After a party has, in writing, waived a trial by jury in a civil action, he will not be afterwards heard to say that he was denied the right.—C. Aultman & Co. v. Salinas, 44 S. C. 299, 22 S. E. 465.

[p] (Tex. 1879) A party's right to trial by jury by paying the jury fee, etc., is not affected by his waiver of a jury at a preceding term.—Dean v. Sweeney, 51 Tex. 242; Brown v. Chenoworth, Id. 469.

[q] (Wis. 1881) On the evidence as it then stood, both parties, by agreement, permitted the jury to be discharged, and submitted the cause to the court; but plaintiffs were permitted, against defendants' objection, to introduce further evidence, and the cause was decided by the court with reference to such additional evidence, without any waiver by defendants of their right to a jury trial on that state of the evidence. Held error.—Hewitt v. Week, 51 Wis. 368, 8 N. W. 269.

§ 195. —— Effect on right to jury at subsequent trial.

[a] (Ill. 1881) A waiver of jury trial is not a waiver of a jury upon a second trial, after the cause is remanded from an appellate court.—Town of Carthage v. Buckner, 8 Ill. App. (8 Bradw.) 152.

[b] (Mich. 1879) A party who stipulated that the case might be tried by a referee has the right to a jury trial, after a new trial is ordered, on appeal taken after trial before the referee.—Hopkins v. Sanford, 41 Mich. 243, 2 N. W. 39.

[c] (N. H. 1893) A case put on the jury list was, by agreement, taken from it, marked "Issues to the court," and continued. Next term it was tried to the court, but not decided. Held, that plaintiff was not at the next term entitled to a jury trial, unless the agreement was ordered vacated at the trial term.—Trainor v. Heath, 67 N. H. 384, 29 Atl. 846.

[d] (N. C. 1875) Where a trial by jury has been waived by consent of the parties, and the finding of the court set aside on appeal, the new trial must be by jury, unless this also be waived by consent.—Benbow v. Robbins, 72 N. C. 422.

[e] (Tenn. 1882) No demand for a jury trial was made, but the case was tried by a jury without objection. After amendment a second trial was to be had. Held, that defendant could object to a jury trial the second time.—Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. v. Foster, 78 Tenn. (10 Lea) 351.

[f] (Tex. 1888) Under Rev. St. art. 3061, providing that any party to a civil suit desiring to have the same tried by a jury shall make application therefor in open court on the first day of the term of court at which the suit is tried, upon the reversal of a judgment by the supreme court, either party is entitled on the second trial to apply for a jury, although the same was waived at the first trial.—Dunlap v. Brooks, 8 Willson, Civ. Cas. Ct. App. § 357.

§ 196. —— Effect of waiver after demand.

[a] (Cal. 1892) Where defendant, some days before trial, orally demanded a jury, plaintiff making no objection, and the day before trial defendant withdrew his demand, whereupon plaintiff served written demand, and at the opening of the trial asked for a jury, and defendant objected to a jury and to the submission of issues thereto, on the ground that no special issues had been settled, the overruling of defendant's objections, where the issues to be tried were made by the pleadings, and where the court itself found on all the issues submitted, was not prejudicial error; Code Civ. Proc. § 1717, providing that, "if no jury is demanded, the court must try the issues, and if, on written demand, a jury is called by either party, and the issues are not sufficiently made up" by the pleadings, the court, on due notice, must frame the issues and submit the same, with the evidence, to the jury for a verdict.—In re Westerfield's Estate, 96 Cal. 113, 30 Pac. 1104; Smith v. Westerfield, Id.

[b] (La. 1811) If plaintiff pray for a jury and defendant do not, the latter cannot be deprived of his right to one by the former's waiver of his prayer.—Sweeny v. Barbin, 2 Mart. (O. S.) 47.

[c] (La. 1855) The consent of both parties alone can waive a jury, awarded at the instance of either or by the court proprio motu.—Livaudais v. Spear, 10 La. Ann. 24.

[d] (La. 1887) A jury had been asked for by defendant, and, when the cause was called for trial, he offered to waive the jury, and have the cause determined by the judge, to which plaintiff objected. Held, that the jury could not be dispensed with, except by the consent of both parties.—Lewis v. Klotz, 39 La. Ann. 259, 1 South. 539.

[a] (Tenn. 1871) A record of trial without plea of not guilty will not support a plea of former conviction; and if, on motion of the prisoner, a new trial is granted, and he stands mute, on entry of a plea of not guilty, he is entitled, under Code, §§ 5212–5214, to the usual panel and challenges.—Link v. State, 50 Tenn. (3 Heisk.) 252.

[b] (Wis. 1883) The right of the accused in a criminal prosecution, under Const. art. 1, § 7, to trial by a jury "of the county or district wherein the offense shall have been committed," is waived by a motion for a change of venue, which is granted.—Bennett v. State, 57 Wis. 69, 14 N. W. 912, 46 Am. Rep. 26.

[m] (Iowa, 1884) Code, 1873, § 2740, provides that in civil actions issues of fact "must be tried by a jury, unless the same is waived." Section 4350 provides that in criminal cases "an issue of fact must be tried by a jury." Held, that the defendant in a criminal case cannot waive his right to a jury trial; and the court has no jurisdiction in such a case unless aided by a jury, and any judgment rendered by the court alone is null and void.—State v. Carman, 63 Iowa, 130, 18 N. W. 691, 50 Am. Rep. 741.

[n] (Iowa, 1895) Under Code 1873, § 4347, relating to criminal trials in district courts, and providing that issues of fact shall be tried by a jury, and section 4350, providing that an issue of fact must be tried by a jury of the county in which the indictment is found, a jury cannot be waived in a criminal proceeding prosecuted by indictment.—State v. Douglass, 96 Iowa, 308, 65 N. W. 151.

[o] (La. 1881) One accused of a crime may waive his right to a trial by jury, and elect to be tried by the court. There is nothing in the constitution that conflicts with such right of waiver.—State v. White, 33 La. Ann. 1218; State v. Askins, 33 La. Ann. 1253.

[p] (Mich. 1861) The recorder has no right in his court to try a case on a criminal complaint or information without a jury, although the prisoner is willing to waive his right to a jury trial.—People v. Smith, 9 Mich. 193.

[q] (Mich. 1892) Under How. Ann. St. § 6485, providing that in all actions where, in the court's opinion, the subject-matter is peculiarly proper for the consideration of the jury, the court may order the cause to be so tried, the court may try a criminal case with a jury, though the accused desires to submit the questions of fact to the judge.—City of Grand Rapids v. Bateman, 93 Mich. 135, 53 N. W. 6.

[r] (Mich. 1892) How. Ann. St. § 7097, which provides that in criminal prosecutions in justice's court, if no jury is demanded by the accused, the court shall proceed to try the issue, and (section 7099) that, if the accused shall not have waived his right to trial by jury, a jury shall be summoned, gives the accused his choice of two modes of trial; and it is error for the court to order a jury against his protest, after he has demanded a trial by the court without a jury.—People v. Steele, 94 Mich. 437, 54 N. W. 171.

[s] (Neb.) One charged with a felony cannot waive a jury trial of the issues of fact raised by his plea in bar and the state's reply. Cr. Code, § 449.—(1894) Arnold v. State, 57 N. W. 378. CONTRA, see (1884) State v. Priebnow, 16 Neb. 131, 19 N. W. 628.

(Wis. 1877) State v. Lockwood, 43 Wis. 403.

[c] (Ga. 1890) Under Code, § 10, providing that "a person may waive or renounce what the law has established in his favor when he does not thereby injure others or affect the public interest," the right to a trial by jury may be waived in a misdemeanor case.—Logan v. State, 86 Ga. 266, 12 S. E. 406.

[d] (Iowa, 1888) The Code provides that an issue of fact must be tried by a jury of the county in which the indictment is found. Section 4669 provides that on a plea, if defendant does not demand a trial by jury, the justice must proceed to try the issue. Section 4672 provides that, before the justice has heard any testimony, defendant may demand a trial by jury. Section 4702 provides that in misdemeanor cases, wherein the district court has only appellate jurisdiction, the cause appealed shall stand for trial anew in such court in the same manner that it should have been tried before the justice. Held, that defendant, who was tried before a justice, has a right, on appeal, to waive trial by jury in the district court.—State v. Ill, 74 Iowa, 441, 38 N. W. 143.

[e] (Mich. 1874) The trial of a defendant by a justice without a jury, upon a criminal complaint for a simple assault and battery, where the defendant, after having pleaded not guilty, on being asked by the justice if he wished a trial by a jury, declared that he did not, and submitted to a trial without calling for a jury, is not a violation of the defendant's constitutional rights.—Ward v. People, 30 Mich. 116.

[f] (Minn. 1893) A defendant in a criminal case in a municipal court which has jurisdiction only of offenses cognizable before a justice of the peace may waive a jury, and consent to trial by the court.—State v. Woodling, 53 Minn. 142, 54 N. W. 1068; Same v. Bannock, 53 Minn. 419, 55 N. W. 558.

[g] (Mo. 1896) In a prosecution for violation of a city ordinance, defendant may waive his right to a jury trial by submitting the case to the court on a statement of admitted facts.—City of St. Charles v. Hackman, 133 Mo. 634, 34 S. W. 878.

[h] (Ohio, 1877) One charged with a minor offense, such as the violation of the statute forbidding common labor on Sunday, may waive a jury, and submit to a trial by the court.—Billigheimer v. State, 32 Ohio St. 435.

[i] (Tenn. 1874) In a prosecution for the unlawful sale of liquor, where there is no controversy about the facts, the attorney general and defendant may make an agreed statement of facts, and leave it to the court to apply the law and make the finding.—Levi v. State, 63 Tenn. (4 Baxt.) 289.

[j] (Tex. 1886) Code Cr. Proc. art. 535, allowing a waiver of jury trial in misdemeanors, is not in conflict with Const. art. 1, § 10, providing that "in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall have a speedy public trial by an impartial jury," and a person accused of a misdemeanor has the right to be tried by the court without a jury.—Moore v. State, 22 Tex. App. 117, 2 S. W. 634.

[k] (Va. 1886) Under Const. art. 1, § 10, conferring the right of trial by jury in all capital or criminal prosecutions, and Code, c. 158, § 36, providing for the waiver of a jury in any case except that of "felony or misdemeanor," defendant, indicted in a corporation court for unlawfully selling liquor to a minor, cannot waive a trial by jury.—Mays v. Commonwealth, 82 Va. 550; Ford v. Same, Id. 553.

[l] (W. Va. 1888) Code, c. 116, § 29, so far as it provides for the trial of misdemeanor cases by the court in lieu of a jury, by consent of the defendant, is held constitutional by an equally divided court.—State v. Cottrill, 31 W. Va. 162, 6 S. E. 428.

[m] (W. Va. 1888) Bill of Rights, § 14, declaring that "trial of crimes and misdemeanors, unless herein otherwise provided, shall be by a jury of 12 men," secures to persons accused of crimes and misdemeanors the right to have an issue of not guilty tried by a jury, but does not inhibit the trial of such issues by the court in lieu of a jury, and an issue in a misdemeanor case can be so tried by consent of defendant. Conviction is affirmed, the court being equally divided.—State v. Cottrill, 31 W. Va. 162, 6 S. E. 428.

[n] (W. Va. 1890) Code, c. 116, § 29, which provides for the trial of misdemeanors by the court instead of a jury when defendant consents thereto, is constitutional.—State v. Griggs, 34 W. Va. 78, 11 S. E. 740; Same v. Snider, 34 W. Va. 83, 11 S. E. 742.

§ 200. On plea of guilty.

[a] (Ind. 1885) Upon indictment for murder the defendant's case, after plea of guilty entered, is for the consideration of a jury and not of the court; and a judgment entered on such plea by the court will be reversed as nullity.—Wartner v. State, 102 Ind. 51, 1 N. E. 65.

[b] (N. H. 1892) A person indicted for murder may waive his constitutional right to a jury trial by pleading guilty.—State v. Almy, 67 N. H. 274, 28 Atl. 872, 22 L. R. A. 744.

§ 201. Number of jurors.

In bastardy proceeding, see ante, § 189 [a].
Infringement of right, see post, §§ 221–225.

[a] Defendant cannot waive his constitutional right to trial by jury, so as to authorize a trial by less than 12 jurors.

(Nev. 1876) State v. Borowsky, 11 Nev. 119.

[e] (Ark. 1848) A defendant in a criminal case, accused of an assault, etc., is entitled, by the constitution, to a trial by a jury of twelve men, but he may waive the right, and submit to a trial by six men, or by the justice of the peace alone, if he so choose; and the statute authorizing a trial by six jurors is, so far as it tends to deprive the defendant of this right, unconstitutional.—State v. Cox, 8 Ark. (3 Eng.) 436.

[f] (Ark. 1886) A defendant, under indictment for illegal liquor traffic, declined to agree to have his case tried by a jury of less than 12. Thereupon the court, by mistake, impaneled a jury of 11. The error was not discovered until the evidence was all in, and the jury were being instructed as to the law of the case. The court ordered another juror in the box, and was about to hear the case all over, when the defendant objected; whereupon the court ordered the jury of 11 to retire, and consider their verdict. Held that, under these circumstances, the defendant could not be regarded as having agreed to be tried by a jury of less than 12.—Warwick v. State, 47 Ark. 568, 2 S. W. 335.

[g] (Ark. 1886) Section 2219, Mansf. Dig., providing that cases other than felony may, by agreement of the parties, be tried by a jury of less than 12 jurors, is not unconstitutional. —Warwick v. State, 47 Ark. 568, 2 S. W. 335.

[h] (Iowa, 1879) Where, in a prosecution for forgery, a juror was taken ill during the trial, and was discharged with the consent of the defendant, the continuance of the trial with the remaining 11 jurors was not an infringement of the defendant's right to trial by jury, as secured by the constitution, which provides that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate."—State v. Kaufman, 51 Iowa, 578, 2 N. W. 275, 33 Am. Rep. 148.

[i] (Mass. 1853) On a trial for a misdemeanor, if the defendants' counsel consent that one juror may be withdrawn, and the case proceed with the remaining eleven, which consent is duly entered of record, a verdict of guilty will not be set aside because rendered by only eleven jurors.—Commonwealth v. Dailey, 66 Mass. (12 Cush.) 80.

[j] (Mich. 1867) Where there had been a conviction of murder by a jury, one of whom, being an alien, was totally disqualified as a juror, but the fact was not discovered by the defendant till after verdict, on a motion for a new trial, it was held that the defendant could not expressly or impliedly waive his constitutional right to trial by 12 men.—Hill v. People, 16 Mich. 351.

[k] (Pa. 1882) Act May 1, 1861, providing that certain offenses may be tried, at defendant's election, by a justice of the peace and six jurors, is not in conflict with Bill of Rights, art. 1, § 6, declaring that trial by jury shall be as heretofore, and the right thereof remain inviolate.—Lavery v. Commonwealth, 101 Pa 560.

[l] (Pa. 1888) A trial in the court of quarter sessions by 11 jurors, although the twelfth juror was excused on account of sickness, and the trial continued with the consent of the defendant, is illegal, since the defendant cannot waive his constitutional right to trial by jury, so as to authorize a trial by less than 12 jurors.—Commonwealth v. Byers, 5 Lanc. Law Rev. 270, 5 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 295.

[m] (Pa. 1894) One under indictment for obtaining money by false pretenses may waive his constitutional right to a trial before a jury of 12.—Commonwealth v. Sweet (Quart. Sess.) 16 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 198; Id., 4 Pa. Dist. R. 136.

[n] (S. D. 1894) Trial by a jury of less than the constitutional number, by consent, is a "trial by jury," within the meaning of Huron City Charter, § 24, giving the police justice exclusive jurisdiction over offenses against the ordinances of the city, and section 27, allowing an appeal in such cases as were tried without a jury, and in no others.—City of Huron v. Carter, 5 S. D. 4, 57 N. W. 947.

§ 202. Form and sufficiency of waiver.

[a] (Ga. 1890) On a trial for a misdemeanor, defendant's waiver of arraignment and a jury trial recited that he "waives arraignment and a trial by jury, pleads not guilty, and puts himself upon the country." Defendant then appeared, and went to trial without a jury. Held, that the words "puts himself upon the country," contained in the printed form on which the waiver was written, and which through inadvertence were not erased, were mere surplusage.—Logan v. State, 86 Ga. 266, 12 S. E. 406.

[b] (Ind. 1861) A waiver of trial by jury in criminal cases and an agreement for trial by the court (2 Rev. St. p. 371) is not binding on defendant, if it be made by his attorney without consulting him, though he was present in court.—Brown v. State, 16 Ind. 496.

[c] (Mich. 1894) A defendant, charged before a justice with being a disorderly person, was asked if he wanted a jury, and he replied, by his attorney, that the court could do as it chose about the jury, as he should put in no defense. Held, that defendant waived a jury.—People v. Weeks, 99 Mich. 86, 57 N. W. 1091.

[d] (N. Y. 1870) The right of trial by jury must be distinctly waived by the prisoner, and such waiver be distinctly and affirmatively shown on the return, to give the court of special sessions of the city of New York jurisdiction. It is not enough to show that the prisoner elected to be tried "by the court of special sessions," but the question "if he waives a trial by jury" must be distinctly put to him.—People v. Mallon, 39 How. Prac. 454.

[e] (Ohio, 1886) Under Rev. St. § 3718a, giving the justice of the peace jurisdiction of prosecutions for the adulteration of food, and providing that, if a trial by jury be not waived, the justice shall proceed to impanel a jury to hear such cause, the accused need not waive the trial by jury in writing to give the magistrate jurisdiction to proceed to final judgment in the case without a jury, since Rev. St. § 7147, providing that, where one accused of a misdemeanor in a writing subscribed by him during the examination waives a jury and submits to be tried by the magistrate, he may render a final judgment, does not apply to the prosecution under such special statute.—Martindale v. State, 1 O. C. D. 328, 2 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 328.

§ 203. Operation and effect of waiver.

[a] (Ala. 1885) A waiver of trial by jury does not apply to a subsequent trial at another term of court.—Cross v. State, 78 Ala. 430.

[b] (Ga. 1892) A person who waives a trial by jury, and is convicted by the county court of a misdemeanor, but, on certiorari to the superior court, obtains a reversal, may, on return to the county court, withdraw his waiver of trial by jury, and demand a jury trial.—Brown v. State, 89 Ga. 340, 15 S. E. 462.

[c] (Ga. 1896) On the case being called for trial, accused declined to have counsel appointed to defend him, and also waived his right to a jury trial, but on a subsequent day the court appointed counsel, who promptly moved to withdraw the previous waiver of jury. Held that, it not appearing that the state's counsel made any point as to delay, or claimed that the granting of the motion would result in prejudice to the state, the motion was erroneously denied.—Butler v. State, 97 Ga. 404, 23 S. E. 822.

[d] (Iowa, 1855) A defendant appealed from a justice, alleging the judgment to be against the evidence. In the district court the prosecuting officer moved to affirm. Thereupon the defendant, being asked whether he wanted a jury, said he did not. Then the court affirmed the judgment. Then the defendant asked for a new trial, and demanded a jury to try the issue presented. Held that, if otherwise entitled, declining a jury on the motion, where he had no right to a jury, was not a waiver of a jury for a new trial.—Baurose v. State, 1 Iowa (1 Clarke) 374.

[e] (La. 1881) Accused, indicted for larceny, waived jury trial, was found guilty by the court, and obtained a new trial. Held, that he could demand a jury.—State v. Touchet, 33 La. Ann. 1154.

[f] (Minn. 1893) The right, having been waived, cannot be recalled at will.—State v. Bannock, 53 Minn. 419, 55 N. W. 558.

[g] (N. J. 1883) One who waives in writing his right to trial by jury, as provided by Laws 1867, p. 463, cannot afterwards retract the waiver after he has pleaded to the accusation.—Edwards v. State, 45 N. J. Law (16 Vroom) 419.

[h] (N. Y. 1863) Where a person, arrested and brought before a magistrate under a charge of petit larceny, presented to the magistrate a writing, signed by him, in which he waived a jury and demanded to be tried before a court of special sessions, he thereby waived his right, when subsequently brought before the court of special sessions, to demand a jury.—People v. Riley, 5 Parker, Cr. R. 401.

[i] (Ohio, 1871) When by consent of both parties a jury is waived and a cause submitted to the court, neither party can subsequently withdraw his waiver and demand a jury, unless for special reasons to be determined by the court.—Hauser v. Metzger, 1 Cin. R. 164.

[j] (Vt. 1894) Where the parties waive their right to go to the jury, they make the trial one by the court.—Miltimore v. Bottom, 66 Vt. 168, 28 Atl. 872.

§ 204. Impairment of right in general.

[a] (Ind. 1858) A party who claims his constitutional right of trial by jury must have it, though full justice has been done by the court as to the merits.—Shaw v. Kent. 11 Ind. 80.

[b] (Mass. 1885) Prov. Laws 1692–93, c. 13, § 2, providing that every person building with brick or stone in Boston shall have liberty to set half his partition wall on his neighbor's ground, and that when such neighbor shall build he shall pay for one-half the partition wall, so far as it shall be built against, is unconstitutional, in that it denies the right of trial by jury.—Wilkins v. Jewett, 139 Mass. 29, 29 N. E. 214.

[c] (Nev. 1877) If it appears that the court below refused a demand for a jury to try issues of fact in an action at law, and tried the case without a jury, it is the duty of the appellate court, notwithstanding the fact that such issues may have been fairly tried and proper judgments rendered by the court, to grant a new trial.—Treadway v. Wilder, 12 Nev. 108.

[d] (Pa. 1888) Act May 4, 1855, giving the custody and earnings of children to the mother, when the father from drunkenness neglects to provide for them, without a jury trial, is not violative of Const. art. 6, § 1, preserving the right of a trial by jury.—Van Billiard v. Van Billiard, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 333.

[e] (Tex. 1873) Although the governor may assume that a vacancy exists in the office of state treasurer, he has no power to adjudge the office forfeited. Such power belongs alone to the judiciary, and the right of trial by jury exists in every such case.—Honey v. Graham. 39 Tex. 1.

§ 205. Statutory provisions.

[a] (Miss. 1840) Where, on motion of a surety, who had paid the debt, against the principal, there was an issue found, and a trial by jury, it was held that the proceedings were valid, although the statute authorizing this summary remedy made no provision for the trial by jury, and without such trial would be unconstitutional.—Woodward v. May, 5 Miss. (4 How.) 389.

[b] (Wis. 1866) Rev. St. c. 140, § 19, which provides for ascertaining by the verdict of a jury, in an action on a penal bond, the fact of a breach and the amount due, is modified by Laws 1864, c. 88, which provides for a compulsory reference when the trial of an issue of fact will require the examination of a long account.—Dane County Sup'rs v. Dunning, 20 Wis. 210.

§ 206. Rights of action and procedure in civil cases.

In criminal prosecutions, see post, § 216.

[a] (U. S. 1870) Internal Revenue Act July 13, 1866, § 19 (14 Stat. 152), as amended March 2, 1867 (14 Stat. 475), providing that no suit to restrain the assessment or collection of any tax authorized under the act shall be maintained in any court, is not unconstitutional, in that it deprives the party of a trial by jury.—Pullan v. Kinsinger, Fed. Cas. No. 11,463 [2 Abb. (U. S.) 94].

[b] (U. S. 1875) Act June 22, 1874 (18 Stat. 186), requiring the production by defendants or claimants of all books, papers, etc., in proceedings under the revenue laws, and providing that in case of failure so to do the allegations of the libel may be taken as confessed, is not unconstitutional, as in violation of that provision of the federal constitution which gives the right of trial by jury in suits at common law when the value in controversy shall exceed $20. When the issues are made up, the claimants have a right to demand a jury trial; but they must first submit to and comply with all reasonable and proper rules and orders of the court entered against them in making up the issues and preparing the case for final trial.—United States v. Distillery No. 28, Fed. Cas. No. 14,966 [6 Biss. 483].

[c] (Conn. 1841) The statute exempting military officers from actions at law for imposing fines is not unconstitutional, as impairing the right of trial by jury.—Merriman v. Bryant, 14 Conn. 200.

[d] (Ga. 1808) "An act to alleviate the condition of debtors and afford them temporary relief," in providing, by section 4, that the superior and inferior courts shall not issue any civil process or try any civil case, except for trial of right of property, real and personal, until the act by its limitations expires, since it merely postpones, does not take away the right of trial by jury, in violation of the constitutional prohibition.—Grimball v. Ross, T. U. P. Charlt. 175.

[e] (Ga. 1848) An act of the legislature, clogging the right of trial by jury with onerous conditions, will not be pronounced unconstitutional, unless it totally prostrates the right or renders it wholly unavailing to a party for his protection; nor is an act authorizing a judgment to be rendered without the intervention of a jury on that account unconstitutional.—Flint River Steamboat Co. v. Foster, 5 Ga. 194, 48 Am. Dec. 248.

[f] (La. 1876) A state law allowing judge, on disagreement of jury, to decide cause, does not infringe the federal constitution.—Joseph v. Bidwell, 28 La. Ann. 382, 26 Am. Rep. 102.

[g] (N. J. 1836) A court cannot by a rule of practice alter the law, so as to deprive a party of his right to trial by jury.—Hinchly v. Machine, 15 N. J. Law (3 J. S. Green) 476.

[h] (N. Y. 1882) Code Civ. Proc. § 1778, which requires that, in an action against a corporation on an evidence of debt, an order must be obtained and served with the answer, is in derogation of the common law and must be strictly construed, in view of the fact that it deprives a corporation of the constitutional right of trial by jury guarantied to natural persons, and therefore must be held to apply only to actions founded exclusively on evidence of debt issued by corporations.—Bradley v. Albemarle Fertilizing Co., 2 Civ. Proc. R. 50.

[i] (N. Y. 1893) Code Civ. Proc. § 2244, relating to pleadings in summary proceedings, provides that at the time when a precept is returnable the person in or claiming possession may file "a written answer, verified in like manner as verified answers in actions in the supreme court, denying generally the allegations, or specifically any material allegations of the petition." No other answer or pleading by defendant in such proceeding is authorized by statute. Section 2247 provides that defendant may, on tendering or paying the proper amount of costs, demand a jury trial. Held, that where, in summary proceedings to remove a tenant for nonpayment of rent, defendant filed a verified answer denying all the allegations in the petition, and alleging generally payment of all rent due, and tendered the proper fees for a jury, and demanded a jury trial, it was error for the justice, on defendant's refusal to comply with an order requiring him to furnish a bill of particulars of the alleged payments, to refuse defendant a jury trial, and render judgment against him.—Bloom v. Huyck, 71 Hun, 252, 25 N. Y. Supp. 7.

[j] (N. C. 1787) The act of assembly of 1785, requiring the court to dismiss, on motion, suits brought by persons whose property had been confiscated against the purchasers, on affidavit of the defendants that they were purchasers from the commissioners of confiscated property, is unconstitutional, as an infringement of the right of trial by jury.—Bayard v. Singleton, 1 N. C. 5.

[k] (Ohio, 1892) Rev. St. § 5204, which provides that, in an action arising on contract, trial by jury may be waived, by the consent of the party appearing, when the opposite party fails to appear by himself or attorney, does not impair the right of trial by jury, and is therefore valid.—Springfield, J. & P. Ry. Co. v. Western Ry. Const. Co., 49 Ohio St. 681, 32 N. E. 961.

[l] (S. C. 1835) The seventy-ninth rule of the supreme court, which requires a copy of the indictment in cases of felony to be obtained by order of the judge who tried it before an action for malicious prosecution shall be commenced, is no abridgment of the right of trial by jury as used in the state before the adoption of the constitution of the state.—Burton v. Walkins, 2 Hill, 674.

[m] (Va. 1883) The jurisdiction of a justice of the peace is limited to suits for less than $50. A. owed B. $126. B. induced A. to give B. bonds of $42 each. After all became due B. brought three separate suits upon such bonds, respectively, before a justice of the peace. Held, that a writ of prohibition to restrain the justice from proceeding was properly issued, since the splitting of the total indebtedness into several distinct debts was an infringement of the right to trial by jury.—James v. Stokes, 77 Va. 225.

[n] (Wis. 1874) The charter of Waupun (P. & L. Laws 1871, c. 381, §§ 38–40), providing for condemning land for a street, but not for notifying the owner of the time and place for the assembling of the jury, held to contravene Const. art. 11, § 2, that "no municipal corporation shall take private property for public use against the consent of the owner, without the necessity thereof being established by the verdict of a jury."—Seifert v. Brooks, 34 Wis. 443, following Hood v. Finch (1859) 8 Wis. 381.

§ 207. —— Jurisdiction in equity.

[a] (U. S. 1890) Code Miss. 1880, § 1845, providing that, in an action to set aside a fraudulent conveyance and subject the property to a simple contract debt, the creditor shall have a lien on the property from the filing of his bill, does not deprive the defendant of his right of trial by jury to determine the amount of the demand against him.—Scott v. Neely, 140 U. S. 106, 11 Sup. Ct. 712, 35 L. Ed. 358.

[b] (Ala. 1888) Code 1886, § 3545, authorizing a creditor who has no lien or judgment to file a bill in chancery for the discovery of assets of the debtor liable to the payment of his debts, making no provision for the trial of any questions arising on such a bill, does not violate Const. art. 1, § 12, preserving the right of trial by jury.—Montgomery & F. Ry. Co. v. McKenzie, 85 Ala. 546, 5 South. 322.

[c] (Ala.) Code 1886, § 3545, providing that a creditor without a lien or judgment may maintain a bill in chancery for the discovery of the assets of the debtor, is not a violation of Const. art. 1, § 12, providing that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate."—(1888) Southern Ry. Construction & Land Co. v. McKenzie, 85 Ala. 546, 5 South. 322; (1892) Id., 96 Ala. 465, 11 South. 367; (1892) Montgomery & F. Ry. Co. v. Same, Id.; (1892) Norman v. Goetter, 96 Ala. 468, 11 South. 368.

[d] (Ala. 1802) Code 1886, § 3546, relating to bills of discovery, as amended by Sess. Acts 1888–89, p. 96, providing that any number of judgment or other creditors may join as complainants in such bill, is not in conflict with Const. art. 1, § 12, "preserving the right of trial by jury," because it does not provide for a jury trial to determine the amounts due the several complainants.—Cook v. New York Condensed Milk Co., 100 Ala. 580, 13 South. 685.

[e] (Ala. 1892) Code 1886, § 3545, providing that a creditor without a lien or judgment may maintain a bill for the discovery of the assets of the debtor, does not violate Const. art. 1, § 12, providing that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate.—Cook v. Schmidt, 100 Ala. 582, 13 South. 686.

[f] (Md. 1889) Code 1888, art. 16, § 26, which authorizes any person entitled to an interest of any kind in property to institute a suit against any one denying or interested to deny his title, and provides that the court may in its discretion declare him entitled thereto, without other relief being asked or given, so far as its language seems to warrant the filing of a bill to quiet title to land claimed by virtue of adverse possession against the holder of the paper title violates the constitutional provision guarantying to suitors the right of trial by jury.—McCoy v. Johnson, 70 Md. 490, 17 Atl. 387.

[g] (Miss. 1891) Code, § 1843, relating to chancery courts, provides that "the said courts shall have jurisdiction of bills exhibited by creditors, who have not obtained judgments at law, or, having judgments, have not had executions returned unsatisfied, to set aside fraudulent conveyances of property, or other devices resorted to for the purpose of hindering, delaying, or defrauding creditors, and may subject the property to the satisfaction of the demand of such creditors, as if complainant had a judgment and execution thereon returned, 'No property found.'" Held, that a decree setting aside an assignment on the complaint of creditors who had not obtained judgments at law would not be disturbed on the ground that it violated Const. art. 1, § 12, which declares that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate," since Const. 1890, § 147, expressly provides that "no judgment or decree in any chancery or circuit court rendered in a civil cause shall be reversed or annulled on the ground of want of jurisdiction to render said judgment or decree, from any error or mistake as to whether the cause in which it was rendered was of equity or common-law jurisdiction."—Scott v. Francis Vandegrift Shoe Co., 10 South. 455.

[h] (N. Y. 1870) Act April 24, 1862, providing for the collection of demands against vessels, by giving a lien enforceable in rem, is not in conflict with Const. art. 1, § 2, preserving the right of trial by jury in cases in which it had been theretofore used, since liens were given in such cases before the adoption of the constitution, which were enforceable in equity without a jury.—Sheppard v. Steele, 43 N. Y. 52, 3 Am. Rep. 660.

[i] (N. Y. 1891) Laws 1844, c. 220, relating to mechanics' liens in New York City, merely provided that liens may be filed where work has been done or materials furnished on buildings in that city; that foreclosure proceeding should be commenced by the service of a notice on the owner: and that issue should be joined on the appearance of the parties and tried as in action of assumpsit. Laws 1885, c. 342, relating to mechanics' liens, applies to the entire state, and provides that, in an action to foreclose, all persons having a lien on the property must be made defendants, and that the court may settle and determine the equities of all the parties thereto; and section 12 provides that the issues joined must be tried the same as other issues are tried. Held, that the act of 1885 does not violate Const. 1846, art. 1, § 2, which provides that "trial by jury, in all cases in which it has been heretofore used, shall remain inviolate forever," since the issues of fact in an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien are still triable by jury.—Schillinger Fireproof Cement & Asphalt Co. v. Arnott (Sup.) 14 N. Y. Supp. 326.

[j] (Pa. 1870) Under the constitution the legislature cannot convert a legal right into an equitable one, so as to infringe upon the right of trial by jury.—Appeal of Norris, 64 Pa. (14 P. F. Smith) 275.

[k] (Pa. 1884) Act March 17, 1869, authorizing the court to allow the attachment of property alleged to have been fraudulently conveyed, is not unconstitutional, as denying to defendant the right to trial by jury.—White v. Thielens, 106 Pa. 173.

[l] (Pa. 1895) The supplement of April 22, 1856 (P. L. 502), to Act 1850, relative to litigation between tenants in common, will not be construed to require a suit in equity, where one has a legal right, as this would be depriving parties of the right to jury trial, contrary to the constitution.—Winton Coal Co. v. Pancoast Coal Co., 170 Pa. 437, 33 Atl. 110.

[m] (Tenn. 1831) Acts 1829, c. 95, creating a special court for the determination of suits commenced by the Bank of Tennessee against its officers and other defaulters to the institution, and providing that such suits shall be tried according to the principles of equity, and that there shall be no appeal, is repugnant to the constitutional provision that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate.—State Bank v. Cooper, 10 Tenn. (2 Yerg.) 599, 24 Am. Dec. 517.

[n] (W. Va. 1889) Code 1887, c. 106, § 1, which provides that an attachment may be sued out in equity for the recovery of damages for a wrong, is not unconstitutional, as depriving defendant of the right to trial by jury.—McKinsey v. Squires, 32 W. Va. 41, 9 S. E. 55.

§ 208. —— Proceedings for procurement of jury.

[a] (Mass. 1882) A statute providing that, in civil actions, a party shall not be entitled to a trial by jury unless he files, within the time prescribed, a notice that he desires such trial, is constitutional.—Foster v. Morse, 132 Mass. 354, 42 Am. Rep. 438.

[b] (N. J. 1838) Where the statute provides for a trial by jury, unless expressly waived, the court cannot make a rule that a jury shall be considered as waived unless demanded at a certain time.—Ten Eyck v. Farlee, 16 N. J. Law (1 Har.) 348.

[c] (N. Y. 1887) Const. art. 1, § 2, preserving the right to have an issue of adultery tried by a jury, could not be modified or limited by a rule of practice, such as general rule No. 31, so as to reduce it to a matter in the discretion of the court, if application therefor was not made within 10 days after issue.—Conderman v. Conderman, 44 Hun, 181.

§ 209. —— Verification of pleading and affidavit of defense.

[a] (D. C. 1879) The seventy-third rule of the supreme court, requiring defendant's pleas to a petition under oath to be verified by affidavit, is not unconstitutional, as denying a defendant the right to trial by jury in all cases where the value in controversy exceeds $20.—National Metropolitan Bank v. Hitz, 4 MacArthur & M. 198.

[b] (D. C. 1893) A rule of court providing that plaintiff in an action ex contractu, whose affidavit sets out his cause of action, and the amount he claims to be due, shall be entitled to judgment, unless defendant files a counter affidavit, is not unconstitutional, as depriving defendant of the right of jury trial.—Cropley v. Vogeler, 2 App. D. C. 28.

[c] (Ga. 1878) Act 1870, authorizing the city court of Augusta to render judgment without a jury in all civil cases founded on contract, where an issuable defense has not been filed on oath, is not unconstitutional, as it does not deprive the defendant of the right of trial by jury.—Dortic v. Lockwood, 61 Ga. 293.

[d] (Miss. 1856) Act 1854, providing that, if a railroad company sue for installments of stock, it shall not be necessary for the company to prove such subscription to have been made, unless the defendant shall deny the subscription by plea or answer, verified by affidavit, is constitutional.—Thigpen v. Mississippi Cent. R. Co., 32 Miss. 347.

[e] (Pa. 1854) An act of assembly requiring specific affidavits of defense in certain cases, where copies of the instrument sued on are filed, is not unconstitutional, as infringing the right of trial by jury.—Bishop v. Denormande, 1 Pittsb. R. 145.

[f] (Pa. 1878) The law as to affidavits of defense does not contravene the constitutional guaranty of the right of trial by jury.—Lawrance v. Borm, 86 Pa. 225; Randall v. Weld, Id. 357.

[g] (Vt. 1849) The county court have the right to require the defendant, in a suit apparently brought for the collection of a debt, to furnish his affidavit, at least of his own belief, that the claim is disputable; and, if he refuse to comply with such rule, it is not error for them to deny him a trial by jury.—Jones v. Spear, 21 Vt. 426.

§ 210. —— Entry of judgment.

[a] (N. Y. 1850) The statute of 1844, providing that all recognizances given in the city and county of New York to answer a criminal charge, on being forfeited, shall be filed by the district attorney, together with a certified order of the court forfeiting the same, in the office of the county clerk, and docketed as if the same were the transcript of a judgment record for the penalty, and that such judgment shall be a lien on real estate, and may be collected by execution, is not in contravention of the section of the constitution of the year 1821, which declared that the trial by jury, in all cases in which it had been theretofore used, should remain inviolate forever.—Gildersleeve v. People, 10 Barb. 35.

[b] (Pa. 1872) Where defendant, answering with plaintiff, agreed to abide by the act of July 26, 1842, a judgment entered under that act for an unpaid balance of a premium note, by filing a memorandum in the prothonotary's office, is not an infringement of the defendant's right to have his liability settled by a jury, as he has by such an agreement agreed to waive a jury trial.—Lycoming Fire Ins. Co. v. Buck, 1 Luz. Leg. Reg. 351.

[c] (Pa. 1877) A rule of court provided that, in appeals from the judgment of a magistrate, if the appellant did not appear when the case was called, judgment would be given against him. Held, that the rule was not a violation of the right of trial by jury.—Lloyd v. Toudy, 4 W. N. C. 225.

[d] (Wash. 1895) Logger's Lien Act (Laws 1893, p. 428) § 20, in so far as it provides that in an action against a purchaser of logs, lumber, etc., within the 30 days given laborers to file liens, to recover damages for eloigning the property, the court may enter a personal judgment against the eloigner, and thus deprive him of the right to trial by jury, is invalid and void.—McCoy v. Cook, 13 Wash. 158, 42 Pac. 546.

§ 211. —— New trial.

[a] (U. S. 1888) The exaction, as a condition of refusing a new trial, that the prevailing party shall remit a portion of the amount of the verdict, does not impair the constitutional right of trial by jury.—Arkansas Val. Land & Cattle Co. v. Mann, 130 U. S. 69, 9 Sup. Ct. 458, 32 L. Ed. 854.

[b] (R. I. 1879) The repeal of Gen. St. c. 210, § 1, which gave suitors in the supreme court a second trial as of course, does not contravene Const. art. 1, § 15, providing that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate."—Mathews v. Tripp, 12 R. I. 256.

[c] (Tenn. 1890) Code, § 3122, providing that not more than two new trials shall be granted in an action, does not infringe the constitutional right of trial by jury, or operate to deprive any one of his property otherwise than by the judgment of his peers or the law of the land.—East Tennessee, V. & G. Ry. Co. v. Mahoney, 89 Tenn. 311, 15 S. W. 652.

§ 212. —— Restrictions on right of appeal.

Appeal to court in which jury of less than 12 is authorized, see post, § 222 [r].

Effect of provision for jury trial on appeal, see post, § 237.

In criminal prosecutions, see post, § 217.

[a] (Colo. 1892) Even if, where trial by jury is a constitutional right, a statute permitting this right to be exercised only upon an appeal, there being no unreasonable restrictions connected with the appeal, is legal, it is not legal where the right of appeal, and jury trial in connection therewith, are made to depend on the giving of bond and other restrictions.—McInerney v. City of Denver, 17 Colo. 302, 29 Pac. 516.

[b] (Conn. 1867) A statute that does not allow an appeal to a jury from a judgment of a justice of the peace not exceeding $5 in amount is not unconstitutional in this state.—Curtis v. Gill, 34 Conn. 49.

[c] (Conn. 1871) The adoption of a state constitution, providing that "the right of trial by jury shall be preserved inviolate," does not prohibit the legislature from increasing the amount requisite to entitle a defeated party in an action before a justice to appeal and obtain a jury trial, although such new enactment enlarges the number of causes in which a jury trial is practically denied.—Guile v. Brown, 38 Conn. 237.

[d] (Mass. 1805) The provision of the constitution that "in all controversies concerning property, and in all suits between two or more persons, except in cases in which it has heretofore been otherwise used and practiced, the parties have a right to a trial by jury," is not violated by a law which disallows an appeal from a justice of the peace on a complaint filed to collect a fine under the militia law.—Mountfort v. Hall, 1 Mass. 443.

[e] (Mass. 1857) A statute extending the jurisdiction of justices of the peace to civil actions for the recovery of not more than $100, and requiring any party appealing to give security for the prosecution of his appeal, and for costs, is not unconstitutional, as infringing on trial by jury.—Hapgood v. Doherty, 74 Mass. (8 Gray) 373.

[f] (Mass. 1874) St. 1863, c. 191, authorizing the mayor and aldermen of Cambridge to construct sidewalks and to assess the expense of edge stones and covering materials "upon the abutters in just proportions," is not unconstitutional, for giving one aggrieved no right of appeal to a jury.—Howe v. City of Cambridge, 114 Mass. 388.

[g] (Mont. 1885) Act March 2, 1883, § 2, providing that the findings of appraisers appointed to assess the value of stock killed by a railroad shall be held to be conclusive evidence of the value of such stock, is unconstitutional in that, by denying the right of appeal from such findings, it deprives the railroad of the right of trial by jury.—Graves v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 5 Mont. 556, 6 Pac. 16, 51 Am. Rep. 81.

[h] (Neb. 1894) Code Civ. Proc. § 985, providing that, "if either the plaintiff or defendant in his bill of particulars claims more than $20, the case may be appealed to the district court, but if neither party demand a greater sum than $20, and the case is tried by a jury, there shall be no appeal," is not in contravention of Bill of Rights, § 6, providing that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate, but the legislature may authorize trial by a jury of a less number than 12 men in courts inferior to the district court," or of section 24, providing that "the right to be heard in all civil cases in the court of last resort, by appeal, error, or otherwise, shall not be denied," as applied to an action before a justice of the peace involving less than $20, and in which a jury trial with a jury composed of less than 12 men was had, since section 24, while preserving the right of review in the courts of last resort, does not necessarily imply that such review shall be obtained by appeal.—Moise v. Powell, 40 Neb. 671, 59 N. W. 79.

[i] (N. H. 1878) The provincial act of 1714, in force prior to 1791, provided for a trial by a jury of 18 men in proceedings by a landlord for the eviction of a tenant. Act 1791 provided for a trial of forcible entry and detainer suits before two justices, with a jury, who ordered restitution of the land without inquiring into the merits of the title; and their judgment was no bar in a subsequent action. Gen. St. 1866, c. 231, empowers a justice of the peace to summon the tenant in all real and possessory actions, and try all questions as to the right of immediate possession, except the question of title, in which the defendant can have the benefit of a jury trial either on a plea of title or appeal only, by submitting to the burden of giving security, not only to prosecute his appeal, but to pay rent and damages for the detention of the land. Held, that the act of 1866 was in contravention of the constitution of 1792, providing that trial by jury as theretofore "used and practiced" shall remain inviolate.—Perkins v. Towle, 58 N. H. 425.

[j] (N. J. 1881) Const. 1884, ordaining that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate, Act March 12, 1880, denying the right to demand a jury trial on appeal from the justice's court, unless the judgment, exclusive of the costs, exceeds $30, is unconstitutional.—McGinty v. Carter, 48 N. J. Law (19 Vroom) 113, 3 Atl. 78.

[k] (Ohio, 1872) Swan & C. St. pp. 1280, 1301, providing for a preliminary assessment of damages for taking land for a county road by a board of three viewers, and requiring the claimant, on appealing from the order of the county commissioners made on the viewers' report, to give bond, etc., does not contravene Const. art. 1, § 5, declaring the right of trial by jury inviolate.—Reckner v. Warner, 22 Ohio St. 275, approving Norton v. McLeary (1858) 8 Ohio St. 205.

[l] (Pa. 1820) Act March 20, 1810, § 11, which requires the payment of costs before an appeal can be entered under the arbitration law, is not unconstitutional, as depriving a poor person of the right of trial by jury.—McDonald v. Schell, 6 Serg. & R. 240.

§ 213. —— Costs.

As restriction on right of appeal, see ante, § 212 [l].

In criminal prosecutions, see post, § 219.

[a] (Cal. 1895) There is no error in requiring a party, in accordance with a rule of court, to deposit jury fees as a condition to having a jury.—Bank of Lassen County v. Sherer, 108 Cal. 513, 41 Pac. 415.

[b] (Colo. 1877) Laws 1874, pp. 214, 215, providing that a party demanding a trial by jury in the probate court shall be required to advance and pay into court a jury fee of $20, does not contravene Const. U. S. Amend. 7, securing the right of trial by jury.—Venine v. Archibald, 3 Colo. 163.

[c] (Colo. 1877) The amount of a jury fee, which a party demanding a trial by jury may be required to pay, is a matter resting in the discretion of the legislature; and the courts will not interfere, unless the fixed fee amounts to a practical prohibition of the right.—Venine v. Archibald, 3 Colo. 163.

[d] (Conn. 1895) Gen. St. § 1356, providing for a jury of six for trial of an action of summary process, and requiring the party asking for it to give bonds, is constitutional.—Miller v. Lampson, 66 Conn. 432, 34 Atl. 79.

[e] (Iowa, 1875) Laws 15th Gen. Assem. c. 32, providing that a per diem of the jury shall be taxed as part of the costs, does not violate Bill of Rights, § 9, which declares that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate.—Adae v. Zangs, 41 Iowa, 536.

[f] (Iowa, 1876) The statute authorizing the jury's fees to be taxed to the unsuccessful party is constitutional.—Little v. McGuire, 43 Iowa, 447.

[g] (Iowa, 1888) Under Bill of Rights, § 9, declaring that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate," Acts 1876, c. 143, § 16, as amended by Acts 19th Gen. Assem. c. 24, § 6, which provides for trial by 6 jurors in city superior courts, is not unconstitutional in requiring the party demanding 12 jurors to pay the additional expense of the same.—Conners v. Burlington, C. R. & N. Ry. Co., 74 Iowa, 383, 37 N. W. 966.

[h] (Me. 1872) Pub. Laws 1868, c. 151, § 6, providing that the party demanding a jury in the superior court shall pay the jury fee and tax the same in his costs, if he prevail, is not in violation of Const. art. 1, § 20, providing that in all civil cases and in all controversies concerning property "the parties shall have a right to trial by jury, except in cases where it has heretofore been otherwise practiced."—Randall v. Kehlor, 60 Me. 37, 11 Am. Rep. 169.

[i] (Minn. 1862) There is no valid objection to charging a party who demands a jury trial a reasonable jury fee.—Adams v. Corriston, 7 Minn. 456 (Gil. 365).

[j] (Mo. 1884) Rev. St. § 2802, giving special juries to either party, on motion, by paying the costs of the same, does not violate the constitutional right of trial by jury.—Vierling v. Stifel Brewing Co., 15 Mo. App. 125.

[k] (Mo. 1892) The provision of Rev. St. 1889, § 2613, for an attorney's fee as costs in favor of plaintiff in a suit for injury to stock resulting from the failure of a railroad company to fence its track, is not repugnant to Const. art. 2, § 28, which declares that the "right of trial by jury as hereinbefore enjoined shall remain inviolate," because the section does not expressly provide for a jury trial; but, being in the nature of a penalty or exemplary damages, the amount must be determined by a jury, unless the right be waived.—Briggs v. St. Louis & S. F. Ry. Co., 111 Mo. 168, 20 S. W. 32.

[l] (Tenn. 1892) In Acts 1891, c. 101, making railroads liable for all injuries to stock upon or near their unfenced tracks, the provision that the amount of attorney's fees to be allowed plaintiff, in an action to recover for such injuries, shall be fixed by the "court trying the case," does not refer to the judge alone but to the tribunal, including both judge and jury; and under it the question of fees should be submitted to the jury, so that the act does not as to such fees deprive the company of the right to a jury trial.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Crider, 91 Tenn. 489, 19 S. W. 618; Newport News & M. V. R. Co. v. Barbour, Id.; Same v. Turner, Id.; Same v. Claybrook, Id.

[m] (Wyo. 1889) Rev. St. § 3401, providing that if, within 10 days after the order for change of venue, a plaintiff who has applied for the change fails to give bond for the costs thereof, the cause shall be deemed discontinued, and the costs taxed against said plaintiff, does not deny him the administration of justice or his constitutional right to a jury trial.—Barkwell v. Chatterton, 4 Wyo. 307, 33 Pac. 940.

§ 214. —— Bonds and recognizances.

As restriction on right of appeal in civil cases, see ante, § 212.

Entry of judgment on bond, see ante, § 210 [a].

[a] (Ark. 1849) Dig. c. 67, § 46, providing that, in case the property specified in the delivery bond shall not be delivered as provided, then the said bond shall have the force and effect of a judgment, on which execution may issue against all the obligors, is not repugnant to the constitutional guaranty of a trial by jury, because, in executing such a bond, the obligors must have accepted the condition proposed by the statute, and thus waived a jury trial.—Ex parte Reardon, 9 Ark. (4 Eng.) 450.

[b] (N. J. 1873) Nix. Dig. p. 576, requiring a person, however poor and unknown, to give a bond before he can discharge his vessel from a builder's lien and obtain a trial, does not violate the right of trial by jury.—Edwards v. Elliott, 36 N. J. Law (7 Vroom) 449, 13 Am. Rep. 463.

plicit consent.—United States v. Rathbone, Fed. Cas. No. 16,121 [2 Paine, 578].

[b] (Ga. 1886) Act Oct. 16, 1885, provides that masters in chancery shall report their findings of fact and conclusions of law; that on exceptions filed the judge shall examine the report, and if there be no error verdict shall be taken on the report, and if there be error he shall submit the issue to a jury, and only so much of the evidence as is pertinent to this issue shall be read; that newly-discovered evidence, such as would authorize a new trial, shall be submitted; that incompetent testimony admitted by the master shall be omitted, and competent testimony rejected by him shall be given to the jury. Held, that the act is not obnoxious to the constitutional provision (Code, § 5174) declaring that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate.—Mahan v. Cavender, 77 Ga. 118.

[c] (Mo. 1851) Article 16 of act regulating practice in courts of justice, authorizing a reference of issues to referees, does not infringe the constitutional right of trial by jury.—Shepard v. Bank of Missouri, 15 Mo. 143.

[d] (Neb. 1888) A purely legal action cannot by referred except by consent of the parties, the constitution guarantying to either party, in such case, the right of trial by a jury.—Kinkaid v. Hiatt, 24 Neb. 562, 39 N. W. 600.

[e] (Neb. 1895) A reference in an action at law cannot be had except by consent, as the parties are entitled to a trial by jury.—Kuhl v. Pierce County, 44 Neb. 584, 62 N. W. 1066.

[f] (N. H. 1875) That part of Acts 1874, c. 97, § 13, which provides for committing certain causes to referees for trial, is not in conflict with article 20 of the bill of rights, or any other part of the constitution of the state, although the legislature have no power to pass an act which shall take away or impair the substance of the right of trial by jury as used and practiced when the constitution was adopted.—Copp v. Henniker, 55 N. H. 179, 20 Am. Rep. 194.

[g] (N. C. 1878) A compulsory reference of issues of fact to the determination of a single person is a violation of the constitutional right of trial by jury.—Bernheim v. Waring, 79 N. C. 56.

[h] (Pa. 1892) Act March 25, 1873, which compels parties to submit certain controversies to arbitration, without right of appeal, is unconstitutional, as depriving the parties of their right to trial by jury.—Cutler v. Richley, 151 Pa. 195, 25 Atl. 96, 30 Wkly. Notes Cas. 561.

[i] (Tex. 1873) Parties have a right to trial by jury, and when a jury is demanded it is error in the court to dismiss the case upon a fact ascertained by the court from report of an auditor.—Pfeiffer v. Maltby, 38 Tex. 523.

§ 216. Practice and procedure in criminal prosecutions.

[a] (Ala. 1858) Code, § 3615, requiring that accused, after a change of venue, shall be tried on a certified copy of the indictment found, does not impair his right to a trial by jury and is not repugnant to any principle of the bill of rights.—Bramlett v. State, 31 Ala. 376.

[b] (Cal. 1865) Section 296 of the criminal practice act, providing that, "if the demurrer be disallowed, the court shall permit the defendant at his election to plead, which he must do forthwith, or at such time as the court may allow; if he do not plead, judgment shall be pronounced against him,"—does not interfere with the right of trial by jury guarantied in criminal cases by the constitution.—People v. King, 28 Cal. 265.

[c] (Me. 1853) No law can be enacted which shall take away the right to a trial by jury or interpose such impediments as unreasonably to impair it in criminal cases.—Saco v. Wentworth, 37 Me. 165, 58 Am. Dec. 786.

[d] (N. C. 1884) Code, § 908, which confers on the court power to amend defective justices' warrants, is not in conflict with Bill of Rights, art. 1, § 13, providing that "no person shall be convicted, * * * but by * * * a jury."—State v. Crook, 91 N. C. 536.

[e] (Ohio, 1854) A provision, in an act conferring certain criminal jurisdiction on probate courts, that, if the defendant does not demand a trial by jury, he shall be tried by the court, is not unconstitutional.—Dailey v. State, 4 Ohio St. 57.

[f] (Ohio, 1856) Where the accused has the option of submitting the issue to the jury, or to the court, and he submits the issue to the court, the right of trial by jury is not, by such submission, infringed.—Dillingham v. State, 5 Ohio St. 280.

[g] (Tex. 1884) Code Cr. Proc. art. 560, subd. 6, giving trial judges discretionary power to refuse continuances, is not repugnant to Bill of Rights, § 15, guarantying accused the right of trial by jury.—Lillard v. State, 17 Tex. App. 114.

[h] (Vt. 1853) St. 1852, § 22, entitled "An act to prevent traffic in intoxicating liquors," authorizing the arrest, without warrant, of a person found intoxicated, his detention in custody and examination, when sober, as to the place where and the person of whom he obtained liquor, is not in violation of Const. § 10, which gives persons accused of crime the right to trial by jury.—In re Powers, 25 Vt. 261.

[i] (Vt. 1887) The legislature may prescribe the mode and manner of jury trials in criminal causes, provided it does ont impair the right itself.—In re Marron, 60 Vt. 199, 12 Atl. 523.

[j] (Wis. 1883) St. §§ 4697–4699, provide that a defendant in a criminal action, who claims that he was insane at the time of the commission of the alleged offense, may plead that matter separately, and as a special plea with the plea of not guilty, and that the issue on the plea of insanity shall be first tried by the jury impaneled in the action, and that the verdict of the jury on that plea shall be taken before the case is tried on the plea of not guilty, and that the verdict on such plea of insanity, if it be that the defendant was not insane at the time of the commission of the offense, shall be conclusive upon the question of insanity on the trial of the plea of not guilty. Held, that such statute is not repugnant to Const. art. 1, § 7, which provides that the accused shall enjoy a speedy public trial by an impartial jury.—Bennett v. State, 57 Wis. 69, 14 N. W. 912, 46 Am. Rep. 26.

[k] (Wis. 1883) Rev. St. § 4697 et seq., requiring defendant in a criminal prosecution to plead insanity separately, and that the issue as to his insanity be tried by the jury, before that as to his guilt, is not repugnant to Const. art. 1, § 5, providing that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate, and shall extend to all cases at law, "without regard to the amount in controversy," which applies to civil actions only.—Bennett v. State, 57 Wis. 69, 14 N. W. 912, 46 Am. Rep. 26.

§ 217. —— Restrictions on right of appeal.

Effect of provision for jury trial on appeal, see post, § 241.

In civil cases, see ante, § 212.

[a] (Iowa, 1888) Acts 1876, c. 143, § 7, which allows an appeal to the district court in criminal cases tried in vacation in the municipal superior courts, being repealed by Acts 1882, c. 24, § 4, directing an appeal to the supreme court, Acts 1880, c. 77, § 1, providing that in cases of violation of ordinances in incorporated towns and cities of the second class defendant shall have no jury except on appeal, cannot apply to those cities which have superior courts, without taking away the right of trial by jury; since these courts have exclusive original jurisdiction of violations of ordinances; and in such case, if the panel is discharged, the cause should be continued.—City of Creston v. Nye, 74 Iowa, 369, 37 N. W. 777.

[b] (Kan. 1895) Gen. St. 1889, § 1010, which authorizes a trial without a jury in the municipal court for a violation of an ordinance prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, in so far as it requires the recognizance on appeal to be conditioned for the payment of the fine and costs imposed by the district court, imposes an unreasonable restriction on the right of appeal, and is consequently repugnant to the constitutional guaranty of the right of trial by jury.—In re Jahn, 55 Kan. 694, 41 Pac. 956.

[c] (Me. 1853) Act 1851, regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, and providing for an appeal, and that in the event of a final conviction before a jury defendant shall pay double the fine awarded against him by the justice or judge from whose judgment the appeal is taken, is unconstitutional, as impairing the right to trial by jury, as the accused can obtain a jury trial only by appeal, and the legislature cannot impose penalties upon the exercise of the right.—State v. Gurney, 37 Me. 156, 58 Am. Dec. 782.

[d] (Me. 1853) If a statute require a party, as a condition of being allowed his trial by jury, to give bond that he will not, pending his appeal, violate the provisions of the act on which he is accused, such a statute is unconstitutional, as impairing the party's right to a trial by jury.—Saco v. Wentworth, 37 Me. 165, 58 Am. Dec. 786.

[e] (Me. 1853) St. 1851, c. 211, § 6, requiring that a bond in the sum of $200 shall be given by a party sentenced by a justice of the peace, or by a judge of the municipal or police court, to pay a fine and costs, as one of the conditions before an appeal can be allowed, is in violation of Const. art. 1, § 6, which guaranties to the accused in all criminal prosecutions a speedy, public, and impartial trial by jury.—Saco v. Wentworth, 37 Me. 165, 58 Am. Dec. 786.

[f] (Me. 1855) So much of Laws 1853, c. 48, as provides that any person, on conviction for an illegal sale of liquors, who shall take an appeal, shall furnish a bond for his appearance and the prosecution of his appeal, and shall stand committed until the order is complied with, is unconstitutional, as impairing the right to trial by jury.—Saco v. Woodsum, 39 Me. 258.

[g] (Mass. 1805) No appeal lies to the common pleas, in a prosecution under the militia law, where the statute takes away that right. The statute does not contravene the article in the constitution securing the right of trial by jury.—Mountfort v. Hall, 1 Mass. 443.

[h] (N. H. 1890) Gen. Laws, c. 258, § 4, requiring an appellant from a sentence of a justice of the peace to pay certain fees, is not an infringement of the constitutional right to a trial by jury, as the amount of such fees is less than the amount of those required by the provincial act of 1718, which was in force at the time of the adoption of that provision of the constitution.—State v. Griffin, 66 N. H. 326, 29 Atl. 414.

[i] (N. Y. 1853) Act April 12, 1853, giving a general form of a record in cases of summary conviction for vagrancy, departing from the common-law mode of procedure, and not providing for an appeal, is not in violation of Const. art. 1, § 2, declaring that the trial by jury in all cases in which it has been heretofore used shall remain inviolate forever, because that relates to the conviction, and the statute only to the review of it.—In re Morris, 2 Edm. Sel. Cas. 381.

[j] (R. I. 1851) An act relating to intoxicating liquors, providing that a person convicted by a justice of an illegal sale can appeal on payment of all costs, but not providing for their repayment on acquittal on appeal, is not unconstitutional, as an infringement of the right of trial by jury.—Littlefield v. Peckham, 1 R. I. 500.

[k] (R. I. 1887) Pub. Laws 1886, c. 596, as amended by Pub. Laws 1887, c. 634, providing for the seizure and condemnation of liquors kept for illegal sale, and providing (section 26) that on entry of judgment of forfeiture, unless an appeal be then taken and recognizance given, a warrant shall forthwith issue for the destruction of such liquors, and requiring the recognizance to be given in the sum of $300, with conditions that the appellant will file his reasons of appeal, and that he will appear and prosecute it with effect, and will not, during the pendency of it, violate any of the provisions of the act, is, in so far as it requires the recognizance to be conditioned that appellant should not further violate the act, unconstitutional, as imposing an unreasonable condition on the taking of an appeal, by which means only could a jury trial be had.—In re Liquors of McSoley, 15 R. I. 608, 10 Atl. 659.

[m] (Vt. 1869) The provisions of the charter of the city of Burlington which confer upon the recorder's court final jurisdiction of criminal offenses within the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace to try and determine are unconstitutional; the citizen's right of a trial by jury being thereby infringed.—State v. Peterson, 41 Vt. 504.

[n] (Vt. 1887) R. L. § 4506, requiring a defendant appealing from a conviction in a justice's court to pay for the copies of the proceedings in the justice court, does not abridge his constitutional right of trial by jury, though only by appealing can he obtain a jury trial.—In re Marron, 60 Vt. 199, 12 Atl. 523.

[o] (W. Va. 1886) The constitutional right to a trial by jury is not unduly abridged by providing for a trial before a justice for minor offenses, and requiring security for the prosecution of an appeal to a jury.—Beasley v. Town of Beckley, 28 W. Va. 81.

§ 218. —— Requirement or denial of bail.

[a] (Ind. 1826) The statute providing that it shall be the duty of the justice of the peace to inquire into, and in a summary way to punish, by fine not exceeding $3, all trivial breaches of the peace, and if, on examination, it shall appear that $3 would not be an adequate punishment, to bind the offender and witnesses to the next circuit court, is not in violation of Const. art. 1, § 5, providing that in all criminal cases, except petit misdemeanors, which shall be punished by fine not exceeding $3, right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate.—State v. McCory, 2 Blackf. 5.

[b] (Ind. 1896) Indianapolis City Charter, § 118, giving the police court power to hold one charged with petit larceny to bail to appear before a higher court if he is of the opinion that the punishment which he is authorized to assess is inadequate, does not deprive the accused of the right of trial by jury.—Stevens v. Anderson, 145 Ind. 304, 44 N. E. 460.

[c] (N. Y. 1855) A law regulating town police, which takes from a defendant the right to give bail for his appearance at the next criminal court having jurisdiction in the case, is unconstitutional, as interfering with the trial by jury.—People v. Carroll, 3 Parker, Cr. R. 22.

§ 219. —— Costs.

As restriction on right of appeal, see ante, § 217.

In civil cases, see ante, § 213.

[a] (U. S. 1852) The legislature cannot make the right to a trial by jury in a criminal case dependent on giving a bond, with surety, for the payment of the penalty and costs.—Greene v. Briggs, Fed. Cas. No. 5,764 [1 Curt. 311].

[b] (Tenn. 1874) The act of 1875, "to tax the losing party with the jury fees in all cases in civil suits, and to repeal" Code, §§ 4036, 4037, held to impair the full enjoyment of the right of trial by jury.—Neely v. State, 63 Tenn. (4 Baxt.) 174.

§ 220. Re-examination or other review of questions of fact tried by jury.

Right to jury trial on appeal, see ante, §§ 95–98.

[a] (U. S. 1830) Under the laws of Louisiana, on a jury trial, the oral testimony, if either party desire it, is to be taken down in writing by the clerk, to be sent to the supreme court, to serve as a statement of facts in case of appeal; and the written evidence is to be filed with the proceedings, to enable the appellate court to revise the judgment below, and exercise the power of granting a new trial. Held, that a refusal of the judge of the district court of the United States to permit the evidence to be put in writing could not be assigned for error in the supreme court of the United States, a verdict being given, because, if the same had been put in writing, that court could not redress any error by granting a new trial; the constitution of the United States and the amendment thereto declaring that "No fact, once tried by a jury, shall be otherwise re-examinable in any court of the United States than according to the rules of the common law."—Parsons v. Bedford, 28 U. S. (3 Pet.) 433, 7 L. Ed. 732.

[b] (U. S. 1869) So much of Act Cong. March 3, 1863, § 5, as provides for the removal of judgments in a state court in a cause which was tried by a jury to the circuit court of the United States for a retrial on the facts involved, is unconstitutional, being in conflict with Const. Amend. 7, which declares that no fact tried by a jury shall be otherwise re-examined in any court of the United States than according to the rules of the common law.—The Justices v. Murray, 76 U. S. (9 Wall.) 274, 19 L. Ed. 658.

[c] (U. S. 1812) Where a cause has once been tried by a jury in the district court, there cannot, even in appeal cases, be a new trial by a jury in the circuit court.—United States v. Wonson, Fed. Cas. No. 16,750 [1 Gall. 5].

[d] (Ga. 1848) On an issue of fraud, suggested by a creditor under the statute of 1823 for the relief of honest debtors, and after a verdict for the debtor, the creditor will not be allowed an appeal to another jury under the act of 1799.—Armis v. Barker, 4 Ga. 170.

[e] (Mass. 1891) On appeal by a petitioner from the probate court, the judge after trial set aside the verdict and discharged the issue which he had framed for the jury. Held that, as petitioner was not entitled to a jury trial as a matter of right, the decision would stand, in the absence of anything to show an abuse of discretion.—Fay v. Vanderford, 154 Mass. 498, 28 N. E. 681.

[f] (Minn. 1896) Laws 1895, c. 320, which provides that where a party was entitled on the trial to have a verdict directed in his favor, and duly moved for the same, the court may, on a motion for a new trial, or on an appeal in such motion, order judgment in his favor notwithstanding the verdict, is not unconstitutional as denying the right of trial by jury.—Kernan v. St. Paul City Ry. Co., 64 Minn. 312, 67 N. W. 71.

[g] (N. Y. 1864) Act Cong. March 3, 1863, § 5, authorizing the removal of causes commenced in state courts against civil or military officers for any arrest or imprisonment, made during the Rebellion, by virtue or under color of authority from the president of the United States or congress, to the circuit court of the United States, after verdict and judgment in the state court, to be therein tried as if originally commenced in the federal courts, is in violation of the seventh amendment of the federal constitution, declaring that no fact tried by a jury shall be otherwise re-examined in any court of the United States than according to the rules of the common law.—Patrie v. Murray, 43 Barb. 323, 29 How. Prac. 312.

[h] (N. Y. 1871) Laws 1852, c. 356, §§ 8–11, authorizing the supreme court to increase or reduce the amount of damages reported by commissioners for taking of land for the use of a waterworks company, is repugnant to Const. art. 1, § 7, requiring compensation for the taking of private property for public use to be ascertained by a jury, or, at least, three commissioners appointed by a court.—Rochester Waterworks Co. v. Wood, 60 Barb. 137.

2. NUMBER OF JURORS.

JURY OF LESS THAN 12 MEN, § 222.
DECREASE IN NUMBER PENDING TRIAL, § 223.
CONCURRENCE OF LESS THAN WHOLE NUMBER, § 224.
JURY OF MORE THAN 12 MEN, § 225.

Constitution of jury in general, see ante, §§ 3–7.

Effect of provision for trial on appeal by jury of 12, see post, § 241 [d, f, i, n].

Retroactive effect of statutes, fixing number, see ante, § 5.

Right of municipal corporation to object to jury of less than 12, see ante, § 116 [a].

—— to demand jury of 12, see ante, § 154 [c–f].

Waiver in civil cases, see ante, § 189.

—— in criminal cases, see ante, § 201.

§ 221. In general.

[a] (N. J. 1893) Act March 23, 1887, directing that a commission de lunatico inquirendo shall be executed before a jury of 12 men, instead of 24, is constitutional.—De Hart v. Condit, 51 N. J. Eq. (6 Dick.) 611, 28 Atl. 603, 40 Am. St. Rep. 545.

[b] (Pa. 1865) The constitutional provision granting an accused a trial "by an impartial jury" is not violated by permitting a juror to be examined as a witness against defendant.—Howser v. Commonwealth, 51 Pa. (1 P. F. Smith) 332.

[c] (Utah, 1895) It is not reversible error in a prosecution to permit a juror, with defendant's consent, to act as an interpreter.—People v. Thiede, 11 Utah, 241, 39 Pac. 837.

§ 222. Jury of less than 12 men.

[a] A trial by a less number than 12 men, acting as a jury, in criminal cases, is void.
—(Ind. 1861) Brown v. State, 16 Ind. 496; (1876) Allen v. Same, 54 Ind. 461; (Tenn. 1858) Bowles v. State, 37 Tenn. (5 Sneed) 360.

[b] (Ark. 1873) Act July 23, 1868, providing for a general system of railroad incorporation, and by section 23 allowing compensation for damages for land taken, to be assessed by five commissioners appointed by the court, is in violation of Const. art. 5, § 48, providing that no right of way shall be appropriated without compensation first made, which compensation shall be ascertained by a jury of 12 men.—Whitehead v. Arkansas Cent. R. Co., 28 Ark. 460.

[c] (Ind. 1847) In an indictment for larceny, the plea was not guilty, and the verdict and judgment were for the state. It appeared by the transcript that the cause had been tried by only 11 jurors. The court held the trial to be a nullity, set aside the judgment and verdict, and remanded the cause for another trial.—Brown v. State, 8 Blackf. 561.

[d] (Ind. 1880) The trial of a case by a jury of six persons is an absolute nullity.—Moore v. State, 72 Ind. 358.

[e] (Iowa, 1882) Acts 1880, c. 163, limiting the right of appeal from justices' courts to cases in which the amount in controversy is more than $25, is not, by reason of the fact that the jury in a justice's court consists of six men only, in conflict with Bill of Rights, art. 1, § 9, providing that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate, but the general assembly may authorize trial by jury of a less number than 12 men in inferior courts;" nor is it invalid under the ordinance of 1787, art. 2, for the provisions of the ordinance were abrogated by the admission of the state into the Union, so far as they were in conflict with the state constitution.—Higgins v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 60 Iowa, 50, 14 N. W. 118.

[f] (Minn. 1869) The jury contemplated by Const. art. 1, § 6, securing the right to jury trial in criminal cases, is a body of 12 men, and it is error to try a party charged with crime in a justice court, against his objection, with a jury of 6.—State v. Everett, 14 Minn. 439 (Gil. 330).

[g] (Miss. 1892) Where the record shows that judgment was entered against a prisoner on a verdict returned by a jury of 11 men, there is a fatal defect affecting the jurisdiction of the court, incurable by any supplementary oral proof, and therefore the verdict and the judgment founded on it are void, and the prisoner is in the same condition as if he had not been tried.—Ex parte Scott, 70 Miss. 247, 11 South. 657.

[h] (Miss. 1895) Code 1892, § 2835, providing for a jury of six in inquests of lunacy, does not conflict with any provision of the state constitution, nor with the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution, which provides that "no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property, except by due process of law."—Fant v. Buchanan, 17 South. 371.

[i] (Mo. 1857) The appointment of 5, instead of 12, men, to assess the damages caused by laying out a plank road on the land of an individual, is not inconsistent with the constitution.—Louisiana & F. Plank Road Co. v. Pickett, 25 Mo. 535.

[j] (Mo. 1860) The law prescribing that jury trials in the St. Louis law commissioners' court shall be before a jury of 6 persons or a less number, if the parties shall consent, is invalid, as the constitutional number required to constitute a jury in a court of record is 12.—Vaughn v. Scade, 30 Mo. 600.

[k] (N. J. 1806) A cause cannot be tried by 11 jurors.—Briant v. Russell, 2 N. J. Law (1 Penning.) 146.

[l] (N. M. 1895) The jury provided for by Const. U. S. Amend. 6, declaring that in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall have the right of speedy trial by an impartial jury, is the common-law jury of 12 men, and a conviction by a jury of 11 is void.—Territory v. Ortiz, 8 N. M. 154, 42 Pac. 87.

[m] (N. Y. 1854) The city charter of Utica, which provides that, when the land of individuals is taken for streets, the common council may appoint five disinterested freeholders to ascertain the land required, the names of holders, and the recompense to be made, is so far in conflict with Const. art. 1, § 7, declaring that in such cases compensation shall be ascertained by a jury, or by commissioners appointed by a court of record. Where a word, by common usage, has acquired a popular signification, it shall be understood in that sense unless its meaning is controlled by the context, or the circumstances; and, where the constitution speaks of a jury, it is to be understood as meaning a jury with its ordinary and well-known attributes and functions.—Clark v. City of Utica, 18 Barb. 451.

[n] (N. Y. 1868) As a defendant in an action to recover possession of chattels has a constitutional right to trial by a jury of 12 men, and a justice of the peace has only the power to impanel a jury of 6 men, it follows that when, on the return of a justice's summons in such an action, the defendant demands a jury of 12, the justice must dismiss the suit.—Baxter v. Putney, 37 How. Prac. 140.

[o] (N. Y. 1872) Act 1861, increasing the jurisdiction of justices of the peace to $200, is not void, as violating Const. art. 1, § 2, providing that trial by jury in all cases in which it has been heretofore used shall remain inviolate, because it transfers a class of cases from courts of record, where juries are composed of 12 men, to justices' courts, in which they consist of 6, since such provision has no reference to the power of the legislature to alter and increase the jurisdiction of justices' courts, and was not intended as a limitation of such power in that regard.—Knight v. Campbell, 62 Barb. 16.

[p] (N. Y. 1881) The fact that the jury provided for by Laws 1834, c. 78, on trials for disturbing religious meetings, may consist of six persons, does not amount to a violation of Const. art. 1, § 2, providing that trial by jury in all cases in which it has heretofore been used "shall remain inviolate forever."—People v. Clark, 23 Hun, 374.

[q] (Ohio, 1853) As juries did not belong at common law to courts held before justices of the peace, a law requiring a less number than 12 to constitute a jury in such courts does not violate the provision of the constitution that the right of trial by jury shall be inviolate.—Work v. State, 2 Ohio St. 296, 59 Am. Dec. 671.

[r] (Ohio, 1854) A law giving only an appeal to the probate court and a jury of six men from the decision of viewers upon a question of damages for land taken for a public road is unconstitutional.—Lamb v. Lane, 4 Ohio St. 167.

[s] (Okl. 1894) A statute providing that criminal cases which the justice's court has power to hear and determine may be tried before a jury of six men is constitutional.—Collier v. Territory, 2 Okl. 444, 37 Pac. 819.

[t] (Pa.) Act May 1, 1861 (Purd. Dig. p. 396), providing for a trial before a jury of six summoned by a justice of the peace, violates Const. art. 1, § 6, saying that "the trial by jury shall be as heretofore [i. e., by a jury of 12 citizens], and the right thereof shall remain inviolate."—(1873) Commonwealth v. Saal, 10 Phila. 496, 30 Leg. Int. 194; (1880) Same v. Seamans (Quart. Sess.) 3 Law T. (N. S.) 133.

[u] (Pa. 1886) A justice has no power to hear a charge of aggravated assault and battery before a jury of six. In such case he must hear the case on the complaint of the prosecutor, and either bind the prisoner over to court or discharge him.—Commonwealth v. Mead, 5 Law T. (N. S.) 123.

[v] (Tex. 1888) Under Const. art. 5, § 13, providing that "petit juries in the district court shall be composed of 12 men," a conviction for crime on a trial in the district court before a jury of 6 must be set aside.—Jester v. State, 26 Tex. App. 369, 9 S. W. 616.

[w] (Wash. 1888) Code 1881, c. 143, § 2033, providing that a creditor may file written specifications of fraud on the part of an insolvent debtor, in opposition to his discharge under the insolvency act, and after the answer of the debtor to the charge of fraud has been received, a jury of not less than 6 shall be summoned to try the issue, is, so far as it provides for a less number than the constitutional jury of 12, unconstitutional and void.—Thomas v. Hilton, 3 Wash. T. 365, 17 Pac. 882.

[x] (Wis. 1854) The refusal to give a trial of fact by a jury of 12 men, instead of 6, is the denial of a constitutional right, and ground for a new trial.—May v. Milwaukee & M. R. Co., 3 Wis. 219.

§ 223. Decrease in number pending trial.

[a] (Iowa, 1885) Code 1873, § 2793, authorizing less than 12 jurors to render a verdict in case of the sickness of one or more of them, is unconstitutional; the jury contemplated by the constitution being the common-law jury of 12 men.—Eshelman v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 67 Iowa, 296, 25 N. W. 251; Kelsh v. Town of Dyersville, 68 Iowa, 137, 26 N. W. 38.

[b] (Mich. 1892) Const. art. 6, § 27, provides that "the right of trial by jury shall remain." Article 4, § 46, provides that "the legislature may authorize a trial by a jury of a less number than 12 men." Held that, though the legislature may fix a certain number less than 12 which shall constitute a jury, it cannot provide for contingencies in which a jury may consist of less than 12, in the discretion of the trial court; and hence 2 How. Ann. St. § 7622, providing that, after the impaneling of a jury, if any juror is unable to attend, the court may enter that fact and the cause of inability on its journal, and the proceeding shall then continue as if the whole panel were present, is unconstitutional.—McRae v. Grand Rapids, L. & D. R. Co., 93 Mich. 399, 53 N. W. 561, 17 L. R. A. 750.

[c] (N. J. 1812) If 1 of the jurors be sick, so that he cannot deliberate, and a verdict be taken, it is the verdict of the other 11, and will be set aside.—Denman v. Baldwin, 3 N. J. Law (2 Penning.) 945.

[d] (Pa. 1888) A trial in the court of quarter sessions by 11 jurors, though the twelfth was excused on account of sickness, and the trial continued with the consent of defendant, is illegal.—Commonwealth v. Byers, 5 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 295.

[e] (Tex. 1873) Gen. Laws 15th Leg. p. 22, § 19, provides that the practice in county courts shall be regulated by the rules and laws governing the district court. The act regulating juries in civil and criminal cases in district courts provides (section 19) that when, during a trial, a juror is discharged from serving, the remainder of the jury may render a verdict. On the trial of accused in a county court, a juror was excused because of the severe illness of his wife. Held, that a verdict by the remainder of the jury was valid.—Gindrat v. State, 3 Tex. App. 573.

§ 224. Concurrence of less than whole number.

[a] (Ariz. 1894) Laws 1891, p. 71, providing that in civil cases three-fourths of a jury of 12 may render a verdict, is void, under Rev. St. U. S. § 1868, providing that in territories no party shall be deprived of the right of trial by jury in cases cognizable at common law.—Carroll v. Byers, 36 Pac. 499.

[b] (Ariz. 1894) Laws 1891, p. 71, providing that in civil cases three-fourths of a jury of 12 may render a verdict, is void, under Const. U. S. Amend. 7, providing that where the amount in controversy exceeds $20 the right to trial by jury shall be preserved.—Carroll v. Byers, 36 Pac. 499.

[c] (Fla. 1894) Const. 1887, art. 16, § 29, providing that compensation for property appropriated shall be ascertained by a jury of 12 men in a court of competent jurisdiction, "as shall be prescribed by law," is violated by that provision of Act June 8, 1887, that in such proceedings "a majority of the jury may determine all matters before them."—Jacksonville, T. & K. W. Ry. Co. v. Adams, 33 Fla. 608, 15 South. 257, 24 L. R. A. 272.

[d] (Mont.) So much of Act Jan. 15, 1869, as provides that three-fourths of a jury may find a verdict in common-law action, is in conflict with article 8 of the United States constitution, which secures the right of trial by jury in certain cases.—(1869) Kleinschmidt v. Dunphy, 1 Mont. 118; (1870) Aylesworth v. Reece, Id. 200.

[e] (N. H. 1860) The legislature has no power so to change the law in relation to juries as to provide that petit juries may be composed of a less number than 12, nor to provide that a number of the petit jury less than the whole number may render a verdict, in any case where the constitution gives to the party a right to a trial by jury.—Opinion of Justices, 41 N. H. 550.

[f] (N. J. 1890) An inquisition of lunacy by only 12 jurors, under Act March 23, 1887 (P. L. p. 48), whose verdict is unanimous, does not violate the right of trial by jury guarantied by Const. art. 1, § 7, since the practice at the time of the adoption of the constitution, though prescribing a trial by from 12 to 24 jurors, did not require the concurrence of more than 12 to constitute a sufficient verdict.—In re Lindsley, 46 N. J. Eq. (1 Dick.) 358, 19 Atl. 726.

[g] (N. Y. 1854) Under St. 1847, c. 31, § 4, providing for the appointment of a jury to appraise the damage to real estate by a railroad company's taking it, only a majority of the jury need concur in the appraisement. This does not make the law unconstitutional.—Cruger v. Hudson River R. Co., 12 N. Y. (2 Kern.) 190.

[h] (Okl. 1893) St. c. 70, art. 18, § 22, providing that nine jurors may return a verdict, is invalid, as in violation of Const. U. S. Amend.

7, providing for the preservation of the right of trial by jury.—Bradford v. Territory, 1 Okl. 366, 34 Pac. 66.

[i] (Utah) Laws 1892, c. 44, providing that in all civil actions a verdict may be rendered by a concurrence therein of nine or more members of the jury, is not in conflict with Const. U. S. Amend. 7, providing that in suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed $20, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved.—(1893) Hess v. White, 9 Utah, 61, 33 Pac. 243, 24 L. R. A. 277; (1894) Fred W. Wolf Co. v. Salt Lake City Brewing Co., 10 Utah, 179, 37 Pac. 262; (1894) Riley v. Salt Lake Rapid Transit Co., 10 Utah, 428, 37 Pac. 681; (1895) Mackey v. Enzensperger, 11 Utah, 154, 39 Pac. 541; (1895) Leedom v. Earls Furniture & Carpet Co., 12 Utah, 172, 42 Pac. 208; (1896) Pratt v. Parsons, 13 Utah, 31, 43 Pac. 620; (1896) Smith v. Salt Lake City R. Co., 13 Utah, 33, 43 Pac. 919.

§ 225. Jury of more than 12 men.

[a] (Miss.) It is not error for a jury of 13 in number to pass upon an issue in assumpsit. If the number were less than 12, the verdict would be void.—(1845) Tillman v. Ailles, 13 Miss. (5 Smedes & M.) 373, 43 Am. Dec. 520. CONTRA, see (1834) Wolfe v. Martin, 2 Miss. (1 How.) 30.

[b] (N. C. 1800) Where a caveat was tried by 13 jurors, instead of 12, the judgment rendered will be reversed on error.—Whitehurst v. Davis, 3 N. C. 113.

[c] (Tex. 1873) A conviction of crime by a jury composed of more than 12 men is void, and will be set aside.—Bullard v. State, 38 Tex. 504, 19 Am. Rep. 30.

[d] (Tex. 1880) On trial of an indictment of assault with intent to murder, the jury as impaneled contained 13 men, including 1 who had been stricken off by the defense. At the close of the evidence the error was discovered, and the person who had been so stricken was instructed to leave the box. The jury had not left the box, nor had there been any opportunity for them to converse among themselves. Held, that a conviction by the other 12 jurors should be sustained.—Davis v. State, 9 Tex. App. 634.

[e] (W. Va. 1891) Under Bill of Rights, § 14, declaring that trials of crimes and misdemeanors shall be by a jury of 12 men, where the record shows that the prisoner was tried by a jury of 13 jurymen, instead of 12, the verdict should be set aside and a new trial awarded.—State v. Hudkins, 35 W. Va. 247, 13 S. E. 367.

3. CONSTITUTION AND SELECTION OF JURY.

IN GENERAL, § 226.
QUALIFICATIONS AS JURORS, § 227.
COMPETENCY FOR TRIAL OF CAUSE, § 228.
SELECTION FROM VICINAGE, § 229.
SUMMONING AND IMPANELING, § 230.
EXAMINATION, § 231.
CHALLENGES AND OBJECTIONS, § 232.

§ 226. In general.

[a] (Ala. 1887) Under Const. 1868, art. 13, § 5, providing that no right of way shall be appropriated to the use of any corporation until full compensation therefor be first made to the owner, irrespective of any benefit from any improvement by such corporation, which compensation shall be ascertained by a jury of 12 men in a court of record as prescribed by law, a city charter providing that damages shall be assessed by a jury of viewers is void, as being in conflict with the constitutional provision that the assessments shall be made by a jury of 12 men in a court of record as shall be prescribed by law.—Faust v. City of Huntsville, 83 Ala. 279, 3 South. 771.

[b] (Ky. 1881) Where the jury commissioners have been instructed by the court to select the jury without regard to race or color, there is no ground for complaint by a colored man, indicted for murder, although no negro may be upon the jury, unless it appears that persons were excluded on account of race or color. —Hicks v. Commonwealth, 3 Ky. Law Rep. 87.

[c] (Ky. 1882) Where, in the selection of a jury for the trial of an indictment against several colored men jointly indicted, the regular panel is exhausted, the jury may be completed from bystanders, whether they are of the African race or not.—Mullins v. Commonwealth, 3 Ky. Law Rep. 686.

[d] (Ky. 1896) Where it does not appear that the jury commissioners violated the statute by the selection of persons not qualified, or in an illegal manner drew from the list selected the grand and petit jurors, a judgment will not be reversed on the ground that no person of African descent was included in the list of jurors from which the jury rendering the verdict was chosen.—Smith v. Commonwealth, 33 S. W. 825.

[e] (La. 1860) Inasmuch as Const. 1852, art. 103, providing that prosecutions shall be by indictment or information, and guarantying the right of trial by an impartial jury of the vicinage, does not apply to the punishment of minor offenses tried summarily without the intervention of a jury, an act requiring that recorders, in trying such offenses, should be assisted by a jury of three slaveholders does not violate the constitutional provision in respect to an impartial trial by a jury of the vicinage.—State v. Gutierrez, 15 La. Ann. 190.

[f] (Minn. 1896) Gen. Laws 1895, c. 328, providing for struck juries on application of either party, is not in conflict with the constitutional provision that the right to trial by jury shall be inviolate.—Lommen v. Minneapolis Gaslight Co., 65 Minn. 196, 68 N. W. 53, 60 Am. St. Rep. 450, 33 L. R. A. 437.

[g] (Miss. 1846) The trial by jury is by 12 free and lawful men, who are not of kin to either party, for the purpose of establishing by their verdict the truth of the matter which is in issue between the parties. Any legislation, therefore, which merely points out the mode of arriving at this object, but does not rob it of any of its essential ingredients, cannot be considered an infringement of the right.—Dowling v. State, 13 Miss. (5 Smedes & M.) 664.

[h] (Mo. 1896) Act April 1, 1891 (Laws 1891, p. 172), providing the manner of selecting and drawing petit jurors, and prescribing their qualifications, in counties having a certain population, is not in violation of Const. art. 2, § 28, providing that "the right of trial by jury, as heretofore enjoyed, shall remain inviolate."—State ex rel. Kansas City & S. Ry. Co. v. Slover, 134 Mo. 607, 36 S. W. 50.

[i] (N. J. 1896) A struck jury is a legal one, within the constitutional requirement that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate; such a jury having been derived from the English law, confirmed by legislation in this commonwealth.—Fowler v. State, 58 N. J. Law (29 Vroom) 423, 34 Atl. 682.

[j] (N. Y. 1853) The constitution of the state declares that, "when private property shall be taken for any private use, the compensation to be made therefor, when such compensation is not made by the state, shall be ascertained by a jury, or by not less than three commissioners appointed by a court of record, or shall be prescribed by law." In the charter of the city of Rochester it is provided that "the damages and recompense to be paid to owners of lands taken by the city for public improvements, shall be assessed by three assessors assigned by the common council," etc. Held, that said provision in the charter is plainly in conflict with the constitution, and an assessment based on it was unauthorized and void.—House v. City of Rochester, 15 Barb. 517.

[k] (N. C. 1887) A special venire of 50 men was returned by the sheriff on the trial of a colored person for murdering a white person, among whom there were no persons of color. There were in the county eligible colored freeholders qualified to serve as jurors. Held, that a challenge to the array, without assigning either prejudice on the part of the sheriff against, or favor for, either the slain or the accused, or any improper influence in summoning the jury, was properly overruled.—State v. Sloan, 97 N. C. 499, 2 S. E. 666.

[l] (Tex. 1875) The fact that a negro is placed upon trial before a jury composed exclusively of white men is not ground for a challenge to the array.—Williams v. State, 44 Tex. 34.

[m] (Tex. 1883) A special venire for the trial of a negro will not be quashed because composed wholly of white men, no fraud or corruption in the action of the jury commissioners being shown.—Cavitt v. State, 15 Tex. App. 190.

§ 227. Qualifications as jurors.

See ante, § 226 [g, h].

[a] (Mich. 1891) Act No. 150, Pub. Acts 1881 (section 978, How. Ann. St.), providing for the enrollment of the military companies, to be composed of not more than 150 members in each company, and exempting such members from jury duty, is not an infringement of the right of trial by jury.—Hall v. Burlingame, 88 Mich. 438, 50 N. W. 289.

[b] (Mich. 1894) Saginaw City Charter, § 8, tit. 15, which provides that jurors must be qualified electors, and people of fair character and sound mind, freeholders in the city, and understanding English, is not in conflict with the provisions of the constitution that in condemnation proceedings the issues shall be passed on by "a jury of freeholders" (Const. art. 18, §§ 2, 14, and article 15, § 15).—City of Saginaw v. Campau, 102 Mich. 594, 61 N. W. 65.

[c] (Mo. 1893) Rev. St. 1889, Append. art. 21, § 9, which disqualifies persons from serving as jurors in the city of St. Louis, in criminal cases, because of their inability to read and write the English language, is not in conflict with Const. art. 2, § 28, which guaranties the right of trial by jury, as this provision does not deprive the legislature of the power to prescribe the qualifications of jurors.—State v. Welsor, 117 Mo. 570, 21 S. W. 443.

[d] (N. M. 1881) Defendant was tried by a jury of Mexicans, who did not understand English, and the proceedings were all interpreted to them. Held no violation of the provision of the bill of rights entitling defendants to trial by jury.—Territory v. Romine, 2 N. M. 114.

[e] (Tenn. 1871) The acts of June 5, 1865, May 3, 1866, and February 25, 1867, relating to the right to register and vote, excluded from the right of suffrage every person who could not prove to the satisfaction of the register that he had been an unconditional Union man during the Rebellion. Act Nov. 26, 1866, c. 5, § 1, provided that it should be ground for challenge to a juror that he is not a registered voter. Held that, the exclusion from registration being based on partisan considerations, the restriction of the right to sit on the jury was a violation of the constitutional provision that the right of trial by jury should remain inviolate.—Gibbs v. State, 50 Tenn. (3 Heisk.) 72.

[f] (Tex. 1874) A trial by jurors unable to speak and understand the English language is in violation of the right of trial secured by the bill of rights.—Lyles v. State, 41 Tex. 172, 19 Am. Rep. 38.

[g] (Tex. 1880) Cr. Code, art. 636, § 14, providing that inability to read and write is a cause for challenge, except when it appears that the requisite number of jurors who are able to read and write cannot be found in the county, does not affect the constitutional right to be tried by a jury every one of whom can comprehend and speak the English language.—McCampbell v. State, 9 Tex. App. 124, 35 Am. Rep. 726; Nolen v. State, 9 Tex. App. 419.

[h] (Utah, 1861) The Utah statute which provides that only taxpayers shall be eligible to sit on a jury is in violation of Const. U. S. Amend. art. 7, which declares that "the right of trial by jury shall be preserved."—Reece v. Knott, 3 Utah, 451, 24 Pac. 757.

§ 228. Competency for trial of cause.

Competency in general, see post, §§ 400–630.

[a] (U. S. 1887) Rev. St. Ill. c. 78, § 14, providing that a juror shall not be disqualified because he has formed an opinion based upon rumor, or upon newspaper statements about the truth of which he has expressed no opinion, if on oath he states that he believes he can fairly and impartially render a verdict in accordance with the law and the evidence, does not violate either Const. U. S. Amend. 6, or Const. Ill. art. 2, § 9, which guaranty to the accused party in every criminal prosecution "a speedy public trial by an impartial jury."—Spies v. State of Illinois, 123 U. S. 131, 8 Sup. Ct. 21, 31 L. Ed. 80.

[b] (Colo. 1874) The act of 1872 (9 Sess. Laws, p. 1894), providing that pre-existing opinion shall not disqualify a juror, if the court shall be satisfied, from his examination or from other evidence, that he will render an impartial verdict in the case, does not conflict with the sixth amendment to the constitution of the United States, which secures to persons charged with crime the right to be tried by an impartial jury.—Jones v. People, 2 Colo. 351.

[c] (D. C. 1893) Const. U. S. art. 2, par. 9, guarantying to accused a trial by an impartial jury, does not render incompetent a juror who has formed an opinion from reading newspaper reports, when the juror testifies that he can render an impartial verdict.—United States v. Schneider, 21 D. C. 381.

[d] (Ga. 1846) A juror who states upon oath, in answer to the statutory interrogatories, that he has formed and expressed an opinion in regard to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner from hearsay, is not an impartial juror within the meaning of the constitutional provision which declares that "in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury."—Reynolds v. State, 1 Ga. (1 Kelly) 222.

[e] (Ga. 1856) Act 1856, which secures to a party accused of crime a trial by an impartial jury, who have not formed or expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused, either from having seen the crime committed or from having heard any part of the evidence delivered on oath, is not repugnant to the constitution of 1798, which provides for trial by jury "as heretofore used in this state," since matters of the qualification of jurors were subjects of legislative regulation previous to the adoption of the constitution.—Rafe v. State, 20 Ga. 60.

[f] (Ill. 1887) Rev. St. c. 78, § 14, providing that a juror shall not be disqualified because he has formed an opinion based on rumor, or upon newspaper statements about the truth of which he has expressed no opinion, if on oath he states that he believes he can fairly and impartially render a verdict in accordance with the law and the evidence, does not violate Const. art. 2, § 9, which guaranties to the accused party in every criminal prosecution "a speedy public trial by an impartial jury."—Spies v. People, 122 Ill. 1, 12 N. E. 865, 3 Am. St. Rep. 320.

[g] (Ill. 1893) Rev. St. c. 78, § 14, which provides that "in the trial of any criminal cause the fact that a person called as a juror has formed an opinion or impression, based upon rumor or upon newspaper statements, (about the truth of which he has expressed no opinion,) shall not disqualify him to serve as a juror in such case if he shall, upon oath, state that he believes he can fairly and impartially render a verdict therein in accordance with the law and the evidence, and the court shall be satisfied of the truth of such statement," does not conflict with Const. art. 2, § 9, which guaranties every accused person "trial by an impartial jury."—Coughlin v. People, 144 Ill. 140, 33 N. E. 1, 19 L. R. A. 57, following Spies v. People (1887) 122 Ill. 1, 12 N. E. 865, 17 N. E. 898, 3 Am. St. Rep. 320.

[h] (Ind. 1877) The provision of 2 Rev. St. 1876, p. 394, § 85, that a person shall not sit as juror in a capital case who has opinions which preclude him from returning a verdict inflicting the penalty of death, is constitutional; and such person may be challenged for cause.—Greenley v. State, 60 Ind. 141.

[i] (Ind. 1882) A county cannot be deprived of jury trial because the adverse party challenges all the jurors as interested, being householders of the county, and the county refuses to ask for change of venue.—Orange County Com'rs v. Hon, 87 Ind. 356.

[j] (Ind. 1883) Rev. St. 1881, § 1793, provides that it shall be good cause for challenge to a juror that he has formed or expressed an opinion as to defendant's guilt or innocence; but, if he states that he has formed or expressed such opinion, the court or the parties shall examine him on oath as to the ground of such opinion, and if it appears to have been formed on reading newspaper statements, communications, comments, reports, rumors, or hearsay, and not on conversation with witnesses of the transaction, or reading reports of their testimony, or hearing them testify, and he states on oath that he feels able, notwithstanding such opinion, to render an impartial verdict on the law and evidence, the court, if satisfied that he is impartial and will render such verdict, may, in its discretion, admit him as competent to serve. Held, that such statute is constitutional.—Stout v. State, 90 Ind. 1.

[k] (La. 1895) A conviction by a jury in part composed of persons who participated with a voluntary posse in running down defendant cannot be sustained as the result of a fair trial "by an impartial jury."—State v. Duncan, 47 La. Ann. 1025, 17 South. 482.

[l] (Mass. 1854) Rev. St. c. 95, § 28, which provides that, "in indictments and penal actions for the recovery of any sum of money or other thing forfeited, it shall not be a cause of challenge to any juror that he is liable to pay taxes in any county or town which may be benefited by such recovery," is no violation of article 29 of the declaration of rights, securing to every citizen "the right to be tried by judges as free, impartial, and independent as the lot of humanity will admit."—Commonwealth v. Reed, 67 Mass. (1 Gray) 472.

[m] (Mass. 1889) A legislature has constitutional authority to provide that mere inhabitancy in a town or county shall not disqualify one from sitting as a juror, to try a prisoner for unlawfully obtaining money from the treasurer of the town or county.—Commonwealth v. Brown, 150 Mass. 334, 23 N. E. 98.

[n] (Minn. 1881) Gen. St. 1878, c. 10, § 200, providing that in any action to which a city is a party, a resident and taxpayer of the city shall be competent as a juror, does not violate Const. art. 1, § 4, guarantying the right of trial by jury.—McClure v. City of Red Wing, 28 Minn. 186, 9 N. W. 767.

[o] (Miss. 1831) A juror who stated on his voir dire that he had formed and expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused was not an impartial juror within the meaning of Declaration of Rights, § 10, securing a speedy public trial by an impartial jury to all persons accused of crime, where he further stated that such opinion was based on rumor only, and that it would not influence his mind in the determination of the case, and that he felt he could decide the case according to the evidence produced at the trial.—State v. Johnons, 1 Miss. (Walk.) 392.

[p] (Mont. 1889) Cr. Prac. Act, § 287, par. 11, which provides that having formed or expressed an opinion shall disqualify a juror, unless he has formed his opinion from the newspapers and can state on oath that he feels able to decide the case impartially, is not in conflict with Const. U. S. Amend. 6, conferring the right of trial by an impartial jury.—Territory v. Bryson, 9 Mont. 32, 22 Pac. 147.

[q] (Nev. 1876) Act March 2, 1875, regulating proceedings in criminal cases, is unconstitutional, in that it does not allow a defendant, charged with felony, to challenge a juror for actual bias.—State v. McClear, 11 Nev. 39; State v. Johnson, Id. 148.

[r] (N. H. 1891) The provision of Bill of Rights, art. 35, that "it is the right of every citizen to be tried by judges as impartial as the lot of humanity will admit," though applying to jurors, does not require the exclusion of a juror who has formed an opinion as to defendant's guilt.—State v. Sawtelle, 66 N. H. 488, 32 Atl. 831.

[s] (N. Y. 1873) Laws 1872, c. 745, providing that a juror's opinion or impression in reference to the circumstances of the case or the guilt or innocence of the prisoner, etc., is not a sufficient ground of challenge for principal cause, if he can render an impartial verdict, and if the court are satisfied that he does not entertain such a present opinion as would influence his verdict, is not unconstitutional, since the legislature has power to regulate, by statute, the mode of procuring and impaneling a jury, provided care is taken to preserve the right of trial by an impartial jury.—Stokes v. People, 53 N. Y. 164, 13 Am. Rep. 492.

[t] (Ohio, 1865) The act of March 3, 1860, allowing the court to admit a juror as competent to sit in a case, although he has formed and expressed an opinion in regard to the guilt or innocence of the accused, if the court is satisfied that he will render an impartial verdict, is not repugnant to the clause in the constitution guarantying to every party accused a trial by an impartial jury.—Cooper v. State, 16 Ohio St. 328.

[u] (Ohio) The statute providing that a juror shall not be disqualified who has formed an opinion from newspapers and rumors, but testifies that he believes he could render an impartial verdict, is not in violation of the constitutional provision for trial by an "impartial jury."—(1884) McHugh v. State, 42 Ohio St. 154; (1885) Palmer v. Same, Id. 596.

[v] (Tenn. 1873) Acts 1870, c. 51, that no juror shall be disqualified by any opinion which he may have, based upon any published account of the facts of the offense with which the prisoner is charged, contravenes the constitutional guaranty of "a public trial by an impartial jury."—Eason v. State, 65 Tenn. (6 Baxt.) 466.

[w] (Tex. 1874) Const. art. 5, § 8, authorizing the jury in a capital case, in their discretion, to substitute imprisonment for life for the death penalty, does not abrogate the statutory provision making conscientious scruples as to inflicting the punishment of death for crime a disqualification of a juror.—Caldwell v. State, 41 Tex. 86.

[x] (Utah. 1895) 2 Comp. Laws. 1888, § 5024, providing that a juror shall not be disqualified because he has formed an opinion based on newspaper report, if on oath he states that he can act impartially on the matters submitted to him, is not in violation of Const. U. S. Amend. 6, which guaranties to an accused a trial by an "impartial" jury.—People v. Thiede, 11 Utah, 241, 39 Pac. 837.

Apportionment of jurors in general, see ante, § 8.

"Neighboring freeholders" as jurors, see post, § 260 [n].

[a] (U. S. 1891) A direction by the court in a venire that the jury shall be summoned from a certain part of the district, as allowed by Rev. St. § 802, is not in conflict with Const. Amend. 6, which provides that "in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy trial by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed."—United States v. Ayres (D. C.) 46 Fed. 651.

[b] (Cal. 1891) Pen. Code, § 1033, as amended by Act March 9, 1887 (Sess. Laws 1887, p. 61), providing that the state may have a change of venue in a criminal action, "on the application of the district attorney, on the ground that from any cause no jury can be obtained for the trial of defendant in the county where the action is pending," is void, being in conflict with Bill of Rights, § 7, providing that "the right of trial by jury shall be secured to all and remain inviolate," the right secured being the right to trial by a jury of the vicinage as it existed at common law.—People v. Powell, 87 Cal. 348, 25 Pac. 481, 11 L. R. A. 75.

[c] (Conn. 1837) The provision in a city charter that the jury shall be taken from the freemen of the city, and not from the body of the county, is not repugnant to Const. art. 1, § 21, declaring that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate.—Colt v. Eves, 12 Conn. 243.

[d] (Idaho, 1880) A jury summoned, under the laws of the territory, from the county in which the district court is being held, for the transaction of business under the territorial laws, may be adopted by the court for the transaction of business and the disposition of cases arising under the laws of the United States, and such a jury is in every respect from the vicinage, since it is drawn from the district within which the crime was committed, though the crime was committed in another county of the district.—United States v. Mays, 1 Idaho, 763.

[e] (Ill. 1884) The constitutional right of trial by jury includes the right of having the jurors selected from the county in which the offense is alleged to have been committed.—Buckrice v. People, 110 Ill. 29.

[f] (Iowa, 1850) It was not contrary to the constitution to form two jury districts and two places for the sittings of the district court in Lee county.—Trimble v. State, 2 G. Greene, 404.

[g] (Iowa, 1888) Code 1873, § 4160, providing that "when a public offense is committed on the boundary line between two or more counties, or within 500 yards thereof, the jurisdiction is in either," is not in conflict with Const. art. 1, § 9, which provides that "the rights of trial by jury shall remain inviolate," when a statute similar to section 4160 was in force when the first constitution was adopted, and has remained so ever since.—State v. Pugsley, 75 Iowa, 742, 38 N. W. 498.

[h] (La. 1845) The statute of January 26, 1844, exempting the inhabitants of the parish of Rapides, residing in a certain portion thereof, from serving as jurors, does not infringe the right secured by Const. 1812, art. 6, § 18, to persons prosecuted in that parish of having a trial by an impartial jury of the vicinage.—State v. Jones, 8 Rob. 573.

[i] (La. 1877) A law which directs a change of venue on the naked application of the district attorney is constitutional; article 6 of the constitution, guarantying a trial by a jury of the parish, "unless the venue be changed," leaving the legislature free to declare when and how the venue may be changed, which is accomplished by the act.—State v. McCoy, 29 La. Ann. 593.

[j] (Mich. 1880) Comp. Laws, c. 256, denouncing as an offense the cutting and carrying away of timber from the public lands, and providing for the punishment thereof, is violative of the constitutional guaranty of right of trial by jury, in so far as it undertakes to authorize a trial in a county other than that where the offense was committed, and is therefore void.—Swart v. Kimball, 43 Mich. 443, 5 N. W. 635.

[k] (Mich. 1882) Jury Law 1877, pp. 113, 114, provides that the names of the jurors summoned from each precinct shall be kept in separate packages; that one name shall be drawn from each package before drawing the second name from any; and section 32 (amending 1 Comp. Laws, § 600), provides that when jurors have not been summoned, or a sufficient number do not appear, the court may cause a sufficient number to be summoned forthwith, and, in order to obtain jurors or talesmen near the county seat, may direct from which township or district such jurors shall be drawn. Held, that where the court, on suggestion of the prosecution in a homicide case, and three weeks before the trial, ordered the jury to be drawn from 11 specified townships out of the 25 in the county, but not including the county seat, or the locality of the crime, or the townships adjoining them, the jury was neither of the vicinage, nor of the county at large, nor one near the county seat, nor desired by the judge for the general purposes of the term, and hence was not sanctioned by law.—People v. Hall, 48 Mich. 482, 12 N. W. 665, 42 Am. Rep. 477.

[l] (Mich. 1888) How. St. § 7556, providing that the jury list selected from each township or ward shall be computed according to the population at the last preceding census, is designed to secure a jury list from the body of the whole county, properly proportioned among its various divisions, and is mandatory; and a deviation from the statute in drawing from certain townships or wards a number of jurors disproportioned to the population is ground for challenge by a litigant.—Hewitt v. Saginaw Circuit Judge, 71 Mich. 287, 39 N. W. 56.

[m] (Minn. 1885) Under Sp. Laws 1878, p. 508, provding for the selection, from the qualified electors of the city of Rochester exclusively, of a list of persons to serve as jurors before the city justice, a jury was impaneled from such list to serve on the trial before such justice of a complaint for an offense committed within the county. Held, that such jury was a jury of the county or district in which the crime was committed, within the provision of Const. art. 1, § 6, that "in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a trial by a jury of the county or district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which county or district shall have been previously ascertained by law."—State v. Kemp, 34 Minn. 61, 24 N. W. 349.

[n] (Miss. 1835) A conviction based on a command to a sheriff in a special venire to summon a jury "residing as near as may be to the place where the murder was committed" is invalid, as an abridgment of the prisoner's constitutional right to be tried by a jury of the county.—Shaffer v. State, 2 Miss. (1 How.) 238.

[o] (Neb. 1881) Under Const. art. 1, § 11, declaring that "in all criminal trials the accused shall have the right to * * * a speedy public trial, by an impartial jury of the county or district in which the offense is alleged to have been committed," the legislature may, in its discretion, by a general law, create trial districts which shall include more territory than a single county; but to be effective such law must be accompanied by one under which jurors can be called from the whole body, and not from a portion merely, of such district. The trial district and the jury district must be the same.—Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1, 7 N. W. 444.

[p] (N. Y. 1866) Laws 1861, c. 210, providing for summoning additional juries from a town or city where the court is held, does not conflict with the constitution of the United States, which secures to persons accused of crime the right to a trial "by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed"; nor is it repugnant to the constitution of this state, which declares that "trial by jury, in all cases in which it has been heretofore used, shall remain inviolate forever." The legislature could therefore provide for summoning jurors from any place in the county, as well as from bystanders or from the county at large, to supply a deficiency of jurors at any court or any trial.—Gardiner v. People, 6 Parker, Cr. R. 155.

[q] (N. C. 1892) Code, § 988, which provides that if any person, being married, shall marry any other person during the life of the former husband or wife, whether the second marriage shall have taken place in the state of North Carolina or elsewhere, every such offender shall be guilty of a felony, and every such offense may be punished in the county where the offender shall be apprehended as if actually committed there, is repugnant to Const. U. S. art. 1, § 13, which is construed to guaranty a trial by a jury of the vicinage in all cases which were so triable at common law.—State v. Cutshall, 110 N. C. 538, 15 S. E. 261, 16 L. R. A. 130.

[r] (Pa. 1888) Though the court directs the jury commissioners "to empty the jury wheel of all the names remaining therein and to make a new selection" it is error to order that the names of the persons then down in the wheel shall be excluded from the new selection, since the selection must be from the whole qualified electors of the county.—Commonwealth v. Baranowski, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 157.

[s] (R. I. 1875) The provision of Const. art. 1, § 15, that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate, does not mean necessarily trial by a jury of the vicinage,—i. e., of the county where the cause of action originated or the parties reside,—and hence is not violated by an act authorizing a change of venue to secure an impartial trial or to avoid local prejudice.—Taylor v. Gardiner, 11 R. I. 182.

[t] (Tenn. 1892) Acts 1891, c. 26, § 5, establishing a special court, and providing that the jury of such court shall be taken from the districts of the county over which the court has jurisdiction, instead of from the entire county, is not in violation of Const. art. 1, § 9, providing that, in prosecutions by indictment or presentment, the accused is entitled to a "speedy public trial by an impartial jury of the county."—Ellis v. State, 92 Tenn. 85, 20 S. W. 500.

[u] (Tenn. 1896) Under Const. art. 1, § 9, guarantying to the accused "a speedy public trial by an impartial jury of the county," the action of the court in directing the sheriff to summon a special venire entirely from the country districts of the county is illegal, and entitles the accused to a new trial, if convicted, though no injury be shown.—Zanone v. State, 97 Tenn. 101, 36 S. W. 711, 35 L. R. A. 556.

[v] (Wis. 1884) Rev. St. 1878, § 4618, providing that offenses committed within 100 rods of the dividing line between two counties may be prosecuted and punished in either, is not in violation of Const. art. 1, § 7, securing to the accused the right to trial by a jury of the "county or district" wherein the offense was committed, "which county or district shall have previously been ascertained by law."—State v. Stewart, 60 Wis. 587, 19 N. W. 429, 50 Am. Rep. 388.

See ante, § 226 [h, k].

[a] (Ark. 1874) Cr. Code, § 219, which provides that the following oath shall be administered to the jury: "You and each of you do solemnly swear that you will well and truly try the case of the state of Arkansas against [the defendant], and a true verdict render, unless discharged by the court or withdrawn by the parties,"—is not in contravention of the constitution, which provides that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate.—Palmore v. State, 29 Ark. 248.

[b] (Colo. 1880) The fact that under Gen. Laws, §§ 812, 1479, the court may summon talesmen after exhausting the regular panel, does not cure the error of improperly sustaining a challenge by the state, since the prisoner is entitled to a list of the panel in order that he may inquire concerning them, and any irregular action of the court which compels resort to talesmen infringes this right.—Stratton v. People, 5 Colo. 276.

[c] (Ga. 1848) Const. art. 4, § 5, provides that trial by jury, "as heretofore used in this state, shall remain inviolate." 3 Bl. Comm. p. 579, which is the fundamental law of this state in all cases where not abrogated by statute, sets forth "that the truth of any accusation, whether preferred in the state, or by indictment, information, or bill, shall afterwards be confirmed by the unanimous suffrage of 12 of the defendant's equals and neighbors, indifferently chosen and superior to all suspicions." Act 1805 (Prince's Dig. p. 433) provides for the summoning and panel of grand jurors, and also the panel of petit jurors. Held, that a jury taken from the panel of petit jurors alone was not indifferently chosen, within the meaning of the constitution, since the defendant was entitled to have a jury drawn from both the grand and petit panels.—Rouse v. State, 4 Ga. 136.

[d] (Ga. 1856) Since, prior to the adoption of the constitution of 1798, which provides that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate "as heretofore used in this state," it was within the province of the legislature to regulate the manner of summoning and impaneling jurors, the acts passed, subsequent to the adoption of the constitution, regulating the mode of selecting, drawing, and summoning jurors, is not an infraction of the right secured by the constitution.—Rafe v. State, 20 Ga. 60.

[e] (Ga. 1888) An act creating a city court, and providing for a panel of 18, instead of 24, jurors, from which to select a jury for the trial of a civil case, is not in violation of Const. Ga. art. 6, § 18, declaring that the right to trial by jury shall remain inviolate, as the constitution does not prescribe the manner of selecting the jury.—Conyers v. Graham, 81 Ga. 615, 8 S. E. 521.

[f] (Ky. 1896) Under the statute requiring the circuit judge of each county to appoint three housekeepers, intelligent, discreet, over 21 years of age, residents of different parts of the county, and having no case for a jury, to serve as jury commissioners, a negro on trial cannot challenge the array because none of the jury commissioners was of his race.—Smith v. Commonwealth, 33 S. W. 825.

[g] (Mich. 1884) Neither the right of trial by jury nor the guaranty of local self-government is infringed by a statute authorizing jurors to be drawn by a board of jury commissioners appointed by the senate on the nomination of the governor.—People v. Harding, 53 Mich. 48, 481, 18 N. W. 555, 19 N. W. 155, 51 Am. Rep. 95; Same v. Anderson, 53 Mich. 60, 18 N. W. 561.

[h] (Mich. 1888) Parties to an action have a right to have the jury selected in substantial conformity with the law as established, and where a departure has occurred, and the positive provisions exacted to secure and guard the right to trial by jury have been violated or disregarded, there is no warrant in the courts for treating the deviations as harmless irregularities.—Hewitt v. Saginaw Circuit Judge, 71 Mich. 287, 39 N. W. 56.

[i] (Miss. 1881) Code 1880, § 1681, giving the board of supervisors power to select jurors, does not conflict with Const. art. 1, § 7, which provides that the accused shall be tried by an impartial jury of the county.—Cooper v. State, 59 Miss. 267.

[j] (S. C. 1857) Const. art. 9, § 6, providing that the right to trial by jury shall remain inviolate, does not prohibit the court or legislature from changing the method of drawing jurors from that which existed at the time of the adoption of the constitution.—State v. Boatwright, 10 Rich. Law, 407.

[k] (S. C.) Rule 97 of the circuit court, adopted at the November term, 1856, directs that in the formation of a jury for the trial of a felony, when the right of peremptory challenge is claimed and allowed, a child under 10 years of age shall, in the presence of the court, draw one from the names of all the jurors in attendance, which one, having answered, shall be presented to the accused, and so on until in regular course the panel may be exhausted or the jury be formed. Act 1791 (7 St. at Large, p. 262) § 4, provides that the circuit courts may from time to time make such just and reasonable rules and orders for the more regular and convenient conducting and effectual discharge of business therein as to them shall seem necessary and proper. Act 1731 (1 Brev. Dig. p. 447) § 15, provides that from the names of the persons who shall have been duly summoned and shall appear to serve as petit jurors the chief justice shall cause 12 persons to be drawn by a child under the age of 10 years, and the persons so drawn shall serve on all trials at such court; and in case any of the jurors so drawn shall be challenged, and the challenge allowed, or shall absent themselves or neglect to attend, that then the names of other persons shall be drawn out of the said box or glass to fill up or complete the jury. Held, that the act of 1731 was not unconstitutional, as imposing an undue restriction on the selection of a jury, and that rule 97 was within the terms of Act 1791.—(1857) State v. Boatwright, 10 Rich. Law, 407; (1857) Same v. Price, Id. 351; (1858) Same v. Clayton, 11 Rich. Law, 581.

[l] (Wis. 1857) The city charter of Milwaukee provides that a jury of six freeholders be appointed to decide upon the necessity of taking land for streets and upon the amount of compensation; but it does not provide that the so-called jury shall be sworn, and therefore violates article 11, § 2, of the constitution, which provides that in such cases "the necessity shall be first established by the verdict of a jury."—Lumsden v. City of Milwaukee, 8 Wis. 485.

[m] (Wis. 1859) An act of the legislature changing the method of selecting the jury panel, by authorizing the selection by the circuit judge, instead of a drawing by lot, is not an infringement of the constitutional provision that the right of jury trial shall be preserved.—Perry v. State, 9 Wis. 19.

§ 231. Examination.

[a] (Ga. 1846) The act of 1843, prescribing certain questions to be propounded to jurors touching their qualifications, is not unconstitutional, as an infringement on the right to trial by jury.—Boon v. State, 1 Ga. (1 Kelly) 618.

[b] (Ga. 1890) The right to a fair trial by an impartial jury is not impaired by Code, § 4682, prescribing the questions that may be asked a juror on his voir dire; the accused being allowed to offer evidence before the judge that any of the answers are untrue.—Woolfolk v. State, 85 Ga. 69, 11 S. E. 814.

§ 232. Challenges and objections.

[a] Statutory allowance of peremptory challenges of jurors by the state in criminal prosecutions is not in conflict with the constitutional right of trial by jury.

—(Mass. 1869) Commonwealth v. Dorsey, 103 Mass. 412;

(N. Y. 1865) Walter v. People, 32 N. Y. 147, affirming People v. Walters (1864) 18 Abb. Prac. 147, and Walter v. People, 6 Parker, Cr. R. 15;

(Vt. 1888) State v. Ward, 61 Vt. 153, 17 Atl. 483.

[b] (U. S. 1894) A rule that a juror shall be challenged or accepted and sworn as soon as his examination is completed is not objectionable, as embarrassing the exercise of the right of peremptory challenge.—St. Clair v. United States, 154 U. S. 134, 14 Sup. Ct. 1002, 38 L. Ed. 936.

[c] (U. S. 1895) The provision of Revision N. J. p. 532, that no exception to a juror in a criminal case on account of his citizenship or age or other disqualification shall be allowed after he has been sworn or affirmed, is not in violation of the provisions of the state constitution that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate.—Kohl v. Lehlback, 160 U. S. 293, 16 Sup. Ct. 304, 40 L. Ed. 432.

[d] (Cal. 1893) The law taking away the challenge for implied bias on the ground that the juror has formed or expressed an unqualified opinion as to the guilt of the accused is not unconstitutional as taking away one of the essential constituents of the right of jury trial secured by the constitution.—People v. Ah Lee Doon, 31 Pac. 963.

[e] (Ga. 1846) Pen. Code 1833, allowing the state 10 peremptory challenges, is not in violation of Const. art. 4, § 5, declaring that "trial by jury as heretofore used in this state shall remain inviolate."—Boon v. State, 1 Ga. (1 Kelly) 618.

[f] (La. 1856) The accidental insertion of the names of 3 jurors who had been excused in a list of 82 did not embarrass a prisoner in his challenges.—State v. Johnston, 11 La. Ann. 422; Same v. Kennedy, Id. 479.

[g] (Miss. 1846) How. & H. St. p. 674, § 46, which limits the number of peremptory challenges in capital cases on the part of the prisoner to 12, is not an infringement of the clause in the constitution which provides "that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate."—Dowling v. State, 13 Miss. (5 Smedes & M.) 664.

[h] (Miss. 1871) The setting aside by the court of a juror who has not been challenged by either party, or the discharge of a juror who, after having been sworn, is discovered to be incompetent, are acts which do not deprive the parties to the suit of any legal right, and which may properly be done by the court in order to secure an impartial jury.—Gilliam v. Brown, 43 Miss. 641.

[i] (Nev. 1876) St. 1861, p. 470, § 340, providing that from a list of 36 jurors, otherwise possessing the statutory qualifications, the state and defendant shall challenge peremptorily one juror alternately, until each has taken 12 peremptory challenges, and the remaining 12 jurors shall be sworn to try the case, is in conflict with article 1, § 3, of the constitution, which provides that the right of trial by jury shall be secured to all and remain inviolate forever, since it takes away the right of challenge for cause, whereby the 12 remaining to try the case may be prejudiced or otherwise unqualified to act as jurors.—State v. McClear, 11 Nev. 39.

[j] (N. H. 1869) A statute allowing the state, on the trial of criminal cases, the same number of peremptory challenges as the respondent, is constitutional.—State v. Wilson, 48 N. H. 398.

[k] (N. Y. 1875) Laws 1873, c. 427, providing that all challenges of jurors, both in civil and criminal cases, shall be tried and determined by the court alone, is constitutional.—Weston v. People, 6 Hun, 140.

[l] (Pa. 1861) The provision in the criminal procedure act of 1860, allowing four peremptory challenges to the commonwealth in all cases, is not in conflict with that portion of the constitution which provides "that trial by jury shall be as heretofore, and the right thereof shall remain inviolate."—Warren v. Commonwealth, 37 Pa. (1 Wright) 45.

[m] (Pa. 1861) The allowance of four peremptory challenges, under the criminal procedure act of 1860, does not conflict with the constitutional provision "that trials by jury shall be as heretofore, and the right thereof remain inviolate," although in consequence thereof it becomes necessary to call in the talesmen.—Hartzell v. Commonwealth, 40 Pa. (4 Wright) 462.

[n] (S. C. 1848) The act of 1841, which gives to each party, in all cases in which a jury shall be impaneled, before they shall be charged with the trial of any issue, the right to challenge, without cause shown, two of the jury so impaneled, is not a violation of section 6, art. 9, of the constitution; for the "trial by jury" in that section does not relate to the preliminary proceedings by which a jury is impaneled, and those proceedings are no part of "the trial."—Cregier v. Bunton, 2 Strob. 487.

[o] (S. C. 1890) An act of the legislature reducing the number of challenges in jury trials does not violate the constitutional provision that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate."—State v. Wyse, 32 S. C. 45, 10 S. E. 612.

[p] (Wyo. 1888) Rev. St. § 3281, providing for trial of challenges to jurors in capital cases by three triers, and constituting them sole judges of the competency of such jurors, is not void as an infringement of the powers of the trial court as defined by the organic act of the territory.—Carter v. Territory, 3 Wyo. 193, 18 Pac. 750.

[a] (N. Y. 1890) Laws 1857, c. 156, § 12, which provides that, on an appeal from the award of commissioners appointed to ascertain the amount of compensation for private property taken for public use, the court may increase or diminish the amount of compensation awarded, violates Const. art. 1, § 7, which requires that the compensation for private property taken for public use shall be ascertained by a jury or by commissioners, and is void.—In re Malone Waterworks Co. (Sup.) 15 N. Y. Supp. 649.

[b] (Pa. 1873) The act of 1868, authorizing the "court," upon petition, on "due proof" that a ground rent has "been extinguished by payment or presumption of law," to decree that such ground rent is extinguished, is unconstitutional, as violating the right of trial by jury.—Appeal of Haines, 73 Pa. (23 P. F. Smith) 169.

[c] (Pa. 1881) Act March 14, 1872, which enables the court to make the record conform to what was tried before the jury and found by the verdict, does not infringe the right of trial by jury.—Parks v. Boynton, 98 Pa. 370.

§ 234. Weight and sufficiency of evidence.

Taking evidence before referee for resubmission to jury, see post, § 242 [d].
Waiver of objections, see post, § 508 [s].

[a] (U. S. 1881) Act Ga. Oct. 14, 1879, providing for the regulation of freight and passenger tariffs, which declares that the schedule of rates established by the commissioners shall be held and taken in all courts as sufficient evidence that the rates therein fixed are just and reasonable, does not deprive railroad companies of their right to trial by jury, since it merely prescribes the effect of evidence.—Tilley v. Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. (C. C.) 5 Fed. 641.

[b] (Mass.) The fact that the judgment of a foreign court of admiralty condemning a ship for a breach of blockade is conclusive evidence of such breach, as against defendant, does not infringe defendant's right to trial by jury in an action on a policy of marine insurance on the vessel so condemned.—(1810) Baxter v. New England Marine Ins. Co., 6 Mass. 277, 4 Am. Dec. 125; (1811) Id., 7 Mass. 275.

[c] (Mass. 1811) Where the defense to an action on a marine insurance policy was that the loss occurred through a breach of blockade, a decision of the trial judge that the sentence of a foreign court of vice admiralty was conclusive evidence on the question whether the loss occurred in that way is not a denial of the right to a trial by jury.—Baxter v. New England Marine Ins. Co., 7 Mass. 275.

[d] (Mass. 1877) Gen. St. c. 121, § 46, making an auditor's report prima facie evidence upon the matters referred to him, is not unconstitutional, as an infringement upon a party's right to have the question of his liability determined by a jury; it being within the legislative power to regulate the forms of proceedings and the rules of evidence.—Holmes v. Hunt, 122 Mass. 505, 23 Am. Rep. 381.

[e] (Mo. 1894) Rev. St. 1889, § 3581, making it criminal for an officer of a bank to receive a deposit knowing that the bank is insolvent, and providing that the subsequent failure of the bank shall be prima facie evidence of such knowledge, does not violate Const. art. 2, § 28, which provides that "the right to trial by jury, as heretofore enjoyed, shall remain inviolate."—State v. Buck, 120 Mo. 479, 25 S. W. 573.

[f] (Neb. 1881) Comp. St. c. 50, § 18, which provides that, in actions against a saloon keeper for injury caused by the furnishing of intoxicating liquor, it shall only be necessary to sustain the action to prove that defendant sold or gave liquor to the person so intoxicated, whose acts or injuries are complained of, on that day or about that time when said acts were committed or injuries received, is not in violation of Const. art. 1, § 6, which guaranties the right of trial by jury, as it only provides the effect to be given to evidence in fixing responsibility.—Pleuler v. State, 11 Neb. 547, 10 N. W. 481.

[g] (N. H. 1868) Act July 3, 1863, entitled "An act in relation to damages occasioned by dogs," is unconstitutional, in so far as it undertakes to charge the owner with the amount of damage done by his dog, as fixed by the selectmen, because it is in violation of the right to trial by jury guarantied by Bill of Rights, art. 20.—East Kingston v. Towle, 48 N. H. 57, 97 Am. Dec. 575, 2 Am. Rep. 174.

[h] (N. H. 1876) The provisions of Gen. St. c. 212, providing for sending cases to auditors, and making the auditors' report evidence to the jury, are not in violation of the constitutional provision protecting trial by jury, except in cases in which it has been heretofore otherwise practiced; for references to auditors were in use before the constitution.—Perkins v. Scott, 57 N. H. 55. CONTRA, see King v. Hopkins, Id. 334.

[i] (N. Y.) Excise Law 1857, c. 628, authorizing the issuance of licenses for the sale of spirituous liquors or wines in quantities of less than five gallons, not be drunk upon the premises, provides that "whenever any person is seen to drink in such shop, or house, outhouse, yard, or garden belonging thereto, any spirituous liquor or wine forbidden to be drunk therein, it shall be prima facie evidence that such spirituous liquors or wines were sold by the occupant of such premises or his agent with the intention that the same should be drunk therein." Held, that such statute, in so far as it declares what should constitute prima facie evidence, was unconstitutional, as depriving accused of his right to trial by jury.—(1882) People v. Lyon, 27 Hun, 180. CONTRA, see (1886) Excise Com'rs of Auburn v. Merchant, 103 N. Y. 143, 8 N. E. 484.

[j] (Ohio, 1881) 71 Ohio Laws, p. 146, fixing a minimum penalty against a railroad for overcharging for transportation, is not unconstitutional as invading the province of a jury, since such penalty is in the nature of a punishment.—Cincinnati, S. & C. R. Co. v. Cook, 37 Ohio St. 265.

[k] (Pa. 1866) Act March 27, 1852, § 7, relating to Clarion river, a public highway, which makes the award of referees appointed under the act final, is unconstitutional, so far as it attempts to deprive of a trial by jury a plaintiff in an action for obstructing by a dam his navigation of that river.—Rhines v. Clark, 51 Pa. (1 P. F. Smith) 96.

[l] (R. I. 1859) The construction of Rev. St. c. 68, §§ 1, 2, holding that the decision of the school commissioner, and a justice of the supreme court upon appeal, that a tax has been illegally assessed, is conclusive, both in law and fact, upon the parties to the appeal, does not bring that statute into conflict with section 15, art. 1, of the constitution, which declares that the "right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate."—Crandall v. James, 6 R. I. 144.

[m] (R. I. 1875) A statute provided that "when a cause is at issue in the supreme court or court of common pleas, if the form of action be assumpsit, debt, covenant, or other form of action in any way involving accounts, the court may, in its discretion, appoint one or more auditors," etc., and further provided for a trial by jury, after confirmation of the auditor's report and judgment thereon, "in which trial the report shall be prima facie evidence of all matters expressly embraced in the order." Held that, so far as this statute made the auditor's report prima facie evidence for the jury, it was in conflict with Const. art. 1, § 15, which provides that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate," and was therefore void.—Francis v. Baker, 11 R. I. 103, 23 Am. Rep. 424.

[n] (Tenn. 1895) A provision in Acts 1895, c. 67, relating to the protection of hotel, inn, and boarding house keepers, that proof of certain things shall be prima facie evidence of fraudulent intent to defraud such keepers, does not impair the right of trial by an impartial jury, as guarantied by Const. art. 1, §§ 6, 8, 9.—State v. Yardley, 95 Tenn. 546, 32 S. W. 481, 34 L. R. A. 656.

[o] (Tex. 1895) Act May 6, 1893, providing that payment of the United States special license tax shall be prima facie evidence that the person paying such tax is engaged in selling liquor, is not in conflict with Const. art. 1, § 15, giving the right of trial by jury, since prima facie evidence is merely proof upon which the jury may find a verdict.—Floeck v. State, 34 Tex. Cr. R. 314, 30 S. W. 794.

[p] (Vt. 1860) The act of 1856, providing for a compulsory reference of suits at law, and which makes the referee's report prima facie evidence of the facts therein reported, in case either party claims a trial by jury, does, so far as it applies to actions suitable for trial by jury according to the course of the common law, impair the right to such a jury trial as is guarantied by the constitution, and it is therefore void.—Plimpton v. Somerset, 33 Vt. 283.

[q] (Wis. 1882) Rev. St. § 4073, providing that a person convicted of a felony may still be a competent witness, is not unconstitutional, as impairing the right of trial by jury.—Sutton v. Fox, 55 Wis. 531, 13 N. W. 477, 42 Am. Rep. 744.

§ 235. Nonsuit or directing verdict.

Practice in general, see "Trial," VI. (B, C, D).

[a] (U. S. 1828) The courts of the United States have no authority to order a peremptory nonsuit against the will of the plaintiff. He has a right by law to a trial by a jury, and to have the case submitted to them. He may agree to a nonsuit, but cannot be compelled to submit to it.—Doe v. Grymes, 26 U. S. (1 Pet.) 469; De Wolf v. Rabaud, 26 U. S. (1 Pet.) 476, 7 L. Ed. 227.

[b] (U. S. 1885) Without a waiver of the right of trial by jury in a United States circuit court, by consent of parties, the court errs if it substitutes itself for the jury, and, passing upon the effect of the evidence, finds the facts involved in the issue and renders judgment thereon.—Baylis v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 113 U. S. 316, 5 Sup. Ct. 494, 28 L. Ed. 989, following Randall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (1883) 109 U. S. 478, 3 Sup. Ct. 322, 27 L. Ed. 1003.

[c] (Conn. 1856) The act of 1852, authorizing the granting of nonsuits in civil actions, where the plaintiff, who has produced his evidence and rested his cause, shall have failed to make out a prima facie case, is not repugnant to the constitution of this state, as impairing the right of trial by jury.—Naugatuck R. Co. v. Waterbury Button Co., 24 Conn. 468.

[d] (Ill. 1882) To order a nonsuit, where there are issues of fact and evidence adduced in support of the issues, is a deprivation of a party's right to a trial by jury.—Greenwich Ins. Co. v. Raab, 11 Ill. App. (11 Bradw.) 636.

[e] (Iowa, 1894) Where the evidence would have warranted the court in directing a verdict, it was not error to order the cause tried to the court.—Garretson v. Ferrall, 92 Iowa, 728, 61 N. W. 251.

[f] (Me. 1824) Where the evidence offered by the plaintiff is deemed insufficient to maintain the action, the ordering of a nonsuit is no infringement of Declaration of Rights, § 20, which secures the privilege of trial by jury.—Perley v. Little, 3 Me. (3 Greenl.) 97.

[g] (N. M. 1891) Under the constitutional provision which guaranties to persons accused of crime the right of trial by jury, the court, in a criminal case, has no power to direct the jury to convict, though the evidence of guilt is overwhelming.—Territory v. Kee, 5 N. M. 510, 25 Pac. 924.

[h] (Pa. 1861) Facts are for the jury; the law applicable to them, for the court. Therefore, when the court ordered a nonsuit, on the ground that, under the law as applicable to all the facts of the case that a jury could have found from the evidence, there was no liability on the part of the corporation defendants, such order was held not to violate the constitutional right of trial by jury.—Munn v. City of Pittsburg, 40 Pa. (4 Wright) 364.

[i] (Tenn. 1896) To compel plaintiff, in a suit for damages for death of his intestate, to join in a demurrer to the evidence, where the evidence is conceded to be true, and all legitimate and reasonable inferences that may be drawn from it are admitted, is not in violation of Const. art. 1, § 6, providing that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate.—Hopkins v. Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry., 96 Tenn. 409, 34 S. W. 1029, 32 L. R. A. 354.

5. EFFECT OF PROVISION FOR OTHER REMEDY.

IN GENERAL, § 236.
APPEAL TO COURT WHERE JURY TRIAL MAY BE HAD, § 237.
— ACTIONS BEFORE JUSTICES OF THE PEACE AND OTHER INFERIOR COURTS, § 238.
— CONDEMNATION PROCEEDINGS, § 239.
— PROBATE MATTERS, § 240.
— CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS, § 241.
RESERVATION OF RIGHT OF RESUBMISSION TO JURY, § 242.

[a] (Cal. 1855) Comp. Laws, p. 214, known as the "Act to prevent extortion in office," is not in conflict with the constitution, in that it deprives the defendant of the right to trial by jury, since the last section of that act provides a remedy whereby a jury trial may be had.—Ryan v. Johnson, 5 Cal. 86.

[b] (Fla. 1884) Act March 11, 1879, c. 3131, and Act Feb. 22, 1881, c. 3247, providing a summary proceeding by warrant of distress for securing rents, whereby the tenant's property is made liable to seizure without personal notice to the tenant, is not in conflict with the constitutional provisions which secure the right of trial by jury, as the tenant may have the matters in dispute tried by a jury on his replevying the property and tendering an issue.—Blanchard v. Raines' Ex'x, 20 Fla. 467.

[c] (N. J. 1891) Revision, p. 550, §§ 59, 60, allowing a trial before a justice by a jury of 6, of the title to property levied on, where it is claimed by a third person, is not unconstitutional as depriving the parties of the right to a constitutional jury of 12, since it does not compel the parties to resort to such a proceeding, but leaves optional with the claimant to bring replevin or trespass de bonis asportatis, and, with the plaintiff in execution, to give bond, and compel a sale by the officer.—Berry v. Chamberlain, 53 N. J. Law (24 Vroom) 463, 23 Atl. 115.

[d] (N. Y. 1872) In an action for an injunction and damages for the use by defendant of plaintiff's trade-mark, defendant has no absolute right to a preliminary order settling issues to be tried by a jury, and the refusal to grant such order does not necessarily deprive the defendant of his right to such trial, since, when the cause is brought to trial without a jury, the defendant may then object, and it will be the duty of the court to order the cause to be tried by a jury, unless the damages are waived.—Colman v. Dixon, 50 N. Y. 572.

[e] (N. Y. 1878) Laws 1877, c. 387, § 48, authorizing the recorder of Kingston to commit a prisoner to jail, not exceeding five days, for nonpayment of costs, in case such prisoner elects not to be tried before the recorder, and waives examination, does not affect his ultimate right of trial by jury, and is not, therefore, in violation of Const. art 1, § 2.—People v. Webb, 16 Hun, 42.

[f] (N. C. 1860) The fact that a county court, by a special statute, cannot hold jury trials, does not deprive a party of his common-law right to have issues of fact tried by a jury; and in such case the cause should be transferred to the superior court for trial.—Buchanan v. McKenzie, 53 N. C. 91.

[g] (R. I. 1887) Pub. St. c. 244, § 24, provides that every person who shall have been convicted three times within a period of six months of intoxication, etc., or who shall be proved to have been thus intoxicated three times within six weeks, shall be deemed a common drunkard. Held not to violate the provision of the constitution securing the right of trial by jury, there being nothing to prevent any person complained of under the act from having a trial by jury on any question of fact arising, and there being provision for jury trial on complaint for indecent intoxication.—State v. Flynn, 16 R. I. 10, 11 Atl. 170.

[h] (Wis. 1862) The provisions of the law of 1859 relating to actions to try the title to lands conveyed for taxes are not unconstitutional, as denying the right of trial by jury; section 42 saving that privilege.—Wakeley v. Mohr, 15 Wis. 609.

[i] (Wis. 1882) Rev. St. §§ 3149–3153, relating to "partition of water powers," and providing for the appointment of commissioners to take control of mills and to use them in such reasonable manner as will enable them to ascertain the respective rights of the parties, and to determine the manner of using, applying, and preserving the same, is not unconstitutional, as denying the right of trial by jury, since it is expressly provided in the statute that an issue of fact in any such action properly triable by jury may be tried by jury with like effect as in other cases.—Janesville Cotton Mfg. Co. v. Ford, 55 Wis. 197, 12 N. W. 377.

§ 237. Appeal to court where jury trial may be had.

Restrictions on right of appeal in civil cases, see ante, § 212.

—— in criminal cases, see ante, § 217.

[a] (Md. 1855) A law which secures the right of trial by jury on appeal, though providing for a primary trial without jury, is no violation of a constitutional provision for guarding such right.—Steuart v. City of Baltimore, 7 Md. 500.

[b] (Mo. 1891) Even if Const. 1875, art. 2, § 28, requires a jury in such cases as an action to recover possession under the landlord and tenant act, a statute is not repugnant thereto where it provides, without unreasonable restriction, for an appeal to a court where a jury trial may be had.—State ex rel. Kansas City Auditorium Co. v. Allen, 45 Mo. App. 551.

[c] (Pa. 1865) Act Dec. 14, 1863, giving a single justice power to determine questions arising in proceedings by landlords to regain possession of the demised premises, and on a finding against the tenant to forthwith issue a writ of possession, with a right of appeal and ultimate trial by jury, is not in contravention of section 6 of the declaration of rights, which provides that the trial by jury shall be as heretofore and remain inviolate.—Kinley v. McFillen, 6 Phila. 35.

[d] (Pa. 1866) The landlord and tenant act of 1863 substitutes the judgment of one justice for that of two and a jury of freeholders, but allows an appeal to the common pleas upon giving bail for costs and rent that have accrued or may accrue; such appeal, however, not to operate as a supersedeas to the warrant of possession. If the jury find for the tenant upon the appeal, they are to assess his damages sustained by removal from the premises, and he is entitled to a judgment for such damages, costs, and the possession. Held, that this act does not violate the constitutional provision securing a trial by jury.—Haines v. Levin, 51 Pa. (1 P. F. Smith) 412.

Criminal prosecutions, see post, § 241.

[a] Statutes which authorize a justice of the peace to decide questions without a jury, but give an appeal from his judgment to a court which tries by jury, are not unconstitutional, as impairing the right of trial by jury.
—(Conn. 1823) Beers v. Beers, 4 Conn. 535, 10 Am. Dec. 186;
(N. C. 1811) Keddie v. Moore, 6 N. C. 41, 5 Am. Dec. 518;
(Pa. 1808) Emerick v. Harris, 1 Bin. 416;
(Tenn. 1835) Morford v. Barnes, 16 Tenn. (8 (Yerg.) 444.

[b] (N. Y. 1869) The statute authorizing a trial by a jury of 6 in a justice's court, although the amount claimed exceeds the limit of the jurisdiction of the court, is not unconstitutional, if it also allows the defendant the right to remove the cause to a court of record, where he could have a trial by a jury of 12.—People v. Lane, 55 Barb. 168, 6 Abb. Prac. (N. S.) 105.

[c] (N. C. 1811) Acts 1802, c. 6, increasing the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace to £30, is not incompatible with section 14, Bill of Rights, securing the right of trial by jury, in the state constitution, since the parties are secured the right of appeal with trial by jury.—Keddie v. Moore, 6 N. C. 41, 5 Am. Dec. 518; Richmond v. Boman, 6 N. C. 46; Wilson v. Simonton, 8 N. C. 482.

[d] (Pa. 1825) The act of April 2, 1821 (7 Smith's Laws, p. 474), and the supplement thereto, passed March 24, 1824, laying a duty on retailers of foreign merchandise, and providing for an action to recover the same before a justice or alderman without a jury, and which provides for an appeal from the decision of such justice or alderman to a court where the defendant might have a jury, does not violate Const. art. 9, § 6, providing for trial by a jury.—Biddle v. Commonwealth, 13 Serg. & R. 405.

[e] (Tenn. 1835) Acts 1831, c. 59, § 2, vesting justices with jurisdiction of suits where the amount in controversy may exceed $20, there being no jury trial in justices' courts, is not unconstitutional, as depriving a person of the right of trial by jury, since the party is entitled to a jury trial on appeal.—Morford v. Barnes, 16 Tenn. (8 Yerg.) 444.

[f] (W. Va. 1885) A party's constitutional right to a jury trial is not invaded by a summary proceeding in the first instance in an inferior court, if he has an unqualified right to such a trial in the appellate court on appeal from such inferior court.—Jelly v. Dils, 27 W. Va. 267.

§ 239. —— Condemnation proceedings.

[a] (Ind. 1866) The provision in the plank road act for the assessment of damages in the first instance by viewers, to be appointed by the justice, is not in conflict with Const. art. 1, § 20, which provides that "in all civil cases the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate," since on appeal to the circuit court, the issue may be tried by a jury.—Norristown Turnpike Co. v. Burket, 26 Ind. 53.

[b] (Iowa, 1885) As an appeal lies from the decision of the board of supervisors, in awarding damages for opening a highway, to the circuit court, where the party aggrieved may obtain a jury trial, a landowner is not deprived of his constitutional right to such trial; and, if he neglects to avail himself of the said right, he has no ground to complain.—Tharp v. Witham, 65 Iowa, 566, 22 N. W. 677.

[c] (Miss. 1882) The provision in a railroad company's charter that land damages shall be assessed by three commissioners appointed by the chancery court, and if dissatisfied therewith either party may appeal and demand a jury, is not unconstitutional.—New Orleans, B. R., V. & M. R. Co. v. Drake, 60 Miss. 621.

[d] (N. Y. 1894) Laws 1870, c. 291 (Village Incorporation Act), as amended by Laws 1893, c. 694, providing that compensation for land taken for streets shall be determined by a jury of 6, taken from a list of 12 prepared by the trustees, and that the landowner may appeal from their award to the county court, where the damages shall be assessed by three commissioners appointed by the court, does not violate the requirement of the constitution that compensation shall be ascertained by a jury, or by not less than three commissioners appointed by a court of record, since the right of appeal cures the defect in selecting a jury from such list.—People v. Board of Trustees of Haverstraw, 80 Hun, 385, 30 N. Y. Supp. 825.

[e] (S. D. 1895) Since Comp. Laws, § 1324, gives a landowner the right to appeal to a jury from the assessment by township supervisors of damages occasioned by the laying out, alteration, or discontinuance of a road, Id. § 1302, providing that the assessment of such damages shall be made by township supervisors, is not in conflict with Const. art. 6, § 13, which provides that private property shall not be taken for public use or damaged without just compensation, as determined by a jury.—Town of Dell Rapids v. Irving, 7 S. D. 310, 64 N. W. 149, 29 L. R. A. 861.

§ 240. —— Probate matters.

[a] (Ala.) Code, §§ 3619, 3640, allow an appeal to the circuit or supreme court from any final decree of the probate court within one year from the rendition thereof. Section 3210, as amended by Act Gen. Assem. Feb. 28, 1889, provides that compensation for lands taken by eminent domain may be ascertained by a jury of 6 men in proceedings in the probate court. Section 3215 provides that in such cases either party may appeal by bill of exceptions to the supreme court within three months. Const. art. 14, § 7, entitles either party appealing from a preliminary assessment of compensation for condemned lands to have the damages "determined by a jury according to law." Held that, since a "jury according to law" is a jury of 12 men, section 3215 is unconstitutional, since, if an appeal by bill of exceptions were taken by either party directly to the supreme court, the other would be deprived of right to trial by such a jury.—(1890) Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Alabama G. S. R. Co., 92 Ala. 331, 9 South. 555; (1891) Alabama M. Ry. Co. v. Newton, 94 Ala. 443, 10 South. 89.

[b] (R. I. 1880) A statute giving probate courts jurisdiction to set off dower, but reserving a right of appeal, by claiming which any party interested may have a trial by jury in the appellate court, is not unconstitutional, in that it impairs the right of trial by jury.—Weaver v. Sturtevant, 12 R. I. 537.

§ 241. —— Criminal prosecutions.

[a] (U. S. 1888) One charged with the offense of criminal conspiracy is entitled to a jury trial in the first instance; and it is not sufficient that by the local statutes (Rev. St. Dist. Col. §§ 773, 1073–1077) he would be entitled to an appeal from a conviction by the police court to the supreme court, upon giving recognizance, and to a jury trial on such appeal.—Callan v. Wilson, 127 U. S. 540, 8 Sup. Ct. 1301, 32 L. Ed. 223.

[b] (U. S. 1873) Act June 17, 1870 (16 Stat. 153), which establishes a police court in the District of Columbia, and gives such court jurisdiction over certain offenses committed in the District; and provides that trial in that court is to be without a jury, but any party aggrieved may appeal to the criminal court of the District, and that the appeal may be tried by a jury, is unconstitutional, under Const. art. 3, § 2, subdiv. 3, which provides that the trial of all crimes, except impeachment, shall be by jury.—In re Dana, Fed. Cas. No. 3,554 [7 Ben. 1].

[c] (Conn. 1856) The provision of the act of 1854, to suppress intemperance, that the justice, if he shall find the liquor was kept in violation of said act, shall render judgment that the liquor and the vessels which contained it be forfeited, is not, by giving to the justice jurisdiction over property to an unlimited amount, repugnant to the constitution of this state, as impairing the right of trial by jury, inasmuch as the right of appeal is allowed to the claimant in every case.—State v. Brennan's Liquors, 25 Conn. 278.

[d] (Iowa, 1859) Article 2 of the ordinance of 1787 is not violated by a trial in an inferior court before a jury of less than 12 men, appeal being left open to carry the case before a jury of 12.—State v. Beneke, 9 Iowa, 203.

[e] (Kan. 1874) Where a statute authorizes a trial before a municipal court without a jury, for a violation of a city ordinance, and at the same time secures to the defendant an appeal therefrom to an appellate court in which he has a right to a trial by a jury, proceeding under the statute is not in conflict with the constitutional provision that the "right of trial by jury shall be inviolate."—City of Emporia v. Volmer, 12 Kan. 622.

[f] (Ky. 1889) Act Feb. 11, 1880, providing that "juries in justices', police, and quarterly courts may consist of six men," does not include county courts; but to try defendant against his objection by a jury of six men in the county court is a judicial error, and, the judgment being for a fine of more than $20, entitles defendant, under Cr. Code, § 362, to an appeal to the circuit court, where the error may be cured by a trial de novo by a jury of twelve men.—Helvenstine v. Yantis, 88 Ky. 695, 11 S. W. 811.

[g] (Mass. 1823) St. 1822, c. 25, giving the police court of the city of Boston power to sentence to the house of correction persons adjudged guilty of certain offenses, is not unconstitutional, as subjecting them to an infamous punishment without trial by jury. If, on conviction in the police court, the party does not appeal to a higher tribunal, where he may be tried by a jury, it is a voluntary waiver of his privilege.—Commonwealth v. Bowden, Thacher, Cr. Cas. 9.

[h] (Mass. 1857) A statute which authorizes a single magistrate to try and pass sentence in a criminal case, but gives the defendant an unqualified and unfettered right of appeal and a trial by jury in the appellate court, subject only to the requirement of giving bail for his appearance there, or, in default of such bail, being committed to jail, is not unconstitutional, as impairing the right of trial by jury.—Jones v. Robbins, 74 Mass. (8 Gray) 329.

[i] (Minn. 1869) The jury contemplated by Const. art. 1, par. 6, securing the right to trial by jury in criminal cases, is a body of 12 men, and it is error to try a party charged with crime, in a justice court, against his objection, with a jury of 6, though he may appeal to the district court, on entering into recognizance with sureties, where a trial by the constitutional jury may be had.—State v. Everett, 14 Minn. 439 (Gil. 330).

[j] (Mo. 1887) There is no constitutional objection to a legislative provision for the trial of cases involving breaches of city ordinances without an indictment and without a jury, especially where a jury may be had on appeal.—City of Marshall v. Standard, 24 Mo. App. 192.

[k] (N. C. 1854) Act Gen. Assem. giving to the intendant of police of a town power to try assaults and batteries is in contravention of Const. § 9, providing "that no freeman shall be convicted of any crime but by the unanimous verdict of a jury of good and lawful men, in open court, as heretofore used," though the defendant may be entitled to an appeal from a conviction by such magistrate.—State v. Moss, 47 N. C. 66.

[l] (N. C. 1884) The legislature may provide other means for trial of petty misdemeanors than by jury, provided the right of appeal is preserved.—State v. Crook, 91 N. C. 536.

[m] (N. C. 1894) Under Const. art. 1, § 13, the legislature may authorize the trial of petty misdemeanors in inferior courts without a jury, by making provision for appeal.—State v. Whitaker, 114 N. C. 818, 19 S. E. 376.

[n] (S. C. 1893) Const. 1868, art. 1, §§ 11, 13, 14, which provide that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate, do not entitle a person charged with carrying a concealed weapon to a trial by a jury of 12 men, in the absence of any provision in the constitution forbidding the general assembly from determining the number of persons who shall constitute a jury, as it had the power to do before the adoption of such constitution; especially since article 1, § 19, provides that cases of such character shall be tried "summarily" before a justice of the peace, without indictment or intervention of a jury, saving to defendant the right of appeal.—State v. Williams, 40 S. C. 373, 19 S. E. 5.

[o] (Va. 1892) Code, § 4106, which confers upon justices of the peace jurisdiction over the offense of keeping a bawdy house, concurrent with that of the county and corporation courts, is repugnant to Const. art. 1, § 10, guarantying to the accused in all criminal prosecutions the right to a speedy trial by an impartial jury; and the fact that sections 4107 and 4108 give in such a case the right of appeal and trial by jury in the appellate court does not relieve the statute of its repugnancy.—Miller v. Commonwealth, 88 Va. 618, 14 S. E. 161, 342, 979, 15 L. R. A. 441.

[p] (Va. 1895) Code 1887, § 4106, as amended by Acts Assem. 1893–94, p. 430, provided that justices of the peace shall have concurrent jurisdiction with the county and corporation courts in petit larceny and other misdemeanors whenever the accused elects to be tried by said justice, and is not in conflict with Const. art. 1, § 10, which provides "that in all capital or criminal prosecution a man hath a right to * * * a speedy trial by an impartial jury," as provision is made for a trial by jury on appeal to a higher court in case of conviction before the justice.—Brown v. Epps, 91 Va. 726, 21 S. E. 119, 27 L. R. A. 676, reversing Miller v. Commonwealth (1892) 88 Va. 618, 14 S. E. 161, 342, 979, 15 L. R. A. 441.

[q] (W. Va. 1885) Provisions of the charter authorizing a town or city to require licenses to legalize the sale of intoxicating liquor, and providing for the punishment of selling without a license by fine and imprisonment, to be imposed by summary proceedings, is constitutional; the right of appeal and trial by jury being given.—Moundsville v. Fountain, 27 W. Va. 182; Jelly v. Dils, Id. 267.

§ 242. Reservation of right of resubmission to jury.

[a] (Ga. 1848) Acts 1841, 1845, providing that all persons employed on watercraft on certain rivers of the state, on making an affidavit and an application to any judge of the superior court or justice of an inferior court, may obtain an order to the clerk to enter up judgment on such affidavit and to issue an execution instanter; and further providing that the owners of such said watercraft may, when desirous of contesting said claim, file a bond to secure said debt, whereupon there shall be a trial by jury, is not unconstitutional, as affecting the right of trial by jury.—Flint River Steamboat Co. v. Foster, 5 Ga. 194, 48 Am. Dec. 248.

[b] (Mo. 1892) 1 Rev. St. 1879, pars. 894–896, which authorized the appointment of commissioners to assess damages for land condemned, allowed the landowner to have such damages reassessed by a jury, and provided that the petitioner, upon paying into court the damages as assessed by the commissioners, might take possession of the land, does not conflict with Const. 1875, art. 12, par. 4, which declares that the right of trial by jury shall be held inviolate in all trials for compensation where, in the exercise of the right of eminent domain, any incorporated company shall be interested either for or against the exercise of said right.—Rothan v. St. Louis, O. H. & C. Ry. Co., 113 Mo. 132, 20 S. W. 892.

[c] (N. H. 1875) Acts 1874, c. 97, § 13, which authorizes the court, without consent of parties, to commit certain cases to referees, but providing that if either party is dissatisfied he may afterwards have a hearing before a court and jury, is not in conflict with Bill of Rights, art. 20, guarantying the right to a trial by jury.—Copp v. Henniker, 55 N. H. 179, 20 Am. Rep. 194.

[d] (S. C. 1895) Where a party is entitled to a jury trial, the court cannot order the testimony to be taken by a referee, on which the case may be afterwards tried by a jury.—Wilson v. York Tp., 43 S. C. 299, 21 S. E. 82; Same v. Catawba Tp., Id.; Same v. Cherokee Tp., Id.; Same v. Ebenezer Tp., Id.

[e] (Wash. 1894) Act March, 1893 (Laws, p. 237), relating to laying out highways, provides that notice of the proceeding shall be given by posting, and, after the survey has been made and the plat and award has been filed by the viewers, the clerk shall publish a notice that the court will consider the report on a certain day, when, if any one objects to the award, the court will call a jury. Held, that the act is in violation of Const. art. 1, § 16, which provides that compensation for a taking of property for a public use shall be ascertained by a jury unless a jury is waived.—In re Smith, 9 Wash. 85, 37 Pac. 311.

[a] (Fla. 1889) A man is not disqualified from jury service because he is the assessor of taxes for a city or town.—Ellis v. State, 25 Fla. 702, 6 South. 768.

[b] (Ky. 1892) The judgment of a lower court will not be reversed on appeal because some of the members of the jury were colored persons.—Osborn v. Commonwealth, 20 S. W. 223.

[c] (Mass. 1876) Under Gen. St. c. 132, § 1, and Id. c. 6, § 1, an infant is not qualified to serve on a jury.—Wassum v. Feeney, 121 Mass. 93, 23 Am. Rep. 258.

[d] (Pa. 1867) A juror is not disqualified by inability to state his age.—Commonwealth v. Winnemore, 2 Brewst. 378.

[e] (R. I. 1880) In Gen. St. c. 189, § 1, providing that certain persons are "liable" to serve as jurors, the word "liable" is tantamount to "qualified," and the section defines the qualification of jurors, as well as the liability to serve.—State v. Davis, 12 R. I. 492, 34 Am. Rep. 704.

[f] (Wash. 1884) A husband and wife are jointly householders and the head of the family, so that the wife may act as juror under a statute requiring jurors to be householders.—Rosencrantz v. Territory, 2 Wash. T. 267, 5 Pac. 305; Walker v. Same, 2 Wash. T. 286, 5 Pac. 313.

[a] (U. S. 1864) Although congress has heretofore adopted some of the state laws and modes of procedure, especially those which prescribe the qualification of jurors and the mode of summoning them, there is no necessity for so doing, or for using any part of the state machinery. The national legislature has constitutional power to prescribe the qualifications of jurors and the manner in which they shall be selected and summoned; it may make the judicial system of the United States complete for the independent exercise of all its functions.—In re Charge to Grand Jury, Fed. Cas. No. 18,274 [2 Spr. 292].

[b] (U. S. 1886) Act May 17, 1884 (23 Stat. 24, § 7), declares that the general laws of Oregon shall be the law in Alaska so far as applicable, and not in conflict with United States laws; and Rev. St. § 800, provides that jurors shall have the qualifications prescribed by the law of the state in which they sit. Held, that the latter statute cannot apply to Alaska, as there is no law there on the subject, and jurors should be chosen under Civ. Code Or. §§ 918–920.—Kie v. United States (C. C.) 27 Fed. 351.

[c] (Ala. 1875) Act Dec. 31, 1868, to amend Rev. Code, § 4063, which requires the officers therein designated to select grand and petit jurors from the list of registered voters on file in the probate judge's office, observing strictly "all qualifications and restrictions in regard to competency and qualification as now provided by law," does not repeal section 4180, which allows a challenge for cause, in a criminal trial, to one summoned as "a juror, and not a resident freeholder or householder for the preceding year."—Iverson v. State, 52 Ala. 170.

[d] (D. C. 1886) Rev. St. U. S. § 812, declaring that no person shall be summoned as a juror in any circuit or district court more than once in two years, has no application to the courts of the District of Columbia. The subject is regulated by Rev. St. § 861.—United States v. Nardello, 4 Mackey, 503.

[e] (Ga. 1856) Act Feb. 28, 1856, declaring who are qualified to serve as jurors in criminal cases, is applicable to cases pending at the time of its enactment.—Reid v. State, 20 Ga. 681; Bailey v. Same, Id. 742.

[f] (Ga. 1878) The act of 1858, allowing the names of "all" the citizens of Chatham county on the books of the receiver of tax returns between the ages of 21 and 60 to be placed in the jury box, contravenes the constitutional requirement of "the selection of upright and intelligent persons to serve as jurors."—Moses v. State, 60 Ga. 138.

[g] (Ill. 1879) In the act of May 28, 1879, providing for the organization of the state militia, the provision exempting from jury service an active member of a company of the state militia is constitutional and valid.—Dunne v. People, 94 Ill. 120, 34 Am. Rep. 213.

[h] (Ky. 1891) Act Feb. 21, 1890, entitled "An act to secure a more uniform and equal distribution of jury service among the citizens of the county of Jefferson and the city of Louisville," and prescribing the manner in which the jurors shall be selected, and that they shall be "21 years of age, housekeepers, sober, temperate, discreet, and of good demeanor," is not unconstitutional as giving to Jefferson county a class of jurymen inferior to that provided by the general law (Gen. St. c. 62, art. 3, § 2, and article 4, § 4), which prescribes that, in addition to the qualifications mentioned, jurors shall be "of fair character and approved integrity, of sound judgment, and well informed," since the special act does not prescribe who shall be competent jurors, but simply regulates the manner of selecting them, leaving their qualifications as under the general law.—Beatty v. Commonwealth, 91 Ky. 313, 15 S. W. 856.

[i] (Mich. 1891) Pub. Acts 1881, No. 150 (How. Ann. St. § 978), providing for the enrollment of not over a certain number of members in each company and battery of state troops, each member to pay $10 annually, and declaring that on such payment he shall receive from the commanding officer a certificate and shall be exempt from jury duty and poll tax, is not void as conferring on military officers the power to arbitrarily set aside the authority of the courts to compel the attendance of qualified jurors, or as transferring from the courts to military officers the right to determine exemptions from jury duty, since on such payment the member is exempted by the law, and not by the act of the commanding officer.—Hall v. Judge of Superior Court of Grand Rapids, 88 Mich. 438, 50 N. W. 289.

[j] (Mich. 1891) Nor is such act void as against public policy, on the ground that no public reason therefor exists; the legislature being the exclusive judge of whether such a reason exists or not.—Hall v. Judge of Superior Court of Grand Rapids, 88 Mich. 438, 50 N. W. 289.

[k] (Ohio, 1880) Rev. St. § 5176, making it a ground of principal challenge that a person called as a talesman has already served as a talesman in the trial of any cause in any court of record within the preceding 12 months, was not affected by the act of March 29, 1880.—Taylor v. State, 36 Ohio St. 212.

[l] (Tex.) The statute of 1856, requiring jurors to be selected from a jury list made up out of the freeholders of each county, is repugnant to Const. art. 12, § 45, making all qualified voters competent to sit as jurors.—(1871) Maloy v. State, 33 Tex. 599; (1872) Wilson v. Same, 35 Tex. 365.

[m] (Tex. 1877) Acts 15th Leg. p. 78 (approved August 1, 1876), § 1, providing that no person shall be qualified to serve as a juror on the trial of any cause, civil or criminal, unless he be a legal voter and citizen of this state, and freeholder or householder in the county in which he may be called to serve, of sound mind, and good moral character, and that an inability to read or write shall be a sufficient cause for challenge, is mandatory, and none of its provisions can be dispensed with by the courts.—Lester v. State, 2 Tex. App. 432.

[n] (Tex. 1891) The provisions of the Civil Statutes in regard to the qualification of jurors in civil cases do not apply in criminal cases.—Hunter v. State, 30 Tex. App. 314, 17 S. W. 414.

[o] (Utah, 1875) The act of congress of June 23, 1873 (18 Stat. 254, c. 469), relating to the territory of Utah, and known as the "Poland Law," does not profess to prescribe all the qualifications of jurors in that territory, and it supersedes and controls the territorial laws only so far as it prescribes a new qualification of the same kind as embraced in the territorial law.—Conway v. Clinton, 1 Utah, 215.

[p] (Wash. 1884) There is nothing in the constitution and laws of the United States to prevent married women serving on juries under the statutes of Washington territory.—Hayes v. Territory, 2 Wash. T. 286, 5 Pac. 927.

§ 245. Physical capacity.

Discharge by court pending trial, see post, § 538.
—— on court's own motion, see post, § 530.
Excusing juror for physical causes, see post, §§ 384, 530, 538.

[a] (Ind. 1891) A juror whose eyesight was so defective that he could not see the face of the defendant, or the expression of the faces of the witnesses, was incompetent, especially where various articles were placed before the jury to illustrate the testimony, none of which were seen by him.—Rhodes v. State, 128 Ind. 189, 27 N. E. 866, 25 Am. St. Rep. 429.

[b] (Mich. 1871) The court may, in its discretion, reject a juror on a ground which would not sustain a challenge for cause, as, for instance, deafness.—Atlas Min. Co. v. Johnston, 23 Mich. 36.

[c] (Tex. 1895) It was proper to excuse a venire man who, by reason of defective hearing, was unable to understand the proceedings in court.—Mitchell v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 367.

§ 246. Age.

[a] (Ala. 1880) One summoned as a juror who is under 21, or over 70, years of age, is not qualified to serve.—Williams v. State, 67 Ala. 183.

[b] (Miss. 1859) Under Rev. Code, p. 497, art. 126, providing that all citizens of the United States, being freeholders or householders in their respective counties, and not under 21, or over 60 years of age, shall be qualified to serve as jurors in the county of their residence, a juror over 60 is incompetent.—Williams v. State, 37 Miss. 407.

[c] (Mo. 1887) Rev. St. 1879, § 2778, provides that no challenge to a juror on account of age shall be allowed after the jury is sworn. Section 2779 provides that no person over 65 years of age shall be compelled to serve on any jury. Held, that a challenge to a juror because over 65 was properly sustained.—State v. Brooks, 92 Mo. 542, 5 S. W. 257, 330.

[d] (Mo. 1887) Rev. St. 1879, § 2777, provides that every juror shall be over 21 years of age. Section 2778 forbids any exception to a juror on account of citizenship, nonresidence, state, age, or other disability, after the jury is sworn. Held, that a challenge by the state, in a murder trial, because a juror was under 21, was proper.—State v. Brooks, 92 Mo. 542, 5 S. W. 257, 330.

[a] (Fla. 1884) The court may in the exercise of its discretion determine whether one drawn as a juror is sufficiently intelligent to sit in the case.—Jefferson County v. Lewis, 20 Fla. 980.

[b] (La. 1876) Ignorance is not such disqualification in a juror as to authorize a challenge for cause.—State v. Lewis, 28 La. Ann. 84.

[c] (La. 1880) A lack of sufficient understanding or intelligence is a legal cause for the discharge of a juror.—State v. Rountree, 32 La. Ann. 1144.

[d] (La. 1885) Under Const. art. 116, and Act No. 54 of 1868, requiring jurors to be intelligent persons, it is not an improper or illegal discretion on the part of the jury commissioners, under certain conditions, to determine the questions of intelligence of a juror by his ability to read and write, not as a conclusive test, but as one of the means of determining his competency.—State v. Chase, 37 La. Ann. 165.

[e] (La. 1892) The intelligence and ability of a juror are matters within the sound discretion of the court.—State v. Casey, 44 La. Ann. 969, 11 South. 583.

[f] (Miss. 1878) No educational qualifications are required of jurors.—American Life Ins. Co. v. Mahone, 56 Miss. 180.

[g] (Miss. 1893) Const. § 244, provides that every elector shall be able to read the constitution. Section 264 provides that a juror must be a qualified elector, and able to read and write. Held, that a juror who cannot read and write is disqualified, though a registered elector.—Mabry v. State, 71 Miss. 716, 14 South. 267.

[h] (N. Y. 1896) Whether one meets the requirements of Code Civ. Proc., providing that, in order to be qualified to serve as a trial juror in the city of New York, a person must be "intelligent," rests in the good judgment and sound discretion of the trial judge.—People v. McLaughlin, 2 App. Div. 419, 37 N. Y. Supp. 1005.

[i] (Pa. 1867) Under Act April 20, 1858 (Bright. Dig p. 587, § 83), a juror was not disqualified on the ground that he did not read newspapers, and could not tell his age.—Commonwealth v. Winnemore, 1 Brewst. 356.

[j] (Pa. 1867) Inability to read is not a disqualification for jury service unless made so by statute.—Commonwealth v. Winnemore, 2 Brewst. 378.

[k] (Tex. 1874) Pasch. Dig. art. 3040, makes it a ground of challenge that a juror "has such bodily or mental defect or disease as renders him unfit for jury services." Held, that such "mental defect" must be understood to embrace either such imbecility, or gross ignorance, as practically disqualifies a person from performing his duties as a juror.—Caldwell v. State, 41 Tex. 86.

[l] (Tex. 1880) It seems that Code Cr. Proc. art. 636, providing that a juror may be challenged for cause where it appears that he cannot "read and write," implies that he is disqualified where he cannot read and write the English language.—Nolen v. State, 9 Tex. App. 419.

[m] (Tex. 1882) Under a statute prescribing, among the qualifications of jurors, that they shall be able to read and write, they must be able to read and write the English language.—Wright v. State, 12 Tex. App. 163.

[n] (Tex. 1882) Under a statute making it ground for challenging a juror that he can neither read nor write, unless it shall appear to the court that the requisite number of jurors who can read and write are not to be found in the county, a judge has no authority to dispense with the reading and writing test because the county is sparsely populated.—Garcia v. State, 12 Tex. App. 335.

[o] (Tex. 1886) A juror in a criminal case stated on his voir dire that he could read and write a little, but not much; that he could write his name, but could not read writing unless it was very plainly written. Held, that the juror was incompetent, under Code Cr. Proc. art. 636, subd. 14, which provides that a challenge of a juror in a criminal case for cause may be made for the reason "that he cannot read and write."—Johnson v. State, 21 Tex. App. 368, 17 S. W. 252.

[p] (Tex. 1892) In a capital case, one of the persons summoned as a juror stated on his voir dire that he could neither read nor write English. Held, that a challenge by the state was properly sustained.—Campbell v. State, 30 Tex. App. 645, 18 S. W. 409.

§ 248. Knowledge of language.

Ability to read and write English, see ante, § 247.

As infringement of right to trial by jury, see ante, § 227 [b, c].

Right of state to challenge for cause, see post, § 554 [g].

[a] (Cal. 1894) Where a juror understands English "pretty well," but will not say that he could always understand what any one might say in English, it is for the court to decide whether he is competent to comprehend all that might be said in his hearing.—People v. Davis, 36 Pac. 96.

[b] (Colo. 1879) Inability, upon the part of persons called to serve as jurors, to speak the English language and to understand it when spoken, does not necessarily disqualify them from so serving, under the statutes.—Town of Trinidad v. Simpson, 5 Colo. 65.

[c] (Colo. 1889) The fact that an elector is a Mexican and unable to understand the English language does not render him incompetent to serve either on grand or petit juries.—In re Allison, 13 Colo. 525, 22 Pac. 820, 16 Am. St. Rep. 224, 10 L. R. A. 790.

[d] (La. 1840) A juror is competent, though ignorant of the English language.—Gay v. Ardry, 14 La. 288.

[e] (La. 1871) A juror who does not understand the language in which the proceedings are conducted is as much an unfit person to sit on the trial as though he were infirm, or incapable of rendering such services.—State v. Push, 23 La. Ann. 14.

[f] (La. 1889) On an indictment for murder, where a juror of foreign birth testifies that he knows enough English to enable him to understand what the lawyers and witnesses may say, he is not disqualified by the fact that he does not know the meaning of the terms "bias," "prejudice," and "verdict."—State v. Dent, 41 La. Ann. 1082, 7 South. 694.

and understand the definition of any word used in the course of a trial by witnesses, counsel, and the court; but it is sufficient if he is conversant with the English language so as to understand in substance the argument of counsel, and the testimony of witnesses.—(1890) State v. Ford, 42 La. Ann. 255, 7 South. 696; (1892) Same v. Casey, 44 La. Ann. 969, 11 South. 583.

[h] (Mich. 1871) The court may, in its discretion, reject a juror on a ground insufficient to sustain a challenge for cause, as, for instance, imperfect knowledge of the English language.—Atlas Min. Co. v. Johnston, 23 Mich. 36.

[i] (Pa. 1870) A person who cannot understand the English language is not qualified to serve as a juror.—Fisher v. City of Philadelphia, 4 Brewst. 395.

§ 249. Prosecution or conviction for crime.

Conviction of assault of juror summoned as ground for discharge, see post, § 384 [c].
Effect of pardon, see post, § 251.
Privilege of jurors as to examination on voir dire, see post, § 573.

[a] (Ala. 1862) Code, § 3583, makes it ground for challenge against a juror that he has been indicted within 12 months for an offense of the same character as that charged against the prisoner. Held, that a juror who had been indicted for assault with intent to commit murder was properly rejected on trial of an indictment for murder.—Crockett v. State, 38 Ala. 387.

[b] (Fla. 1889) Where a venire man was asked upon his voir dire if he was under prosecution for any crime, and he answered that he believed he was, he was properly excused.—Ellis v. State, 25 Fla. 702, 6 South. 768.

§ 250. Polygamist.

Effect of pardon, see post, § 251.
Sufficiency of juror's answer to question propounded, see post, § 582 [m].

[a] (Idaho, 1890) Under Rev. St. §§ 3941, 3942, providing that jurors must be citizens of the United States, and electors of the county, and sections 500, 501, requiring that electors must not be members of any organization that teaches its adherents to commit the crimes of bigamy or polygamy, a member of the so-called "Mormon Church" cannot be a juror.—Territory v. Evans, 2 Idaho, 627, 23 Pac. 232, 7 L. R. A. 646.

[b] (Utah, 1884) Under Act Cong. March 22, 1882, § 8, providing that no polygamist shall vote or "hold any office or place of public trust, honor, or emolument," etc., a polygamist is not disqualified from serving on a jury.—People v. Hopt, 3 Utah, 396, 4 Pac. 250.

§ 251. —— Effect of pardon.

[a] (Tex. 1895) An absolute pardon removes the disqualification to act as juror imposed by Code Cr. Proc. arts. 636, 639, providing that a person convicted of theft cannot act as juror even by consent of parties.—Easterwood v. State, 34 Tex. Cr. R. 400, 31 S. W. 294.

[b] (Utah, 1886) Section 5 of an act of congress approved March 22, 1882, provides "that, in a prosecution for bigamy, polygamy, or unlawful cohabitation, * * * it shall be sufficient cause of challenge to any person drawn or summoned as a juryman or talesman that he is or has been living in the practice of bigamy, polygamy, or unlawful cohabitation with more than one woman, or that he is or has been guilty of an offense punishable by the foregoing sections." Held, in a prosecution for polygamy, that a juror who, on his voir dire, said that he had lived in the practice of polygamy, but had ceased to do so, and who produced a pardon from the president of the United States, extending to him amnesty under section 6 of the act, was competent.—United States v. Bassett, 5 Utah, 131, 13 Pac. 237.

[c] (Va. 1887) A conviction for felony, for which the offender had been pardoned by the governor in 1868, does not disqualify the offender from serving on a jury, such pardon, under the constitution then in force, obliterating the offense.—Puryear v. Commonwealth, 83 Va. 51, 1 S. E. 512.

§ 252. Citizenship.

Discharge by court pending trial, see post, § 535.
—— on court's own motion, see post, § 526 [d].
Examination of juror as to citizenship, see post, § 563 [a].
Inability of alien to own real estate as disqualification, see post, § 256 [a].
Presumptions and burdens of proof, see post, § 584 [g].
Right of alien to question his liability to serve, see post, § 264 [d].
Sufficiency of evidence, see post, § 585 [f, l, m].
—— of juror's answers to questions propounded, see post, § 582 [c].
Unnaturalized elector as juror, see post, § 258.
Waiver by failure to challenge or object, see post, § 505.

[a] Alienage is a disqualification of a juror.—(Ill. 1840) Stone v. People, 3 Ill. (2 Scam.) 326;
(Ky. 1815) Siller v. Cooper, 7 Ky. (4 Bibb) 90;
(N. M. 1887) Territory v. Baker, 4 N. M. (Gild.) 236, 13 Pac. 30;

(Wis. 1856) Schumaker v. State, 5 Wis. 324.

[b] (Ala. 1820) A subject of the king of Spain, living in Louisiana when taken possession of by the United States, is not competent to serve as a juror in Alabama, unless it appear that he has been naturalized, or was an inhabitant of Louisiana at the time of its incorporation into the Union.—Judson v. Eslava, Minor, 2.

[c] (Fla. 1876) A person who has taken no step toward naturalization is prohibited by the constitution from being a juror.—Keech v. State, 15 Fla. 591.

[d] (Ill. 1838) Under Rev. Laws, p. 378, providing that all free white male taxable inhabitants in any county in the state, being natural born citizens of the United States or naturalized according to law, shall be competent to serve as jurors, an alien cannot serve on a jury.—Guykowski v. People, 2 Ill. (1 Scam.) 476.

[e] (Ind. 1883) Rev. St. 1881, § 1793, provides that it is good cause for challenge of any person called as a juror in a criminal case that he is an alien. Held, that the word "alien" means one not a citizen of the state, and that a citizen of the state is a qualified juror, though he is not a citizen of the United States.—McDonel v. State, 90 Ind. 320.

[f] (Iowa, 1882) A judgment rendered on the verdict of a jury, two of whose members were aliens, is reversible on appeal.—Foreman v. Hunter, 59 Iowa, 550, 13 N. W. 659.

[g] (Minn. 1889) When a proposed juror states, on his voir dire, that he is of foreign birth and parentage, but, without objection, is also permitted to testify that he has declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States, the apparent disability is removed.—State v. Barrett, 40 Minn. 65, 41 N. W. 459.

[h] (Mo. 1887) Rev. St. 1879, § 2777, provides that every juror shall be a citizen of the state. Section 2778 provides that no exception to a juror on the ground of his citizenship shall be allowed after the jury is sworn. Held, that the state's challenge of a juror because not a citizen of the state was properly allowed in a murder trial.—State v. Brooks, 92 Mo. 542, 5 S. W. 257, 330.

[i] (Mo. 1894) Under Rev. St. § 6060, providing that every juror shall be a male citizen of the state, resident of the county, one who recently moved into the state to live, but has not been a resident long enough to vote, is a qualified juror, since one may be a citizen though not entitled to vote.—State v. Fairlamb, 121 Mo. 137, 25 S. W. 895.

[j] (Mont. 1888) During the progress of a trial, defendant objected that there was an alien on the jury, and it was found that one of the jurors came to America when two years old, and had taken out no naturalization papers; whereupon opportunity was given by the court, and he was naturalized in proper form, and the trial proceeded. Held that the objection of alienage would not apply.—Territory v. Hart, 7 Mont. 489, 17 Pac. 718.

[k] (N. Y. 1810) Aliens, though freeholders and inhabitants of a town, are not qualified to serve as jurors in suits before justices of the peace, as they are not "good and lawful men" within 1 Laws 24th Sess. c. 165, § 12.—Borst v. Beecker, 6 Johns. 332.

§ 253. Disloyalty.

As infringement of right to trial by jury, see ante, § 227 [e].

Who may insist on jurors taking test oath, see post, § 264 [c].

[a] (U. S. 1871) By the constitution of Missouri, adopted in 1865, a test oath of loyalty was prescribed to be taken by public officers, jurors, etc., which the United States supreme court [Cummings v. Missouri (1866) 71 U. S. (4 Wall.) 277, 18 L. Ed. 356] decided to be unconstitutional. A juror on a trial for murder in a state court refused to take the oath; but on being examined as to the reason of his refusal, he alleged not only that he had sympathized with the late rebellion, and therefore could not take it truthfully, but also that those were still his feelings, and were stronger than ever; whereupon the court discharged him. Held, that his avowed present disloyalty to the government was a sufficient cause in itself for his discharge, irrespective of his refusal to take the oath.—Klinger v. Missouri, 80 U. S. (13 Wall.) 257, 20 L. Ed. 635.

[b] (U. S. 1875) The disqualification to serve as jurors, provided by Rev. St. § 820, of those who joined the rebellion against the United States, is absolute, and it is not discretionary with the court or with the United States attorney whether the rule of disqualification shall be applied or not.—United States v. Hammond, Fed. Cas. No. 15,294 [2 Woods, 197].

[c] (U. S. 1877) Under Rev. St. § 820, it is a good cause of challenge to a juror that he voluntarily joined the Confederate army.—United States v. Butler, Fed. Cas. No. 14,700 [1 Hughes, 457].

[d] (Md. 1792) One who has not taken the oath required by the act entitled "An act for the better security of the government" is not qualified to serve as a juror.—Shane v. Clarke, 3 Har. & McH. 101.

§ 254. Residence.

Necessity of drawing new panel where regular jurors are residents of new county set off since panel was drawn, see post, § 314 [j].

—— that return to venire in condemnation proceedings show that jurors were nonresident freeholders, see post, § 303 [g].

Residence necessary for voter as jury qualification, see post, § 258.

Right of court to summon jurors from another jurisdiction, see ante, § 12.

Sufficiency of evidence, see post, § 585 [k].

—— of jurors' answers to questions propounded, see post, § 582 [b].

Waiver by failure to challenge or object, see post, § 505.

[a] (Ala. 1892) A proposed juror who states that he does not know whether or not he lives in the county in which the trial is had, but that he claims such county as his residence, and has been living there and voting therein for 10 years, is competent as a resident of that county.—Amos v. State, 96 Ala. 120, 11 South. 424.

[b] (Ark. 1844) A resident in the county, and a citizen of the state, is competent to serve as juror, although his residence has not been of sufficient length to confer upon him political privileges.—Anderson v. State, 5 Ark. (5 Pike) 444.

[c] (Cal. 1856) A citizen of this state who has resided in the county 14 days, and then been absent for some months from the state with the intention of returning to reside in the county, and did return and reside therein some 14 days, is a competent juror; his residence dating from his first residence, and not from his return.—People v. Stonecifer, 6 Cal. 405.

[d] (Cal. 1860) A juror is not disqualified by reason of having been a resident of the state for only three months.—Thompson v. Paige, 16 Cal. 77.

[e] (Conn. 1821) Under a statute requiring the jury in forcible entry and detainer to be indifferent freeholders dwelling near unto the lands entered upon, it is not necessary that the jurors should reside in the same town where the land is.—Dutton v. Tracy, 4 Conn. 79.

[f] (D. C. 1886) An unmarried man whose parents live in Virginia, but who, himself, lives in Washington, and intends to so long as he is employed there, although he spends his vacations in Virginia, and votes there, is a "resident" of Washington, under Rev. St. § 872, prescribing the qualifications of jurors.—United States v. Nardello, 4 Mackey, 503.

[g] (Ga. 1855) A juror is disqualified by law from serving on a trial of felony who has not resided in the county for six months.—Epps v. State, 19 Ga. 102.

[h] (Ga. 1859) Under the act of 1856, a juror need not have been a citizen of the county where the offense is tried for any specified time.—Thomas v. State, 27 Ga. 287.

[i] (Iowa, 1860) A person who has removed with his family to another state, and has there purchased a homestead claim upon which he resides, and has voted in that state, he is incompetent as a juror in an action in this state.—State v. Groome, 10 Iowa, 308.

[j] (Iowa, 1879) A conviction will not be reversed on the affidavit of a juror which shows that a short time before the trial he entered upon certain land outside the county to pre-empt it, but fails to show that he had not abandoned it, and was not, at the time of the trial, a resident of the county in which it took place.—State v. Wart, 51 Iowa, 587, 2 N. W. 405.

[k] (La. 1845) The 12 months' residence necessary to render a juror competent, commences only from his determination to reside in the state, though he have been within it many months previously.—State v. Kennedy, 8 Rob. 590.

[l] (La. 1886) Where the line between two parishes has not been definitely settled, a man living near it is a lawful juror in that parish in which he is a registered voter and claims his residence.—State v. Gonsoulin, 38 La. Ann. 459.

[m] (Mich. 1890) A juror regularly drawn on the panel, who swears that his wife and children are residing only temporarily at another place for the purpose of educating the children, and that he had never had any intention of changing his residence, is not disqualified, though it appears that a year before the trial he voted at the place of his family's temporary residence.—People v. Johnson, 81 Mich. 573, 45 N. W. 1119.

[n] (Miss. 1834) No length of citizenship of a state is required as a qualification of jurors.—Byrd v. State, 2 Miss. (1 How.) 163.

[o] (Mo. 1882) Under Rev. St. § 2777, requiring every juror to be "a male citizen of the state and a resident of the county," held that a person who had lived in the county two months, having come there from another state, with the intention of making it his home, was qualified.—State v. France, 76 Mo. 681.

[p] (Mo. 1896) When a juror is shown to have left the state for two years with the intent of changing his domicile, and it is not shown that his return was animo manendi, refusal to accept him as a juror is not error.—State v. Taylor, 134 Mo. 109, 35 S. W. 92.

[q] (N. C. 1869) The state, on a criminal trial, may challenge a juror upon the ground of his being a nonresident of the county where the trial is had.—State v. Bullock, 63 N. C. 570.

[r] (S. C. 1890) Gen. St. § 842, provides, in reference to trial justices in criminal cases, that a jury may be organized "from the vicinity." The charter of McCormick confers on the town council "the same powers which a trial justice has, to try, fine, and punish any person or persons violating any town ordinance." Held that, in such cases, the council could summon persons living in the vicinity as jurors.—Town Council of McCormick v. Calhoun, 32 S. C. 291, 10 S. E. 1009.

[s] (Tex. 1887) The unorganized county of H., in this state, is attached to the organized county of W. for judicial purposes. Held that, for all judicial purposes, the two counties of H. and W. are one and the same, and a resident of H. county is a competent juror for jury service in the county of W.—Groom v. State, 23 Tex. App. 82, 3 S. W. 668.

[t] (Wis. 1839) Under the laws of the territory of Wisconsin, a person who has resided six months therein with the bona fide intention of becoming a citizen, although he may have a family residing and keeping house elsewhere, is a legal juror and an elector, under the statute requiring six months' residence in the territory with the bona fide intention of becoming a citizen.—Lask v. United States, 1 Pin. 77.

§ 255. Property qualification in general.

Sufficiency of juror's answer to question propounded, see post, § 582 [n].

Waiver by failure to challenge or object, see post, § 506.

[a] (N. Y. 1851) A want of "property qualification" is a good cause of challenge to a juror in justices' courts, and not merely a personal privilege exempting the juror, if he sought such exemption.—Fenwick v. Parker, 3 Code Rep. 254.

[b] (N. Y. 1863) A juror, not a freeholder, nor assessed in respect to any personal estate, was set aside, although it appeared that he was worth $250 in personal property, above all debts.—Valton v. National Loan Fund Life Assur. Soc., 17 Abb. Prac. 268.

[c] (N. Y. 1874) The property qualification of a juror, when questioned by a challenge, must be that required to authorize the original selection of the individual as a juror. 2 Rev. St. p. 411, § 13. So far as depends upon the ownership of personalty, it must appear and be evidenced by the assessment roll; the provision of the statute (section 33), requiring the court to discharge a juror when he is not the owner of real or personal property as prescribed, is not designed to affect challenges, but to give a right to the juror to be discharged on his own motion. Held, that where upon challenge of a juror it appeared that, when placed on the jury list, he was the owner of a farm, for which he was assessed, but was not assessed for personal property, and before the trial he sold his farm, taking back a mortgage, he was not eligible, and the challenge was properly sustained.—Kelley v. People, 55 N. Y. 565, 14 Am. Rep. 342.

[d] (Utah, 1875) The provisions of the territorial statute, that a person shall not serve as a petit juror unless he is the owner of taxable property, is express, and cannot be disregarded. The qualification must exist at the time he is offered as a juror, and it does not satisfy the statute that he possessed the qualification when the jury list was prepared.—Conway v. Clinton, 1 Utah, 215.

[e] (Va. 1861) Code, c. 162, § 1, requiring jurors in cases of felony to own real or personal property of the value of $100, at least, was repealed by Act April 9, 1853 (Sess. Acts p. 47).—Wash v. Commonwealth, 16 Grat. 530.

§ 256. Ownership or occupancy of real estate.

As infringement of right to trial by jury, see ante, § 227 [b].

Freehold in the town as qualification for juror in justice's court, see post, § 260 [i].

Necessity that return of venire show that jurors in condemnation proceedings were freeholders, see post, § 303 [g].

"Neighboring freeholders" as jurors, see post, § 260 [n].

Ownership of real estate as qualification for juror in condemnation proceedings, see post, § 260 [f, h].

—— in local courts, see post, § 260 [e, k, l].

Qualifications as voter as affecting right to serve as juror, see post, § 258.

[a] (U. S. 1805) An alien cannot be a petit juror in the District of Columbia because he cannot be a freeholder.—United States v. Johnston, Fed. Cas. No. 15,490 [1 Cranch, C. C. 237].

[b] (Ala. 1861) The tenant and occupant by yearly letting of a room used as a sleeping apartment is not a freeholder or householder within the meaning of Code, § 3583, which prescribes the qualifications of jurors.—Aaron v. State, 37 Ala. 106.

[c] (Ala. 1875) A person who has merely "rented land for the last 12 months" is not a "freeholder" or "householder," within the meaning of Rev. Code, § 4180, which allows a challenge for cause, in a criminal trial, of one summoned as a juror, "and not a resident freeholder and householder for the preceding year."—Iverson v. State, 52 Ala. 170.

[d] (Ala. 1882) A man who resides with his wife and family, whom he supports, is a "householder" so as to qualify him as a juror, though the title to the property is in his wife's name.—Sylvester v. State, 72 Ala. 201.

[e] (Ala. 1894) A juror, though he has resided in a county for several years, if he has never been a householder or freeholder therein, is subject to challenge for cause, under Cr. Code 1886, § 4331, which makes it a ground of challenge that a juror has not been a resident householder or freeholder the preceding year.—Williams v. State, 109 Ala. 64, 19 South. 530.

[f] (Conn. 1840) Act 1837, relating to the qualifications of jurors, dispenses with the necessity of a freehold.—Ladd v. Prentice, 14 Conn. 109.

[g] (Ill. 1880) A person is not disqualified from serving on a jury because he is not a freeholder.—Kerwin v. People, 96 Ill. 206.

[h] (Ind.) A freeholder merely is not competent to sit upon a petit jury, he must be a householder.—(1858) Carpenter v. Dame, 10 Ind. 125; (1860) Bradford v. State, 15 Ind. 347.

[i] (Ind. 1859) That a juror is not a householder is a good cause for challenge.—Lafayette Plank Road Co. v. New Albany & S. R. Co., 13 Ind. 90, 74 Am. Dec. 246.

[j] (Ind. 1880) Under 2 Rev. St. 1876, p. 31, § 6, a juror must be either a householder or freeholder of the county in which the case is tried.—Lamphier v. State, 70 Ind. 317.

[k] (La. 1812) A single man who rents a store and eats at another's table is not a housekeeper, nor qualified as a juror, under Acts 1805, No. 26, § 5.—In re Parmele, 2 Mart. (O. S.) 313.

[l] (La. 1840) A qualification as housekeeper, prescribed by Code Prac. art. 506, but omitted in Acts 1831, No. 53, is unnecessary to entitle one to serve as juror.—Rondeau v. New Orleans Improvement & Banking Co., 15 La. 160.

[m] (La. 1840) One who resides in the parish, and pays a tax and house rent, is a housekeeper, within the intendment of Code Prac. art. 506, so as to qualify him for jury service.—Rondeau v. New Orleans Improvement & Banking Co., 15 La. 160.

[n] (Miss. 1834) A juror must be either a freeholder or householder.—Byrd v. State, 2 Miss. (1 How.) 163.

[o] (Miss. 1858) One in possession of land, under a title bond conditioned that the obligor will convey on payment of the price, is qualified to act as a juror, in cases where the statute requires the jury to be composed of freeholders.—New Orleans, J. & G. N. R. Co. v. Hemphill, 35 Miss. 17.

[p] (Miss. 1879) The term "householder" as used in Code 1871, § 724, defining who shall be competent jurors, means a person who has a family whom he keeps together and provides for, and of whom he is the head.—Nelson v. State, 57 Miss. 286, 34 Am. Rep. 444.

[q] (Miss. 1879) Code 1871, § 724, providing that male citizens who are "householders" shall be competent jurors, is not in conflict with Const. art. 1, § 13, which directs that no property qualification shall ever be required of any person to become a juror.—Nelson v. State, 57 Miss. 286, 34 Am. Rep. 444.

[r] (Miss. 1879) That a person has rented a store and slept in it does not make him a householder, so that he can serve on a jury.—Brown v. State, 57 Miss. 424.

[s] (N. M. 1881) Under the law requiring a juror to be the "owner" of real estate, it is enough that he is in possession of or has a qualified interest in real estate.—Territory v. Young, 2 N. M. 93.

[ss] (N. M. 1884) Within the statute requiring a juror to be the "head of a family" one who is boarding employés during the limited time of their service, is not qualified, nor is one of two equal partners living and messing together for convenience and economy.—Territory v. Lopez, 2 Pac. 364.

[t] (N. C. 1822) Freeholders of another state, owning no freehold in this state, are not qualified to serve as jurors.—Sheepshanks v. Jones, 9 N. C. 211.

[tt] (N. C. 1877) The statutory requirement that a tales juror shall be a freeholder does not apply to the original panel.—State v. Wincroft, 76 N. C. 38.

[u] (N. C. 1884) A tenant by the curtesy initiate is a freeholder in the sense of that term as applicable to the qualifications of jurors.—State v. Mills, 91 N. C. 581.

[uu] (Pa. 1863) Under the act of 1772, requiring the inquest in proceedings to oust a tenant to be by a jury of freeholders, the estate required to be owned by a juror must be at least a tenancy for life.—Rhoads v. Wesner, 1 Woodw. Dec. 79.

[v] (Tenn. 1837) A citizen of one county who owns freehold lands in another county, or who is the owner of an occupant right to lands situated in another county, is a good and lawful juror of the county in which he resides.—State v. Bryant, 18 Tenn. (10 Yerg.) 527.

[vv] (Tenn. 1873) A person living in a part of a house used by him as a store, his sister and her two children living with him, he paying the rent and furnishing the supplies, is a "householder," and therefore a competent juror.—Hall v. State, 65 Tenn. (6 Baxt.) 522.

[w] (Tex. 1877) A juror stated that he was a single man, and not a freeholder, but that he rented a house and land, and, with a younger brother, occupied the same as a home for all purposes, except that he took his meals with the owner of the premises. Held, that the juror was a householder within the meaning of the jury act.—Lester v. State, 2 Tex. App. 432.

[ww] (Tex. 1879) The word "householder" as used in the law defining qualifications of jurors applies to one who "rents a room and boards."—Robles v. State, 5 Tex. App. 346.

[x] (Tex. 1887) A juror must be a freeholder in the state and a householder in the county in order to be qualified.—Boren v. State, 23 Tex. App. 28, 4 S. W. 463.

[xx] (Tex. 1890) One who boards and lodges in the private house of another is not a "householder" within the meaning of the statutes, and hence is not a qualified juror in a murder case.—Lane v. State, 29 Tex. App. 310, 15 S. W. 827.

[y] (Tex. 1895) One who occupies a room in his father's house by his father's permission is not a householder so as to be competent as a juror.—Maines v. State, 35 Tex. Cr. R. 109, 31 S. W. 667.

be competent as a juror.—Maines v. State, 35 Tex. Cr. R. 109, 31 S. W. 667.

[z] (Va. 1846) Under Act Feb. 24, 1846, a juror in a criminal case must be a freeholder in the county to the officer of which the venire facias is directed.—In re Day, 3 Grat. 629.

[zz] (Va. 1852) In a case of felony, one who is not a freeholder is not a competent juror under the statute.—Dowdy v. Commonwealth, 9 Grat. 727, 60 Am. Dec. 314.

§ 257. Payment of taxes.

As infringement of right to trial by jury, see ante, § 227 [b].

Necessity for taking names from books of receiver of tax returns, see post, § 260 [b].

Presence of name on assessment roll for personalty or ownership of real estate, see ante, § 255 [b, c].

Qualifications as voter as affecting right to serve as juror, see post, § 258.

Waiver by failure to challenge or object, see post, § 506.

[a] (U. S. 1887) In applying Code Civ. Proc. Cal. § 198, establishing, as one of the qualifications of a juror, that he shall have been "assessed on the last assessment roll of the county, or city and county, on property belonging to him," to the United States courts, under the act of congress adopting as the qualification of jurors in the United States courts those prescribed by law in the courts of the state, it is sufficient that the juror pays taxes upon property assessed upon the assessment roll, although assessed in the name of another.—United States v. Hackett (C. C.) 29 Fed. 848.

[b] (Conn. 1796) It is not necessary to the qualifications of a juryman that his estate be actually rated, or put into the list.—State v. Doan, 2 Root, 451.

[c] (Fla. 1892) Section 1, c. 4015, Laws Fla., providing that grand and petit jurors shall be taken from the registered voters "who have paid their last assessed capitation tax in their respective counties," does not require payment of the tax which has been assessed, but which has not become due and payable, before the jury is organized.—Smith v. State, 29 Fla. 408, 10 South. 894.

[d] (Fla. 1893) The disqualification of persons for jury service by reason of the nonpayment of their "last assessed capitation tax," as provided in Laws 1891, c. 4015, § 1, does not arise until after the time has elapsed in which one is allowed to pay such tax without coercion.—Collins v. State, 31 Fla. 574, 12 South. 906.

[e] (Kan. 1894) The mere showing that persons called as jurors did not pay taxes on personal property the preceding year does not prove that they were disqualified as jurors, where it does not appear but that they may have been on the assessment rolls of real property.—State v. Reed, 53 Kan. 767, 37 Pac. 174, 42 Am. St. Rep. 322.

[f] (Kan. 1896) A township assessor, by failing to enter on the assessment rolls the name of a person who is duly assessed, and is otherwise qualified to sit as a juror on the trial of causes in the district court, cannot thereby disqualify him from serving as such juror.—State v. Lowe, 56 Kan. 594, 44 Pac. 20.

[g] (Mich. 1891) Under How. Ann. St. §§ 7554, 7555, providing that jurors for the regular list must be selected from persons assessed on the assessment roll of the township or ward, it is a good cause of challenge to jurors called from the regular panel that they were not on the assessment roll of the township from which they were chosen, and a failure to excuse such jurors on challenge for cause is reversible error.—Schlacker v. Ashland Iron Min. Co., 89 Mich. 253, 50 N. W. 839.

[h] (Mich. 1896) How. Ann. St. §§ 7554, 7555, providing that the panel of jurors shall be drawn from persons whose names appear on the assessment rolls for that year, contemplate that only such persons shall be competent as jurors; and any juror called in a case whose name does not so appear may be challenged for cause.—People v. Thacker, 108 Mich. 652, 66 N. W. 562.

[i] (Miss. 1892) Const. 1890, § 264, provides that no one shall be a juror unless a qualified elector. Section 241 provides that no one shall be a qualified elector unless registered under the provisions of the constitution, nor unless he has paid his taxes for the two preceding years. Held, that though the provision requiring registration as a voter, as a prerequisite to serving as juror, was necessarily suspended till the completion of the first registration, under the constitution, yet no such suspension was necessary where the juror had not paid his taxes, since he could not have been on the register, if the registration had been complete, and hence the challenge was erroneously overruled.—Nail v. State, 70 Miss. 32, 11 South. 793.

[j] (N. C. 1877) Where the sheriff has been enjoined from collecting taxes, a juror is not disqualified for failure to pay them.—State v. Heaton, 77 N. C. 505.

[k] (N. C. 1884) Jurors of the original panel must not only be freeholders, but must have paid their taxes for the preceding year; that is, for the year preceding the one in which the tax returns are laid before the county commissioners, not necessarily for the year preceding the trial.—State v. Carland, 90 N. C. 668.

[l] (N. C. 1885) It is no ground for challenge to a juror summoned in a criminal case that he has not paid his taxes for the preceding year, the only qualification required by Code, § 1738, being that he shall be a freeholder of the county in which the trial is had.—State v. Kilgore, 93 N. C. 533.

[m] (N. C. 1886) The nonpayment of taxes for the year preceding the first Monday in September constitutes a disqualification to act as a juror.—State v. Haywood, 94 N. C. 847.

[n, o] (N. C. 1887) When it appears that a juror, sitting in the trial of a cause, has paid his taxes for the fiscal year preceding the time he was placed on the jury list, as provided by Code, §§ 1722, 1723, he cannot be challenged for cause, though he may not have paid his taxes for the year preceding the time of the trial.—Sellers v. Sellers, 98 N. C. 13, 3 S. E. 917.

[p] (N. C. 1889) A person being eligible to sit as a juror if he has paid tax for the fiscal year next preceding the time when his name was placed on the jury list, when he has so paid tax it is error to allow a challenge on the ground that he has not paid tax for the fiscal year during which the trial is had.—State v. Gardner, 104 N. C. 739, 10 S. E. 146.

[q] (N. C. 1891) Acts 1889, c. 559, providing for a quadrennial instead of an annual revision of the jury list, does not affect the rule that a person is not disqualified as juror for not having paid taxes for the fiscal year during which the trial is had.—State v. Davis, 109 N. C. 780, 14 S. E. 55.

[r] (N. C. 1894) Under Act 1889, c. 559, requiring the county commissioners to select as jurors, on the first Monday of September, 1892, and every four years thereafter, such persons as have paid their taxes for the preceding year, a person so selected, who had paid his land tax for the year preceding the first Monday of September, 1892, is competent in a trial in April, 1894, though he has not paid his taxes for 1893.—State v. Sherman, 115 N. C. 773, 20 S. E. 711.

[s] (Utah, 1875) A juror summoned was the owner of taxable property, and was ready to pay his taxes, but was not assessed, nor did he pay taxes. Held, if he was not so assessed and allowed to pay taxes, it was not his fault, and such juror is competent to serve.—United States v. Reynolds, 1 Utah, 226.

§ 258. Qualifications as voter.

Declaration of intention to become citizen as qualification for jury service, see ante, § 252.

Improperly sustaining challenge because juror's name was not on assessment roll as ground for reversal, see post, § 598 [o].

Necessity of taking names from books of receiver of tax returns, see post, § 260 [b].

Payment of taxes in general, see ante, § 257.

Residence in general as qualification, see ante, § 254.

Selection of jury list from registered voters instead of qualified voters, see post, § 275 [g].

Sufficiency of jurors' answers to questions propounded, see post, § 582 [h].

Waiver by failure to challenge or object, see post, § 506.

Qualifications as elector in general, see "Elections," vol. 18, cc. 135–175, §§ 55–91.

[a] (Cal. 1853) Under the act concerning jurors (St. 1852, p. 7, § 1), a juror who is not an elector of the county for which he is summoned is incompetent to serve.—Sampson v. Schaffer, 3 Cal. 107.

[b] (Cal. 1854) Under a statute requiring jurors to be electors of the county for which they are summoned, one whose residence in the county has been only for five weeks, and who states that he considers himself a resident of another county, is not qualified to serve as a juror, since mere residence, without intention of acquiring a domicile, will not constitute him an elector.—People v. Peralta, 4 Cal. 175.

[c] (Mich. 1885) If his intention to become a citizen is declared in due form by a man of foreign birth, and the conditions of age and residence exist, he is entitled to vote under Const. art. 7, § 1, and is qualified to act as a juror under How. Ann. St. § 7555, requiring jurors to have the qualifications of electors.—People v. Scott, 56 Mich. 154, 22 N. W. 274; Same v. Rosevear, 56 Mich. 158, 22 N. W. 276.

[d] (Mich. 1891) How. Ann. St. § 7555, provides that jurors shall have the qualifications of electors. Held, that a resident of the state for many years, and a resident of the county for three and one-half months, though he had moved from one township to another in the county a few days prior to being summoned, was a qualified juror.—People v. Wright, 89 Mich. 70, 50 N. W. 792.

[e] (Mich. 1895) Under Laws 1893, No. 204, § 5, providing that jurors shall have the qualifications of electors in the place where they reside, one who is an elector is competent to serve as a juror, though he be not yet a full citizen.—People v. Considine, 105 Mich. 149, 63 N. W. 196.

[f] (Miss. 1892) Const. 1890, § 264, provides that no person shall be a grand or petit juror unless a qualified elector. Section 241 provides that no one shall be a qualified elector unless registered in accordance with the provisions of the constitution. Section 274 provides that the constitution should become operative November 1, 1890, except that it should be controlled until April 1, 1892, by all repugnant laws except those repugnant to the ordinances of the constitution, the provisions of section 183, and the provisions of sections 223–226, inclusive. Code 1880, § 1661, provides that male citizens between the ages of 21 and 60 years, not convicts, may serve as jurors within the county of their residence. Held, that section 1661 was repugnant to section 264, and controlled it by virtue of section 274, until April 1, 1892, and that, the first registration under the constitution not being complete on June 22, 1892, at which date certain jurors were impaneled, a challenge to such jurors, on the ground that they were not qualified voters by reason of their failure to register under the provisions of the constitution, would not lie, because from necessity the constitutional provision fixing the qualification of jurors was suspended until a new registration should be completed.—Nail v. State, 70 Miss. 32, 11 South. 793.

[g] (Mo. 1887) Const. art. 8, § 2, provides that every foreign born male over 21 years old, who shall have declared his intention to become a citizen not less than 1, not more than 5, years before offering to vote, shall be entitled so to do, if he has resided in the state for 1 year, and in the county, city, or town for 60 days, immediately prior to the election. Rev. St. 1879, § 2777, provides that jurors shall be male citizens of the state and residents of the county. Section 3126 provides that all words and phrases of the statutes shall be construed in their plain, ordinary, and usual sense, unless such construction is plainly inadmissible. Held, the word "citizen" would be construed as equivalent to "voter," and one who was foreign born, but who had declared his intention of becoming a citizen, so as to entitle him to vote, and who had lived 18 years in the state and 3 years in the city, and was of full age, was a competent juror in a criminal case.—State v. Pagels, 92 Mo. 300, 4 S. W. 931.

[h] (Mo. 1894) The fact that one is not a voter does not render him incompetent to serve as a juror.—State v. Fairlamb, 121 Mo. 137, 25 S. W. 895.

[i] (Neb. 1883) A person who has resided in a county for 24 days only is not competent to serve as a juror under Code Civ. Proc. § 657, which provides that a juror must be an elector of the county wherein he is called to serve, and Comp. St. c. 26, § 3, which provides that to be an elector a person must have resided for 40 days in the county where he proposes to vote.—Hart v. State, 14 Neb. 572, 16 N. W. 905.

[j] (Nev. 1865) The fact that a qualified voter, under the constitution, had not paid his poll tax, or registered his name at the time of the trial of a cause, did not make him an incompetent juror in such cause, under the registry law, where the time within which a voter was required to register his name had not expired.—State v. Salge, 1 Nev. 455; State v. Waterman, Id. 543.

[k] (S. C. 1834) Under Act 1799, fixing the qualifications for jurymen by reference to the qualifications for voting, as established by Const. art. 1, § 4, a juryman was not required to be a freeholder, but might serve if he had paid a tax the preceding year of three shillings.—State v. Massey, 2 Hill, Law, 379; Same v. Baldwin, Id.; Same v. Williams, Id. 381.

[l] (Tex. 1890) Rev. St. art. 3010, provides that jurors must be citizens of the state and county in which they are to serve, and legally qualified to vote therein. Code Cr. Proc. art. 631, provides that in order to be qualified jurors they must answer affirmatively the question, "Are you a qualified voter in this county and state?" Const. art. 6, § 1, provides that male persons of foreign birth, who have declared their intention of becoming citizens, and subject to no other disqualifications, are qualified voters. Held, that persons who have legally declared their intention of becoming citizens are not, by reason of their foreign birth, disqualified to act as jurors.—Abrigo v. State, 29 Tex. App. 143, 15 S. W. 408.

[m] (Va. 1873) A person having the constitutional qualifications of a voter, although he has neither registered nor voted, is a qualified juror.—Craft v. Commonwealth, 24 Grat. 602.

Repeal of act making prior service as talesman ground of challenge, see ante, § 244 [k].

Retaining jurors beyond time for which they were drawn as basis for challenge on ground of prior service, see post, § 391 [a].

[a] (U. S. 1892) Under Rev. St. § 812, as amended by Act Cong. June 30, 1879, § 2, providing that it shall be ground of challenge to any juror that he has been summoned and attended as a juror at any term of the circuit or district court within a year, a juror is not subject to challenge merely because he has served as a talesman in another cause in the same court and term.—Walker v. Collins, 50 Fed. 737, 1 C. C. A. 642, 4 U. S. App. 406.

[b] (U. S. 1878) Rev. St. § 812, which provides that no person shall be summoned as juror more than once in 2 years, etc., does not intend that 24 months must elapse between the close of the term at which a juror is summoned, and serves, and the beginning of the next term at which he is competent to serve.—United States v. Reeves, Fed. Cas. No. 16,139 [3 Woods, 199].

[c] (Colo. 1894) Under Acts 1891, p. 251, § 4, providing that prior service as juror within a year shall be ground of challenge to any person summoned as a talesman from the bystanders, or on open venire, jurors not summoned from the bystanders, or on open venire, cannot be challenged for such prior service, since Act 1891 to that extent modifies the provision of Act 1889 (Mill's Ann. St. § 2595) that "any person" who shall have so served shall be subject to such challenge.—Dill v. People, 19 Colo. 469, 36 Pac. 229, 41 Am. St. Rep. 254.

[d] (Ga. 1856) A person belonging to the grand jury list of a county, who has not been sworn on the grand jury of the term of the court at which a trial takes place, is not disqualified from serving on the jury to try offenders.—Rafe v. State, 20 Ga. 60.

[e] (Ill. 1860) Laws 1859, p. 154, providing that it shall be ground of challenge to any juror, called to be sworn in any cause, that he has been sworn as a juror at any term within a year, was aimed at "professional jurors," and it is good cause of challenge to a juror that he has served on the grand jury within a year.—Bissell v. Ryan, 23 Ill. (13 Peck) 566.

[f] (Ill. 1864) A juror may be challenged, in an action of ejectment, who has been sworn and has served as a grand juror within a year previous to the time of challenge.—Brooks v. Bruyn, 35 Ill. 392.

[g] (Ill. 1879) Under Rev. St. 1874, c. 78, § 14, providing that it shall be ground of challenge to a juror, who is not of the regular panel, that he has served as a juror within a year, jurors summoned by the sheriff, under order of the court, to fill vacancies in the regular panel, are not members of the regular panel, and hence are liable to challenge for having served within the year.—Mueller v. Rebhan, 94 Ill. 142.

[h] (Ill. 1891) Rev. St. c. 47, § 6, provides that when condemnation suits are tried in vacation the clerk shall make a list of 64 freeholders, from whom the jury shall be selected; and section 7, Id., gives the same right of challenge as in other civil cases. Chapter 78, § 14, Id., makes it a cause for challenge that a juror, not one of the regular panel, has served as a juror within a year. Held, that said cause of challenge could be applied to any of the jurors in such a condemnation suit, since said list does not constitute a regular panel.—Chicago, P. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Eaton, 136 Ill. 9, 26 N. E. 575.

[i] (Ind. 1873) Under St. 1873, March 8, § 2, a juror who has served as a talesman upon a jury in the same court at a previous term within a year may be challenged for this cause.—Christie v. State, 44 Ind. 408.

[j] (Ind. 1876) The fact that a juror has served as talesman upon any jury impaneled in the circuit, superior, or criminal court of a county, within one year previous to the time when he is again summoned, is good ground of challenge for cause.—Barker v. Hine, 54 Ind. 542.

[k] (Iowa, 1888) An objection that one summoned as a juror had served as a grand juror within the year prior to the summons will not be considered, where it does not appear from the record that he was not one of the regular panel, as Code 1873, § 239, declares that it shall be a cause of challenge that a trial juror has served on a jury in a court of record within one year, "unless he be a member of the regular panel."—State v. Standley, 76 Iowa, 215, 40 N. W. 815.

[l] (Kan. 1896) A challenge of a juror on the ground that he has served as a juror in a court of record during the year next preceding the trial, under Gen. St. 1889, c. 54, § 3, is not good unless it is shown that the juror actually sat in the trial of a case.—State v. Lowe, 56 Kan. 594, 44 Pac. 20.

[m] (Mass. 1833) Where, by statute, service as a juror renders one ineligible to serve again within three years, service as a juror in some court is intended; and a service on a sheriff's jury does not render the juror thus ineligible.—Brewer v. Inhabitants of Tyringham, 31 Mass. (14 Pick.) 196.

[n] (Mich. 1872) It is not good ground of challenge for cause, under Sess. Laws 1869, p. 106, § 3, authorizing a challenge to any person who has served as a juror on the regular panel, or as a talesman, in such court, within a year, that a juror has already sat on the trial of one cause at the same term.—Burden v. People, 26 Mich. 162.

[o] (Mich. 1884) Under Act 1869, providing that a juror may be challenged if he has served as a juror or as talesman within one year, it is sufficient that he has served as a talesman in a proceeding to open a street.—Williams v. City of Grand Rapids, 53 Mich. 271, 18 N. W. 811.

[p] (Mich. 1896) Under How. Ann. St. § 7584, providing that it shall be ground of challenge to a juror in a court of record that he has served as a juror on the regular panel, or as talesman, in such court, at any time within one year, a challenge to a juror who has served on the regular panel, in the same court, within a year, should be sustained.—People v. Thacker, 108 Mich. 652, 66 N. W. 562.

[q] (Miss. 1887) That part of section 1661, Code 1880, which provides that "it shall be a good cause to challenge any tales juror that he has served as such in the trial of as many as three cases at that or the last preceding term of the court," does not apply to a member of the regular panel for the week.—Louisville, N. O. & T. Ry. Co. v. Mask, 64 Miss. 738, 2 South. 360.

[r] (N. C. 1888) Code, § 1733, provides that "it shall be a disqualification and ground of challenge to any tales juror that such juror has acted in the same court as grand, petit, or tales juror within two years next preceding such term of the court." The juror objected to was at the regular panel, and the court had told the jurors, the night before, that the talesmen were discharged, and such of the regular panel as wished to do so might go home, and need not return, but that those who remained would be in attendance next day. The juror challenged did not go home, was in court next morning, and was called into the jury box by the sheriff. Held, that this juror was still a regular juror, and the disqualification did not apply to him.—Newby v. Harrell, 99 N. C. 149, 5 S. E. 284, 6 Am. St. Rep. 503.

[s] (Ohio, 1864) Under 4 Curw. St. p. 3180, which provides that any person who shall have already served on a jury as a talesman in the trial of any cause in the same court during the term may be challenged for such cause, a talesman who was sworn as a juror and sat for a whole day hearing all the testimony in the case may be challenged, although the jury was discharged without a verdict, and a judgment was rendered for one of the parties by agreement.—Famulener v. Anderson, 15 Ohio St. 473.

[t] (Okl. 1895) Under St. 1890 it is no ground for a challenge for cause to a juror that he had already served as a talesman in a cause during the same term of court.—Irwin v. Irwin, 3 Okl. 184, 41 Pac. 383.

[u] (Tex. 1878) Under Acts 1876, p. 83, § 26, providing that where a person serves as a juror for one week in the district court within six months preceding, or in the county court within three months preceding, it shall be good cause for challenge, previous jury service in the county court for less than a week, within the time limited, is no cause for a challenge.—Welsh v. State, 3 Tex. App. 413.

[v] (Tex. 1879) In Jury Law 1876, p. 83, § 26, making cause for challenge one week's service in the district court within six months "preceding," this word refers to a prior term; a previous week's jury service during the pending term is not cause therefor.—Garcia v. State, 5 Tex. App. 337.

[w] (Tex. 1889) Under Rev. St. art. 3010, disqualifying a juror who has served for six days within a certain time, one who has served five days is not disqualified.—Monk v. State, 27 Tex. App. 450, 11 S. W. 460.

§ 260. Qualifications for service in particular courts or proceedings.

Adoption by federal courts of state practice as to jurors, see "Courts," vol. 13, cc. 2703–2705, § 929.

[a] (U. S. 1805) The qualifications of jurors in the circuit court of the District of Columbia, for Alexandria county, must be the same as in the county courts of Virginia.—Young v. Marine Ins. Co., Fed. Cas. No. 18,162 [1 Cranch, C. C. 238].

[b] (U. S. 1873) The United States courts sitting in Georgia are not bound by the law of that state, requiring the names of jurors to be taken from the book of the receiver of tax returns, but are only bound to see that the jurors have the same personal qualifications as are required for jurors in the state courts.—United States v. Collins, Fed. Cas. No. 14,837 [1 Woods, 499].

[c] (U. S. 1883) In matters relating to the qualifications and exemptions of jurors, the federal courts are governed by the laws of the states in which the court is held.—United States v. Kilpatrick (D. C.) 16 Fed. 765.

[d] (U. S. 1887) Notwithstanding the federal courts require for their jurors similar qualifications with those of jurors in the state courts, and enforce like objections and challenges to them, they have the power, and it is their duty to exercise it, to enforce any other objection to jurors which from their nature, if well founded, would unfit them to act.—United States v. Benson (C. C.) 31 Fed. 896.

[e] (Ala. 1893) Act Feb. 21, 1887, § 3 (Acts 1886–87, p. 190), providing that in Montgomery county the jury list shall be selected from the male residents between 21 and 60 years old, and section 18, repealing Code 1876, § 4732 (Code 1886, § 4299), which requires the jury list to be selected from householders and freeholders, and all other laws inconsistent with the act, does not repeal, for such county, Cr. Code 1886, § 4331, declaring it ground for challenge in a criminal case that the person has not been a resident householder or freeholder for a year.—Ezell v. State, 102 Ala. 101, 15 South. 810; Parker v. Same, 102 Ala. 128, 15 South. 819.

[f] (Colo. 1891) As Civ. Code, § 243, requires the jurors in condemnation proceedings to be freeholders, it is error to overrule a challenge to one who testified that he owned personal property, but no mining property, nor any house or land.—Colorado Cent. R. Co. v. Humphreys, 16 Colo. 34, 26 Pac. 165.

[g] (Ill. 1872) The provision of the constitution continuing the recorder's court under the name of the "criminal court of Cook county," and investing it with the same criminal jurisdiction as a circuit court in all cases arising in that county, had the effect of repealing the mode of selecting jurors in such court under the earlier laws, which required that jurors should be selected from the taxpayers of the city, and of requiring them to be in future selected from the body of the county the same as in the circuit court.—Peri v. People, 65 Ill. 17.

[h] (Mich. 1890) The provision in the Owosso city charter, § 109, that the jury to ascertain the necessity for taking private property for public uses shall be composed of inhabitants of the town, qualified to serve as jurors in courts of record, is void as in violation of Const. art. 18, § 2, which requires such jurors to be freeholders. Under How. Ann. St. §§ 2495, 7554, 7555, one need not be a freeholder to be qualified to serve as a juror in courts of record.—City of Owosso v. Richfield, 80 Mich. 328, 45 N. W. 129.

[i] (N. Y. 1814) Jurors in a justices' court must be freeholders of the town where the cause is to be tried.—Streeter v. Hearsey, 11 Johns. 168

[j] (N. Y. 1856) It is not requisite for the sheriff of the city and county of New York, on executing writs of inquiry, to summon only such persons as jurors as the commissioners of jurors may have selected to serve or may designate.—Jennings v. Asten, 12 N. Y. Super. Ct. (5 Duer) 695, 3 Abb. Prac. 373.

[k] (N. Y. 1866) Under 2 Laws 1847, p. 134, c. 496, providing that it shall not be necessary for any juror in the city of New York that he shall be actually assessed therein, but that all persons qualified to serve as jurors, resident in the city, and not exempt by any law of the state shall be selected, ownership of real estate is not a necessary qualification for jurors in the city of New York.—Friery v. People, 2 Abb. Dec. 215, affirming (1865) 54 Barb. 319.

[l] (N. C. 1888) Jurors in a criminal court need not be freeholders under Act Ga. 1885, c. 63, § 19, requiring them to possess the qualifications of jurors in the superior courts, who, under Code Ga. § 1722, need not be freeholders.—State v. Freeman, 100 N. C. 429, 5 S. E. 921.

[m] (Pa. 1863) Under the act of 1872, requiring that the inquest by which rights of parties shall be decided where a landlord seeks to oust a tenant shall be composed of freeholders, the term "freeholder" implies the owner of land in fee simple, fee tail, or for life.—Rhoads v. Wesner, 1 Woodw. Dec. 79.

[n] (S. C. 1835) Act 1833, providing for a jury of 24 "neighboring freeholders" on the trial of an insolvent debtor, should be construed as meaning freeholders of the district.—Rice v. Sims, 3 Hill, Law, 5.

[a] (Cal. 1882) One who has faithfully served in the organized state militia for seven consecutive years, and has received the adjutant general's certificate to that effect, is exempt from jury duty under the express provisions of Code, § 1936.—Ex parte Will, 61 Cal. 121.

[b] (D. C. 1893) A person employed by the United States to sell stamps at a small yearly salary is not a "salaried officer of the government of the United States" (Rev. St. § 875), so as to render him exempt from jury duty.—United States v. Barber, 21 D. C. 456.

[c] (Fla. 1889) A man is not exempt from jury duty by reason of being assessor of taxes for a city or town.—Ellis v. State, 25 Fla. 702, 6 South. 768.

[d] (Ga. 1857) An honorary member of the Columbus Guards is not exempt from jury duty under the act of 1845.—Stewart v. State, 23 Ga. 181.

[e] (Ga. 1871) Members of fire companies in cities of Georgia are not now exempt of right from jury duty.—Ex parte Rust, 43 Ga. 209.

[f] (Ga. 1878) The president of a company of lessees of penitentiary convicts is not an officer of the penitentiary within the meaning of Code, § 4805, and so is not exempt from jury duty.—Lockett v. State, 61 Ga. 44.

[g] (Ill. 1874) Act Feb. 11, 1874, declaring that active members of the fire departments should be exempt from jury duty, repeals, by implication, a provision in the charter of Chicago exempting firemen "who shall have faithfully served as such * * * for the term of seven years."—Appeal of Scranton, 74 Ill. 161.

[h] (La. 1876) The assistant clerk of a court is an "officer" of the court, within an act exempting the judges and officers of the courts from jury duty.—State v. Newton, 28 La. Ann. 65.

[i] (La. 1879) Jury Law 1873, p. 166, allowing the members of a parish police jury to be drawn as talesmen in criminal trials, abolishes the previous exemption in that regard.—State v. Daniel, 31 La. Ann. 91.

[j] (Md. 1870) An honorary member of a volunteer militia company is exempt from jury duty for one year from the date of his certificate of membership.—Albert v. White, 33 Md. 297.

[k] (Mass. 1772) The standing grand jurors of a county for a year are exempt from serving on petit juries.—In re Reed, Quincy, 331.

[l] (Mass. 1819) Under St. 1807, c. 139, § 5, providing that no person shall be liable to be drawn and serve as juror in any court oftener than once in three years, a person who has served as a juror in the circuit court of the United States within three years is not liable to be returned as a juror in the state courts.—In re Swan, 16 Mass. 220.

[m] (Mass. 1834) A minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who belongs to the "local connection," and whose duty it is to preach when called upon to churches within a convenient distance from his residence, is a settled minister within the meaning of the statute of 1812, exempting settled ministers from serving as jurors.—Commonwealth v. Buzzell, 33 Mass. (16 Pick.) 153.

[n] (Mass. 1838) Attorneys at law, though retired from practice, are exempted from serving as jurors.—In re Swett, 37 Mass. (20 Pick.) 1.

[o] (Mich. 1891) Pub. Acts 1881, No. 150, (How. Ann. St. § 978), providing for the enrollment of not more than a certain number of members in each company and battery of state troops, each member to pay into the treasury annually not less than $10, and declaring that on such payment he shall receive from the commanding officer a certificate, and shall be exempt from jury duty and poll tax, is not void as conferring on military officers the power of arbitrarily setting aside the authority of the courts to compel the attendance of qualified jurors, or because it transfers from the courts to military officers the power to determine exemptions from jury duty, since the member, when he has complied with the act, is made exempt by law, and not by an act of the military officers.—Hall v. Burlingame, 88 Mich. 438, 50 N. W. 289.

[p] (Mo. 1893) A dentist who has obtained a certificate to practice dentistry under Rev. [q] (Neb. 1886) Under Code Civ. Proc. § 665, providing that all persons are exempt from service as jurors in the district court who have served in such court within two years, such fact being shown on a criminal trial it is sufficient cause to excuse a juror.—Marion v. State, 20 Neb. 233, 29 N. W. 911, 57 Am. Rep. 825.

[r] (N. Y. 1806) Such of the inhabitants of the city of New York as are not members of the corporation, or made free of the city in the manner prescribed in the charter, are not exempted from serving on juries out of the city. The exemption extends only to the mayor, aldermen, commonalty, and persons made free of the city.—Cortelyou v. Van Brundt, 1 Johns. 313.

[s] (N. Y. 1871) 2 Rev. St. p. 415, § 33, exempting from jury duty persons in the actual employment of any "iron manufacturing company," does not apply to companies engaged in making articles from iron manufactured. It includes only companies engaged in manufacturing iron.—People v. Holdridge, 4 Lans. 511.

[t] (N. C. 1818) A commissioner of navigation is not exempt from serving as a tales juror.—State v. Hogg, 4 N. C. 684; Id., 6 N. C. 319.

[u] (N. C. 1835) The exemption of postmasters from serving on juries, under Act Cong. 1825, c. 275, § 35, is constitutional.—State v. Williams, 18 N. C. 372.

[v] (N. C. 1851) A person who was exempted by law from serving on juries, as a member of a fire company, was exempt from serving on a special venire.—State v. Whitford, 34 N. C. 99.

[w] (N. C. 1878) The exemption of firemen from jury duty ceases with the reason thereof; and their presence in court demonstrates their liability to serve as talesmen.—State v. Willard, 79 N. C. 660.

[x] (S. C. 1840) A commissioned officer in the United States navy is not exempt from jury service in South Carolina.—State v. Ingraham, 1 Cheves, 78.

[xx] (S. C. 1840) All previously existing exemptions are virtually repealed by the jury law of 1799.—State v. Ingraham, 1 Cheves, 78.

[y] (Tenn. 1873) A legislative exemption of the members of a fire company from serving as jurors, both during the membership and after active service as such members for five years, continues, though the company be disbanded.—Beamish v. State, 65 Tenn. (6 Baxt.) 530.

[yy] (Tenn. 1883) One who, though holding a license to practice law, follows only the business of a real estate agent, occasionally appearing in suits before magistrates arising out of matters connected with his real estate business, is not within Code, § 4005, exempting "practicing" attorneys from liability to serve on juries.—Wheatley v. State, 79 Tenn. (11 Lea) 262.

[z] (Tenn. 1884) The statute explicitly provides that a juror shall not be appointed to serve more than once in each 12 months. Held, therefore, that a juror who has served regularly during a term of the circuit court of the county cannot be required to serve within 12 months in a city and county criminal court.—State v. Godwin, 81 Tenn. (13 Lea) 268.

[zz] (Tex. 1872) A provision in the charter of a fire company granted by the legislature, exempting its members from jury service, is not repugnant to Const. 1869, art. 12, § 45, providing that all qualified voters of a county shall also be qualified jurors of such county.—Ex parte House, 36 Tex. 83.

§ 262. —— Power of legislature to repeal exemption laws.

Exemption from jury duty as special privilege, see "Constitutional Law," vol. 10, c. 2029, § 609 [a, b, d, e].

—— as vested right not to be impaired, see "Constitutional Law," vol. 10, c. 1510, § 178 [b, d].

Impairment of obligation of contract by state of exemptions from jury duty, see "Constitutional Law," vol. 10, c. 1653, § 302 [a, b].

[a] (Ill. 1876) The legislature has not the power to exempt a person perpetually from serving on juries, in consideration of services rendered as a member of a fire company; but such exemptions are subject to repeal by any succeeding legislature.—Bragg v. People, 78 Ill. 328.

§ 263. —— Evidence of exemption.

[a] (Ala. 1881) Though firemen are exempt from jury duty under Code, § 4734, the court has no authority to discharge a person, regularly summoned, simply on his statement that he is a fireman.—Phillips v. State, 68 Ala. 469.

[b] (Ala. 1891) Code, § 174, exempts from jury duty every member of the state troops, and provides that the "commanding officer of each company shall furnish each member with a certificate of membership, signed by such commanding officer, which shall prove such exemption in any court." Held, that this certificate is not the only competent evidence of such exemption, but it may be proved by the statement of the person claiming it.—King v. State, 90 Ala. 612, 8 South. 856.

[c] (Ala. 1895) Testimony of a juror on voir dire examination that he is a member of the Mobile Cadets, without additional proof that such cadets were a part of the state troops, does not authorize the court to excuse the juror.—Simon v. State, 108 Ala. 27, 18 South. 731.

[d] (Mo. 1872) Under section 4 of the act (Loc. Laws 1845, p. 15) which exempts members of the corporation of fire wardens from jury service, and declares that the certificate of the secretary "certifying to their membership shall be competent evidence of the fact," and that the certificate "shall be granted only to active members," the exhibition of such certificate is proof only of the mere fact of membership, and not that the bearer is an active and faithful member of the corporation; and such a certificate will not exempt him from jury duty.—State ex rel. Parsons v. Primm, 50 Mo. 87.

§ 264. —— Who may raise question of exemption or disqualification.

Disqualification by age, see ante, § 246.

Right to exempt juror drawn for jury, see post, § 355 [d].

[a] Exemption from jury duty is not a disqualification to act as juryman. It is a personal privilege which may be claimed or waived.

[c] (U. S. 1878) The right, under Rev. St. § 821, to require the panel of jurors called to serve for a term to take the oath therein prescribed as to participation in the rebellion against the United States, or to be discharged from the panel, is limited to the district attorney, and is not a right of individual suitors in a case about to be tried.—Atwood v. Weems, 99 U. S. 183, 25 L. Ed. 471.

[d] (U. S. 1806) A juror cannot object to serve because he is an alien.—Lingan v. Marbury, Fed. Cas. No. 8,371 [1 Cranch, C. C. 365].

[e] (U. S. 1887) That one summoned as a juror in the United States courts was an officer of the navy anterior to the late war; that he resigned, and thereafter served in the Confederate army; and that his disabilities have not been removed,—will not support a personal claim for exemption from jury duty.—In re Carnes (C. C.) 31 Fed. 397.

[f] (Ala. 1880) One's exemption as a juror, under Code 1876, § 4884, because he has reached 60 years of age, is a personal privilege which he may waive or assert.—Williams v. State, 67 Ala. 183.

[g] (Ala. 1883) The right of a coroner to be exempt from jury service is a privilege which he may waive, and he is not subject to challenge upon such waiver.—Jackson v. State, 74 Ala. 26.

[h] (Fla. 1879) Laws Fla. c. 3010, § 2, approved February 17, 1877, providing that county commissioners among other officers, shall not be qualified to serve on a jury, is an absolute disqualification of a county commissioner, and does not give him a privilege which he may waive.—Ladd v. State, 17 Fla. 215.

[i] (Fla. 1892) Laws Fla. c. 3010, § 3 (McClel. Dig. p. 622, § 8), which provides that "no person shall be drawn to serve on a grand or petit jury more than once during the same year," does not disqualify a person for jury service during more than one term the same year, but only furnishes him an exemption from such service.—Blount v. State, 30 Fla. 287, 11 South. 547.

[j] (Fla. 1894) The provision of Rev. St. § 1152, that no person shall be drawn on a jury more than once in the same year, is a personal privilege, and not a disqualification.—Lambright v. State, 34 Fla. 564, 16 South. 582.

[k] (Me. 1863) Officers of the United States are not disqualified to act as jurors, although by our statutes they have a right to be excused from serving as such.—State v. Quimby, 51 Me. 395.

[l] (Me. 1865) Though coroners are exempt from jury service, under Rev. St. c. 10, § 3, the fact that a coroner served on the jury is not ground for arresting judgment, where it appears that he waived his exemption.—State v. Wright, 53 Me. 328.

[m] (Md. 1882) Code, art. 50, § 3, exempting persons over 70 years of age from jury service, does not disqualify such persons, and a conviction is not avoided because one of the petit jury convicting was over that age.—Green v. State, 59 Md. 123, 43 Am. Rep. 542.

[n] (Mass. 1886) A constable, although exempt under Pub. St. c. 170, § 2, from serving as a juror, if duly drawn, may serve as a juror, and this does not entitle a party to a new trial as of right.—Moebs v. Wolffsohn, 143 Mass. 130, 8 N. E. 892.

[o] (Mich. 1892) The exemption of a justice of the peace from acting as a juror is a personal privilege, and not the subject of challenge for cause.—People v. Lange, 90 Mich. 454, 51 N. W. 534.

[p] (Ohio, 1873) 70 Ohio Laws, p. 173, § 21, exempts all public officers from service on juries during their term of office, but such exemption is a privilege, which they may waive, and not a disqualification.—Glassinger v. State, 24 Ohio St. 206.

[q] (R. I. 1889) Pub. St. c. 200, § 1, provides that all persons of a certain class "shall be liable to serve as jurors, except as hereinafter provided," and section 2 exempts from such service, inter alia, "constables." Section 20 provides for fining any member of a town council who willfully draws an exempted person for jury service. Held, that a constable is simply exempted, and not disqualified, from acting as a juror.—State v. Cosgrove, 16 R. I. 411, 16 Atl. 900.

[r] (Tex. 1854) Persons to be affected by the finding of jurors may object to their fitness, but have nothing to do with the question whether a juror is privileged from acting as such; whether a person is exempt on account of his age comes under the latter class of questions.—Breeding v. State, 11 Tex. 257.

[s] (Tex. 1882) A deputy sheriff is not disqualified from serving as a juror, if he does not see fit to claim the exemption conferred by statute.—Burns v. State, 12 Tex. App. 269.

[t] (Wis. 1857) The fact that a juror served at the last term of court is such juror's privilege of exemption, and not ground of challenge to him.—Conkey v. Northern Bank, 6 Wis. 447.

(A) IN GENERAL.

NATURE AND FORM OF PROCEEDING IN GENERAL, § 265.
CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY PROVISIONS, § 266.
STATUS OF JUROR AS PUBLIC OFFICER, § 267.

§ 265. Nature and form of proceeding in general.

[a] (U. S. 1872) Act Cong. July 20, 1840 (5 Stat. 394), providing that jurors in federal courts shall have like qualifications as jurors in the highest court of the state in which they are sitting, does not require literal conformity to the state laws for selecting and drawing jurors, but only substantial conformity, and that only so far as practicable.—United States v. Tallman, Fed. Cas. No. 16,429 [10 Blatchf. 21].

[b] (U. S. 1873) Under Act July 20, 1840 (5 Stat. 394), requiring jurors in the United States courts to have similar qualifications to those required for jurors in the highest courts of the state in which they are sitting, and requiring the practice in obtaining jurors to conform as far a practicable to the practice in such state courts, a minute adherence to the state practice is not necessary, nor is it necessary for the United States courts to make any use of the state agencies for obtaining jurors, but they should depend on their own officers.—United States v. Collins, Fed. Cas. No. 14,837 [1 Woods, 469].

[c] (U. S. 1873) The provision of Act Cong. July 20, 1840 (5 Stat. 394), that jurors in federal courts shall have the same qualifications and exemptions as jurors in the state courts, and shall be designated in the mode practiced in the state courts, does not require that jurors in federal courts shall be designated by state officers, but that they should be selected by federal officers as nearly as possible in the same manner as jurors in state courts are selected by state officers.—United States v. Gardner, Fed. Cas. No. 15,187.

[d] (U. S. 1883) In matters relating to the designating and summoning juries, federal courts have a large discretion. There is no statute requiring them to conform their practice, pleading, and procedure in criminal trials to the laws of the state in which they are held. The criminal jurisdiction of the federal courts is derived from the acts of congress, but in exercising their functions they are guided by the common law, in the absence of statute.—United States v. Kilpatrick (D. C.) 16 Fed. 765.

[e] (La. 1858) Act 1855, p. 492, § 7, provides that no jury shall be summoned for the probate term of the district court of Franklin parish. Section 26 authorizes the judge of the district court to hold adjourned or special terms whenever he may find it necessary, at which terms all business, civil or criminal, may be done, and for which a jury may be summoned. Held, that the judge could not summon a jury for a term commencing on the date fixed by statute for the commencement of the probate term.—State v. Doyall, 13 La. Ann. 418.

[a] (U. S.) Act Cong. June 30, 1879, c. 52, § 2 (21 Stat. 43), providing for the drawing of jurors, and repealing certain sections of the Revised Statutes respecting the selection, qualifications, and oath of jurors, does not affect the power of the court to call in talesmen to supply a deficiency in the panel, or repeal Rev. St. § 804, providing that "when, from challenges or otherwise, there is not a petit jury to determine any civil or criminal cause, the marshal or his deputy shall, by order of the court in which such defect of jurors happens, return jurymen from the by-standers sufficient to complete the panel."—(1888) Lovejoy v. United States, 128 U. S. 171, 9 Sup. Ct. 57, 32 L. Ed. 389; (1894) St. Clair v. Same, 154 U. S. 134, 14 Sup. Ct. 1002, 38 L. Ed. 936; (1881) United States v. Rose (C. C.) 6 Fed. 136; (1883) Same v. Munford (C. C.) 16 Fed. 164.

[b] (Ala. 1881) Act Feb. 13, 1879 (Acts 1879, p. 204), regulating the drawing of grand and petit jurors in certain counties therein specified, was not intended to be retroactive, so as to affect the validity of any jury which had been drawn under the general law prior to the approval of the act, but which was organized subsequently thereto.—Marler v. State, 68 Ala. 580.

[c] (Ala. 1883) Code 1876, § 4874, providing that the court in summoning a jury for a capital case must make an order commanding the sheriff to summon not less than 50 nor more than 100 persons, including those summoned on the regular juries for the week or term, when the term does not exceed one week, is mandatory, and failure to comply strictly with its provisions is reversible error.—Posey v. State, 73 Ala. 490.

[d] (Ala. 1889) The fact that the jury to try defendant was summoned under a statute passed after the commission of the offense is not ground of challenge to the array; the jury being a part of the remedy, which the legislature may alter.—Hawes v. State, 88 Ala. 37, 7 South. 302.

[e] (Ala. 1893) Act Feb. 18, 1893, providing that juries in the county of Wilcox shall be drawn and organized as provided by Code, pt. 5, tit. 3, c. 4, arts. 1, 2, is unconstitutional as attempting to revive a law without re-enacting and publishing it at length.—Stewart v. State, 100 Ala. 1, 13 South. 943.

[f] (Dak. 1880) In territories grand and petit juries may be selected and summoned as at common law. Act Cong. June 30, 1870, so far as it relates to the drawing of jurors, does not apply to the courts of territories.—Beebe v. United States, 2 Dak. 292, 11 N. W. 505.

[g] (Ga. 1856) Pen. Code div. 14, § 34, providing that the repeal of an act shall not affect cases pending under it, has no reference to the mode of selecting, drawing, and summoning jurors, but refers to the act charged as an offense.—Rafe v. State, 20 Ga. 60.

[h] (Ind. 1885) Act April 15, 1881, provided that jurors should thereafter be obtained through jury commissioners to be appointed in each county at the first term of the circuit court after the act went into effect. Held, that an action, triable at the first term after the act took effect, was properly tried before a jury selected under the former law; no opportunity having occurred for the new law to go into operation.—McCrory v. Anderson, 103 Ind. 12, 2 N. E. 211.

[i] (Iowa, 1855) The provisions of Code, c. 96, relative to jurors, are directory only.—Claussen v. La Franz, 1 Iowa (1 Clarke) 226.

[j] (Iowa, 1866) The provisions of Rev. St. 1860, c. 115, in regard to the mode of obtaining jurors, are directory; and a substantial compliance with its requirements is sufficient.—State v. Carney, 20 Iowa, 82.

[k] (La. 1832) Act March 2, 1830, No. 19, repealing Act Feb. 7, 1829, No. 59, relative to juries in the first judicial district, revives the laws on that subject in force prior to the act repealed.—Prall v. Peet's Curator, 3 La. 274.

[l] (La. 1858) The act approved March 19, 1857, entitled "An act to amend an act relative to jurors," does not repeal, but merely amends, and re-enacts, as amended, Act 1855, § 3, entitled "An act relative to juries."—State v. Soulé, 13 La. Ann. 478.

[m] (La. 1893) There is no connection between Acts 1877, No. 44, and Acts 1880, No. 85, the former being for the selection of jurors to try cases generally, and the latter providing for the selection of jurors at terms other than regular jury terms for the trial of cases where the punishment is not necessarily imprisonment at hard labor or death.—State v. Wright, 45 La. Ann. 57, 12 South. 129.

[n] (Mo. 1886) The statute with respect to selecting jurors is directory only.—State v. Gleason, 88 Mo. 582.

[o] (Neb. 1891) Act March 30, 1889, provides for the manner of selecting, drawing, and summoning grand and petit juries in counties having a population of 70,000 or more, and for the repeal of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 658–661, 665, which theretofore regulated such matters. Section 14, which declares the repeal, has a proviso that these sections shall remain in force in such counties until the county boards have complied with the provisions of the act as regards the preparation of lists, etc. Held, that there is no ground for quashing the panel made up under the provisions of the old law, after the passage of the act of 1889, where the county board has taken no steps to put such act in operation.—Neal v. State, 32 Neb. 120, 49 N. W. 174.

[p] (N. Y. 1890) The practice prescribed for the municipal court of Buffalo, by Sp. St. May 20, 1880, providing that it shall be the same as is "now provided by law for justices' courts," was not affected by the subsequent amendment of the sections of the Code regulating the drawing of a jury in justices' courts.—Bergman v. Wolff (Super. Buff.) 11 N. Y. Supp. 591.

[q] (N. C. 1887) Acts 1885, c. 63, § 19, prescribing how a special venire ordered by the judge of the criminal court in a capital case shall be drawn and summoned for the counties of New Hanover and Mecklenberg, is not unconstitutional. The mere fact that the number of jurors required to be drawn and summoned to attend these courts is not so great as in other counties, and that a special venire is to be drawn in New Hanover county to serve each succeeding day of the term of its criminal court, does not render the statute void.—State v. Jones, 97 N. C. 469, 1 S. E. 680.

[r] (Ohio, 1882) Rev. St. §§ 7267–7275, providing the method of impaneling the jury in capital cases, are not repealed by Act March 29, 1881, or changed otherwise than by substituting the wheel for the box in drawing jurors.—McHugh v. State, 38 Ohio St. 153.

[s] (Ohio, 1895) Rev. St. §§ 5189a, 5189b, relating to the selection of jurors and the appointment of jury commissioners in certain counties, were not repealed as to Montgomery county by Act April 24, 1893 (90 Ohio Laws, 254).—State v. Wood, 52 Ohio St. 601, 43 N. E. 1039.

[t] (Tex. 1877) The jury act of 1876 repealed all laws and parts of laws conflicting with its provisions; and, since it went into effect, legal jurors are obtainable only in conformity with its provisions.—Shackleford v. State, 2 Tex. App. 385.

[u] (Tex. 1878) Pasch. Dig. § 3016, providing that the district attorney may, at any time after indictment, obtain an order for summoning not less than 36, nor more than 60, veniremen in any capital case in the district court; and section 3030, providing that, where a list of persons summoned is exhausted by challenge or otherwise, talesmen may be summoned on verbal order of the court,—were not impliedly repealed by Jury Law 1876 (Gen. Laws 15th Leg. p. 78) § 23, merely because a special mode is therein provided for the selection of a special venire and supplying any deficiencies therein.—Harrison v. State, 3 Tex. App. 558.

[v] (Tex. 1890) Rev. St. art. 3053, provides that the jurors shall be selected from the names included in the list drawn by the jury commissioners for the week; and article 3055 provides that the court may adjourn the whole number of jurors for the week, or any part thereof, to any subsequent day of the term. At the court's direction the jury for the week ending November 2, 1889, reported November 4th, and defendant, after exhausting his challenges, was compelled, against his objection, to take one of these, who had already served six days. Held, that section 3055 must be construed as an exception to the general provision of section 3053; so as to give effect to both, and there was no error in overruling defendant's objection.—Howard Oil Co. v. Davis, 76 Tex. 630, 13 S. W. 665.

[w] (Va.) In a capital case, the provisions of Act 1877, c. 17, §§ 4, 8, prescribing the mode of selection of a jury, are mandatory, not directory, and must be strictly followed.—(1885) Richards v. Commonwealth, 81 Va. 110; (1886) Honesty v. Commonwealth, Id. 283.

§ 267. Status of juror as public officer.

[a] (Conn. 1881) Jurors are not public officers, under the constitution or the law, and where they have been selected for a year, and a law is passed changing the mode of selection, they may be superseded by the new jurors appointed under the act.—State v. Bradley, 48 Conn. 535.

[a] (U. S. 1889) One who has always advocated the principles and voted the state and national tickets of the Democratic party, but who at one time organized a Democratic movement in his county in opposition to that part of his party then in power, nominated a legislative ticket, and was himself elected thereon by the aid of Republican votes, acting, while in the legislature, with the Democrats, and proclaiming himself a Democrat, is a "well-known member" of that political party, within the meaning of Act Cong. June 30, 1879, providing that a jury commissioner appointed by the judge shall be "a well-known member of the principal political party in the district" opposed to that to which the clerk may belong.—United States v. Paxton (C. C.) 40 Fed. 186.

[b] (U. S. 1889) 21 Stat. 43, requiring the court to appoint a jury commissioner, who shall be a citizen of good standing, and shall reside in the district in which the court is held, and who shall be a well-known member of the principal political party in the district opposing that to which the clerk belongs, is directory merely, and not mandatory.—United States v. Chaires (C. C.) 40 Fed. 820.

[c] (Ala. 1880) Act Dec. 19, 1876, authorizing the governor to appoint five commissioners in each of six counties, who were to discharge and perform all the duties relating to the selection and drawing of grand and petit jurors previously performed by the judges of probate, sheriffs, and clerks of the circuit and city courts of such counties, does not violate any statute or constitutional provision.—Davis v. State, 68 Ala. 58, 44 Am. Rep. 128.

[d] (La.) The clerk's omission to take the special oath required of him by law, as a member of the jury commission of the parish, will vitiate the drawing of the jury, and avoid the verdict and judgment. — (1878) State v. Williams, 30 La. Ann. 1028; (1879) Same v. Vance, 31 La. Ann. 398; (1880) Same v. Thompson, 32 La. Ann. 879.

[e] (La. 1879) The clerk of the court need not take the oath of jury commissioner at every drawing of the jury, but it is sufficient if he take it once during his term.—State v. Revells, 31 La. Ann. 387.

[f] (La. 1879) Judgment will not be arrested for want of qualification in the jury commissioners.—State v. Miles, 31 La. Ann. 825.

[g] (La. 1889) When the clerk of court, who is ex officio a jury commissioner, has taken the oath as such, it is not necessary for him to again take the oath when the judge removes the commissioners he is authorized to appoint, and appoints others.—State v. Nockum, 41 La. Ann. 689, 6 South. 729; Same v. Riley, 41 La. Ann. 693, 6 South. 730.

[h] (La. 1892) Since Act 1877, No. 44, § 8, requiring the order of the judge appointing jury commissioners to be recorded in the minutes of the court, is merely directory, failure to make such record will not invalidate the appointment, but such appointment may be shown by the order of the judge, the "oath book," and the procès verbal of the venire that the commissioners who were appointed acted. — State v. Taylor, 44 La. Ann. 783, 11 South. 132.

[i] (La. 1892) The acts of a jury commissioner who duly qualified after appointment are valid, where his appointment and oath of office were not entered on the minutes of the court at the time of the appointment, but are so entered before the final adjournment of the first term of the court thereafter.—State v. Hall, 44 La. Ann. 976, 11 South. 574.

[j] (Mich. 1884) How. Ann. St. §§ 7623–7630, providing for the appointment of jury commissioners by the governor, does not contravene the constitutional requirement that judicial officers shall be elected; jury commissioners not being judicial officers. — People v. Reilly, 53 Mich. 260, 18 N. W. 849.

[k] (Mont. 1891) Const. art. 8, § 17, provides that the district court in each county which is a judicial district by itself shall "always be open" for the transaction of business, and that in each district where two or more counties are united the judges of such district shall "fix the term of court." Held, that the constitution does not annul St. 16th Sess. 166, providing that it shall be the duty of the judge of the district court, "at each regular term," to appoint jury commissioners. The act applies to district courts which are in session continuously, as well as to those having regular appointed terms.—State v. McHatton, 10 Mont. 370, 25 Pac. 1046.

[l] (N. Y. 1856) A statute requires that the commissioner of jurors for the city of New York shall be appointed by the supervisors of the city, the judges of the superior court, and the judges of the court of common pleas for said city and county, but does not prescribe what shall constitute a quorum. Held that, on due notice to all, a majority was sufficient to constitute a quorum, and could appoint any one to the office of commissioner or remove him from it, and that it was not necessary that all the judges of the superior and common pleas court should be present, or even a majority of each.—People v. Walker, 23 Barb. 304, 2 Abb. Prac. 421.

[m] (Pa. 1894) Under Act April 10, 1867, regulating the drawing of jurors, the president judge need not take an additional oath, in writing, before entering on his duties under the act.—Klemmer v. Mt. Penn Gravity R. Co., 163 Pa. 521, 30 Atl. 274, 35 Wkly. Notes Cas. 142.

[n] (Pa. 1895) The judge who participates in the filling of the jury wheel and the drawing of the jurors need not take the oath prescribed by Act 1834, § 87; the oath taken by him when he assumed the duties of judge being sufficient—Commonwealth v. Smith (Com. Pl.) 16 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 577.

[o] (Tex. 1882) Gen. Laws 1876, p. 79, § 4, requires a district judge to appoint as jury commissioners citizens "who had no suit in the district court of the county which required the intervention of a jury." Held, that a jury commissioner was not disqualified because he was the son of one who had been a defendant in a suit still pending.—Veramendi v. Hutchins, 56 Tex. 414.

[p] (Tex. 1882) Rev. St. art. 3027, provides that the county court shall, at the January and July terms of each year, appoint three jury commissioners, and that the same proceedings for procuring jurors shall be held by such commissioners as are held by the commissioners of the district court. Article 3022, relating to district courts, provides that if, for any cause, jury commissioners should not be appointed at the time prescribed by law, or should fail to select jurors, or should the panel selected be lost or destroyed, the court shall supply sufficient jurors for the term, and may appoint commissioners for that purpose. Held, that the court properly overruled an objection by defendant to being compelled to draw a jury from an array selected by jury commissioners appointed at the May term instead of the January term of the court.—O'Bryan v. State, 12 Tex. App. 118.

[q] (Tex. 1887) Rev. St. art. 3022, provides that if for any reason the jury commissioners have not been appointed at the proper time or have failed to select jurors, or the panel selected has been set aside, or the list lost, the court shall proceed to supply jurors for the term, and may, if necessary, appoint jury commissioners to that end. Held, that where the jury commissioners had drawn jurors for a three weeks term only, and the term was thereafter lengthened to four weeks, by statute, the court at the lengthened term properly had jurors for the fourth week selected by the jury commissioners, appointed at that term to procure jurors for the next term.—Williams v. State, 24 Tex. App. 32, 5 S. W. 658.

[r] (Tex. 1895) Under Rev. St. art. 3022, providing that if, from any cause, jury commissioners should not be appointed at the proper time, the court may, when necessary, appoint commissioners to provide jurors, the court has power, when jury commissioners were not appointed at the previous term, to appoint jury commissioners during a term, and instruct them to select jurors for that term, although the provisions concerning the keeping of lists, and the issuance, service, and return of the venire, cannot be observed.—Western Union Tel. Co. v. Everheart, 10 Tex. Civ. App. 468, 32 S. W. 90.

[s] (Tex. 1896) Rev. Civ. St. art. 3145, enumerates the qualifications of jury commissioners for the district court. Article 3146 provides that the same person shall not act as such jury commissioner more than once in the same year. Held, that article 3155, providing that jury commissioners for county courts shall possess the same qualifications as jury commissioners for the district court, does not prevent one serving as jury commissioner for a county court more than once in a year.—McCamant v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 610.

§ 269. —— De facto officer.

De facto officers in general, see "Officers," I. (D), (E).

—— sheriffs, see "Sheriffs and Constables," I. (A), (C).

[a] (Ga. 1879) It is no cause for a challenge to the array, on a trial for murder, that no order of the appointment of the jury commissioners appears upon the minutes; they acting as such in fact, and being recognized as such by the court filling a vacancy in their board, and adopting their list.—Cox v. State, 64 Ga. 374, 37 Am. Rep. 76.

[b] (N. Y.) The constitutionality of the act authorizing the mayor of New York to appoint the commissioner of jurors cannot be tried on challenge to the array of a jury, since the validity of the acts of a de facto officer cannot be tried in a collateral proceeding.—(1875) Thompson v. People, 6 Hun, 135; (1876) Dolan v. Same, 6 Hun, 493, affirmed (1876) 64 N. Y. 485.

[c] (N. Y. 1876) A challenge to the array of a petit jury, on the ground that the panel was selected by a person not authorized to act as commissioner of jurors, cannot be sustained where it appears that the person who drew the panel was a de facto commissioner of jurors.—Carpenter v. People, 64 N. Y. 483.

[d] (S. C. 1872) A defect in the jury commissioner's title to his office held to be no ground of challenge of the array of jurors in a civil action.—Palmer v. Charlotte, C. & A. R. Co., 3 S. C. (3 Rich.) 580.

[e] (S. C. 1879) Where a chairman of a retiring board of county commissioners, whose successors had been chosen, but had not organized, assisted in preparing a jury list, he had no authority to discharge any duties pertaining to his office; and the list so prepared was illegal.—State v. Bryce, 11 S. C. 342.

[f] (S. C. 1892) A jury commissioner who continued to discharge the duties of the office in the interval between the expiration of his term and the qualification of his successor, who had been duly appointed before the expiration of the incumbent's term, was de facto jury commissioner in such interval, and his acts were binding.—State v. Lee, 35 S. C. 192, 14 S. E. 395, distinguishing Same v. Bryce (1879) 11 S. C. 342.

Effect of errors and irregularities, see post, § 282 [c, l].

Relationship to litigant as disqualification for appointment, see ante, § 268 [o].

[a] (La. 1895) A conviction by a jury drawn from a venire selected by only three of six jury commissioners, one of whom had taken a most active part in securing defendant's arrest, cannot be sustained.—State v. Duncan, 47 La. Ann. 1025, 17 South. 482.

[b] (Mass. 1888) On a charge of forging and uttering discharges for money payable from a town and county treasury, the officers of the town and county are not disqualified to act in drawing and summoning the jurors.—Commonwealth v. Brown, 147 Mass. 585, 18 N. E. 587, 9 Am. St. Rep. 736, 1 L. R. A. 620.

[c] (Neb. 1888) Where the county commissioners select 60 names of persons proportionately from the several precincts of the county from which the petit jurors are to be drawn by the clerk of the court, and the sheriff, etc., a motion to quash the panel, on the ground that one of the commissioners had an action pending in court to be determined by a jury, should be overruled, in the absence of a showing of partiality or unfairness, or that any of the persons thus selected were favorable to such commissioner.—Northeastern Neb. Ry. Co. v. Frazier, 25 Neb. 42, 40 N. W. 604.

[d] (S. C. 1874) It is a good ground of challenge to the array, on the trial of a prisoner for murder, that the jury commissioner is a near blood relative of the deceased, and that he assisted at the drawing of the jury.—State v. McQuaige, 5 S. C. (5 Rich.) 429.

§ 271. —— Term of office.

Right of jury commissioner of county court to serve more than once in a year, see ante, § 268 [s].

Selection by commissioner after expiration of term, see ante, § 269 [e, f].

[a] (Ga. 1885) Under Code, § 132, providing that all officers of the state must discharge the duties of their office until their successors are commissioned and qualified, jury commissioners hold over after the expiration of their term until their successors are appointed.—Roby v. State, 74 Ga. 812.

[b] (La. 1883) The senate's confirmation of a judge appointed during its recess to fill a vacancy, and his taking a new oath, do not create such a new term as vacates the office of jury commissioners previously appointed by him.—State v. Claude, 35 La. Ann. 71.

[c] (La. 1890) Under Act 1877, No. 44, the jury commissioners appointed by the district judge for the districts outside of New Orleans hold office during the pleasure of the judge.—State v. Jean, 42 La. Ann. 946, 8 South. 480.

[d] (S. C. 1876) Since commissioner of jurors holds over until his successor is appointed and qualified, a challenge to the array does not lie merely because his term has expired.—State v. McJunkin, 7 S. C. (7 Rich.) 21.

[e] (W. Va. 1892) Under Code 1891, p. 773, c. 116, relative to petit juries, providing that jury commissioners shall be appointed by the circuit court, or the judge thereof in vacation, and that their term of office shall be four years, and shall commence on the 1st day of June next after their appointment, an appointment made on the 1st of June gave the appointee the office, with his term commencing on the same day, and including the entire day.—State v. Mounts, 36 W. Va. 179, 14 S. E. 407, 15 L. R. A. 243; Same v. Scott, 36 W. Va. 704, 15 S. E. 405.

[f] (W. Va. 1892) Code 1891, c. 116, p. 773, relative to petit juries, provides that jury commissioners shall be appointed for the term of four years, which shall commence on the 1st day of June next after their appointment, and that "vacancies caused by death, resignation, or otherwise shall be filled for the unexpired term in the same manner as the original appointments." Held that, where the act went into effect in May, an appointment on June 10th following, for the unexpired term, commencing June 1st, was authorized, since the word "vacancy" does not necessarily presuppose a former incumbent of the office.—State v. Scott, 36 W. Va. 704, 15 S. E. 405.

§ 272. —— Compensation.

[a] (Pa. 1886) Under Act April 10, 1867 (P. L. 62) § 5, providing that each jury commissioner shall receive $2.50 per day, "and 4 cents per mile circular from the residence of the commissioners to the court house," each commissioner is entitled to $2.50 for each day in which he is occupied in going about the county and investigating as to who are proper persons to be on the jury list, as well as for the actual filling the jury wheel and drawing the panels therefrom, but is only entitled to mileage for going to the court house to fill the wheel or drawing names from it.—Fees v. Lebanon County, 1 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 428.

§ 273. —— Who may or must act.

Effect of absence of judge at revision of list, see post, § 282 [m].

Mode of selecting panel for struck jury, see post, § 369.

Who may or must act or be present at drawing the panel, see post, § 284.

[a] (La. 1873) Rev. St. § 2144, provides that it shall be the duty of the sheriff of the parish of Orleans to furnish a list of all persons liable to jury duty residing within the limits of the parish of Orleans. Held, that said section applied as well to the sheriff for the criminal court as to the sheriff of the civil court, because the sheriff for the criminal court is a sheriff for the parish of Orleans as much as the sheriff of the civil courts.—State v. Burns, 25 La. Ann. 302.

[b] (La. 1877) In the selection of persons from whom the regular juries shall be drawn for the trial of cases in the superior criminal court for the parish of Orleans, the jury commissioners appointed under the law to make the selection cannot delegate that duty to any other person, but they must, themselves, make the selection. Their approval of a selection made by some one else can impart no validity to the selection.—State v. Newhouse, 29 La. Ann. 824.

[c] (Mich. 1888) The persons selected from the wards of East Saginaw to serve as jurors in the circuit court were drawn by the city assessor acting alone, and the list of persons so selected was signed by the assessor only, and not by the assessor and the aldermen of the respective wards. Held, that such jurors were regularly selected, as the city charter (Loc. Laws 1869, p. 432), creating the office of city assessor, and requiring him to return lists of jurors, is not repealed by How. Ann. St. § 7554, providing that the supervisor and township clerk of each township, and, in cities, the supervisor or assessors, as the case may be, and aldermen of each ward or assessment district, shall make a list of persons to serve as petit jurors, or, if repealed, was re-enacted by Loc. Laws 1885, p. 365, § 5, which re-enacts such old charter provision.—Hewitt v. Saginaw Circuit Judge, 71 Mich. 287, 39 N. W. 56.

[d] (Mich. 1895) 2 How. Ann. St. § 7554, provides that the supervisor and township clerk of each township, and the supervisor or assessors, as the case may be, and alderman of each city ward or assessment district, shall make a list of jurors to serve for a year. Section 7555 directs such officers to select from their respective assessment rolls suitable persons, and specifies the qualifications required. Alpena city charter makes the controller its assessing officer, and authorizes each ward to elect two aldermen and a supervisor; the latter having the powers of town supervisors. Held, that it was not necessary that the controller should join in selecting a jury list, as the intent of the statute was not to require the action of an assessing officer, but merely of a local officer having knowledge of the persons listed, so that a list made by the city supervisors and aldermen was properly made.—People v. Fuhrmann, 103 Mich. 593, 61 N. W. 865.

[e] (Mont. 1894) Where the absence of one or two jury commissioners will not prevent a majority from selecting the juries (Laws 16th Sess. p. 168, § 12), the fact that the district clerk, who is one of the five commissioners, did not act with, and as one of, the commissioners who selected a jury in a certain case, does not render such jury illegal.—State v. Osnes, 14 Mont. 553, 37 Pac. 13.

[f] (N. J. 1891) In a criminal case a challenge to the array will not be sustained because, in making the jury list, the assistant clerk officiated in the absence of the chief, as by Act 1876 (Supp. Revision, p. 124, pl. 6), the deputy is clothed with the power of the chief in the latter's absence.—Stephens v. State, 53 N. J. Law (24 Vroom) 245, 21 Atl. 1038.

[g] (Pa. 1821) Under Act March 29, 1805, requiring the sheriff and at least two of the county commissioners to meet and select the persons to serve as jurors for the coming year, it is not ground of challenge to the array that the sheriff from time to time left the room where the selection was in progress, where nothing material was done during his absence.—Commonwealth v. Lippard, 6 Serg. & R. 395.

[h] (Pa. 1894) Though the president judge of the court of oyer and terminer is a member of the jury board, his presence is not essential when the names are put in the wheel, if a majority of the board are present without him.—Commonwealth v. Manfredi, 162 Pa. 144, 29 Atl. 404, 34 Wkly. Notes Cas. 437.

[i] (S. C. 1891) Under Gen. St. § 2234, providing for the appointment of a jury commissioner, and declaring that he, "with the county auditor and chairman of the board of county commissioners or a majority of the same, shall constitute a board of jury commissioners," etc., a drawing for jury lists, made in the absence of the auditor by the other two commissioners, is valid.—State v. Merriman, 34 S. C. 16, 12 S. E. 619.

§ 274. —— Time and place of meeting or selection.

Presumption of regularity as to time of making list, see post, § 281 [a].

[a] (Ala. 1891) 2 Code, p. 132, § 2, providing that the jury commissioners of a county shall meet at a certain time for the purpose of drawing jurors for the ensuing year, and that "if, for any reason, a meeting is not held at the time appointed," a meeting shall be held as soon thereafter as practicable, does not authorize a subsequent meeting merely for the purpose of correcting errors or mistakes that may have been made in drawing at the regular meeting.—Wells v. State, 94 Ala. 1, 10 South. 656.

[b] (Ala. 1893) In Acts 1890–91, p. 1288, § 22, in regard to the trial of misdemeanors in Geneva county, the provision that the sheriff shall prepare the list of petit jurors on the first Monday in January is merely directory.—Childs v. State, 97 Ala. 49, 12 South. 441.

[c] (Fla. 1892) Laws 1879, c. 3125, § 1, providing that the board of county commissioners, "at a meeting to be held the first week in January of each year, or as soon thereafter as practicable," shall select from the list of registered voters persons to serve as jurors, is directory, in so far as it fixes the time for such selection; and, if the commissioners fail to make the selection at the January meeting, they may do so at a subsequent meeting.—Reeves v. State, 29 Fla. 527, 10 South. 901.

[d] (La. 1895) Under Acts 1894, No. 89, relating to the jury commission, the clerk may designate any convenient point in the parish as a place of meeting for the jury commission.—State v. Johnson, 47 La. Ann. 1092, 17 South. 480; State v. Shaw, 47 La. Ann. 1094, 17 South. 596.

[e] (Mich. 1878) It is no ground of challenge to the array that the jury lists were not returned until after the time designated by law.—Thomas v. People, 39 Mich. 309.

[f] (Pa. 1894) The fact that the wheel was not filled by the first term of court is not ground for complaint by prisoners tried at subsequent terms after the wheel was filled.—Commonwealth v. Manfredi, 162 Pa. 144, 29 Atl. 404, 34 Wkly. Notes Cas. 437.

[g] (Wis. 1864) The statute requiring the board of supervisors of the town and the common council of the city of Ripon to select and return, before the last day of May, the names of persons qualified to serve as jurors in the municipal court of that city and town, is directory; and, if they are properly selected and returned afterwards, it is no ground of challenge.—Burlingame v. Burlingame, 18 Wis. 285.

Absence of juror's name from tax books as ground for new trial, see "New Trial," II. (D).

[a] (U. S. 1846) Under Act Cong. July 20, 1840 (5 Stat. 394), making the practice of United States courts in obtaining jurors conform as far as practicable to the practice of the courts of the state in which they are sitting; and Act Ill. March 3, 1845, making the selection of jurors the duty of jury commissioners,—the United States courts sitting in Illinois can no longer order a venire to be issued to the marshal to summon the regular panel, thus leaving the selection of names to the marshal's discretion, but must require the clerk and marshal, prior to each term, to select jurors from the entire state.—United States v. Woodruff, Fed. Cas. No. 16,758 [4 McLean, 105].

[b] (U. S. 1854) That part of Act Sept. 24, 1789, § 29 (1 Stat. 88), which provides that jurors shall be drawn from such parts of the district as the court shall direct, was not repealed by Act July 20, 1840 (5 Stat. 394). The latter act relates only to the mode of designating jurors and their qualifications.—United States v. Stowell, Fed. Cas. No. 16,409 [2 Curt. 153].

[c] (U. S. 1873) One of the officers appointed to select the names of 500 persons from whom jurors were to be drawn applied to a reputable citizen of a distant county for the names of proper persons residing in his vicinity to be placed upon the list. The names furnished, in compliance with this request, were submitted to the board of officers whose duty it was to make out the list of 500 names, and some of the names so furnished were put upon the list. Held, that this was a substantial compliance with the rule which required the selection of the names to be made by the board of officers. —United States v. Collins, Fed. Cas. No. 14,837 [1 Woods, 499].

[d] (U. S. 1873) A rule of the United States court for the Southern district of Georgia, which prescribed that the names of 500 persons having the qualifications of jurors under the state law should be selected from the body of the district by the marshal and clerk and three United States commissioners, to be designated by the court, from which the names of grand and petit jurors should be drawn by the marshal and clerk, by lot, is in substantial accord with the law of Georgia prescribing how jurors shall be selected, and is a compliance with the act of congress on the subject.—United States v. Collins, Fed. Cas. No. 14,837 [1 Woods, 499].

[e] (Cal. 1880) Code Civ. Proc. § 204, as amended April 1, 1880, provides that the superior court shall designate the number of grand and petit jurors needed by the court for the ensuing year, and that thereupon the board of supervisors shall select a list of persons to serve as such grand and petit jurors. Section 206 provides that the list shall contain the number of names designated by the court. Section 208 provides that certified lists of the persons selected shall be delivered to the county clerk. Section 209 provides that the county clerk shall write all the names on slips and deposit them "in a box to be called 'the jury box.'" Section 211 provides that the names of jurors, grand and petit, shall be drawn from "the jury box." Held that, where the court ordered that "the number of grand and petit jurors" needed for the year was 300, the court properly overruled a challenge to the panel, based on the ground that the court did not separately state the grand and petit jurors needed, and that the clerk used but one box for both kinds of jurors.—People v. Crowey, 56 Cal. 36.

[f] (La. 1877) In the selection of persons from whom the regular juries shall be drawn for trials in the superior criminal court for the parish of Orleans, the commissioners must make their selection from all the qualified voters of the parish.—State v. Newhouse, 29 La. Ann. 824.

[g] (La. 1883) An objection that the panel was selected from the list of "registered" voters instead of from the list of "qualified" voters is without merit in the absence of a showing that the list of "registered" voters did not comprise the names of all the "qualified" voters.—State v. Thomas, 35 La. Ann. 24.

[h] (La. 1883) In absence of any law to the contrary, the jury commissioners may accept names found in the venire box, selected by their predecessors.—State v. Mangrum, 35 La. Ann. 619.

[i] (La. 1885) There is no conflict between Acts 1868, No. 54, defining the qualifications of jurors and providing for the selection of competent and intelligent jurors, and Acts 1868, No. 98, which, by requiring the commissioners to draw a list of 1,000 persons from those qualified to register as voters, from which to select competent jurors, does not thereby determine that all persons entitled to register are competent jurors, their competency being determinable under Act No. 54; and hence a challenge to the array because the jury commissioners, by acting under Act No. 54, excluded many registered voters from their right to serve on defendant's jury, was not well taken.—State v. Chase, 37 La. Ann. 165.

[j] (Mass. 1843) A list of persons to serve as jurors was prepared and laid before a town by its selectmen. The town voted that said list be not accepted, and also voted to elect a list by nomination. Thereupon several persons, part of whom were on the list prepared by the selectmen, and part not on that list, were nominated and declared chosen. Held, that these persons were legally selected as jurors.—Page v. Inhabitants of Danvers, 48 Mass. (7 Metc.) 326.

[k] (N. C. 1891) When Acts 1885, c. 180, was passed, prescribing that certain terms of the superior court of the county of Wake should continue for three weeks for the trial of civil business alone (there having previously been no longer terms than two weeks), Code, c. 39, in respect to jurors, providing in terms for the drawing of them by the county commissioners for each week of the terms of the courts lasting two weeks, was, by necessary implication, extended to authorize the commissioners to draw jurors for the third week of the newly-established terms.—Leach v. Linde, 108 N. C. 547, 13 S. E. 212.

[l] (Pa. 1821) It is not ground of challenge to the array that the sheriff and county commissioners occupied between two and three weeks in selecting and placing in the wheel the names of persons who were to serve as jurors for the coming year, since the law places no limit of time, and the officials are only bound to use due diligence, in default of which they might be liable to punishment.—Commonwealth v. Lippard, 6 Serg. & R. 395.

[m] (Pa. 1888) Act April 10, 1867 (P. L. 62), provides that the county jury commissioners and a judge of the common pleas, or a majority of them, shall meet 30 days before the first term of the common pleas in each year, and thereupon alternately select, from the qualified electors of the county, the proper number of jurors for the year. Act March 18, 1874 (P. L. 46) § 1, provides that the array may be quashed when the laws for the selection of the jury list have not been observed. Held that, where each jury commissioner prepared a separate list and placed it in the box, the array should be quashed.—Commonwealth v. Baranowski, 5 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 642.

[n] (Pa. 1894) The fact that the jury board occupied two months in selecting jurors and putting their names in the wheel is not ground for complaint for want of care or diligence.—Commonwealth v. Manfredi, 162 Pa. 144, 29 Atl. 404, 34 Wkly. Notes Cas. 437.

[o] (S. C. 1891) The attorneys of a party have no right to be present at the drawing, or to inspect the jury list, or to be furnished with a copy thereof, or to be informed whether any names have been rejected by the commissioners.—State v. Merriman, 34 S. C. 16, 12 S. E. 619.

[p] (S. C. 1891) Under Gen. St. § 2248, providing that jurors shall be drawn "in the presence of the clerk of the court and the sheriff of the county," and since the law requires the commissioners to exclude from the list the names of persons who are not of "good moral character" and "good judgment," the commissioners are justified in excluding the public from the drawings.—State v. Merriman, 34 S. C. 16, 12 S. E. 619.

[q] (S. C. 1892) Gen. St. § 2237, as amended in 1888, provides "that in the counties of Charleston, Richland, and Orangeburg the names placed in the tales box shall be in addition to and exclusive of the number of names required by law to be placed in the jury box;" and, further, "that the names of the persons liable to jury duty, and living within seven miles of the court house, may be placed both in the regular jury box and in the tales box, except in the counties of Charleston, Richland, and Orangeburg." Held that, as to the excepted counties, the statute does not require that the names of all persons living within seven miles of the court house should be excluded from the general jury box, but merely that the name of no juror shall be put in both boxes.—State v. Lee, 35 S. C. 192, 14 S. E. 395.

[a] (Ala. 1846) The certificate of the jury board that the jury has been selected in the mode directed may be made by the attending officers, or the clerk of the county court, when one of them.—State v. Brooks, 9 Ala. 9.

[b] (Conn. 1889) The charter of New Haven requires that the common council shall annually choose 144 freemen to serve as jurors in the city court, and that the common council shall return the names of the jurors chosen, under the hand of the mayor of said city, or of the president of the board of aldermen, to the clerk of the city court. Held, that where one common council has appointed the jurymen, but has failed to make the return, the succeeding council may make such return, though before the return a jury could not be drawn from such list.—McGann v. Hamilton, 58 Conn. 69, 19 Atl. 376.

[c] (Fla. 1871) Where the law required a list of 300 names, and the county commissioners furnished to the clerk a list of 302 names, held a proper ground of challenge to the array, in a trial for murder.—Gladden v. State, 13 Fla. 623.

[d] (Fla. 1876) Laws 1868, c. 1628, § 3, provides that, after the board of county commissioners has selected the persons qualified to act as jurors for the year, "the list, certified and signed by the chairman of the board, shall be delivered to the clerk, and by him recorded in the minutes." Held, that the failure of the clerk to record the certificate as well as the list, if error at all, was not prejudicial.—Keech v. State, 15 Fla. 591.

[e] (Fla. 1890) Act March 11, 1879 (McClel. Dig. 621), provides for the selection, annually, by the board of county commissioners, of a list of persons qualified to serve as jurors, "which list * * * shall be forthwith delivered to the clerk, and by him recorded in the minutes." Held, that this requires the list to be recorded in the minutes of the county commissioners, and not in the minutes of the circuit court.—White v. State, 26 Fla. 602, 7 South. 857.

[f] (Ga. 1875) It is not a good ground of challenge to the array that the jury list, made out at the last revisal of the jury box, was not marked "Filed" by the clerk of the superior court, or that the certificate does not state in terms that the list contains the names of all the jurymen in the box.—Brinkley v. State, 54 Ga. 371.

[g] (Ga. 1876) Where a jury list was headed, "A list of names of jurors in the jury box of Ware county," and was followed by "Given under our hands and seals," signed by the commissioners, ordinary and the clerk of the superior court, the law was substantially complied with, notwithstanding there was no certificate attached that the list contained all the names in the jury box.—Carter v. State, 56 Ga. 463.

[h] (Ga. 1883) It is not a good cause of challenge to the poll that the certificate of grand and traverse jurors was not signed by the jury commissioners, where, after examination by the court as to the correctness of the list, the signatures were appended thereto.—McLain v. State, 71 Ga. 279.

[i] (La. 1880) A drawing of jurors is not invalidated by the mere carelessness of the commissioners, resulting in having names of many disqualified persons in the wheel, as where there were names of not less than 1,000 qualified persons, and of over 300 not available.—State v. Foster, 32 La. Ann. 34.

[j] (La. 1891) Where the procès verbal of the jury commissioners simply states their acts in selecting the persons qualified to serve as jurors, a motion to set aside the panel, on the ground that it stated only conclusions of law, was properly overruled, the commissioners not being bound to set forth the evidence on which they acted.—State v. Green, 43 La. Ann. 402, 9 South. 42.

[k] (Mich. 1881) The affidavit required by law to be filed in the clerk's office with the list of 300 jurors need not state in detail the proceedings to select such list, but may state that they were in accordance with the statute.—Gott v. Brigham, 45 Mich. 424, 8 N. W. 41.

[l] (Mich. 1881) The statute requires an affidavit of regularity in selection to be filed with the list of 300 names in the office of the clerk. Held, by a divided court, that a challenge to the array, because the affidavit read "as affiant verily believed," was properly overruled.—Gott v. Brigham, 45 Mich. 424, 8 N. W. 41.

[m] (Mich.) How. Ann. St. § 7556, provides that the jury lists "shall contain not less than one for every 100 inhabitants of such township or ward, computing according to the last preceding census, and having regard to the population of the county, so that the whole number of jurors selected in the county shall amount to at least 100, and not exceeding 400, one-half of whom shall be designated as petit jurors, and one-half as grand jurors." Held, that where the population of the county exceeds 40,000, thus making the number of jurors returned in the ratio of 1 to 100 exceed 400, the jury lists are not thereby entirely invalidated, but may be corrected by striking from the end of the list all names above the requisite number.—(1888) Hewitt v. Saginaw Circuit Judge, 71 Mich. 287, 296, 39 N. W. 56; (1895) People v. Fuhrmann, 103 Mich. 593, 61 N. W. 865.

[n] (Minn. 1868) The failure to file forthwith, in the office of the clerk of the district court, the list of petit jurors selected by the county commissioners, is not ground of challenge to the panel, under Gen. St. 1866, c. 116, § 14, allowing such challenge only in case of a "material departure" from the prescribed forms.—State v. Gut, 13 Minn. 341 (Gil. 315).

[o] (Minn. 1891) Gen. St. 1878, c. 8, § 107, requires the petit jury list drawn by the board of county commissioners, and deposited in the office of the clerk of the court, to be certified and signed by the chairman of the board; and a challenge for want of such certificate and signature is well taken.—State v. Schumm, 47 Minn. 373, 50 N. W. 362.

[p] (Minn. 1895) A jury list, headed "Grand Jurors," followed by the names and residences of grand jurors, under which was a heading "Petit Jurors," followed by the names and residences of petit jurors, to which was attached a certificate of the county auditor and chairman of the county board, held a "separate list" of grand and petit jurors, within Gen. St. 1894, § 673.—State v. Peterson, 61 Minn. 73, 63 N. W. 171, 28 L. R. A. 324.

[q] (Nev. 1866) Act concerning jurors (approved Feb. 8, 1865) by section 2, requires the district judge and county assessor to certify the list of persons qualified to serve as jurors, drawn by them from the assessment rolls. Cr. Prac. Act. § 323, provides that a challenge to the panel can be based only on a material departure from the forms prescribed for drawing and returning jurors, or the willful omission of the sheriff to summon one or more jurors drawn. Held, that a challenge to the panel for failure of the district judge and assessor to properly certify their list was properly overruled, in the absence of any showing of prejudice to defendant.—State v. Squaires, 2 Nev. 226.

[r] (Pa. 1889) Where four more names are placed in the jury wheel than the number specified in the order of the court for filling the wheel, but it appears that the placing of such excessive number in the wheel was not intentional, but a mere accident, no cause is shown for quashing the array.—Rizzolo v. Commonwealth, 126 Pa. 54, 17 Atl. 520, 24 Wkly. Notes Cas. 13.

[s] (S. C. 1892) It is not a fatal error for the certificate of the board of jury commissioners to state that it was prepared under the act of 1883, where the facts show that it complies with all the acts and amendments as they stood at the time.—State v. Lee, 35 S. C. 192, 14 S. E. 395.

[t] (Tex. 1879) Failure of the jury commissioners to sign and certify the jury list cannot be cause for challenge to the array.—Coker v. State, 7 Tex. App. 83.

[u] (Wash. 1893) The certificate of the officers who assisted in drawing the jury, to the list returned, should state how the drawing was actually done, and not merely that it was conducted fairly and as provided by law.—State v. Payne, 6 Wash. 563, 34 Pac. 317.

[v] (Wash. 1896) Under Code Proc. § 58, providing that the county commissioners shall select the names of persons to serve as petit jurors, and certify the same to the clerk of the superior court, a certificate stating that, pursuant to the statute, the commissioners have selected the persons to serve as petit jurors, "and hereby instruct the clerk of the board to certify the same to the clerk of the superior court as the list of petit jurors drawn for the ensuing year, as follows," setting out the names, to which is added the signature of the chairman of the board, attested by the county auditor, is sufficient to show that the panel is legal.—State v. Bokien, 14 Wash. 403, 44 Pac. 889.

[a] (Ala. 1881) Sess. Acts 1878–79, p. 279, approved Feb. 13, 1879, provides that the judge of the county court of Madison shall, when he deems it necessary, 20 days prior to each or either of the regular terms, order the sheriff to prepare a list of the householders and freeholders of the county, from which list 24 names shall be selected, in the manner provided for selecting jurors for the circuit court, to serve as petit jurors. Held that, where the judge ordered a list, a panel drawn from the list made for a prior term was sufficient, and that a new list need not be made for each term.—Sale v. State, 68 Ala. 530.

[b] (Ala. 1895) When the jury commissioners were about to draw from the jury box grand and petit juries for the ensuing terms of the circuit court, they discovered there were not enough names remaining in the box to make up said juries, and they thereupon destroyed the slips of paper on which the names already in the box were written, and proceeded to fill another box, from which the juries were subsequently drawn. Held, that the juries were not legally drawn in compliance with Act 1886–87, § 12, which requires that the jury box must be exhausted before the commissioners have any power or authority to fill another box.—Steele v. State, 111 Ala. 32, 20 South. 648.

[c] (La. 1877) In the organization of juries, it is not necessary that the sheriff should furnish a list of all persons liable to jury duty, and put them in the jury box, every December; but the box must be exhausted before being refilled.—Gettwerth v. Teutonia Ins. Co., 29 La. Ann. 30.

[d] (La. 1889) When the jury commissioner has failed and neglected to take from the venire box for several years the names of jurors disqualified, absent, and dead, it is competent for a succeeding jury commissioner, to remedy the evil, to empty the venire box, and place therein 300 qualified jurors.—State v. Nockum, 41 La. Ann. 689, 6 South. 729; Same v. Riley, 41 La. Ann. 693, 6 South. 730.

[e] (N. C. 1896) It is not ground of challenge to the array that the jury box was not revised by the county commissioners, in the absence of any claim that any names were improperly in the box, that any had been there fraudulently, or that any had been taken out.—State v. Stanton, 118 N. C. 1182, 24 S. E. 536.

[f] (Pa. 1821) Under Act March 29, 1805, requiring the sheriff and county commissioners, in selecting the jurors to serve for the coming year, to select and place in the jury wheel such a number of names that at the last drawing of the year at least one full jury shall be in the wheel, it is not ground of challenge to the array, by one whose panel was drawn early in the year from a full wheel, that at the last selection of names the old names remaining in the wheel were removed before the newly-selected names were put in, more especially as it must be presumed that sufficient names were placed in the wheel to comply with the law.—Commonwealth v. Lippard, 6 Serg. & R. 395.

[g] (Pa. 1877) Under Act March 18, 1874, which directs the courts of common pleas, when an array of jurors is quashed for any irregularity in the selection of persons or the depositing of the names in the jury wheel, to order a new selection of such number of jurors as said court shall designate, and that thereupon the jury commissioners shall meet and take out of the wheel all names therein deposited, and make a new selection of persons, and deposit the new names so selected in the wheel, names taken from the wheel at the first drawing cannot be deposited again in the wheel, to be drawn from the second time.—Kell v. Brillinger, 84 Pa. 276.

[h] (Pa. 1888) Where the court orders the jury wheel to be emptied, and a new list of names put in, because the wheel had been improperly opened in the absence of the sheriff, the new list of names should be selected from all the qualified voters of the county, and the names taken from the wheel should not be excluded.—Commonwealth v. Baranowski, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 157.

[i] (W. Va. 1892) Under Code 1891, c. 116, which provides that the jury commissioners shall annually prepare the list of jurors, and place all its names on paper ballots, and deposit these in a box, and draw them from such box, to serve as jurors at each term of the county court, and that ballots cannot be exhausted except by destruction or by drawing, a new list is to be made each year, which supplants the remaining ballots of the old list, and is not to be mingled with them; and a jury drawn from the new list alone is valid.—State v. Welch, 36 W. Va. 690, 15 S. E. 419.

§ 278. Jury wheel or box.

Amendment of law by substituting wheel for box, see ante, § 266 [r].

Box from which trial jury is drawn, see post, § 349.

Necessity of separate boxes for lists of grand and petit jurors, see ante, § 275 [e].

[a] (U. S. 1883) Jury Law 1879 requires that, in districts where there is a clerk for each place of holding United States Courts, there shall be as many jury boxes as there are clerks. Held, that in a district in which there was but one clerk of the circuit court, though that court was held in three places, and a clerk of the district court for each of the three places where the district court was held, it was proper in the circuit court to use three jury boxes, instead of one; all being supplied with names by the clerk of the circuit court in conjunction with the general jury commissioner.—United States v. Munford (C. C.) 16 Fed. 164.

[b] (Ala. 1891) Under Act 1888-89, p. 430, amending Act 1886-87, p. 151, § 4, and providing that, as far as it applies to Pike county, the names of the persons from whom jurors are to be drawn shall be placed in fifteen boxes, one for each precinct in the county, a jury for the trial of a capital case in Pike county must be drawn from fifteen boxes, instead of from one box, as provided in the original act.—Hornsby v. State, 94 Ala. 55, 10 South. 522.

[c] (La. 1812) Where the law directs jurors to be drawn from each parish, the names from each being kept in a separate box, and, after the division of one parish into two, the names from both are kept in the same box, the irregularity is fatal; and a juror so summoned is entitled to his discharge.—In re Auzan, 2 Mart. (O. S.) 124.

[d] (Mass. 1883) A revolving barrel, in which the cards containing the names of persons from whom jurors are to be drawn are shaken together, is deemed a "box," within the requirement of Pub. St. c. 170, § 31, regulating the drawing of jurors.—Commonwealth v. Bacon, 135 Mass. 521.

[e] (N. Y.) Laws 1861, c. 210, requiring the county clerk to provide an additional box for the drawing of jurors, in which shall be placed the names of jurors residing in the city or town where courts are to be held, applies to criminal as well as civil trials.—(1863) People v. McGeery, 6 Parker, Cr. R. 653; (1866) Gardiner v. People, Id. 155.

[f] (N. C. 1888) A special venire being ordered, the clerk swore that the boxes containing the names had been properly kept and protected, and were marked, "Jurors drawn," and "Jurors not drawn." The special venire was drawn from the box marked, "Jurors not drawn." Held, a substantial compliance with Code, § 1739, providing that the names of jurors shall be kept in boxes marked "1" and "2," and the jurors composing the venire shall be drawn from box 2.—State v. Potts, 100 N. C. 457, 6 S. E. 657.

§ 279. —— Custody and fastenings.

[a] (La. 1892) The facts that the general venire box was not kept locked, and the names of the jurors drawn were not written on the slips by the clerk of the court, being irregularities imputable to the jury commissioners, cannot be taken advantage of by motion to quash the venire, unless it is shown that some injury has been suffered or some fraud practiced, as provided by Acts 1877, No. 44, § 10.—State v. Curtis, 44 La. Ann. 320, 10 South. 784.

[aa] (N. C. 1886) That the jury boxes were kept unlocked in a place accessible to unauthorized persons is not ground of challenge to the array, in the absence of any showing of prejudice to the defendant.—State v. Hensley, 94 N. C. 1021.

[b] (Pa. 1821) Under Act March 29, 1805, requiring the sheriff and county commissioners to select the persons to serve as jurors for the coming year, and to write their names on slips of paper and place them in the jury wheel, it is not ground of challenge to the array that the written slips were not locked up in a fireproof closet, pending the completion of the selection and placing the names in the wheel, in the absence of any evidence that any interference with the names had occurred, since, as long as they were kept inviolate, the fact that they might have been more secure is not ground of challenge.—Commonwealth v. Lippard, 6 Serg. & R. 395.

[c] (Pa. 1873) Under Act April 19, 1867 (P. L. 91), extending to Schuylkill county the provisions of Act March 27, 1865 (P. L. 779), by which the two jury commissioners and the sheriff, or any two of them, might draw the jury panel from the wheel, the fact that in resealing the wheel the sheriff's seal was placed on the wheel by a deputy sheriff is not an irregularity, since, if any two of the jury board may draw the panel, they can open the wheel therefor and refasten it afterwards; and hence the sheriff's seal was not essential.—Commonwealth v. Brown, 1 Leg. Chron. 345.

[d] (Pa. 1876) The clerk's custody of a chest in a vault, in which the jury wheel was deposited, held to be custody of the wheel, within the meaning of Act 1867, § 2, requiring the same to be in the custody of the jury commissioners.—Rolland v. Commonwealth, 82 Pa. 306, 22 Am. Rep. 758.

[e] (Pa. 1877) As the jury commissioners had no office, the jury wheel was kept in the vault of the county treasurer, with the condition that no one but a jury commissioner should enter the vault for the wheel, and the sheriff kept the key of the wheel. Held to be a proper custody of the wheel.—Curley v. Commonwealth, 84 Pa. 151.

[f] (Pa. 1885) Act April 14, 1834, § 90, provides that, as soon as the selection of jurors and depositing of their names is completed, the wheel must be locked and sealed by the sheriff and commissioners. Section 83 provides that the wheel shall remain in the custody of the commissioners, and the key in the custody of the sheriff. Held, that the absence of the proper seals was cause for quashing the array; and failure of the sheriff to have the custody of the key, which was left in the hands of the commissioners, rendered the array fatally defective.—Kittanning Ins. Co. v. Adams, 110 Pa. 553, 1 Atl. 443.

[g] (Pa. 1894) Under Act April 10, 1867, providing that the jury wheel shall be kept in the custody of the commissioners, the array will not be quashed because one of the commissioners, resident some miles from the county seat, by agreement between them, took the wheel, and kept it at his home.—Klemmer v. Mt. Penn Gravity R. Co., 163 Pa. 521, 30 Atl. 274, 35 Wkly. Notes Cas. 142.

§ 280. —— Form and requisites of ballots.

[a] (Ala. 1894) Under Acts 1886–87, p. 208, § 5 (Sp. Law, Mobile County), providing that the jury commissioners, after selecting 1,600 names, and entering them on the jury roll, shall write each name on a separate piece of paper, each slip bearing the name of a resident of the city to have written thereon the word "City," and those bearing the names of persons living outside the city the word "County," and three-fourths of such slips shall be put in the city court jury box, it is no ground for quashing the panel that two of the names drawn from the box bore nothing but the names of the jurors, and several others bore, in addition to such names, only the letters "Co."; section 14 providing that the provisions in relation to selecting, drawing, and summoning jurors should be directory merely.—Wilkinson v. State, 106 Ala. 23, 17 South. 458.

[b] (Conn. 1889) The charter of New Haven requires that the clerk of the city court shall write the name of each juror, chosen by the common council, "fairly on a separate piece of paper, and roll up and put the same into a box," from which the sheriff, on receiving a warrant to summon a jury, shall, in the presence of the judge and clerk, take out as many papers as his warrant directs. Held, that where the pieces of paper were not rolled up, but were put in unfolded, it was a good ground for challenging an array of jurors whose names were drawn therefrom.—McGann v. Hamilton, 58 Conn. 69, 19 Atl. 376.

[c] (La. 1894) Though Acts 1877, No. 44, requires the clerk to write the names of jurors, with their places of residence, on the ballots placed in the box, a venire will not be set aside, in the absence of a showing of prejudice, because there was merely a number on the ballots to designate the ward of the juror's residence.—State v. White, 46 La. Ann. 1273, 15 South. 623.

[d] (Mass. 1883) A juror's occupation as a dealer in liquors is sufficiently designated on the card to be placed in the jury "box" by the addition of the word, "liquors," after his name, within the requirements of Pub. St. c. 170, § 81, regulating the drawing of jurors.—Commonwealth v. Bacon, 135 Mass. 521.

[e] (N. Y. 1823) It is improper for the clerk to leave the ballots unrolled in an open box, or to draw them in this situation, and the objection may be taken by challenge to the array.—Pringle v. Huse, 1 Cow. 432.

[f] (Pa. 1877) A challenge to the polls, founded on a misdescription of a juror's avocation, may be overruled if the name and residence are correctly given, and the error in naming the employment is not adapted to mislead. So held in a capital case.—Quigley v. Commonwealth, 84 Pa. 18.

§ 281. Presumption of regularity.

[a] (Ala. 1893) Where the statute required the jury list to be prepared on the first Monday in January, and the sheriff testified that he prepared the list of jurors on the first day or first Monday in January,—he could not recollect which,—but that he prepared the list according to law, the presumption is that the sheriff properly performed his duty.—Childs v. State, 97 Ala. 49, 12 South. 441.

[b] (Fla. 1892) The provision of Laws 1879, c. 3125, that the boards of county commissioners shall select from the registered voters of their respective counties a list of 300 persons properly qualified to serve as jurors, who shall be such persons only as said commissioners know, or have good reason to believe, are of approved integrity, fair character, sound judgment, and intelligence, provided that if in any counties of this state said commissioners shall not be able to select the number required, they shall be authorized to select a less number, but said number to be the highest possible, invests such boards with authority to pass upon the integrity, character, judgment, and intelligence of the persons to be selected as jurors; and, in the absence of an illegal purpose, fraud, or corruption in the selection of a less number than 300, the discretionary power of the commissioners will not be disturbed.—Reeves v. State, 29 Fla. 527, 10 South. 901.

§ 282. Effect of errors and irregularities.

Effect of failure to enter on minutes the appointment and qualification of jury commissioner till end of term, see ante, § 268 [i].

[a] It is not ground of challenge to the array that the names of those selected by the jury commission to serve as jurors were written on the slips by a clerk, in the presence and under the supervision of the commission; the act of the clerk being the act of the commission.
—(La. 1892) State v. McCarthy, 44 La. Ann. 323, 10 South. 673;
(Pa. 1821) Commonwealth v. Lippard, 6 Serg. & R. 395.

[b] (Ala. 1893) 2 Code, p. 132, §§ 3, 4, requires the jury commissioners to prepare a list of all qualified persons between 20 and 60 years of age, and fill the jury box with their names on separate slips of paper. Held, that where, at the time of defendant's trial, the jury commissioners had only partially completed their list, but drew the jurors from such incomplete list, the drawing was in violation of law.—Johnson v. State, 102 Ala. 1, 16 South. 99.

[c] (Ala. 1894) On trial for arson, the fact that the owner of the burned building was one of the jury commissioners, whose duty it was to draw the grand and petit jurors, is not ground for quashing the venire, in the absence of a showing that he actually participated in drawing either the grand or petit jurors.—Prater v. State, 107 Ala. 26, 18 South. 238.

[d] (Ala. 1895) Where jury commissioners have illegally destroyed names remaining in a jury box, and have proceeded to fill another in violation of Act 1886–87, special legislation is necessary to legalize the jury box so prepared, or to authorize the preparation and filling of another.—Steele v. State, 111 Ala. 32, 20 South. 648.

[e] (Cal. 1895) Defendant cannot challenge the panel because no certified list of trial jurors, as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 208, was ever placed in the possession of the county clerk, it appearing that 300 jurors were regularly drawn, their names entered on paper by the clerk of the board of supervisors, the paper placed in the possession of the county clerk, and the names taken from this paper and placed in the jury box, when the clerk of the county and of the board of supervisors was the same person, and offered at the trial to attach the certificate. —People v. Young, 108 Cal. 8, 41 Pac. 281.

[f] (Kan. 1884) Under Comp. Laws 1879, c. 54, § 2, providing that the township trustees and mayors of cities shall select jurors from those assessed on the assessment roll of the preceding year, failure to select from such roll is ground for challenge to the array.—State v. Jenkins, 32 Kan. 477, 4 Pac. 809.

[g] (Ky. 1894) The act concerning juries (approved May 22, 1893) requires the jury commissioners to select annually a jury list in proportion to the population of the county (which in the present case called for 200 names), from which a panel of 50 names should be drawn for each term, and that, when the judge apprehended that the list might be exhausted before the next annual drawing, he might order the commissioners to select further names. Held, that where the commissioners made a list containing only 50 names, which were all drawn on the jury panel, and such panel having been exhausted, the commissioners, under order of court, selected a further list of 200, from which defendant's jury was completed, the jury was not properly drawn and a conviction by it must be reversed.—Risner v. Commonwealth, 95 Ky. 539, 26 S. W. 388.

[h] (La. 1868) Where the jury panel for the term was not drawn from the last registered list of voters, as prescribed by law, but from a prior and much less comprehensive list, the irregularity is fatal to a conviction by any jury drawn from such panel.—State v. Da Rocha, 20 La. Ann. 356; Same v. Morgan, Id. 442.

[i] (La. 1872) Under Act 1868, providing that, except in the parish of Orleans, jurors shall be selected 30 days before each jury term, by writing the names of the registered voters on separate ballots and drawing from them, a jury is defective which was drawn from a box which contained only those ballots remaining after three panels had been drawn for previous terms of the court.—Compton v. Legras, 24 La. Ann. 259.

[j] (La. 1873) In the parish of Orleans the jury may be drawn from the jury box until it is exhausted, even though 15 months have elapsed since the list of jurors was furnished by the sheriff.—State v. Petrie, 25 La. Ann. 386.

[k] (La. 1894) Though Act 1877, No. 44, requires the clerk of court to write the names of jurors on the ballots placed in the box before the drawing, in the absence of prejudice, a venire will not be set aside, and the indictment quashed, merely because one of the commissioners wrote the names of the jurors on a portion of the ballots.—State v. White, 46 La. Ann. 1273, 15 South. 623.

[l] (La. 1896) The fact that a nephew of the prosecuting witness was one of the jury commissioners who drew the venire was not fatal to conviction, where it appears that he neither did nor said anything to influence his assistants in selecting the jury.—State v. Magee, 48 La. Ann. 901, 19 South. 933.

[m] (Mich. 1881) The statute required the presence of the judge when the old names were removed from the jury box and the new list was placed therein by the clerk. Held, by an evenly divided court, that a challenge to the array on the ground of the absence of the judge was properly overruled.—Gott v. Brigham, 45 Mich. 424, 8 N. W. 41.

[n] (Mich. 1886) Where the county clerk, contrary to statute, put the packages containing the lists of grand and petit jurors into one box, and drew jurors for a trial promiscuously therefrom, and several of the panel were those who had been returned as grand jurors, the panel was properly discharged.—Atkinson v. Morse, 63 Mich. 276, 29 N. W. 711.

[o] (Mich. 1891) How. Ann. St. §§ 7567, 7575, provide that juries shall be drawn from the body of the county, and that the names of jurors shall not be returned to the boxes from which they were drawn till the other names therein are exhausted. Held, that where the clerk returned the names of the jurors from one township to the box, they having served at a prior term, but being the only names returned from that township, it was not such error as to vitiate the panel on which they were drawn, where the jury which tried defendant was completed from the other members of the panel, especially as their prior service was good ground of challenge to the polls.—Wise v. Otter Creek Lumber Co., 86 Mich. 40, 48 N. W. 695.

[p] (Mich. 1894) The fact that the assessment roll of 1892, instead of 1893, was used in selecting the names from which jurors were to be drawn, is not ground for challenge to the array. —Niles v. Schoolcraft Circuit Judge, 102 Mich. 328, 60 N. W. 771.

[q] (Miss. 1855) If the name of any person already returned be omitted in the annual list, or the name of an improper person be returned in the annual list, or there are other errors in the annual list, or if the assessor should wholly fail to return an annual list, as required by law, it will not vitiate the list of jurors, provided they are regularly drawn from the box number one.—Sumrall v. State, 29 Miss. (7 Cushm.) 202.

[r] (Mont. 1883) It is not ground for challenge to the array that the panel from which was drawn the jury that tried defendant had been drawn from a box from which panels had previously been drawn for the trial of cases involving United States laws, or in which the United States was a party, so long as enough remained in the box to furnish a full panel of 24, from which the trial jury might be selected. —Territory v. Reed, 5 Mont. 92, 1 Pac. 717.

[s] (N. J. 1822) The incompleteness of the sheriff's books is no cause of challenge to the struck jury.—Maffett v. Tonkins, 6 N. J. Law (1 Halst.) 228.

[t] (N. J.) The provisions of Act April 21, 1876 (Rev. p. 532), as to proceedings in the selection of jurors, are merely directory, except that which requires the certificate of the judges to the list of names drawn, which is mandatory. —(1878) Poulson v. Union Nat. Bank, 40 N. J. Law (11 Vroom) 563; (1892) Gardner v. State, 55 N. J. Law (26 Vroom) 17, 26 Atl. 30.

[u] (N. M. 1894) The mere allegation in a motion challenging the array that the jury list had not been revised by the assessor of the county, and a new list furnished the clerk of court, as designated by the statute, is not sufficient ground for reversal, where no resulting injury is shown. —Territory v. McFarlane, 37 Pac. 1111.

[v] (N. Y. 1876) Laws 1847, c. 495, requires the commissioner of jurors of New York City to prepare a list of jurors whom he deems competent and liable to serve, and to return the same to the county clerk's office. The act providing for struck jury requires the selection of 48 names from such list. Held that, where the 48 names from which the jury were struck were selected from a list made by the jury commissioner and filed with the county clerk, it was sufficient, though the jury commissioner's list was not complete.—People v. Tweed (No. 1), 50 How. Prac. 262; Id. (No. 3), Id. 280.

[w] (N. C. 1886) Failure of the county commissioners to revise and correct the jury lists, as required by law, will not entitle accused to have the array quashed, in absence of any showing of prejudice; the statute being merely directory.—State v. Hensley, 94 N. C. 1021.

[x] (S. C. 1834) The act of 1799, directing jury lists to be made from the tax returns once in every three years, is merely directory; and if public officers fail to discharge their duty under it, and the jury is drawn from the old list, it is not a cause of challenge to the polls or to the array.—State v. Massey, 2 Hill, 379.

[y] (S. C. 1867) The laws of the state and the military orders require juries to be drawn from those who have paid a tax on property. Held, that juries drawn from a box containing the names of all those who had paid a tax (assessed and poll) for the current year were illegal, although an order from the governor directed them to be so drawn.—State v. Jennings, 15 Rich. Law, 42; State v. Pratt, Id. 47.

[z] (S. C. 1891) Under Gen. St. § 2237, as amended by Act 1886 (19 St. at Large, p. 599), requiring the commissioners, on a special venire, to place in the tales box "the names of 150 persons qualified by law to serve as jurors," it is no ground of challenge to the array that two of the slips containing names were, by inadvertence, duplicates of others, so that there were only 148 names in the box.—State v. Merriman, 3[illegible] S. C. 16, 12 S. E. 610.

[b] (Cal. 1887) A departure from the forms prescribed by articles 3, 4, c. 1, Code Civ. Proc., with respect to the "drawing and return" of the jury, such as may deprive a defendant of an opportunity to secure a competent and impartial jury, is ground for a challenge to the panel.—People v. Davis, 73 Cal. 355, 15 Pac. 8.

[c] (Ind. 1836) If, in drawing the jury panel, the names of persons unqualified are drawn, they may be rejected, and the names of those drawn who are qualified, with new names, may be put into the box in place of the rejected names.—Lindley v. Kindall, 4 Blackf. 189.

[d] (Ky. 1837) Though Act 1836, altering the mode of summoning juries, does not in terms apply to the city court of Louisville, yet it is not ground of challenge to the array that a jury in that court was summoned under that statute, where there is no objection to the officer who summoned the jurors, since the mere manner and time of giving jurors notice and getting them into court does not affect the defendant:—Vicaro v. Commonwealth, 35 Ky. (5 Dana) 504.

[e] (Mo. 1885) As the statutory method of summoning, drawing, and impaneling jurors is directory, and not mandatory, if the jurors who served were qualified, and it does not appear that defendant was prejudiced, the judgment will not be reversed because of irregularity or informality in their selection.—State v. Matthews, 88 Mo. 121.

[f] (N. J.) Under Act 1888, providing that, where defendant is entitled to service of a special panel of 48 men, it shall be the sheriff's duty to draw such panel from the box, from the whole panel summoned to perform jury duty, it is not necessary for the sheriff to notice the name of a deceased juror, or of one who has been excused.—(1890) State v. Black (Sup.) 20 Atl. 255; (1891) Black v. State, 53 N. J. Law (24 Vroom) 462, 23 Atl. 1081.

[g] (N. Y. 1855) Laws 1847, p. 734, c. 495, providing that jurors thereafter to be summoned for the several courts authorized to try issues of fact in the city of New York shall be drawn by the county clerk, on requisition of the court needing them, applies to the district courts of that city.—City of New York v. Mason, 4 E. D. Smith, 142, 1 Abb. Prac. 344.

[h] (N. Y. 1865) Statutory regulations for the drawing and summoning of jurors are made for the purpose of securing an impartial distribution among citizens of the duty of performing jury services, and a challenge to the array by a prisoner will not lie for a mere omission to follow the directions of the statute.—Friery v. People, 54 Barb. 319, affirmed (1866) 2 Abb. Dec. 215.

[i] (N. Y. 1891) A new jury list had been prepared, but had not been filed with the justice by the town clerk, and the justice drew a jury from the old list. Held, that the jury was properly drawn, under Laws 1889, c. 505, providing that the justice shall draw the jury from the last jury list received by him from the town clerk.—Cargain v. Everett, 62 Hun, 620, 16 N. Y. Supp. 668.

[j] (Pa. 1809) The sheriff and county commissioners have no right to select or exclude any juror drawn from the wheel, as an unsuitable or improper character.—Anonymous, 1 Browne, 121.

[k] (S. C. 1835) The commissioner of bail, who has the right to select names to be put in the jury box, may properly exclude the names of those who heard the case on a former trial and could not agree.—Rice v. Sims, 3 Hill, 5.

[l] (Tex. 1888) The provisions of the statute relating to the summoning and formation of juries in civil cases are merely directory, and a challenge to the array will not lie, if there is a substantial compliance with the statute.—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Jessee, 2 Willson, Civ. Cas. Ct. App. § 406.

[m] (Wis. 1859) The statute required jurors to be selected "from the list made by the last board of supervisors." Held, that the statute referred to the list made at the last meeting at which a list was made, and not to a list made by the supervisors whose term of office had expired.—Perry v. State, 9 Wis. 19.

§ 284. —— Who may or must act.

Effect of failure of clerk to write names on slips, see post, § 279 [a].

—— of sheriff's performing the manual act of drawing instead of clerk, see post, § 307 [p].

Interest of jury commissioner as disqualification to act, see ante, § 270.

Interference with selection, see post, § 286.

Selection by de facto officer, see ante, § 269.

Who may or must act in drawing special venire, see post, § 324 [w].

—— in selecting struck jury panel, see post, § 369.

—— in selecting the jury list, see ante, § 275.

[a] (U. S. 1843) It is not necessary that the marshal or clerk, or any state judge, should be present at the drawing; but when those officers properly certify, as their official act, the panel to the court, this constitutes it the jury for the term. The deputy marshal and deputy clerk are competent officers to superintend the drawing and certify the names drawn to the clerk and marshal.—United States v. Matthews, Fed. Cas. No. 15,741b.

[b] (Ill. 1873) Where the office of county clerk was divided in a county, the fact that the person acting as county clerk for mere county matters assisted in the drawing of a jury, instead of the clerk who attended to the business of the court in probate and other matters, held no ground for a challenge to the array; he being de facto a county clerk.—Mapes v. People, 69 Ill. 523.

[c] (Ind. 1832) Where the board doing county business selected the jury panel from the list of eligibles at their own discretion, instead of causing them to be drawn by lot by the clerk, a challenge to the array was improperly overruled.—Jones v. State, 3 Blackf. 37.

[d] (Ind. 1884) Rev. St. 1881, §§ 1387, 1388, make it the duty of the clerk to draw from the box the jury panel, and neither the assistance nor presence of the jury commissioners is necessary.—Doolittle v. State, 93 Ind. 272.

[e] (Kan. 1877) Gen. St. 1868, p. 535, §§ 10, 11, provide that the clerk shall notify two justices of the peace, and the sheriff, in person or by his undersheriff, to attend the drawing of the panel, and that, if any two are present, the clerk shall proceed to draw the jurors. Held that, where the proceedings were entirely regular and in full view of both the justices of the peace, the mere fact that the sheriff was represented by a deputy sheriff, instead of by the undersheriff, and that such deputy witnessed the proceedings, and later signed the minutes of the proceedings, was not ground of challenge to the array of the jurors so drawn.—State v. Bohan, 19 Kan. 28.

[f] (La. 1838) Where the panel of jurors was drawn from the box by the sheriff, instead of the clerk, while the clerk and one of the magistrates in attendance wrote down the names as drawn, the irregularity was immaterial.—Pratt v. Grappe, 12 La. 451.

[g] (La. 1875) Under a statute prescribing that juries must be drawn by the parish judge, clerk, and sheriff, a jury was ordered to be drawn, and was drawn by the parish judge, recorder, clerk, and sheriff. Held that, as all the required officers united, the error of including the recorder was surplusage, and did not vitiate.—Hunt v. Mayo, 27 La. Ann. 197.

[h] (La. 1880) It is sufficient if the panel of jurors was drawn by two of the three who compose the board of jury commissioners.—State v. Arata, 32 La. Ann. 193.

[i] (La. 1881) The clerk of court and two jury commissioners forming a quorum under the law, a venire drawn by them is not illegal because of the absence of the other two commissioners.—State v. Hornsby, 33 La. Ann. 1110.

[j] (La. 1881) A venire drawn by a jury commission, in the absence of a member who had not qualified, is legal and regular.—State v. Wells, 33 La. Ann. 1407.

[k] (La. 1883) Under Acts 1877, No. 44, no jury can be legally drawn without presence of the clerk as one of the jury commission; he being the only commissioned officer of the five members, and the only member elected by the people.—State v. Conway, 35 La. Ann. 350.

[l] (La. 1896) Under Acts 1894, No. 89, § 8, authorizing the district judge to cause a jury to be drawn to try a civil case in which there is a prayer for a jury during the term of court at which the prayer is filed and the jury ordered, the jury must be drawn by the jury commissioners, and cannot be selected by the sheriff under order of court.—Soniat v. Supple, 48 La. Ann. 296, 19 South. 128.

[m] (La. 1896) It was no ground for new trial that one of the jury commissioners was not served with written summons as prescribed by statute, and consequently took no part in the selection of the venire, where the other four commissioners were present and participated in the selection.—State v. Magee, 48 La. Ann. 901, 19 South. 933.

[n] (Mich. 1887) Under How. Ann. St. § 7567, it is the duty of the clerk of the court to take the names of the jurors from the box, and it is cause for challenge to the array that the sheriff drew the names, and that the clerk only announced and made a minute of those drawn.—People v. Labadie, 66 Mich. 702, 33 N. W. 806.

[o] (N. J. 1888) Under Criminal Procedure Act, § 72, the 48 names of jurors constituting the list to be served on the prisoner are to be selected by the sheriff, at discretion, from the general panel; and, if the prosecutor of the pleas co-operates with the sheriff in the act, a conviction founded on such proceedings will be reversed on error.—Peak v. State, 50 N. J. Law (21 Vroom) 179, 12 Atl. 701.

[p] (N. Y. 1823) It is no ground for challenging the array that the deputy clerk, in the clerk's absence, drew the jury and certified the panel.—People v. Fuller, 2 Parker, Cr. R. 16.

[q] (N. Y. 1855) 2 Rev. Laws 1813, p. 374, § 95, directs the justice of a district court of the city of New York, when a jury is needed, to nominate 18 persons, and to issue a venire to the constable, commanding him to summon any 12 of them. Held, that an objection to the jury that they were not selected by the constable was not well taken; the constable not being authorized to make the selection.—City of New York v. Mason, 4 E. D. Smith, 142, 1 Abb. Prac. 344.

[r] (N. C. 1890) Code, §§ 1722–1730, providing for the mode of selecting and drawing, and the qualification of, jurors, provides for their drawing for special terms by the county commissioners; the sheriff not being required to act except when the commissioners neglect to act. Held, that where a sheriff, who knows that a cause in which he is a party is set for hearing at the next special term, himself, in selecting the jurors for that term, takes the scrolls from the boy who draws them from the box, and reads them to the commissioners, without their actually seeing the names themselves, the irregularity is sufficient ground for sustaining a challenge to the array.—People v. Teague, 106 N. C. 576, 11 S. E. 665.

[s] (Pa. 1814) The fact that the jury was drawn by the sheriff and one county commissioner, instead of two, is an immaterial irregularity.—Commonwealth v. Immell, 6 Bin. 403.

[t] (Pa. 1848) Under the act incorporating the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, which directs an inquest to be held by the sheriff for estimating the damages sustained by owners of land occupied by the railroad company, and which directs a precept to be issued to the sheriff, commanding him to summon a jury, it is irregular for the sheriff to select a jury from a list of names prepared by his deputy.—Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Heister, 8 Pa. (8 Barr) 445.

[u] (Pa. 1888) Act April 10, 1867 (P. L. 62), provides that the names selected by the jury commissioners for service during the year shall be placed in the jury wheel, which shall be locked and kept by the commissioners; the key being kept by the sheriff. Act April 14, 1834, § 79, provides that all juries shall be selected by the sheriff and commissioners in the manner therein prescribed. Act March 18, 1874 (P. L. 46) § 1, provides that the array may be quashed if, by accident, mistake, or neglect of the sheriff or jury commissioners or either of them, the wheel has been opened, unlocked, or unsealed, except in the presence of such sheriff and jury commissioners. Held that, where the panel for a term was selected by opening the wheel and drawing the names in the absence of the sheriff, the array must be quashed.—Commonwealth v. Baranowski, 5 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 642.

[v] (S. C. 1891) The fact that a person who sometimes acted as the auditor's deputy was present, and furnished the names from the auditor's books, did not invalidate the drawing when he did not otherwise participate therein.—State v. Merriman, 34 S. C. 16, 12 S. E. 619.

[w] (Wash. 1893) Under Code Proc. § 59, providing that the clerk of court or his deputy, "and the sheriff and auditor," shall place the jury ballots in the box, and section 61, providing that, if the sheriff or auditor or both shall not attend and assist, the clerk may call in such other county officer or officers as he may choose, the deputy sheriff cannot serve in the sheriff's place, without vitiating the panel. Section 80, giving the deputy all the powers of the sheriff, and authorizing him to perform any of the duties prescribed by law to be performed by the sheriff, does not apply to such extraordinary duties.—State v. Payne, 6 Wash. 563, 34 Pac. 817.

§ 285. —— Necessity of separate drawing of different panels.

[a] (Ala. 1878) It is not ground for challenge to the array, or of motion to quash the venire for a petit jury, that the officers drew the grand and petit jurors at the same time, and as the names were taken from the box placed them alternately on the grand and petit juries, according to their respective localities and standing in the county; no unfairness being charged, and jurors having proper qualifications.—Dotson v. State, 62 Ala. 141, 34 Am. Rep. 2.

[b] (Ala. 1893) Under Code 1886, pt. 5, tit. 8, c. 4, § 4299 et seq., relative to the drawing of jurors in Marshall county, the separate and successive drawing of grand and petit jurors respectively is unnecessary.—Forney v. State, 98 Ala. 19, 13 South. 540.

[c] (Ga. 1850) Act 1805 alters Act 1799 only in the mode of selecting grand jurors, and under both acts, after the grand jurors have been selected from the list prepared by the clerk from the tax books, the remaining names are the petit jurors, both for civil and criminal cases; and hence the remainder of the list, after the selection of grand jurors by the justices of the inferior court, under Act 1805, was properly certified to the superior court for the trial jurors.—Malone v. State, 8 Ga. 408.

[d] (N. Y. 1812) It is sufficient cause of challenge to the array that the clerk drew 72 names out of the box and put them in a list, and then designated 36 names, so drawn, to be a panel for the circuit, and the other 36 a panel for the court of common pleas.—Gardner v. Turner, 9 Johns. 260.

[e] (N. Y. 1830) It is no cause of challenge to an array of jurors that two sets of jurors are drawn at the same time from the jury box, for two distinct courts, if they are kept separate, and a distinct panel of each is given to the sheriff.—Crane v. Dygert, 4 Wend. 675.

§ 286. —— Interference with selection or drawing.

Effect of exclusion from panel of members of same organization as defendant, see post, § 307 [s, w].

—— of interference with selection of special venire, see post, § 331 [b].

Interference with selection of special venire, see post, § 324 [d].

Participation of unauthorized person in selection, see ante, § 284.

Who may or must act, see ante, § 284.

[a] (Conn. 1850) Where an officer, whose duty it was to summon a jury to try a complaint of forcible entry and detainer against the Quinebaug Bank, for the purpose of ascertaining who were legally qualified to act as jurors in that cause, asked the counsel for the defendants to inform him who were stockholders in that institution; and the counsel, thereupon, after expressly disclaiming any wish to influence him in the discharge of his duty, named to him several persons who were not such stockholders, adding an expression of his opinion that they were independent and judicious men; some of whom so named, the officer, without being biased by any representation made by the counsel, summoned as jurors,—it was held that there was no ground for the imputation of any blame to either the counsel or the officer, and consequently a challenge of the jurors, founded on these facts, was disallowed.—Quinebaug Bank v. Tarbox, 20 Conn. 510.

[b] (N. J. 1790) Interference by a party with the selection of the jury is good ground of challenge.—McDonald v. Shaw, 1 N. J. Law (Coxe) 6.

[c] (N. J. 1790) Where plaintiff handed the venire to a messenger, with directions to deliver it to the sheriff and request that he select the jurors from a certain part of the county, but not suggesting any individuals to be summoned, it was good ground of challenge to the array; no interference of any kind by the parties being permitted.—McDonald v. Shaw, 1 N. J. Law (Coxe) 6.

[d] (N. Y. 1862) It is a good ground of challenge to the array, that certain of the jurors had not been summoned by any legal authority, and that their names had been put upon the list of the jurors by the clerk of the court at their request, without any order having been entered requiring such jurors to serve.—McCloskey v. People, 5 Parker, Cr. R. 308.

§ 287. —— Time and place.

Appointment of jury commissioners at current term instead of previous term, see ante, § 268 [q, r].

Sufficiency of undated return, see post, § 303 [c].

Time for issue of venire, see post, § 294.

[a] (Colo. 1889) A panel of jurors drawn less than the 30 days prescribed by statute before the term need not be discharged for that reason.—Babcock v. People, 13 Colo. 515, 22 Pac. 817.

[b] (Conn. 1837) Where a city charter required that a certain number of jurors should be chosen on the first Monday of July, and they were not chosen until the 8th of August, it was held that this provision was directory, and that a jury, impaneled from the jurors so chosen, was a legal jury.—Colt v. Eves, 12 Conn. 243.

[c] (La. 1830) Where an act directs a jury to be drawn within 30 days from its passage, it cannot be done afterwards.—Buhol v. Boudousquie, 8 Mart. (N. S.) 425.

[d] (La. 1842) Acts March 6, 1840, No. 32, relative to obtaining juries in district courts, does not apply to the First judicial district, in which juries are not required to be drawn 20 days before each term.—Lyon v. Commercial Ins. Co., 2 Rob. 266.

[e] (La. 1880) Acts 1880, No. 7, suspends, as to the first terms of the district courts under the constitution of 1879, that part of Acts 1877, No. 44, which required drawing of the jury 50 days before session of the court.—State v. Red, 32 La. Ann. 819.

[f] (La. 1891) Where the jury commissioners draw the jury in a room adjoining the clerk's office, and it opens into it, and is a part of the office, this is a compliance with Acts 1877, No. 44.—State v. Green, 43 La. Ann. 402, 9 South. 42.

[g] (Mich. 1869) Laws 1864, p. 14, provides that in proceedings to condemn land the court or judge shall order the drawing of a jury from the jury box of the county, and the court or judge shall cause to be drawn 12 names from such box, and shall issue a venire in the usual form. Held, that where a jury was not drawn in the presence of the court, nor at the time of making the order and issuing the venire, it was reversible error.—Convers v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co., 18 Mich. 459.

[h] (Miss. 1837) Jurors are not drawn until the sitting of the court.—Stevens v. Richer, 2 Miss. (1 How.) 522.

[i] (Mo. 1885) The fact that, in a murder trial, a panel of 40 qualified jurors was procured on the 6th, when the cause was not to be tried until the 10th, constitutes no error.—State v. Collins, 86 Mo. 245.

[j] (N. Y. 1830) It is no cause of challenge that the jurors are drawn more than 14 days before the sitting of the court at which they are to serve.—Crane v. Dygert, 4 Wend. 675.

[k] (N. Y. 1875) Where, under Laws 1870, c. 408, § 14, a special term of the court of oyer and terminer is appointed by the governor, the names of the jurors must be drawn 14 days before the holding of the court; and a challenge to the array for a failure so to do is proper, and should be sustained.—Powell v. People, 5 Hun, 169.

[l] (S. C. 1867) Act 1825 (7 St. at Large, p. 329) § 1, makes it the duty of the circuit judge, when ordering an extra court, to order jurors to be drawn for said extra court as well as for the next regular court. Act 1839 (11 St. at Large, p. 74) § 13, empowers the clerk and sheriff to draw juries at any regular term when no judge attends, and further provides that, if an extra court shall be ordered, he shall similarly draw the necessary juries, and issue the proper venires for such extra term. Held that, where an extra term was ordered by the judge, no jury could be drawn at such extra term for service thereat; the juries for such extra term being required to be drawn at the preceding regular term.—State v. Pratt, 15 Rich. Law, 47.

§ 288. —— Notice.

Effect of failure to give statutory notice, see post, § 307 [d].

[a] (Utah, 1876) Under the act of congress requiring the judge of the district court of Utah territory to give public notice of the drawing of a jury, it is not necessary to give notice thereof by publication in a newspaper. Any public notice is sufficient.—United States v. Reynolds, 1 Utah, 319.

§ 289. —— Necessity of recording names drawn.

[a] (Ind. 1833) Failure of the clerk to comply with the requirement of Act Jan. 29, 1831, § 1, that the names of the panel of petit jurors be recorded, without delay, in the order book, is good ground for challenge to the array.—Mitchell v. Likens, 3 Blackf 258; Same v. Denbo, Id. 259.

§ 290. Size of panel.

Effect of failure to summon full number, see post, § 360.

—— panel of jurors for oyer and terminer, see post, § 360 [p].

Number of talesmen to be summoned, see post, § 343.

—— to be summoned on one venire, see post, § 295 [j].

Presumption that short panel comprised all names in box, see post, § 306 [e].

Right to summon special venire after exhaustion of short panel, see post, § 316 [a].

Size of special venire, see post, § 323.

Summoning another jury after organizing one jury from regular panel, see post, § 315 [b].

[a] (Ala. 1888) Acts 1886–87, p. 151, § 10, provides that, when any capital case stands for trial, the court shall cause the jury box to be brought into the court room, and the presiding judge shall draw therefrom not less than 25 nor more than 50 names, to constitute a part of the venire from which the jury to try the case shall be selected. Defendant demanded that 50 names should be drawn, but the court only allowed 30 to be drawn. Held, that the number to be drawn between the minimum and maximum was discretionary with the court, and that the accused had the right to demand that the lowest number be drawn, but not the highest.—Clarke v. State, 87 Ala. 71, 6 South. 368.

[b] (Ala. 1895) Acts 1886–87, p. 151, § 9 (Code. p. 131), requires the court to organize, from the jurors attending, two petit juries, and authorizes it to discharge any jurors over the number necessary for the two juries. Held, that where the jurors summoned were all in attendance, so as to enable the court to form two juries, a defendant on trial for a crime was not injured by the summoning of 24 jurors, instead of 30, as required by Code, §§ 4306, 4316.—Evans v. State, 109 Ala. 11, 19 South. 535.

[c] (Ga. 1892) Under Code, §§ 298, 299c, on a trial in the county court on an indictment transferred from the superior court, the panel from which the trial jury is obtained is not one of 24, but of 12.—Grant v. State, 89 Ga. 393, 15 S. E. 488.

[d] (Iowa, 1862) Where the clerk of the Dubuque city court issued a venire for 15, instead of for 24, jurors, held, that a challenge to the jury should be sustained.—Baker v. The Milwaukee, 14 Iowa, 214.

[e] (Iowa, 1874) An order for a special term of court to be held in December, 1873, made in August, 1873, directed that a panel of 15 jurors should be summoned. Rev. 1860, § 2732, as amended by Laws 1870, c. 167, § 7, and then in force, provided that the number of petit jurors should be 15, unless the court should direct the selection of a greater number. Under the Code which took effect September 1, 1873, the number of jurors in that county was increased to 24, unless the judge should order otherwise. Held, that the order to summon 15 jurors had the force and effect of an order, aside from the statute; and a change in the statute therefore did not change the order.—Fifield v. Chick, 39 Iowa, 651.

[f] (La. 1823) It is good ground of challenge to the array that a less number were drawn on the panel than are prescribed by law.—Flower v. Livingston, 12 Mart. (O. S.) 681.

[g] (La. 1823) Forty-eight jurors were required to be returned for each term of the parish court of New Orleans.—Flower v. Livingston, 12 Mart. (O. S.) 681.

[h] (La. 1824) It is not ground of challenge to the array that the panel is larger than is required by law, but the objection should be taken by challenge to the individuals drawn in excess of the legal number.—Ramos v. Bringier, 2 Mart. (N. S.) 192; Debuys v. Mollere, Id. 625.

[i] (La. 1832) It is no ground of challenge to a juror that the sheriff summoned 72 jurors, under a law directing him to summon not less than 36.—Prall v. Peet's Curator, 3 La. 274.

[j] (Mich. 1881) No order to draw a particular number of jurors is needed, unless a larger panel than 24 is wanted.—Gott v. Brigham, 45 Mich. 424, 8 N. W. 41.

[k] (Mo. 1857) Under Rev. Code 1855, two defendants jointly indicted, who elect to be tried together, are not entitled to a panel of more than 36 jurors.—State v. Phillips, 24 Mo. 475.

[l] (Mont. 1882) If, between the time of selecting the panel and beginning the trial, the law be changed so as to require a larger panel, a litigant has the right to demand the larger panel.—Kermon v. Gilmer, 2 Pac. 21.

[m] (N. J. 1829) It is not error for the sheriff, in an action of unlawful detainer, to return a panel of 24 jurors, if 12 only are sworn on the jury.—Adams v. Decker, 11 N. J. Law (6 Halst.) 84.

[n] (N. J. 1890) Revision p. 280, § 72, provides that where a prisoner is entitled to peremptory challenges the sheriff shall before his trial deliver to him a list of 48 jurors of the general panel, etc.; but, if that number shall not have been drawn or summoned, the sheriff shall add to the panel as many as may be necessary. Held that, where the prisoner is not so entitled to peremptory challenges, a panel of 36 jurors is sufficient, and the sheriff has no authority to add to them.—Evans v. State, 52 N. J. Law (23 Vroom) 261, 19 Atl. 254.

[o] (Pa. 1890) Since the method of drawing jurors and making challenges, prescribed by Act April 14, 1834 (P. L. 366) § 140, relates only to civil cases, Act 1885 (P. L. 138), which simply amends said section 140, by providing for the drawing of 20 jurors instead of 12, is likewise applicable only to civil cases. —Commonwealth v. Spink, 137 Pa. 255, 20 Atl. 680, 27 Wkly. Notes Cas. 37.

[p] (R. I. 1895) Where 12 "good and lawful" men were secured as jurors, as required by Pub. St. c. 104, § 4, defendant cannot complain that more than that number were summoned.—Barber v. James, 18 R. I. 798, 31 Atl. 264.

[q] (S. C. 1882) Under a statute providing that "no more" than 36 persons shall be summoned to attend court as jurors, it is not necessary that as many as 36 should be in attendance.—State v. Clyburn, 16 S. C. 375.

[r] (Tenn. 1827) Twenty jurors are to be summoned in proceedings before justices of the peace for forcible entries and detainers.—Clements v. Clinton, 8 Tenn. (Mart. & Y.) 198.

[s] (Tex. 1878) Except in the trial of capital cases by special venires, the defendant has no right to demand, nor the court any authority to direct, that the clerk shall draw more than 24 names from the jury box, to form the petit jury.—Burfey v. State, 3 Tex. App. 519; Jones v. State, 3 Tex. App. 575.

[t] (Va. 1890) Under Acts 1877–78, p. 340, providing that "the writ of venire facias, in a case of felony other than where the punishment may be death, shall command the officer * * * to summon 16 persons, * * * to be taken from a list to be furnished him by the judge," and that "where the punishment may be death" the writ shall require 24 persons to be summoned in like manner as above, a venire is invalid, in a case where the punishment may be death, if it commands the sheriff to summon 16 instead of 24 jurors.—Spurgeon v. Commonwealth, 86 Va. 652, 10 S. E. 979.

[u] (Va. 1893) It is not error to refuse to quash a venire facias because the list furnished by the judge contained more than 20 names, the number required to be summoned as jurors, since the law does not limit the names on the list to such number.—Drier v. Commonwealth, 89 Va. 529, 16 S. E. 672; Snodgrass v. Commonwealth, 89 Va. 679, 17 S. E. 238.

§ 291. Summoning jurors—Necessity of venire or other writ.

Amendment of return to show venire issued and returned for oyer and terminer as well as for quarter sessions, see post, § 304 [i].

Effect of issue of venire by clerk without judge's order, see post, § 307 [j].

—— of nullity of venire caused by absence of seal, see post, § 295 [c].

Necessity of formal special venire, see post, § 320 [a].

Summoning jurors on struck jury panel, see post, § 371.

[a, b] (Ga. 1853) The grand jury that found the indictment, and the petit jury at the trial, were summoned by the sheriff, and returned without a venire. Held, that this was not such a defect as will vitiate the verdict; the trial in other respects being according to law.—Bird v. State, 14 Ga. 43.

[c] (La. 1842) No formal writ of venire facias is required by our laws. An order of court for drawing and summoning jurors is sufficient.—Lyon v. Commercial Ins. Co., 2 Rob. 266.

[d] (La. 1847) No writ is necessary for selecting and summoning a jury, nor is any order under the seal of court. Acts 1831, No. 53, §§ 10, 11, 13, and Acts 1833, No. 36, § 1, direct the clerk and sheriff, or deputy sheriff, to draw, at stated periods, the requisite number of jurors who are to be summoned.—State v. Folke, 2 La. Ann. 744.

[e] (Mo. 1831) It is not necessary that a venire facias should issue to the sheriff to summon a jury before he can proceed to do so, nor need one be awarded on the roll.—Samuels v. State, 3 Mo. 68.

[f] (N. Y. 1804) Where a trial was had without the award of a venire, it was a fatal defect, and not curable by amendment.—Livingston v. Rogers, 1 Caines, 583.

[g] (N. Y. 1820) A conviction for murder, in the court of oyer and terminer, without a venire returned and filed, cannot be sustained. —People v. McKay, 18 Johns. 212.

[h] (N. Y. 1822) A general warrant or venire, under the seal of the court, directing the sheriff to summon grand and petit jurors for the trial of all causes which are to be tried before the court, returned with the panels of jurors annexed, as directed by St. Feb. 1813, is sufficient. A venire in each cause is not necessary.—People v. Herkimer County General Sessions, 20 Johns. 310.

[i] (Pa. 1816) Where a precept for holding court, directed to the sheriff, contains a clause of venire facias, it is unnecessary that venires should be issued for the grand and petit juries. —Commonwealth v. Smith, 2 Serg. & R. 300.

[j] (S. C. 1824) Where the jurors by whom defendant was tried were regularly drawn, under the act relating thereto, and regularly summoned by the sheriff, the fact that no venire was delivered to him, as required by the act, is not fatal.—State v. Crosby, Harp. 90.

[k] (S. C. 1845) The writ of venire by which the petit jurors were summoned is part of the record of conviction; and, if void, the judgment will be arrested.—State v. Williams, 1 Rich. Law, 188.

[l] (Va. 1846) Where several persons are indicted jointly for a felony, and are sent for trial to the superior court, the clerk must issue a separate venire facias for each one.— In re McWhirt, 3 Grat. 594, 46 Am. Dec. 196.

[m] (Va. 1890) The provision of Code, § 3156, that in felony cases "no irregularity in any writ of venire facias, or the drawing, summoning, returning, or impaneling of jurors, shall be sufficient to set aside a verdict, unless," etc., does not apply to a felony case in which there was no venire at all.—Jones v. Commonwealth, 87 Va. 63, 12 S. E. 226.

[n] (Va. 1892) Code, § 4018, provides that, "if more than two cases are to be tried at one term of the court, only two juries shall be summoned, unless the court or judge otherwise direct; and the juries so summoned may be used for the trial of all the cases." Held, that defendant, who was convicted of a felony, cannot complain that "there was no venire facias in the case," where it appears that, for the trial of his and two other felony cases during the term, a venire was issued for a jury in each of the three cases, and defendant was tried by a jury composed of persons thus summoned.—Prince v. Commonwealth, 89 Va. 330, 15 S. E. 863.

[o] (Va. 1894) Failure of the record in a criminal case to show that there was a writ of venire facias is a fatal defect, not cured by the failure of defendant to object below to the deficiency.—Myers v. Commonwealth, 90 Va. 785, 20 S. E. 152; Barker v. Same, 90 Va. 820, 20 S. E. 776.

§ 292. —— Lost venire.

[a] (N. Y. 1804) Where a venire is lost or mislaid, the justice may issue another.—Day v. Wilber, 2 Caines, 134.

§ 293. What court may issue writ.

[a] (Va. 1890) Under Code 1887, § 4020, providing that any court in which a person accused of felony is to be tried may at any time cause a venire facias to issue for his trial, it is proper for the circuit court to issue a venire for trial of one indicted in the county court, but who elects to be tried in the circuit court.—Wilson v. Commonwealth, 86 Va. 666, 10 S. E. 1007.

§ 294. Time for issuance of process.

Necessity of indorsement of date of issue, see post, § 295 [d].

Time for drawing panel, see ante, § 287.

Waiver of error of justice in issuing venire before time to appear expired, see post, § 516 [o].

[a] (U. S. 1820) It is no objection to the verdict that the venire was issued and served before the indictment was returned, where the panel was returned for the trial of all causes pending at the term.—United States v. Cornell, Fed. Cas. No. 14,868 [2 Mason, 91].

[b] (Cal. 1858) It is no objection to the panel that it was summoned by order of the court after the beginning of the term, instead of according to St. May 3, 1852.—People v. Rodriguez, 10 Cal. 50.

[c] (Mo. 1875) Sess. Acts 1873, p. 76, requiring that the regular panel of jurors be summoned 30 days before the term of the circuit court, is merely directory.—State v. Pitts, 58 Mo. 556; Same v. Knight, 61 Mo. 373.

[d] (N. J.) A justice of the peace cannot issue a venire before the appearance of the defendant.—(1806) Sutton v. Coleman, 2 N. J. Law (1 Penning.) 134; (1819) Wills v. McDole, 5 N. J. Law (2 Southard) 501.

[e] (Pa. 1854) By the regular course of proceeding, criminal cases pending in the supreme court ought to be brought to issue before the process issues to summon jurors to try them.—Commonwealth v. Simpson, 2 Grant, Cas. 438.

[f] (Va. 1861) On a criminal trial, it is no ground for quashing the venire facias issued under Code, c. 208, § 5, and Id. c. 105, § 14, because it was not issued more than 20 days before the term of the court, as required by those acts. They are merely directory.—Wash v. Commonwealth, 16 Grat. 530.

§ 295. Contents and requisites of writ.

Amendment of venire, see post, § 296.

Effect of inaccurate statement of jurors' names in venire, see post, § 309.

—— of irregularities in venire, see post, § 307 [q, r].

—— of misrecital in venire, see post, § 307 [o, v].

Presumption that certain figures on venire referred to residence of jurors named, see post, § 306 [b].

[a] A writ of venire, or an order of court to summon jurors, without the seal of the court, is void.

—(N. Y. 1820) People v. McKay, 18 Johns. 212;
(S. C. 1845) State v. Williams, 1 Rich. Law, 188.

[b] A venire facias is not void for want of the seal of the court from which it issues.

—(Ala. 1854) Powell v. State, 25 Ala. 21;
(Mo. 1865) State v. Marshall, 36 Mo. 400;
(Tenn. 1827) Bennett v. State, 8 Tenn. (Mart. & Y.) 133.

[c] If the venire is without a seal, the verdict will be defective; and it is error for which the judgment will be reversed.

—(N. J. 1822) Howell v. Robertson, 6 N. J. Law (1 Halst.) 142;
(S. C. 1843) State v. Dozier, 2 Speers, 211.

[d] (Ala. 1838) It is no objection to a venire that the day on which it issued is not indorsed upon it, if it appear that it was issued within the proper time.—State v. Stedman, 7 Port. 495.

[e] (Ala. 1838) The statute of 1836, requiring all process to be directed "To any sheriff of the state of Alabama," is limited to process issued in the course of a suit, and does not extend to a venire to summon a grand or petit jury.—State v. Stedman, 7 Port. 495.

[f] (Ala. 1884) Where, under Code, §§ 4739, 4874, the jury in a criminal cause is impaneled from a venire drawn under an order, setting the day for trial at an adjourned term, which directs "that the names of 50 competent persons be drawn and summoned for the trial of this action," and one directing the same number to be drawn "to serve as petit jurors at said adjourned term," there is no available error.—Martin v. State, 77 Ala. 1.

[g] (Mass. 1886) The statute prescribing the manner of summoning jurors (Pub. St. c. 170, § 22) does not require that the drawing shall be certified on the venire by the town clerk or selectmen; and jurors may properly be summoned by a constable, where there is no such indorsement on the venire.—Commonwealth v. Besse, 143 Mass. 80, 8 N. E. 878.

[h] (Mich. 1882) A venire made returnable on the next day is practically "forthwith," and sufficient, under the statute.—Palmer v. Highway Com'r, 49 Mich. 45, 12 N. W. 903.

[i] (Minn. 1885) That the venire in a criminal case describes the action as a civil action is not a ground of objection, where the jurors were properly drawn, and all appeared, so that no prejudice to the defendant was shown.—State v. Nerbovig, 33 Minn. 480, 24 N. W. 321.

[j] (Miss. 1835) More than 12 jurors may be summoned by one venire at common law.—Shaffer v. State, 2 Miss. (1 How.) 238.

[k] (Miss. 1835) A venire issued by the circuit court may be made returnable on the same day it issued, or on any day during the term.—Shaffer v. State, 2 Miss. (1 How.) 238.

[l] (Miss. 1837) A venire directing the sheriff to summon jurors "from the county," instead of "of the county," is good, as such writ does not direct him to summon persons who are out of the county.—Woodsides v. State, 3 Miss. (2 How.) 655.

[m] (Miss. 1837) It is no objection to a venire that it is made returnable at the term at which it bears teste, not being within the provision of the statute that writs shall be made returnable to the next term. Rev. Code, p. 106.—Woodsides v. State, 3 Miss. (2 How.) 655.

[n] (N. H. 1876) A writ of venire need not be under the seal of the court, nor bear teste of the chief, first, or senior justice.—State v. Bradford, 57 N. H. 188.

[o] (N. J. 1810) A venire out of a justice's court, which directs the summoning of "good and lawful men," instead of "citizens of the state and freeholders in the county," is sufficient.—Sharp v. Hendrickson, 3 N. J. Law (2 Penning.) 685; Cox v. Haines, Id. 687.

[p] (N. J. 1848) In cases where a venire should be "as well" to assess damages as to try an issue, if the award of the venire is right, it is no ground for a new trial that the venire is in the common form, without the tam quam clause.—Caldwell v. West, 21 N. J. Law (1 Zab.) 411.

[pp] (N. Y. 1809) In an action against joint debtors, a venire, mentioning only the defendant brought into court, without taking notice of the other, is sufficient.—Hutchins v. Fitch, 4 Johns. 222.

[q] (N. Y. 1826) A venire tam quam applies only where there is a demurrer or default, as well as an issue of fact.—Roosevelt v. Fulton, 6 Cow. 48.

[qq] (N. Y. 1826) Upon a plea of riens per descent, the venire need not refer to the plea or express any purpose of inquiring into the value of the lands descended.—Roosevelt v. Fulton, 6 Cow. 48.

[r] (Ohio, 1833) A venire for a petit jury should not contain a panel for a grand jury also. They are distinct bodies, and should be separately summoned.—Forsythe v. State, 6 Ohio (6 Ham.) 19.

[rr] (Pa. 1813) A precept directing the sheriff to summon "24 good and lawful men of the body of the county of A, then and there to inquire, etc., and also a competent number of sober and judicious persons as jurors for the trial of all issues at a court of oyer and terminer," is fatally defective in not commanding that the petit jurors also be drawn from the county.—White v. Commonwealth, 6 Bin. 179, 6 Am. Dec. 443.

[s] (Pa. 1813) Precepts for the summoning of jurors for courts of oyer and terminer may issue under the private seal of the judges appointing such courts, as no seals are provided for the courts themselves.—White v. Commonwealth, 6 Bin. 179, 6 Am. Dec. 443.

[ss] (Pa. 1813) A precept to the sheriff to summon the jury is sufficient if it command him to cause to come before the judges 24 good and lawful men, without commanding him in what manner they are to be drawn or selected.—White v. Commonwealth, 6 Bin. 179, 6 Am. Dec. 443.

[t] (Pa. 1816) Upon the receipt of a precept for holding court by the sheriff, it is his duty to give notice thereof to the county commissioners, but it is unnecessary that the precept should be directed to them, as well as the sheriff.—Commonwealth v. Smith, 2 Serg. & R. 300.

[tt] (Pa. 1860) Under Act April 20, 1858, making the sheriff a member of the jury board, and requiring that the board shall draw the jurors from the wheel according to the venire directed to the sheriff, it is not ground for quashing the array that the venire directed the sheriff, and not the board, to draw the jurors, according to law.—Commonwealth v. Miller, 4 Phila. 210.

[u] (Pa. 1895) A venire to "the sheriff and commissioners of L. county" is not invalidated by the clerk's failure to write "jury" before the word "commissioners," as directed by the court.—Commonwealth v. Smith, 16 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 568; Id. 577.

[uu] (S. C. 1814) Though a venire must be made returnable on the first day of the term, yet where the legislature has changed the date of the commencement of the term, after the venire issued, and has declared the venire good for the altered date, no objection based on the noncorrespondence of the dates of the venire and the session can be made.—Potter v. Shackleford, 3 Brev. 487.

[v] (S. C. 1848) Though a seal to the venire facias is necessary, it is not essential that the impression of the device should be manifest on the seal.—State v. McElmurray, 3 Strob. 33.

[vv] (S. C. 1848) It is not necessary that the names of the jurors should be embodied in the writ of venire facias. It is sufficient if they be arranged in lists below the signature of the clerk.—State v. McElmurray, 3 Strob. 33.

[w] (S. C. 1850) A writ of venire facias having a piece of paper stuck on with a wafer, over the clerk's name, is sufficiently sealed; the clerk having verified it by his signature.—State v. Thayer, 4 Strob. 286.

[ww] (S. C. 1858) A venire facias for a jury is good, although the sheriff has not indorsed on it the fact of entry in his office.—State v. Clayton, 11 Rich. Law, 581.

[x] (S. C. 1883) Gen. St. 1882, § 742, requiring the clerk to issue every execution, bench warrant, or other process, issuable or directed to be issued by the courts of sessions, in the name of the attorney general or solicitor of the circuit, does not apply to a writ of venire to summon jurors both for the courts of sessions and common pleas.—State v. Hill, 19 S. C. 435.

[xx] (S. C. 1883) The constitutional provision that "all writs and processes shall run in the name of the state of South Carolina is sufficiently complied with by" a writ of venire beginning: "State of South Carolina, County of Spartanburg. To the Sheriff of Spartanburg County."—State v. Hill, 19 S. C. 435.

[y] (Tenn. 1837) Where a venire facias directed the sheriff to summon "good and lawful men" to serve as jurors, it is sufficient, without showing the particular qualifications necessary to constitute them "good and lawful" jurors.—State v. Alderson, 18 Tenn. (10 Yerg.) 523.

[yy] (Tenn. 1849) A venire ran in these words, "I command you to summon," etc., and was signed by the clerk of the court in his own name, without the addition of his office. The venire was held valid.—State v. Cole, 28 Tenn. (9 Humph.) 626.

[z] (Va. 1880) Under Acts 1877–78, p. 340, § 4, requiring jurors for the trial of a capital case to be summoned from those "residing remote from the place where the offense is charged to have been committed," the language of the venire facias was, "where the felony was committed." Held no error.—Poindexter v. Commonwealth, 33 Grat. 766.

[zz] (Va. 1890) Under Acts 1877–78, p. 340, providing that "the venire facias in a case of felony, other than where the punishment may be death, shall command the officer to summon 16 persons, to be taken from a list to be furnished him by the judge," and that, "where the punishment may be death," the writ shall require 24 persons to be summoned in like manner as above, a venire is invalid, in a case where the penalty may be death, if it does not show by whom the list was furnished to the officer, or that the writ was directed by the court.—Spurgeon v. Commonwealth, 86 Va. 652, 10 S. E. 979.

§ 296. —— Alteration and amendment.

[a] (Ga. 1850) Where a juror, summoned by the name of "J. McC. E.," answered the call of his name, and stated that his name was "J. McK. E.," the correction of the mistake and impaneling the juror was not error.—Judge v. State, 8 Ga. 173.

[b] (Miss. 1894) A motion to quash the venire facias on the ground that the clerk's signature was omitted therefrom was properly overruled; process containing errors of omission being amendable on such motion, under Code 1892, § 3439.—Hale v. State, 72 Miss. 140, 16 South. 387.

[c] (N. J. 1808) A justice of the peace cannot order the constable to strike out the names of such jurors as do not appear at the trial, and put other names in the venire.—Lyon v. Tharp, 3 N. J. Law (2 Penning.) 463.

[d] (N. J. 1810) A constable, before he has returned a venire to a justice's court, may strike out the name of a juror and insert another.—Boyles v. McEowen, 3 N. J. Law (2 Penning.) 677.

[e] (N. J. 1888) Where defendants are improperly allowed to challenge three of the twelve jurors originally summoned, and others are substituted by the officer from bystanders, before making his return on the venire, they cannot object thereto, as, in the absence of any statutory direction, the court has implied power to complete the panel in this manner.—O'Hagan v. Crossman, 50 N. J. Law (21 Vroom) 516, 14 Atl. 752.

[f] (N. Y.) Irregularities in the contents, or in the execution of jury process, are amendable.—(1804) Livingston v. Rogers, 1 Caines, 583; (1827) Beach v. Fulton Bank, 7 Cow. 509.

[g] (N. Y. 1825) A venire may be amended, after the term, by adding a seal and filing a sheriff's return thereto nunc pro tunc.—Jackson v. Brown, 4 Cow. 550.

[h] (Pa. 1886) The fact that the sheriff put a bystander, who was a freeholder, on a jury of substantial freeholders, in the place of one who had been summoned, but had failed to appear, will not invalidate the proceedings.—Appeal of Mullin, 5 Atl. 738.

§ 297. Service of writ.

Effect of failure of return to show time of summoning, see post, § 303 [f].

—— to summon juror who is present, see post, § 307 [c].

Effect of irregularity in time of summoning, see post, § 307 [b].

[a] (S. C. 1892) Gen. St. § 2246, requiring the sheriff to summon each juror by reading to him the venire, "with his indorsement thereon of his having been drawn," refers to the indorsement to be made by the sheriff in the schedules attached.—State v. Toland, 36 S. C. 515, 15 S. E. 599; Same v. Dearing, Id.

§ 298. Officers who may summon.

Effect of approval of sheriff of panel selected by nominee of party deputized by sheriff, see post, § 307 [t].

—— of sheriff's failure to take the oath in relation to selecting jurors, see post, § 307 [u].

—— of summoning by sheriff instead of police officer, see post, § 307 [n].

Officer to whom venire should be directed, see ante, § 295.

Return by deputy sheriff in proceedings by landlord to recover possession, see post, § 303 [n].

Sufficiency of return showing summoning of jurors by person professing to act for sheriff, though not regular deputy, see post, § 303 [k].

Waiver of right to object, see post, § 503 [t].

De facto officers in general, see "Officers," I. (D), (E).

—— sheriffs, see "Sheriffs and Constables," I. (A), (C).

[a] (Ga. 1855) An undersheriff may appoint a bailiff for the purpose of summoning jurors.—McGuffie v. State, 17 Ga. 497.

[b] (Ga. 1858) Bailiffs may summon a jury under orders from the sheriffs, as they are then his deputies pro hac vice; and a deputy may summon them, under our statute.—Conner v. State, 25 Ga. 515, 71 Am. Dec. 184.

[c] (Ga. 1872) It is no ground for challenge to the array that some of the jurors were summoned by a bailiff, in attendance upon the court and under its direction, unless the defendant shows that he is in some way prejudiced thereby.—Westmoreland v. State, 45 Ga. 225.

[d] (Idaho, 1889) No provision having been made by the territorial legislature for obtaining jurors in cases where the United States is a party, or where the cause arises under the constitution or laws of the United States, the court has common-law power to issue the venire to the marshal of the United States, directing him to summon jurors from the body of the district at large.—United States v. Kuntze, 2 Idaho, 446, 21 Pac. 407.

[e] (Miss. 1844) Jurors may be summoned by a deputy sheriff.—Kelly v. State, 11 Miss. (3 Smedes & M.) 518.

[f] (N. J. 1803) Where a venire was directed to any one of the coroners, without any suggestion to the court that the sheriff was exceptionable, it was held a fatal defect, and not cured by verdict.—Hugg v. Kille, 7 N. J. Law (2 Halst.) 435.

[g] (N. Y. 1816) A venire in a justice's court must be executed by a constable of the town from which the jury is summoned and in which the cause is tried.—Louw v. Davis, 13 Johns. 227.

[h] (N. Y. 1819) If a venire be executed and returned by any other person than the sheriff, without a special suggestion of the facts, and an award to such person upon the record, it is an error, for which judgment will be reversed.—Cooper v. Bissell, 16 Johns. 146.

[i] (N. Y. 1865) Laws 1858, c. 322, §§ 1, 41, providing that jurors for Kings county shall thereafter be summoned by the commissioner of jurors, and that the method of summoning provided in the act shall be exclusive, practically abrogates all the sheriff's power to summon jurors in that county.—Kenny v. People, 31 N. Y. 330.

[j] (Pa. 1845) A deputy sheriff cannot deputize another to select and summon a jury of inquest, nor will the subsequent assent of parties validate such act.—McMasters v. Carothers, 1 Pa. (1 Barr) 324.

[k] (S. C. 1892) Where jurors are summoned by a de facto officer, and attend, and are sworn, and serve, the authority of the officer cannot be questioned by the prisoner.—State v. McGraw, 35 S. C. 283, 14 S. E. 630.

[l] (Va. 1819) On a trial for murder, where the venue has been changed by the court from the county of R. to the county of W., the jury are properly summoned by the sheriff of W.—Vance v. Commonwealth, 2 Va. Cas. 162.

[m] (Va. 1849) Where a prisoner was examined before the hustings court of Richmond, and sent to Henrico circuit court to be tried, it was held that the venire facias was properly executed by the sergeant of the corporation of the city.—Smith v. Commonwealth, 6 Grat. 696.

§ 299. —— Bias of sheriff or other officer as disqualification.

See post, § 300 [c].

Appointment of jury commissioners at current term instead of previous term, see ante, § 268 [q, r].

Bias of sheriff as disqualification to summon special venire, see post, § 327.

Disqualification of officer to select panel for struck jury, see post, § 369 [g, h].

Effect of summoning jurors by deputy sheriffs named by disqualified sheriff, see post, § 300 [f].

Issue of venire to other than sheriff, where sheriff is not shown to be disqualified, see ante, § 298 [f, h].

Special venire in trespass against sheriff in place of regular panel selected by him, see post, § 313 [c].

[a] (Ala. 1833) The statutes relating to juries require that the sheriff shall furnish the clerk with a list of the freeholders and householders of the county; that the county judge, the commissioners of revenue and roads, the clerk, and the sheriff shall select from such list those whom they shall deem qualified to serve as jurors; that the selected names shall be placed in a box by the clerk; that the box shall be shaken, and the clerk and sheriff shall draw 36 jurors, for whom the clerk shall issue a venire, returnable at the next term; that the names so drawn shall be kept separate till the entire list is exhausted; and that from the 36 jurors summoned the grand jurors shall be drawn by lot in open court, and the remainder shall be the panel of petit jurors. Held, that it was not ground for challenge to the array, on trial for negro stealing, that the sheriff, who assisted in selecting and drawing the panel, was one of the owners of the slave stolen, since the sheriff, under such statutes, had no chance to pack the jury.—Prince v. State, 3 Stew & P. 253.

[b] (Conn. 1806) It is no ground of challenge to the whole panel that the clerk who issued the warrant to the constables of the several towns, to summon the jury, is party to the suit on trial.—Hart v. Tallmadge, 2 Day, 381, 2 Am. Dec. 105.

[c] (Conn. 1821) Where the officer who served the venire, on a complaint for forcible entry and detainer, had previously, according to his return on an execution, put the complainant in possession, which return the defendants claimed to be false, it was held that this was no ground of exception to the array.—Dutton v. Tracy, 4 Conn. 79.

[d] (Conn. 1850) It being indispensable to the pure administration of justice, in trials by jury, that the jurors should be selected with the utmost fairness and integrity, it is a good cause of challenge to them that the officer returning them was interested, or guilty of any partiality or misconduct, in their selection.—Quinebaug Bank v. Tarbox, 20 Conn. 510.

[e] (Fla. 1890) An objection to jurors on a murder trial that they were summoned by F., a witness for the state, is frivolous, where F. did not speak to the jurors about the case, and where the list of jurors to be summoned was furnished by the sheriff, so that F. had no discretion to summon jurors prejudiced against defendant.—Hodge v. State, 26 Fla. 11, 7 South. 593.

[f] (Ind. 1880) If the sheriff, being a party in the cause, have summoned the jurors selected, under the statute of 1827, the array may for that reason be challenged.—Cowgill v. Wooden, 2 Blackf. 332.

[g] (Mass. 1824) Acts 1802, c. 135, § 1, provides that when a jury shall be ordered by the court of general sessions to determine the damages from the location of a highway, and the sheriff, or either of his deputies, be a party, or interested, the jury shall be summoned by a coroner. Held, that where a jury was summoned by a deputy sheriff to assess damages from the laying out of a turnpike, and another deputy of the same sheriff was a member of the turnpike corporation, the verdict of the jury must be set aside.—Barre Turnpike Corp. v. Appleton, 19 Mass. (2 Pick.) 430.

[h] (Mich. 1886) A constable shown to be interested in the defendant's conviction, and to have prejudice against him, is disqualified from impaneling a jury, though the constable himself states that he has no feeling that would prevent him from selecting an impartial jury.—People v. Felker, 61 Mich. 114, 28 N. W. 83.

[i] (N. J. 1817) A challenge to the array, because the constable is related to the plaintiff, is not confined to relationship within the third degree.—Vanauken v. Beemer, 4 N. J. Law (1 Southard) 364.

[j] (N. J. 1827) If, upon the trial of an appeal, a jury is demanded, and there is an objection to the sheriff, the common pleas has power to order the coroners to return a jury.—De Wit v. Decker, 9 N. J. Law (4 Halst.) 148.

[k] (N. J. 1845) In a suit brought by the board of chosen freeholders of a county against a late county collector and his sureties on his official bond, it is not a good ground of principal challenge to the array that the sheriff, who summoned the jury, is an inhabitant of the county, and owner of land and other taxable property therein.—Peck v. Freeholders of Essex, 20 N. J. Law (1 Spencer) 457.

[l] (N. Y. 1809) If the sheriff, who is a party in the cause, serves the venire, it is good cause of challenge to the array.—Woods v. Rowan, 5 Johns. 133.

[m] (N. Y. 1813) It is cause of challenge to the array that the jury were summoned by a constable who acts as advocate for the party in a justice's court.—Watkins v. Weaver, 10 Johns. 107.

[n] (N. Y. 1827) It is not a good ground for principal challenge that the circuit clerk is attorney of one of the parties, and was so at the time of drawing, making, and arraying the panel, since the clerk has nothing to do with the selection of the jurors.—Wakeman v. Sprague, 7 Cow. 720.

[o] (N. Y. 1846) It is not a good ground of challenge to the array in a justice's court that the constable who served the venire had appeared and pleaded for one of the parties to the suit, and had, at her request, employed an attorney to appear for her on the trial.—Miles v. Pulver, 3 Denio, 84.

[p] (N. Y. 1876) Where the sheriff's interest in an action conflicts with his duties, though he is not a party of record, the talesmen should be summoned by the coroner.—People v. Tweed, 50 How. Prac. 286.

[q] (Pa. 1823) If the sheriff is brother to one of the parties, it is a good cause of challenge to the array.—Munshower v. Patton, 10 Serg. & R. 334.

[r] (Pa. 1889) It is not ground for quashing an array of petit jurors that the sheriff who drew them made the information on which warrant for arrest was issued.—Clark v. Commonwealth, 123 Pa. 555, 16 Atl. 795, 23 Wkly. Notes Cas. 317.

[s] (Wis. 1850) It is not a good cause of challenge to the array of petit jurors that the sheriff who summoned them is a son of the prosecuting attorney, no proof being offered that he was not indifferent or impartial.—State v. Cameron, 2 Chand. 172, 2 Pin. 490.

§ 300. —— Substitute for disqualified officer.

[a] (Cal. 1859) In trespass against the sheriff, there being no coroner, it was proper for the court to appoint an elisor to summon the special jury.—Pacheco v. Hunsacker, 14 Cal. 120.

[b] (Ga. 1859) Where the sheriff is disqualified to act, the bailiff may summon the jury, if the court so order.—Phillips v. State, 29 Ga. 105.

[c] (Ind. 1845) The circuit court may appoint an elisor for the purpose of summoning a jury, in a cause in which the sheriff is a party, there being no coroner in attendance; and a person, though he have served under the sheriff as bailiff to the petit jury in other causes, may be appointed such elisor.—State v. Bodly, 7 Blackf. 355.

[d] (Iowa, 1892) Under Code 1873, § 350, providing that service of "process" in actions where the sheriff is disqualified to act officially shall be by the coroner, it was error to permit a deputy sheriff to impanel a jury in an action against the sheriff.—Gollsbitsch v. Ranibon, 84 Iowa, 567, 51 N. W. 48.

[e] (Ky. 1888) Cr. Code, § 193, provides that for sufficient cause the court may appoint some one other than the sheriff to summon petit jurors. The court, at defendant's request, appointed another person to summon the jury, who appointed an assistant, to whom defendant objected. It not appearing that defendant was in any manner prejudiced, held, that his objection was properly overruled. — Forman v. Commonwealth, 86 Ky. 605, 6 S. W. 579.

[f] (Tenn. 1895) The fact that a jury was summoned by a deputy appointed by the court, assisted by three deputies named by the sheriff, who, being interested in a reward offered for defendant's conviction, was disqualified from acting himself, is such an irregularity as to be ground for new trial.—Clapp v. State, 94 Tenn. (10 Pickle) 186, 30 S. W. 214.

§ 301. —— Appointment of substitute for officer alleged to be disqualified.

[a] (Iowa, 1849) Where a party objecting to a sheriff on account of prejudice asks the court to appoint an elisor to impanel a jury, he sufficiently manifests, by implication, his objection to the coroner also, and the court may appoint an elisor.—Harriman v. State, 2 G. Greene, 270.

[b] (Iowa, 1877) The provision of Code, § 350, that on an affidavit of partiality, prejudice, consanguinity, or interest, on the part of the sheriff, the clerk or court shall direct process to the coroner, whose duty it shall be to execute it in the same manner as if he were sheriff, applies in criminal as well as civil cases. On such an affidavit in a criminal cause, the duty of filling the jury should be devolved on the coroner.—State v. Hardin, 46 Iowa, 623, 26 Am. Rep. 174.

[c] (Ky. 1887) Affidavits being filed in a criminal prosecution stating that the sheriff would not summon fair, competent, and impartial jurors to try the case, the court had authority to appoint another person to summon jurors, under Cr. Code, § 193, providing that the court may, for sufficient cause, designate some other officer or person than the sheriff to summon petit jurors; and under this section the appointment may be made at the instance of either party,—either the prosecution or the accused.—Johns v. Commonwealth, 3 S. W. 369.

[d] (Ky. 1889) Where, during the impaneling of the jury, the judge ascertains that the sheriff is related to the accused, it is proper, without motion or affidavit, to appoint an elisor to act in the sheriff's stead.—Allen v. Commonwealth, 12 S. W. 582.

[e] (Mo. 1888) Rev. St. § 3894, provides that, when it shall appear to the court that the sheriff is prejudiced, the coroner shall execute the process. Held, on motion for the appointment of elisors in a criminal case, that defendant's affidavit alleging prejudice in the sheriff and coroner was not conclusive, and that a denial of the motion was not reversible error, in the absence of abuse of discretion.—State v. Mathews, 98 Mo. 119, 10 S. W. 30.

[f] (Mo. 1891) Under Rev. St. 1889, § 3244, providing that, where the sheriff is interested or prejudiced, the court may appoint one or more persons to perform his duties, the fact of the sheriff's interest or prejudice may be ascertained by the court from ex parte affidavits; and it is no abuse of discretion to remove the sheriff, and appoint elisors to summon the venire and perform the other duties of the sheriff in a murder trial, when the prosecuting attorney makes affidavit that the sheriff and coroner are prejudiced in favor of defendant. — State v. Hultz, 106 Mo. 41, 16 S. W. 940.

§ 302. —— Right to opportunity to object to constable as summoning officer.

[a] (N. Y.) 2 Rev. St. p. 243, § 97 (3 Rev. St. [5th Ed.] p. 441, § 88), provides that the justice of the peace issuing a venire shall deliver the same to some constable of the county disinterested between parties, and against whom no reasonable objection shall have been made by either party. Held, that where a venire was issued by a justice of the peace on demand of the defendant out of court, and in the absence of the plaintiff, and was delivered to the constable without the knowledge of plaintiff and before he had notice of the application, the panel of jurors summoned thereunder was fatally invalid, since the statute plainly implies that there shall be an opportunity to object to the constable.—(1864) Rice v. Buchanan, 41 Barb. 147; (1878) Becker v. Sitterly, 58 How. Prac. 38.

§ 303. Return of venire or other process or order.

Effect on panel drawn of legislative postponement of term, see post, § 391 [f].
Presumption in favor of timely return, see post, § 306 [d].
Return of special venire, see post, §§ 328, 329.
Time for venire to be made returnable, see ante, § 295 [k].

[a] (Cal. 1854) The time provided by the statute in which a jury shall be returned by the sheriff is directory, and not mandatory.—Mowry v. Starbuck, 4 Cal. 274.

[b] (Conn. 1845) The facts that the return of a constable on a summons for a juror begins with "Whereas," and is not grammatically correct, are not sufficient grounds for an arrest of judgment, where the meaning of the return can be readily understood, and, as so read, it shows the officer to have acted in a legal manner.—Maples v. Park, 17 Conn. 333.

[c] (Me. 1828) Where a venire facias directed the constable to cause a juror to be drawn not more than twenty nor less than six days before the sitting of the court, a return that the juror was drawn "as above directed," but without date, is sufficient.—In re Fellows, 5 Me. (5 Greenl.) 333.

[d] (Me. 1828) Where the return to a venire was signed by the constable, who styled himself "Constable of the town," without saying of what town, the return was sufficient; the venire being directed to the constable of the town of M.—In re Fellows, 5 Me. (5 Greenl.) 333.

[e] (Me. 1828) The return of a constable, in certifying a name of a juror, that "we have appointed," is sufficient, as "we" will be taken to mean the town of which the constable was an inhabitant.—In re Fellows, 5 Me. (5 Greenl.) 333.

[f] (Mass.) Where the constable had omitted to insert the name of the juror in his return, the juror was put upon the panel on his making oath that he had been summoned. So where it did not appear by the constable's return on the venire at what time he summoned the jurors, they were put upon the panel upon making oath that they had received due notice.—(1810) In re Patterson, 6 Mass. 486; (1822) Anonymous, 18 Mass. (1 Pick.) 196.

[g] (Mich. 1870) The jurisdictional prerequisite (Const. art. 15, § 15), that a jury determining the compensation for taking lands must be composed of disinterested nonresident freeholders, cannot be supplied by parol, but must be shown in the return to the venire.—People v. Village of Brighton, 20 Mich. 57.

[h] (Minn. 1868) The sheriff's return of service of the venire on "the within named" parties, instead of setting out their names, is an immaterial error, where the jurors were present in court.—State v. Gut, 13 Minn. 341 (Gil. 315).

[i] (Minn. 1868) Return of venire to the clerk of the court the day before the court met, instead of at the opening, is an immaterial irregularity.—State v. Gut, 13 Minn. 341 (Gil. 315).

[j] (Minn. 1868) A return of a sheriff to a venire that he did, "at least six days before the sitting of the court, serve the summons upon the within-named parties, to serve as petit jurors, by reading," etc., is not a sufficiently material variance from the statutory direction that he served it on "20 jurors named therein," to afford a ground for challenge.—State v. Gut, 13 Minn. 341 (Gil. 315).

[k] (Miss. 1885) It is sufficient to show on a venire facias that the jurors have been notified to appear by some person professing to act for the sheriff, though not the sheriff or a deputy formally appointed.—Gillum v. State, 62 Miss. 547.

[l] (Nev. 1866) Defendant was not prejudiced by the failure of the sheriff to make return to the venire until the first day of the term, since the statute regulating the summoning of jurors was merely directory.—State v. Squaires, 2 Nev. 226.

[m] (Pa. 1814) The sheriff, in his return to process for drawing jurors, should make it apparent that they were legally drawn.—Eaton v. Commonwealth, 6 Bin. 447.

[n] (Pa. 1870) Under the act requiring the precept, in proceedings by a landlord to recover possession of leased premises, to be issued to the sheriff, the selection of names for jurors must be performed by the sheriff in person; and hence a return, "I summoned," etc., signed by 'A. B., Deputy Sheriff; C. D., Sheriff,"—is irregular; the signing by the sheriff only importing his adoption of the deputy's act.—McMullen v. Orr, 1 Leg. Gaz. R. 92.

[o] (Tex. 1894) The return on a writ of special venire in a criminal cause that certain persons named in the writ, after diligent effort, could not be reached within the time allowed for service, as they resided in a remote part of the county, is sufficient on a motion to quash on the ground that the return did not show what diligence had been used.—Parker v. State, 33 Tex. Cr. R. 111, 21 S. W. 604.

[p] (Va. 1887) A writ, in the usual form, commanded a sheriff to summon a jury from a list to be furnished by the judge, and to have "there this writ and the judge's list of said jurors." There followed in the record "the list of venire referred to above," signed by the judge without adding his official title, and "executed by summoning the within-named parties." Held, that it sufficiently appeared that the persons were summoned by a list furnished and signed by the judge.—Coleman v. Commonwealth, 84 Va. 1, 3 S. E. 878.

§ 304. —— Amendment of return.

Alteration and amendment of venire, see ante, § 296.

Amendment of return to special venire, see post, § 329.

Return of venire after term, see ante, § 296 [f, g].

[a] (Ala. 1876) On a motion to quash the venire in a capital case, on the ground that the sheriff's return does not show that a copy was served on the prisoner one entire day before the day appointed for the trial, as required by Rev. Code, § 4171, the sheriff may be allowed to amend his return showing such service.—Gray v. State, 55 Ala. 86.

[b] (Mass. 1822) Where a constable, in his return upon a venire, omitted to mention the day on which he summoned the jurors, he may, after the jury has been sworn and put on the panel, supply this defect in his return, when it appears from the answers of the jurors that they had received notice at least four days before the sitting of the court, as required by St. 1807, c. 140, § 6.—Anonymous, 18 Mass. (1 Pick.) 196.

[c] (N. J. 1794) Where the sheriff annexes the panel to the venire, and not to the distringas, the latter may be amended.—Hill v. Hill, 1 N. J. Law (Coxe) 261, 1 Am. Dec. 206.

[d] (N. J. 1848) A sheriff may amend a return to a venire after it has been actually returned, by adding the name of a juror duly summoned and present, but omitted in the panel.—Berry v. Williams, 21 N. J. Law (1 Zab.) 423.

[e] (N. J. 1888) Where the officer omits to sign the return of the venire for the trial jury, it is proper for the justice to direct him, after defendants have objected on account of the omission, to certify to the return over his official signature before the jury is sworn.—O'Hagan v. Crossman, 50 N. J. Law (21 Vroom) 516, 14 Atl. 752.

[f] (N. C. 1893) The fact that a sheriff was allowed to amend his return, showing the summoning of 150 men, so as to show who were summoned, and who not, and the reason they were not summoned, is not ground for challenge to the array.—State v. Whitt, 113 N. C. 716, 18 S. E. 715.

[g] (Pa. 1839) The neglect of the sheriff to sign his return to the jury process directed to him does not render it incurably vicious, and is not a sufficient reason to induce the court to quash the array of jurors; but the court will quash the return to the process, and, on motion, will direct the sheriff to complete his return, by indorsing on his writ the execution thereof, and signing the same.—Commonwealth v. Chauncey, 2 Ashm. 90.

[h] (Pa. 1860) Where the sheriff failed to make his return to a venire under oath, he was properly allowed to supply the omission.—Commonwealth v. Miller, 4 Phila. 210.

[i] (Pa. 1885) Act April 14, 1834, § 112, provides that the judges of the court of quarter sessions may order the issuance of one venire for jurors in that court and in the oyer and terminer and general jail delivery, to be held by them at the same time, and, if separate venires be ordered the same jury panel shall be annexed to the return on each writ. Held, that where the precept was regular, directed to the clerk of oyer and terminer, and of the quarter sessions, and prothonotary of the common pleas, there being the same clerk for all three courts, and only one venire was issued and returned, which was to the quarter sessions, the absence of a venire and return thereto to the court of oyer and terminer is an irregularity merely, which may be cured by the return of a venire nunc pro tunc to the oyer and terminer.—Commonwealth v. Seybert, 4 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 152.

§ 305. Filing and publication of list of jurors summoned.

[a] (La. 1867) The law prescribing the mode of drawing juries directs that a list of jurors drawn for each term shall be filed in the clerk's office as soon as completed, subject to the inspection of any person who may desire to examine it, in order that any defects or informalities which may have occurred in the formation, drawing, or summoning of jurors, or any other defect whatsoever in the construction of the jury, shall be made on the first day of the term. Under this law, if the venire is not filed on or before the first day of the term, and the petit jury find a verdict of guilty, a new trial will be granted.—State v. Vegas, 19 La. Ann. 105.

[b] (La. 1892) In a criminal case it is not ground for reversal that the procès verbal of the drawing of the jury was merely deposited in the clerk's office, without being actually filed.—State v. Hall, 44 La. Ann. 976, 11 South. 574.

[c] (La. 1893) Acts 1880, No. 35, providing for the selection of a jury where the punishment is not necessarily imprisonment at hard labor or death, does not require the publication of the names of the jurors.—State v. Wright, 45 La. Ann. 57, 12 South. 129.

§ 306. Presumption of regularity.

Presumptions as to selection of jury in criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," vol. 15, cc. 772–774, § 3023.

[a] In the absence of any showing to the contrary it will be presumed that jurors were regularly drawn and summoned.
—(Ala. 1889) Smith v. State, 88 Ala. 73, 7 South. 52;
(Wis. 1885) Osgood v. State, 64 Wis. 472, 25 N. W. 529.

[b] (Ala. 1893) Where the names of persons on the venire were not followed by a statement of their residences, but by the numbers 1 to 13, the interpretation of the court that these numbers referred to the precincts in which such persons lived will not be disturbed.—Jones v. State, 104 Ala. 30, 16 South. 135.

[c] (S. C. 1892) In the absence of any showing in the record to the contrary it will be presumed that venires were properly served on the jury commissioners.—State v. McGraw, 35 S. C. 283, 14 S. E. 630.

[d] (S. C. 1892) Where the return of a writ of venire facias bears date the first day of the term, it will be presumed to have been made before the opening of court on that day, and so regular, under Gen. St. § 2246, requiring such return to be made "before the opening or time of holding court."—State v. Toland, 36 S. C. 515, 15 S. E. 599; Same v. Dearing, Id.

[e] (Tex. 1880) If the clerk draws from the box a less number of names than the maximum, it will be presumed, in the absence of any showing to the contrary, that he drew all that were remaining in the box, and could not furnish a maximum.—Davis v. State, 9 Tex. App. 634.

§ 307. Effect of errors and irregularities.

Amendment of irregular return, see ante, § 304.
Effect of failure to insert name of juror and time of summoning in return to venire, see ante, § 303 [f].
Arrest of judgment for error in summoning jury in criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," vol. 15, cc. 248–250, § 2441.

[a] A challenge to the array, based on an irregularity in drawing the jury, cannot be sustained, where no positive injury is shown to have been done the defendant.

(La. 1881) State v. Smith, 33 La. Ann. 1414;
(1885) Same v. Sandos, 37 La. Ann. 376;
(1892) Same v. Taylor, 44 La. Ann. 783, 11 South. 132;
(N. Y. 1865) People v. Ferris, 1 Abb. Prac. (N. S.) 193.

[b] The time of summoning jurors is immaterial, so far as it affects their official acts.
—(Mass. 1822) Inhabitants of Amherst v. Inhabitants v. Hadley, 18 Mass. (1 Pick.) 38;
(Ohio, 1834) Hurley v. State, 6 Ohio (6 Ham.) 399;
(Tex. 1891) Roberts v. State, 30 Tex. App. 291, 17 S. W. 450.

[c] The fact that a juror was not summoned to attend as directed by the statute is no ground of exception, where he is regularly drawn, and attends the court.
—(U. S. 1820) United States v. Cornell, Fed. Cas. No. 14,868 [2 Mason, 91];
(Ga. 1850) Judge v. State, 8 Ga. 173;
(Me. 1828) In re Fellows, 5 Me. (5 Greenl.) 333.

[d] If the officers required by statute to be present at the drawing of the jurors are actually present, the fact that no notice was given them is immaterial.
—(Cal. 1880) People v. Gallagher, 55 Cal. 462;
(Kan. 1883) State v. Yordi, 30 Kan. 221, 2 Pac. 161.

[e] (Ala. 1889) The fact that the clerk had not written up the minutes, and hence there was no record of the order for the venire, is no ground for quashing the venire.—Hawes v. State, 88 Ala. 37, 7 South. 302.

[f] (Ala. 1893) A motion to quash a venire on the ground that the order for the summons of the jurors recited that they should appear "at the next term," and that they appeared and were impaneled at the term during which the order was issued, is frivolous, where the exact date on which they were to appear was set out in the order and in the summons, showing that they were to appear at the term during which the order was made.—Peters v. State, 100 Ala. 10, 14 South. 896.

[g] (Colo. 1889) The discharge of the regular panel, because not drawn the statutory 30 days before the term, though not necessary, does not necessitate reversal, where it does not affirmatively appear why the panel was discharged.—Babcock v. People, 13 Colo. 515, 22 Pac. 817.

[h] (Ill. 1887) Eminent Domain Act, § 6, provides that it shall be the duty of the clerk of the court at the time of issuing summons, or making publication, to write the names of 64 freeholders on 64 slips of paper, and cause to be selected from said 64 names 12 of said persons for jurors. The clerk took from the 64 slips made in a previous month for the trial of another case a number of slips, and used them as part of the slips for the present case. Held, that the clerk's failure to rewrite the names was not sufficient ground for a challenge to the array of jurors.—Kiernan v. Chicago, S. F. & C. R. Co., 123 Ill. 188, 14 N. E. 18.

[i] (Ill. 1891) A mere irregularity in drawing a jury is not sufficient cause to sustain a challenge to the array, unless the irregularity complained of is of such a character as would probably have produced a change in the panel, or presented a list of names to choose from different from those which would be produced by a compliance with the law.—Nealon v. People, 89 Ill. App. 481.

[j] (Ind. 1881) The inhibition of 2 Rev. St. 1876, p. 418, against the clerk issuing, without an order of the judge, a venire for the attendance of the jurors, constitutes no restriction on the power of the court to organize the panel, if found in attendance, though they have come in response to a summons issued without the prescribed order therefor.—Hess v. State, 73 Ind. 537.

[k] (La. 1874) Acts 1873, No. 96, § 9, provides that it shall not be ground for challenge to the array that some of the jurors are not qualified, nor because of any other defect or irregularity than in the manner of drawing the juries as above provided, and that no such defect or irregularity shall be such ground, unless it appear that some fraud or great wrong has been committed that would work great injury. Held, that where one accused of crime challenged the array, on the ground that the venire was drawn under an act not applicable to the place of trial, the challenge was properly overruled, in the absence of any showing of fraud or injury.—State v. Miller, 26 La. Ann. 579.

[l] (La. 1895) Under Acts 1894, No. 152, changing the terms of the county courts, and requiring the action of the district judges to make such changes effective, the drawing of a jury before the requisite orders were made to carry the act into effect is not vitiated, where it appears that such jury was in attendance at the term fixed by the rules in force when they were drawn, and that the term for which they were so drawn coincided with that subsequently fixed by the orders of court under the act.—State v. Desroche, 47 La. Ann. 651, 17 South. 209.

[m] (La. 1896) Judgment will not be arrested for irregularities in summoning the jury.—State v. Dickerson, 48 La. Ann. 308, 19 South. 140.

[n] (Mich. 1871) A conviction by jurors properly drawn and impaneled will not be disturbed because the jurors were summoned by the sheriff, instead of by an officer of the metropolitan police.—People v. Williams, 24 Mich. 156, 9 Am. Rep. 119.

[o] (Mich. 1872) A misrecital in the copy of an order directing the sheriff to summon jurors, upon which the return was made, of the ground on which the order was made, but which had no bearing on the duty either of the sheriff or of the jurors summoned, and no influence upon the selection of the names, held, on motion for new trial, to be of no consequence whatever.—People v. Jones, 24 Mich. 215.

[p] (Mich. 1881) The statute requires that the clerk shall draw the names of the panel from the jury box in the presence of the attending officers. Held, by a divided court, that a challenge to the array, on the ground that the sheriff actually drew the names while the clerk kept the minutes of the drawing, was properly overruled.—Gott v. Brigham, 45 Mich. 424, 8 N. W. 41.

[q] (Miss. 1840) A challenge to the array cannot be made, since the act of 1836, for informality of the venire facias.—Thomas v. State, 6 Miss. (5 How.) 20.

[r] (N. Y. 1829) Under the present modes of drawing and summoning juries, no defects or irregularities in the venire will affect the judgment or the proceedings at the trial.—Haight v. Holley, 3 Wend. 258.

[s] (N. Y. 1829) A challenge to the array will not be allowed because all persons of a particular fraternity have been excluded from the jury, if those who are returned possess the qualifications required by statute.—People v. Jewett, 3 Wend. 314.

[t] (Pa. 1848) Act March 21, 1772, § 12, commands the sheriff, in proceedings by a landlord to recover possession of leased premises, to summon a jury. Held that, where the sheriff deputed this duty to one nominated by the landlord, the subsequent approval by the sheriff of the selection was not sufficient to cure the irregularity; the duty to select, implied in the command to summon, requiring the exercise of judgment, and hence necessary to be performed by the sheriff, personally or by his sworn deputy.—Ayres v. Novinger, 8 Pa. (8 Barr) 412; Armstrong v. Same, Id.

[u] (Pa. 1895) Since the sheriff has no longer anything to do with selecting jurors, his omission to take that part of the oath prescribed by Act 1834, § 87, relating to the selection of jurors and the filling of the jury wheel, will not invalidate a drawing of a panel of jurors in which he did take part.—Commonwealth v. Smith (Com. Pl.) 16 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 577.

[v] (Pa. 1896) The mere fact that the occupations of jurors were misdescribed in the venire is not ground for challenge.—Commonwealth v. Windish, 176 Pa. 167, 34 Atl. 1019.

[w] (Utah, 1886) It is not cause for a challenge to the array that the marshal in summoning the panel purposely excluded members of defendant's church, where it appears that the jurors summoned were unobjectionable.—People v. Hampton, 4 Utah, 258, 9 Pac. 508.

§ 308. —— Summoning person not drawn.

[a] (Ala. 1893) The Mobile county special jury law provides that the jury commissioners shall draw 36 names from the city court jury box for jurors for the first week of the next term, and that the clerk shall preserve the slips, and direct the sheriff to summon the persons drawn; that, on trial for a capital offense, the judge, when he has fixed the number of special jurors allowed defendant, shall direct the clerk to draw such number from the jury box, the slips to be preserved in a separate package; that such slips, together with the slips containing the names of the regular jurors, shall be placed in a box, and drawn out one by one till the jury is completed. Held, on such a trial, that where the name of one T. M., Jr., was drawn by the commissioners, returned to the clerk, placed in a hat by the sheriff, and drawn out by him, and the person summoned on the venire and who answered the call was one T. M., another person, it was reversible error to put such person on defendant as a juror, over his objection.—Goodwin v. State, 102 Ala. 87, 15 South. 571.

[b] (Ala. 1893) Code, § 4322, provides that a mistake in the name of any person summoned as a juror to try a capital offense, either in the venire or in the list of jurors delivered to defendant, shall not be cause to quash the venire or to delay the trial, unless the court shall deem such action necessary, but that the names of such persons shall be discarded and others forthwith summoned in their places, and that the persons so summoned shall be disposed of as though summoned in the first instance. Held, that where on a murder trial the list of jurors served on defendant contained the name of F. G., Jr., and one F. G. answered the call of the venire, stated that F. G., Jr., was his son, and was thereupon excused as over age, the court properly refused to quash the venire and ordered F. G., Jr., to be summoned to attend forthwith, and suspended proceedings till he appeared.—Goodwin v. State, 102 Ala. 87, 15 South. 571.

[c] (Conn. 1837) Where A. was chosen a juror, and his name put into the box and drawn from it, but, by mistake of the sheriff, B. was summoned, and, the mistake being discovered, B. was dismissed and A. summoned, there was no ground for challenging the array.—Colt v. Eves, 12 Conn. 243.

§ 309. —— Mistakes in names of jurors.

Correction of venire as to name of juror, see ante, § 296 [a].

[a] (U. S. 1830) A mistake in the panel as to the middle initial of a juror's name is ground of objection to such juror.—United States v. Wilson, Fed. Cas. No. 16,730 [Baldw. 78].

[b] (U. S. 1843) Under Act Cong. July 20, 1840, making the method of obtaining jurors in United States courts conform to the practice in the courts of the state where they are sitting, and 2 Rev. St. N. Y. pp. 412–414, 734, requiring jury ballots to contain the names and residences of the jurors, the designation, on the panel, of a juror by the initial of his Christian name, instead of giving it in full, is ground of exception to such juror.— United States v. Matthews, Fed. Cas. No. 15,741a.

[c] (U. S. 1843) Under such statutes, a mistake in the panel as to the middle initial of a juror's name is not ground of exception to such juror, in the absence of any claim that defendant was misled, or that any other person than the juror present bore the name on the panel.—United States v. Matthews, Fed. Cas. No. 15,741a.

[d] (Ala. 1856) Defendant cannot have the entire panel set aside for the mere misnomer of one of the jurors, who was actually summoned, but failed to attend.—Bill v. State, 29 Ala. 34.

[e] (Ala. 1856) Defendant cannot have the entire panel set aside because one juror is therein designated by the initial of his Christian name, instead of giving the name in full.—Bill v. State, 29 Ala. 34.

[f] (Ala. 1860) It not appearing that the defendant had been misled by the venire, which only gave the initials of the Christian names, nor that the jurors were not customarily known by their initials, the venire was held good.—Aikin v. State, 35 Ala. 399.

[g] (Ala. 1874) The venire in a criminal case cannot be quashed on motion (Rev. Code, § 4175) because of mistakes in the names of the persons summoned as jurors.—Hall v. State, 51 Ala. 9.

[h] (Ala. 1875) The fact that one or more of the jurors summoned were designated by the initial letters of their Christian names, instead of their full Christian names, is not ground of challenge to the array, especially when defendant has not been thereby deceived or misled.—Fields v. State, 52 Ala. 348.

[i] (Ala. 1880) It is no ground for quashing the venire of petit jurors in a criminal case that there were mistakes in the names or the initial letters of the names of two of the persons summoned.—Roberts v. State, 68 Ala. 156.

[j] (Ala. 1884) Code 1876, § 4876, provides that, in case of a mistake in spelling the name of a person summoned as a juror, the venire shall not be quashed, unless the court in its discretion is of the opinion that the ends of justice so require; but it must direct the names of such persons to be discarded, and others to be forthwith summoned to supply their places, and the persons so summoned shall be disposed of in the same manner as if they had been summoned in the first instance. Acts 1882–83, pp. 273, 278, as amended by Acts 1882–83, p. 446, constituting a special law regulating the drawing and impaneling of grand and petit juries in Dallas county, makes no provision for such cases. Held, that section 4876 applies in case of mistake in the spelling of a name of a person drawn as a juror in Dallas county.—Jackson v. State, 76 Ala. 26.

[k] (Ala. 1886) Mistakes in the names of persons summoned as jurors in a capital case, are not a ground for quashing the venire.—McKee v. State, 82 Ala. 32, 2 South. 451.

[l] (Cal. 1891) The fact that the sheriff's return on the venire shows two names of jurors summoned as "Garwin" and "Zena," and that two jurors who were sworn and served were "Ganivan" and "Zina," is no ground for reversing a judgment, where it is in no other way made to appear that all the jurors who sat at the trial were not summoned.—People v. O'Brien, 88 Cal. 483, 26 Pac. 362.

[m] (Ga. 1850) It is no objection to a juror that there was a mistake as to his middle name, when the juror appeared and answered that there was a mistake, which being corrected, the juror was then impaneled.—Judge v. State, 8 Ga. 173.

[n] (La. 1832) A mistake in the name of a juror summoned, while the names of the requisite number of proper persons remain, does not vitiate the panel.—Prall v. Peet's Curator, 3 La. 274.

[o] (Md. 1810) Variances in the names of the jurors who tried a murder case and their names as they appear on the venire are not ground for arresting judgment.—Horsey v. State, 3 Har. & J. 2.

[p] (Md. 1881) A mistake in the middle name of a juror in a murder case is not a fatal error, and furnishes no ground for arresting judgment, where there was no mistake as to the identity of the person.—Munshower v. State, 56 Md. 514.

[q] (Nev. 1867) A juror was selected, placed on the jury list, and summoned to attend as a juror, under the name of "E. Barry," but his true name was "E. Berry," or "Edward Berry." Held, that the variance was immaterial; it satisfactorily appearing that the person attending as a juror was the one really selected.—State v. McNamara, 3 Nev. 70.

§ 310. Grounds for ordering—No regular panel in attendance.

Open venire when no jury is returned for term, see post, § 325 [r]

Summoning jury where territorial legislature has provided no means of obtaining jurors, see ante, § 298 [d].

[a] (Ala. 1872) Rev. Code, § 3930, gives the city court of Mobile the same jurisdiction in criminal cases as the circuit court. Acts 1857–58, No. 54, pp. 56, 57, § 3, authorizes the judge of that court to order a special term for general jail delivery. Rev. Code, § 4088, provides that in case no jury is returned to serve at any term of court, or no jury is summoned therefor, the court may direct the sheriff forthwith to summon the requisite number to serve as jurors. Held that, where no regular jury was drawn and summoned to attend a special term of the city court of Mobile, the court was authorized to direct the sheriff to summon a special venire to serve at such term.—Levy v. State, 48 Ala. 171; Taylor v. Same, Id. 180.

[b] (Cal.) Comp. Laws, p. 355, § 16, provides that when, for any cause, it becomes necessary during the term, the court may cause to be summoned from citizens of the county, but not from the bystanders, a sufficient number of persons to complete the trial jury, or to form a new trial jury. Held that, where no regular panel had been drawn or summoned for the term, the court properly ordered 36 jurors to be summoned, and a trial jury drawn from those who appeared.—(1854) People v. Stuart, 4 Cal. 218; (1863) Same v. Vance, 21 Cal. 400.

[c] (Ill. 1874) Where the time had expired for which the petit jurors had been summoned before the business of the term was completed, and a new jury was drawn in the mode required by the statute, and summoned, except that they were not summoned 20 days before court, held no error to overrule a challenge to the array on this ground. Cases will occur where courts must resort to their inherent powers as recognized at common law in the selection of jurors.—Rockford Ins. Co. v. Nelson, 75 Ill. 548.

[d] (Ill. 1882) Where a jury has not been legally summoned, and one is demanded, the court may issue a venire, and retain the jury summoned thereunder for all criminal trials at the term.—Fanning v. People, 10 Ill. App. (10 Bradw.) 70.

[e] (Ind. 1839) Where the jury commissioners have not selected any jurors for the second week of the term, the court has no power to summon a jury, since the provision of Rev. Code 1831, p. 291, that jurors may be obtained as at common law to make up any deficiency, only applies where there has been a regular panel summoned, but enough are not present to form a trial jury.—Wright v. Stuart, 5 Blackf. 120.

[f] (Ind. 1873) Act March 7, 1873 (Acts Reg. Sess. p. 103), empowering the circuit court, whenever its business requires it, to order the impaneling of a special jury for the trial of any cause, was intended to authorize a special jury when the regular panel is engaged or after it has been discharged, but does not authorize the court to impanel such jury before the day to which the regular panel has been summoned.—Wilson v. State, 42 Ind. 224.

[g] (Ind. 1887) Rev. St. 1881, § 1396, provides that if, for any reason, no jury shall be present at any term, a jury may be summoned from the bystanders. Section 1790 provides that the trial jury used in civil cases shall act in criminal cases, and, if a jury be demanded, the sheriff shall call a jury in the manner provided by law, or as directed by the court. Section 522 provides that, if necessary, the court may order a special jury for the trial of any case. Held that, where no jury had been returned for the term, the court properly summoned one from the bystanders.—Heyl v. State, 109 Ind. 589, 10 N. E. 916.

[h] (Iowa, 1855) Under Code, §§ 1647, 1777, if no jury is in attendance, the court has power to obtain one.—Claussen v. La Franz, 1 Iowa (1 Clarke) 226.

[i] (Iowa, 1874) Revision, § 2738, provides that where from any cause persons summoned as jurors fail to appear, or the court for any cause shall decide that jurors have been illegally elected or drawn, the court may order the sheriff to summon a sufficient number of jurors from the body of the county to serve at the term then in session. Held that, where the jury lists had been destroyed by fire and no jurors had been summoned for the term, the court was authorized to order the sheriff to summon jurors from the body of the county.—State v. Arthur, 39 Iowa, 631.

[j] (La. 1889) When the district judge finds it necessary to prolong the term of his court to transact criminal business, and a jury has been drawn for only two weeks of the term, under the provisions of Acts 1877, No. 44, he has discretionary power to order the jury commissioner to draw a jury for the third week.—State v. Wright, 41 La. Ann. 600, 6 South. 135.

[k] (N. C. 1891) Where the county commissioners fail to draw jurors for the third week of a term the court may direct a jury to be drawn and summoned, as prescribed by Code, § 1732, providing for drawing a jury in case the commissioners fail to do so.—Leach v. Linde, 108 N. C. 547, 13 S. E. 212.

[l] (Okl. 1893) Code Civ. Proc. art. 18, §§ 5, 17, which prescribe the method of summoning jurors in the district court when the regular panel is exhausted, apply to the probate court, in a case of which it has concurrent jurisdiction with the district court; and a special jury may be summoned in such a case, tried at a term in which there was no regular panel.—Chandler v. Colcord, 1 Okl. 260, 32 Pac. 330.

[m] (Utah, 1893) In the absence of bad faith, the court may, when necessity arises, and there is no regular jury in attendance, impanel a jury to try a case which has been properly set, and is ready for trial.—Bennett v. Tintic Iron Co., 9 Utah, 291, 34 Pac. 61.

[n] (Wash. 1895) Where defendants in mandamus demanded a jury for the trial of issues of fact, the court was not bound to await the regular panel, the proceeding being a summary one, but properly ordered a special venire over defendants' objection.—State v. Trimbell, 12 Wash. 440, 41 Pac. 183.

[o] (W. Va. 1873) Code, c. 116, §§ 3–10, 12, provide that the board of supervisors of each county shall prepare a list of persons qualified to serve as jurors, from which list the jury panels for the courts shall be drawn by the recorder. Chapter 159, § 3, provides that in cases of felony 20 jurors shall be drawn from the list of those in attendance, and that, if a sufficient number cannot be so procured, the court shall cause others to be forthwith summoned, until a panel of 20 be obtained. Held, that after January, 1873, when, under the new constitution, boards of supervisors and recorders had ceased to exist, juries in felony cases could still be had, under chapter 159, § 3, by summoning a special venire; such selection not being confined to cases where a part of the regular panel was still available, but being applicable, also, where no regular panel was in attendance.—State v. Miller, 6 W. Va. 600.

§ 311. —— Discharge of regular panel.

Discharge of regular panel for invalidity, see post, § 313.

Open venire to replace panel discharged for term, see post, § 325 [j].

[a] (U. S. 1894) Where, after discharge of the regular panel for the term, an indictment is found, a special venire may issue for jurors for the trial thereof.—St. Clair v. United States, 154 U. S. 134, 14 Sup. Ct. 1002, 38 L. Ed. 936.

[b] (Ga. 1890) Code, § 3942, provides that where a term of court is prolonged beyond the time for which juries were drawn, or the judge anticipates the term will be so prolonged, or if for any reason the court is convened or is about to convene, and there is no jury drawn therefor, a jury may be drawn and summoned as prescribed for the regular terms. At a term ordered to try a murder case, a jury having been selected, the rest of the panel was discharged. In the middle of the trial a mistrial was declared, and the court, being then without jurors except certain talesmen, summoned but not put on defendant, drew from the box the proper number of jurors and directed the sheriff to summon them for the next day, when the trial would be recommenced, and ordered the talesmen present to attend at the same time. The following day the jurors so summoned and the talesmen were put on defendant, who challenged the array on the ground that the court had no power to draw jurors at that time, and that defendant was entitled to the panel drawn for the first trial. Held, that the challenge was properly overruled; the adjournment over night being substantially an adjournment of the term, and the court being about to convene the next morning without any jury drawn for it, within the meaning of Code, § 3942.—Woolfolk v. State, 85 Ga. 69, 11 S. E. 814.

[c] (Ind. 1857) Under Act 1852, a jury may be called from the bystanders when the regular panel has been discharged.—Shaw v. Wood, 8 Ind. 518.

[d] (Ind. 1892) Under Rev. St. 1881, § 1396, which provides that where the proper officers fail to impanel a traverse jury, or where, for any cause whatever, no traverse jury shall be present at any term of court, it shall be the duty of the circuit court, if the business thereof require it, to order the sheriff to summon a jury from the bystanders, the fact that the court has discharged the regular panel does not deprive it of power to summon a jury from the bystanders.—Ohio & M. Ry. Co. v. Trapp, 4 Ind. App. 69, 30 N. E. 812.

[e] (Ky. 1846) The circuit court has the power, in its discretion, to have juries summoned and impaneled to try causes after the discharge of the regular juries, provided that it be done in good faith and not to evade a trial by the regular jury.—Hunt v. Scobie, 45 Ky. (6 B. Mon.) 469.

[f] (Minn. 1858) Under Rev. St. art. 2, c. 69, § 32, which provides that a judge of the district court may, when there is a deficiency of jurors, order a special venire to the sheriff to summon sufficient jurors to complete the panel, a special venire may be issued, although the entire original panel has been discharged.—Steele v. Malony, 1 Minn. 347 (Gil. 257).

[ff] (Minn. 1871) All the petit jurors of a regular panel were discharged from further attendance. Held, that there was an "entire absence of jurors of the regular panel," within Gen. St. 1866, c. 64, § 17, authorizing the issuance of a special venire in such case.—State v. McCartey, 17 Minn. 76 (Gil. 54).

[g] (N. Y. 1830) A court of special sessions have authority to issue a second venire for a jury to try the defendant, if the first jury are discharged because they cannot agree on a verdict.—Vanderwerker v. People, 5 Wend. 530.

[h] (N. Y. 1888) Code Cr. Proc. § 361, authorizes a challenge to the panel only for material departure from the forms prescribed for drawing and return of the jury, or for an intentional omission of the sheriff to summon one or more jurors drawn. Held, that where the judge of oyer and terminer discharged the regular panel, which had served four weeks, and ordered a special venire to attend an adjourned term for the trial of a murder case, no challenge to the array of such special venire would lie.—People v. Jackson, 111 N. Y. 362, 19 N. E. 54.

[i] (Ohio, 1846) Under Swan's St. p. 493, providing that when, by absence, sickness, challenge, or otherwise there are none of the regular panel remaining the common pleas may order the sheriff to return a jury of bystanders, that court properly summoned a special venire for a criminal case after having discharged the regular panel on an earlier day of the term.—Reed v. State, 15 Ohio, 217.

[j] (Or. 1864) Code, § 921, provides that the county court shall make from the last preceding assessment roll of the county a jury list, containing the names of persons to serve as jurors until the following year; and section 926 provides that the jurors for "every term" of the circuit court in the county shall be drawn from the jury list provided for by section 921. Hence, where the whole of the regular panel, thus drawn for a term, are discharged by the court, the court cannot cause a jury to be summoned from the body of the county, since there is no other provision of the Code authorizing the summoning of a jury for the trial of any cause without the consent of parties, excepting to supply deficiencies in the regular panel, caused by default in attendance or incompetency.—Mosseau v. Veeder, 2 Or. 113.

§ 312. —— Original venire not returned.

[a] (N. Y. 1810) If the venire be not returned at the time appointed for trial, it is not a reason for nonsuiting the plaintiff; but another venire may be issued.—Blanchard v. Richly, 7 Johns. 198.

[b] (N. Y. 1811) When the first venire has not been returned, the justice may issue another.—Sebring v. Wheedon, 8 Johns. 460.

§ 313. —— Invalidity of regular panel.

Open venire after sustaining challenge to array, see post, § 321 [ee].

[a] Where the original panel was quashed for irregularity the court properly summoned a special venire.
—(Miss. 1893) Purvis v. State, 71 Miss. 706, 14 South. 268;
(N. C. 1868) State v. Owen, 61 N. C. 425; Same v. McCurry, 63 N. C. 33.

[b] (Ala. 1896) The provisions of Act 1886-87, relating to the drawing of jurors, are mandatory, and, where the commissioners have failed to comply therewith, the court may organize special juries under Cr. Code, § 4316, which provides for such organization in default of regular juries.—Steele v. State, 111 Ala. 32, 20 South. 648.

[c] (Cal. 1859) Under Woods' Dig. tit. "Jurors," p. 512, § 16, placing the ordering of a trial jury in the discretion of the court, it is proper, in an action of trespass against the sheriff, to summon a special venire in place of the regular panel selected by him.—Pacheco v. Hunsacker, 14 Cal. 120.

[d] (Cal. 1873) Where the trial jurors, although legally drawn, have not been legally summoned, the court may by an order direct additional jurors to be summoned.—People v. Devine, 46 Cal. 45.

[e] (Ky. 1894) Where the jurors were not drawn as provided by Act May 22, 1893, and for that reason discharged, the court could draw a new jury pursuant to that act.—Risner v. Commonwealth, 95 Ky. 539, 26 S. W. 388.

[f] (Mich. 1886) Where the regular panel was discharged as irregularly drawn, the court properly summoned new jurors under How. Ann. St. § 7578, authorizing the court to summon jurors forthwith when a sufficient number do not appear.—Atkinson v. Morse, 63 Mich. 276, 29 N. W. 711.

[g] (Minn. 1865) Where a challenge to the panel of regular jurors is allowed, the case may properly be tried by a jury drawn from jurors previously summoned on special venires to supply deficiencies in the regular panel.—Dayton v. Warren, 10 Minn. 233 (Gil. 185).

[h] (Pa. 1879) Act April 14, 1834, §§ 146, 147, provide that in civil cases, when a challenge to the array by either party is sustained, the court may issue a venire, returnable at once, requiring the summoning of 24 jurors. Section 148 grants the same power to the court in criminal trials, in case of challenge to the array by the defendant. Held, that where, on the trial of an indictment against the sheriff, a challenge to the array by the prosecution was sustained, the court improperly ordered a venire to be summoned from the body of the county by two elisors, since a challenge to the array by the commonwealth is not within the statute, and the court has no power at common law to summon talesmen unless there are at least some of the array present to serve.—Williams v. Commonwealth, 91 Pa. 493.

§ 314. —— Vacancies in regular panel.

Open venire to fill vacancies in panel, see post, § 325 [b].

Right of judge to fill vacancies in panel before commencement of term, see post, § 324 [l].

[a] (U. S. 1843) Act July 20, 1840 (5 Stat. 394), making the practice of the United States courts in obtaining jurors conform as far as practicable to the practice of the courts of the state in which they are sitting, has changed the method of obtaining juries practiced in the federal courts under Act 1789 (1 Stat. 73); and in case of a deficiency of jurors it is competent for the court during the term to order a second venire.—United States v. Matthews, Fed. Cas. No. 15,741b.

[b] (Ala. 1876) On the trial for a misdemeanor, or a felony less than capital, vacancies in a petit jury, caused by challenges or by the discharge of jurors by the court, may, in the discretion of the court, be supplied either by calling jurors from the other regular juries in attendance or by summoning talesmen, and the exercise of that discretion by calling bystanders will not be reviewed.—Smith v. State, 55 Ala. 1.

[c] (Ala. 1886) When there are only 11 jurors present, and the record fails to show an agreement between the parties to try the cause with less than 12, it is not error for the court to order to be summoned a sufficient number to fill the panel before the selection of the jury commences.—Adams v. Thornton, 82 Ala. 260, 8 South. 20.

[d] (Ga. 1858) Act 1856, regulating the manner of impaneling a jury in criminal cases, does not deprive the court of its previous power to order a special venire in a criminal case, where the regular panel has been reduced by challenges to the polls.—Revel v. State, 26 Ga. 275.

[e] (Ind. 1878) The places of three jurors, excused by the court because they had expressed an opinion that defendant was guilty, were properly filled from a special venire.—Watson v. State, 63 Ind. 548.

[f] (Ind. 1890) Under Rev. St. § 1396, providing that a jury may be drawn from the bystanders when the proper officers have failed to draw and impanel a traverse jury, vacancies in the panel in a criminal case may be filled from the bystanders.—Keyes v. State, 122 Ind. 527, 23 N. E. 1097.

[g] (Kan. 1878) Laws 1876, c. 104, § 6, provides that, when there shall not be enough jurors present to form a panel in any cause, the court may order qualified persons in sufficient number to complete the panel to be summoned from the bystanders or the neighboring citizens by the sheriff. Held that, where the court reduced the panel below 12 by excusing jurors, talesmen were properly summoned from the bystanders to complete the jury.—Trembly v. State, 20 Kan. 116.

[h] (La. 1870) A petit jury was regularly drawn, and a list thereof was served on the accused three days before the trial. On the day of the trial, when the jurors were called, it appeared that six or seven of the number had not been found by the sheriff, after diligent search, and that those who failed to answer to their names had been legally excused for good and valid cause shown. Held, that to summon a sufficient number from among the bystanders to fill out the panel was proper.—State v. Ferray, 22 La. Ann. 423.

[i] (Mich. 1846) Rev. St. 1838, p. 490, c. 5, § 3, provides that in forcible entry and detainer justices of the peace shall issue a precept for the summoning of 12 men for the jury, and that, if a sufficient number do not attend at the hearing, the number may be completed by returning others forthwith. Held, that where the parties and most of the jurors attended on the return day, and the cause was then adjourned, the court had no power to issue a venire summoning a second jury, but should have required the jurors present to attend on the adjourned day, and then filled any vacancy by summoning additional jurors under the same venire.—Latimer v. Woodward, 2 Doug. 368.

[j] (Mont. 1885) Laws 12th Sess. p. 58, provides that if for any reason the panel of jurors shall not be full at the opening of court, or at any time during the term, the clerk, under direction of the court, shall draw from the jury box furnished by the county commissioners so many additional names as may be needed to fill the panel. Held, that where members of the regular panel were found to be residents of a new county, set off from the county in which the court is sitting since the jurors were drawn, the court properly caused further jurors to be drawn from the box.—Wykoff v. Loeber, 5 Mont. 535, 6 Pac. 363.

[k] (Neb. 1876) Civ. Code, § 660, provides that 24 names shall be drawn for the jury panel. Section 664 provides that, if at any period of a term for any cause the panel is not complete, the court may order suitable jurors to be summoned without delay. Held, that in a murder trial, after excusing a number of jurors of the panel for cause, the court properly ordered the sheriff to summon sufficient jurors from the body of the county to fill up the panel.—Dodge v. People, 4 Neb. 220.

[l] (N. Y. 1842) A trial for murder had commenced, and the jury summoned were called, but, less than 24 appearing, the court ordered the sheriff to summon 300 to complete the requisite number and adjourned the trial for two days. Held, that the summoning of the special venire was within the discretion of the court.—Colt v. People, 1 Parker, Cr. R. 611.

[m] (Ohio, 1874) A sheriff's return that some of the jurymen named in a venire facias "cannot be found in the county" is equivalent to a return that they are absent from the county, and authorizes the clerk, as provided by Act Dec. 4, 1874 (72 Ohio Laws, p. 4), to issue an alias venire facias.—Davis v. State, 25 Ohio St. 369.

[n] (Ohio, 1876) Under Justices' Code, § 81, providing that, if the jury panel in a justice court is not full, the constable shall fill it in the same manner as is done by the sheriff in common pleas, which is by calling in talesmen, a motion for a special venire in such a contingency was properly refused.—Harmonia Lodge v. Schaffer, 5 Ohio Dec. 335.

[o] (Utah, 1875) If from any cause the jurors summoned prior to the term do not appear, the court is authorized to have such additional number drawn and summoned, after the beginning of the term, as may be necessary to complete the panel.—United States v. Reynolds, 1 Utah, 226.

[p] (Va. 1803) Under Code, § 4019, authorizing the court in felony cases to direct another venire facias where sufficient jurors cannot be had from those summoned and in attendance, the court properly ordered a special venire, though one of the regular panel had not been called, he being at the time serving on the grand jury; such juror not being "in attendance" within the meaning of the statute.—Short v. Commonwealth, 90 Va. 96, 17 S. E. 786.

§ 315. —— Regular panel otherwise engaged.

Depletion of venire specially drawn by taking out jury for another case as ground of challenge to array, see post, § 365 [k].

Member of regular panel engaged on grand jury, see ante, § 314 [p].

[a] (Ala. 1881) Where the whole venire with the exception of jurors absent or engaged in the trial of another cause, has been exhausted without obtaining a full jury, the court may properly order an additional number to be summoned to complete the jury, without awaiting the return of absent or detained jurors.—Redd v. State, 69 Ala. 255.

[b] (Ala. 1893) A second jury, summoned and organized by order of the county court of Shelby county, after organizing one jury from the regular venire, is irregular, since the statute clearly contemplates that there shall be but one regular jury at each term of court.—Dean v. State, 100 Ala. 102, 14 South. 762.

[c] (Ind. 1877) 2 Rev. St. 1876, p. 13, provides that the courts shall have power, when the business requires, to order the impaneling of a special jury for the trial of any case. Held, that a court may, even over the objection of the defendant, properly impanel a special jury, when, on the calling of a cause for trial, the regular jury is out considering their verdict in another cause.—Winsett v. State, 57 Ind. 26.

[d] (Mo. 1875) Under Sess. Acts 1873, p. 46, § 6, where the regular panel is engaged in the trial of other causes, a jury may be summoned from the bystanders.—State v. Jones, 61 Mo. 232.

[e] (Mont. 1892) Under Laws 16th Sess. p. 168, providing that if, during a trial, where a jury has been drawn, it shall become necessary to summon additional jurors, such jurors may be summoned by open venire, a court is not obliged, before calling a case, to await the return of a portion of the regular panel, who may be out deliberating upon a case which has been previously tried, but a special venire may be issued.—O'Donnell v. Bennett, 12 Mont. 242, 29 Pac. 1044.

[f] (Tex. 1857) Where, the jurors summoned by special venire in a capital case being called, 24 of the same answered, appeared, were duly sworn, tried, and qualified, and a portion of the same accepted as jurors by the state and prisoner, but not a full jury of 12, and the court, on being informed that 12 of the residue of said jurors were engaged in another capital trial pending before the same court, and were out considering their verdict, and, the government and prisoner refusing to waive their right to select a jury from the original venire, ordered said jury to be called, and, after they came into court and were tried and qualified, the state and prisoner accepted each of them as called, after which, the court having asked each of them, as he was called and accepted, if he was on the jury in the said pending case, and if he and his fellows had agreed upon a verdict, and each of them having answered that they had not agreed, the court discharged each of them for cause, and ordered them to retire and consider of their verdict, and then ordered a special venire, returnable instanter, for 24 jurors, and from the same, when returned, the state and prisoner selected a full jury, it was held that such action of the court was erroneous.—Bates v. State, 19 Tex. 122.

§ 316. —— Exhaustion of regular panel.

See ante, § 315 [a].

Calling talesmen on exhaustion of panel, see post, §§ 333–335.

Exhaustion of regular panel except member serving on grand jury, see ante, § 314 [p].

Necessity of drawing from regular panel for the week, after exhausting special venire, before calling jurors from body of county, see post, § 334.

Open venire on exhaustion of regular panel, see post, § 325 [a, l, n, w, zz].

Part of regular panel otherwise engaged and exhaustion of remainder, see ante, § 315 [f].

Right to special venire on exhaustion of regular panel to prevent adjournment till jury for following week could be had, see post, § 318 [e].

[a] (Fla. 1894) Though the regular panel did not consist of 12 persons, as provided by Laws 1893, c. 4122, § 5, the court can proceed with a special venire, after the regular panel is exhausted.—Lambright v. State, 34 Fla. 564, 16 South. 582.

[b] (Ind. 1878) Under Act March 7, 1873, § 8 (2 Rev. St. 1876, p. 13), the court has power to impanel a special jury whenever the business of the court requires it.—Merrick v. State, 63 Ind. 327.

[c] (La. 1881) A judge, in his discretion, when the jury of talesmen is exhausted, may order a second, or third, or more, if necessary.—State v. Somnier, 33 La. Ann. 237.

[d] (Minn. 1867) The attendance of every juror on the regular panel is not a prerequisite to summoning talesmen, or calling those summoned on a special venire.—State v. Brown, 12 Minn. 538 (Gil. 448).

[e] (Minn. 1867) Even where the defendant has an attachment issue for the absent jurors summoned on the regular panel, the court is not bound to wait its return before placing the names of the special venire in the box.—State v. Brown, 12 Minn. 538 (Gil. 448).

[f] (Mo. 1875) Under Sess. Acts 1873, p. 46, § 6, where the regular panel is exhausted, a jury may be summoned from the bystanders.—State v. Jones, 61 Mo. 232.

[g] (N. Y. 1865) Under 2 Rev. St. pp. 419, 420 (3 Rev. St. [5th Ed.] p. 718), providing that when a sufficient number of jurors, duly drawn and summoned, do not appear or cannot be had to form a jury, the court may cause to be summoned, from the bystanders or from the county at large, so many qualified persons as shall be sufficient, after exhausting the regular panel, a new panel may be summoned forthwith to attend on one day's notice.—Kenny v. People, 31 N. Y. 330.

[h] (S. C. 1887) Gen. St. § 2255, provides that when it is necessary to supply any deficiency of jurors, whether caused by challenge or otherwise, the jury commissioner, under direction of the court, shall draw from the box sufficient names to supply the deficiency. Held, that where the court, supposing the regular panel to be exhausted, ordered additional names to be drawn from the box in order that they might be summoned to serve as jurors, and while the names were being drawn it was discovered that one of the regular panel had not been called, the judge properly revoked the order for additional names, and, after presenting the name omitted from the regular panel, ordered a new venire to be drawn and summoned.—State v. Anderson, 26 S. C. 599, 2 S. E. 699.

§ 317. —— Anticipated exhaustion of regular panel.

See ante, § 313 [g].

Effect of summoning special venire before exhaustion of regular panel, see post, § 331 [f].

Open venire in anticipation of exhaustion of panel, see post, § 325 [b].

[a] (Ala. 1893) Under Act Feb. 21, 1887, § 10, providing that if, in a capital case, a jury be not made of those summoned and who appear, the court shall draw from the jury box enough names to complete the jury, it is error to draw such names before the list of those summoned and appearing has been exhausted.—Ezell v. State, 102 Ala. 101, 15 South. 810.

[b] (Fla. 1860) The court may, in anticipation that the jurors duly drawn and summoned will be exhausted, order the sheriff to summon others from the bystanders or the body of the county.—O'Connor v. State, 9 Fla. 215.

[c] (Fla. 1894) The court may issue a special venire for additional jurors in anticipation of the exhaustion of a regular panel.—Lambright v. State, 34 Fla. 564, 16 South. 582.

[d] (N. Y. 1872) Under Acts 1847, c. 495, providing that, after the deposit of the ballots by the county clerk as required by law, the several courts of the city of New York may order as many jurors to be summoned as may be necessary, such court may order an additional panel after the deposit of the ballots without awaiting the exhaustion of the first panel.—In re Foster, 13 Abb. Prac. (N. S.) 372.

[e] (Tex.) Until a special venire has been exhausted or discharged with defendant's consent, it is error for the court to order the issuance and execution of another venire.—(1885) Sharpe v. State, 17 Tex. App. 486; (1889) Hall v. Same, 28 Tex. App. 146, 12 S. W. 739.

§ 318. Right to special venire.

Discretion of court to order special venire when timely application is not made, see post, § 319 [d].

[a] (Ala. 1884) Under Code, § 4874, authorizing special venires only in capital cases, on the second trial of one under indictment for murder, who had previously been found guilty in the second degree, defendant is not entitled to a special venire where the former judgment is properly pleaded.—De Arman v. State, 77 Ala. 10.

[b] (Ala. 1885) Where a special term is called for the trial of a single capital case, the jury must be organized from the venire of 50 persons summoned as required by Code, § 4739, with talesmen if necessary; and an additional venire as required by Code, § 4874, for the trial of capital cases at regular terms, need not be summoned.—Ward v. State, 78 Ala. 441.

[c] (Ala. 1885) Under Sess. Acts 1884–85, p. 181, regulating the drawing of jurors and organization of juries in criminal cases, and providing for a special venire in capital cases, where two or more capital cases are set for the same day, but one special venire should be drawn.—Chamblee v. State, 78 Ala. 466.

[d] (Ala. 1885) Code, § 4874, providing for a special venire only in capital cases, on a second trial under an indictment for murder, the first having resulted in a conviction of murder in the second degree, defendant is not entitled to a special venire.—Jackson v. State, 78 Ala. 471.

[e] (S. C. 1887) Gen. St. § 2255, provides that whenever necessary to supply a deficiency in the number of jurors duly drawn, whether caused by challenge or otherwise, the jury commissioner, with the clerk of common pleas and general sessions and the sheriff, shall under direction of the court draw from the tales box so many names to serve as jurors as the court may deem necessary. Held, that it was improper, where the regular panel for the week was exhausted by peremptory challenges, to continue the cause to the next week, trying other causes in the meantime, and to put defendant on trial before the regular jury of the second week.—State v. Briggs, 27 S. C. 80, 2 S. E. 854.

[f] (Tex. 1886) A special venire must be ordered for the trial of a capital case, and it should affirmatively show by the record that this was done.—Steagald v. State, 22 Tex. App. 464, 3 S. W. 771.

[g] (Tex. 1890) Code Cr. Proc. art. 605, provides for special venires in "capital" cases only; Pen. Code, art. 55, defines "a capital felony" as "an offense for which the highest penalty is death." Article 35 provides that "a person, for an offense committed before he arrived at the age of 17 years, shall in no case be punished with death." Defendant was indicted for murder in the first degree, but the prosecuting attorney admitted in open court that he was under 17 years old. Held, that it was not a capital case, and defendant was not entitled to a special venire.—Walker v. State, 28 Tex. App. 503, 13 S. W. 860.

§ 319. Application and order for special venire.

Presumption of making of order for special venire, see post, § 330 [d].

[a] (La. 1892) Under Acts 1877, No. 138, which provides that on the trial of criminal cases in the parish of Orleans, where the jury is not complete, or the judge is of the opinion that talesmen will be required, he "shall enter an order on the minutes" directing a sufficient number of tales jurors to be drawn, it is not necessary that the entry be made by the judge himself, but it is sufficient if made by the minute clerk under the direction of the trial court, and the minutes be approved and signed by the judge.—State v. Walsh, 44 La. Ann. 1122, 11 South. 811.

[b] (Mich. 1895) The judge of the district court may, under Laws 1893, No. 204, on his own motion, order additional jurors, when enough are not drawn, and the fact that his attention was called to it by the county attorney is immaterial.—People v. Considine, 105 Mich. 149, 63 N. W. 196.

[c] (Mo. 1876) A party to an action against a municipality is not required, in order to entitle him to a special venire, to ask for the same until the regular panel has been called and the list of competent jurors exhausted.—Fulweiler v. City of St. Louis, 61 Mo. 479.

[d] (Mo. 1886) Where a motion for a special venire to summon a jury in a criminal case is not made three days before the day on which the case is set for trial, the court has discretion to make the order or not, under Rev. St. § 2802.—State v. Leabo, 89 Mo. 247, 1 S. W. 288.

§ 320. Necessity of formal issue of venire.

Effect of defects in venire for jurors from the tales box, see post, § 331 [d].

Necessity of venire for regular panel, see ante, § 291.

[a] (Kan. 1878) Where the court at the request of a party names certain bystanders for jurors, as provided by Laws 1876, c. 104, § 6, and such jurors enter the box, ready for service as jurors, failure to issue a formal venire to compel their attendance is not error.—Trembly v. State, 20 Kan. 116.

[b] (Mo. 1875) Where a jury is summoned from bystanders, because the regular panel is exhausted or is engaged in other causes, no special venire is necessary.—State v. Jones, 61 Mo. 232.

[c] (S. C. 1876) Under Act Nov. 19, 1873 (15 St. at Large, p. 485), amending Gen. St. c. 111, § 24, and providing when jurors are to be summoned from the bystanders, the sheriff and clerk shall each furnish the judge a list containing the number of names needed, from which the judge shall select those best fitted to serve, who shall be forthwith summoned by the sheriff, the persons so selected may be summoned under a venire, and it is not an irregularity that they were not summoned on the verbal order of the judge.—State v. Coleman, 8 S. C. (8 Rich.) 237.

[d] (S. C. 1879) The action of the circuit court in summoning talesmen by verbal order, without a venire, was proper; the court being without power to issue a venire for talesmen in the absence of statutory authority, and no such authority being given by Act 1877 in relation to juries.—State v. Stephens, 11 S. C. 319.

§ 321. Form and requisites of venire.

Verbal order to sheriff to summon jurors to complete jury, see ante, § 320 [d]; post, § 324 [x].

[a] (Ala.) Code provisions which require that a special venire for the trial of a capital case must include "the regular jury," or "those summoned on the regular jury for the case," include only those who, summoned as regular jurors, are in attendance, and not excused, unless those excused are again specially summoned.—(1876) Floyd v. State, 55 Ala. 61; (1876) Lee v. Same, Id. 259; (1884) Jackson v. Same, 77 Ala. 18; (1888) Dick v. Same, 87 Ala. 61, 6 South. 395; (1888) Cotton v. Same, 87 Ala. 75, 6 South. 396.

[b] (Ala. 1883) Code 1876, § 4874, provides that the court, when ordering a special venire, must order the sheriff to summon not less than 50 nor more than 100 persons, including those "summoned" on the regular juries for the week. Held, that where the court ordered the sheriff to summon 100 jurors, "including the regular venire," such order was error, as the statute only directed those "summoned" on the regular jury to be summoned on the special venire, while the order directed the sheriff to summon all persons named in the writ under which the regular jury were summoned, whether or not they were in fact summoned on the regular jury.—Posey v. State, 73 Ala. 490.

[c] (Fla. 1876) Under Act 1868, § 21, providing that when a sufficient number of jurors, duly drawn and summoned, cannot be obtained, the court may summon jurors from the bystanders or from the county at large, a special venire may properly be in the alternative form, directing the jurors to be summoned from the bystanders or from the county at large.—Keech v. State, 15 Fla. 591.

[d] (La. 1893) It is no objection to an order to the jury commissioners to draw talesmen that it specifies the cases for which they are to be drawn.—State v. Chambers, 45 La. Ann. 36, 11 South. 944.

[e] (Mich. 1872) Comp. Laws, § 4374, provides that when no jurors have been drawn, or a sufficient number has not appeared, the court may order the sheriff to summon "forthwith" so many jurors as may be needed. Section 4375 requires the sheriff to summon such jurors "forthwith," and section 4377 requires those summoned to attend "forthwith." Held, that the court had power, on deficiency of jurors on April 11th, to order the sheriff to forthwith summon jurors to attend at an adjourned term to be held May 4th.—People v. Jones, 24 Mich. 215.

[ee] (Minn. 1871) Under Gen. St. c. 64, § 17, empowering the court, on sustaining a challenge to the array, to order a special venire to issue to the sheriff, commanding him to summon from the county at large a number, therein named, of competent persons to serve as jurors, it is not necessary that the special venire should state the names of the persons to be summoned.—State v. Stokely, 16 Minn. 282 (Gil. 249).

[f] (N. C. 1863) It is no ground of challenge to the array in a capital case that it does not appear from an order for a special venire facias that it was made in the case of the prisoner. It is sufficient if it appears that it was made at the term at which the trial was had. —State v. Murph, 60 N. C. 129.

[g] (Ohio, 1857) A venire for a special jury in a capital case need not be entitled as of the case pending, nor state the name of the person alleged to have been murdered.—Loeffner v. State, 10 Ohio St. 598.

[h] (Pa. 1873) A special venire to summon talesmen need not summon them for the trial of any particular case.—Brown v. Commonwealth, 30 Leg. Int. 382.

[i] (Tex. 1886) A special venire which shows the style and number of the case, and which, though in its preliminary recitals it omitted the name of the court or county in which the case was pending, distinctly stated in the mandatory part that the persons named were to be summoned "to be and appear before the honorable district court of Williamson county, Texas, at the court house thereof, in Georgetown, on the nineteenth day of January, A. D. 1886, then and there to serve as special jurors, as aforesaid, in the above-stated cause," etc., is not obnoxious to the objection that the writ does not show in what case the same was issued, nor in what court the proceedings were pending, as required by Code Cr. Proc. arts. 605, 608.—Murray v. State, 21 Tex. App. 466, 1 S. W. 522, 3 S. W. 104.

[j] (Tex. 1891) Defendant was indicted for murder, and in January the trial was continued to the April term. The district court, on March 30th, ordered a special venire issued, returnable April 9th. Court convened April 6th, and the case was set for trial on the 13th. Held, that the special venire was properly made returnable at the term after it issued, under Code Cr. Proc. art. 606, which provides that "the district or county attorney may, at any time after indictment found, * * * obtain an order for a special venire to be issued in such case."—Roberts v. State, 30 Tex. App. 291, 17 S. W. 450.

[k] (Tex.) A writ of special venire facias, which was executed and returned by the sheriff, will not be quashed because it was improperly directed to the "sheriff or any constable," instead of the sheriff alone.—(1891) Suit v. State, 30 Tex. App. 319, 17 S. W. 458; (1892) Jackson v. Same, 30 Tex. App. 664, 18 S. W. 643.

[l] (Va. 1888) Under Cr. Code, p. 340, § 4, which provides that, when a sufficient number of jurors are not obtained from the regular panel, the judge shall issue a venire to summon from the bystanders or from a list furnished by the court, it is not necessary to furnish a list with a venire to summon from the bystanders.—Waller v. Commonwealth, 84 Va. 492, 5 S. E. 364.

[m] (Va. 1889) Under Code, § 4019, providing that in cases of felony the court may direct another venire facias, and cause a jury to be summoned from the bystanders or from a list furnished by the court, where persons are summoned from the bystanders to complete the panel the judge is not required to sign the list. —Williams v. Commonwealth, 85 Va. 607, 8 S. E. 470.

[n] (W. Va. 1890) Code, c. 116, prescribes the manner of selecting and summoning jurors, and by section 14 provides that nothing contained in preceding sections shall prevent any court in term time "from requiring other jurors to be drawn in like manner, or requiring other jurors, whether so drawn or not, to be summoned, whenever it shall be found necessary for the convenient dispatch of business." Held, that the circuit court may, in the exercise of a legal discretion, summon a panel of the requisite number of jurors from bystanders without any venire facias, except the order of the court entered of record.—State v. Mills, 33 W. Va. 455, 10 S. E. 808.

§ 322. Time for drawing and notice thereof.

[a] (La. 1882) Acts 1880, No. 98, requires that the number of jurors ordered to be drawn by the court shall be drawn 15 days next preceding the beginning of the month in which the term is held. Acts 1877, No. 138, provides that when, on trial of a felony in the parish of Orleans, the judge shall consider that talesmen will be needed to complete the jury, he may order such a number of talesmen to be drawn from the jury wheel as may be needed to complete the jury. Held, that Act 1877 was not impliedly repealed by Act 1880, there being no conflict between them, since Act 1877 provided for a contingency not covered by the later act; and hence an order by the judge to draw 50 additional names from the wheel to meet the needs of a murder trial was properly made.—State v. Alphonse, 34 La. Ann. 9.

[b] (La. 1890) Under Acts 1880, No. 135, § 4, providing that, when a jury is prayed for during a term for which no jury is drawn, the court shall order a special jury to be drawn, which shall consist of 30 qualified jurors, who shall be summoned by service of notice in the usual form, such special venire is not required to be drawn more than 30 days before the term of court, and no advertisement thereof is required.—State ex rel. Leche v. Waggner, 42 La. Ann. 54, 8 South. 209.

§ 323. Size of panel.

Number of talesmen to be summoned, see post, § 343.

—— to be summoned on special venire in addition to regular jury for the week, see post, § 324 [a].

Size of regular panel, see ante, § 290.

[a] (Ala. 1879) Code 1876, § 4738, provides that 30 persons shall be drawn as jurors for each week of a regular term. Section 4739 provides that, when a special term is to be held for the trial of a capital offense, 50 names must be drawn to serve as petit jurors. At a special term held to try a murder case, a panel of 50 jurors was quashed on motion of defendant, and a special venire of 100 was summoned. Defendant moved to quash the array, because two names thereon were not on the list served on him; but the court ordered the two names to be discarded and denied the motion. The prisoner then challenged the array, because 48 persons were originally summoned as regular jurors, instead of 30. Held, that the challenge was properly overruled under section 4739, and because the statute regarding the summoning jurors being directory only, a departure from it is not ground of challenge to the array.—Bales v. State, 63 Ala. 30.

[b] (Ala.) Under Code 1876, § 4874, within the limits of not less than 50 nor more than 100, it is within the discretion of the court as to how many jurors shall be summoned in addition to the regular panel.—(1880) Blevins v. State, 68 Ala. 92; (1882) Hubbard v. State, 72 Ala. 164.

[c] (Ga. 1855) The number of tales jurors to be summoned on successive panels is in the discretion of the court.—McGuffie v. State, 17 Ga. 497.

[d] (Ga. 1859) Under the statute, a second panel, called after exhausting the first, is sufficient, though it contain less than 48 names.—Thomas v. State, 27 Ga. 287.

[e] (Mich. 1887) How. Ann. St. § 7578, authorizes an order of court for the summoning of a jury for the general purposes of the term, when the regular panel has not been summoned 14 days before the term, or when a sufficient number of the regular panel do not appear. Held, that the summoning of 35 jurors, instead of 24, is not cause of challenge to the array.—People v. Coughlin, 67 Mich. 466, 35 N. W. 72.

[f] (N. Y. 1842) Where there is a deficiency of jurors, as specified in 2 Rev. St. p. 733, § 3, the number to be summoned rests in the discretion of the court below.—People v. Colt, 3 Hill, 432.

[g] (Pa. 1869) Act April 20, 1858, provides that whenever talesmen are required the sheriff shall, in presence of the court, draw from the wheel five names for every talesman required, and that a venire shall issue for any one of the five names so drawn, and that no tales juror shall be selected in any other way. Act March 15, 1867, directs the court to fix the number to be brought into court by any venire to be issued. Held that, where there were 8 vacancies on the trial jury after exhausting the regular panel, the court properly issued special venires for 50 and 25 talesmen, and was not bound to draw 15 names only, and bring them by 3, 2, and 1 at a time, to fill the vacancies.—Commonwealth v. Eaton, 8 Phila. 428.

[h] (Tenn. 1859) If, after the jury in a criminal case is selected, though not sworn, one of the number is discharged by the court, the prisoner is not entitled to a full panel of jurors out of which to fill the vacancy. He is only entitled to the number allowed if the juror had not been selected.—Lewis v. State, 40 Tenn. (3 Head) 127.

[i] (Tex. 1878) Whatever the reasons for the limitations on the number of persons drawn for a special venire in a capital case, as prescribed by Pasch. Dig. art. 3016, they should be respected and obeyed.—Harrison v. State, 3 Tex. App. 558.

[j] (Tex. 1889) Under Code Cr. Proc. art. 605, defining a "special venire" as a writ issued by order of the court for any number of not less than 36 nor more than 60, in the discretion of the court, to serve as a jury in the particular case, the fact that only 59 names, instead of 60, as asked for by defendant, were upon the list attached to the original writ, neither invalidates the writ, nor the venire summoned under it.—Hall v. State, 28 Tex. App. 146, 12 S. W. 739.

[k] (Tex. 1895) Code Cr. Proc. art. 608, provides that an order for the issuance of a writ for a special venire shall specify the number of persons required to be summoned, and that the clerk shall issue the writ in accordance with such order. Held, that where the court orders a special venire of 90 men, and the clerk issues a writ for only 60, defendant's motion to quash the venire should be granted.—Hunter v. State, 34 Tex. Cr. R. 599, 31 S. W. 674.

[l] (Va. 1893) It is not error to refuse to quash a second venire facias containing six names.—Snodgrass v. Commonwealth, 89 Va. 679, 17 S. E. 238.

§ 324. Selection of names or persons.

Appointment of elisor to summon special venire for action in which sheriff is a party, see post, § 335 [c].

Effect of appointment of new jury commissioners, instead of utilizing old ones to draw special venire, see post, § 331 [e].

—— of inquiries by sheriff into opinions of persons to be summoned on special venire, see post, § 331 [b].

Open venire, see post, § 325.

—— after successful challenge to array by prosecution, see ante, § 313 [h].

Presumption of regularity in selection of names for special venire, see post, § 330 [c].

Repeal of law as to selection of names for special venire, see ante, § 266 [r].

Summoning jurors residing remote from scene of crime, see ante, § 12.

[a] (Ala. 1886) Under the provisions of the act approved February 17, 1885, regulating the drawing and summoning of jurors (Acts 1884–85, pp. 181–187), the special venire for a capital case consists of the regular jurors for the week, and the additional jurors (not being less than 12, nor more than 24) drawn by the presiding judge in open court.—Parsons v. State, 81 Ala. 577, 2 South. 854, 60 Am. Rep. 193.

[b] (Ala. 1888) On a prosecution for arson, in the city court of Mobile, Ala., the original venire having been exhausted without completing the jury, the city court directed the judge of probate to bring into court the "city court jury box," from which 50 names were drawn as talesmen, in open court. The jury still being incomplete, the same proceeding was repeated, except that, the key of the box not being obtainable, it was opened with another key. Held that, under Acts 1882–83, p. 501, Acts 1884–85, p. 534, and Acts 1886–87, p. 201, regulating the mode of drawing jurors, this was a substantial compliance with the statutes in force at the time of trial.—Long v. State, 86 Ala. 36, 5 South. 443.

[c] (Ariz. 1889) Under Code, § 2175 et seq., proceedings for special venires are regular where the venires are issued in term, are directed to the sheriff to serve, and the names returned by him are properly put in the box and drawn by the clerk.—Territory v. Clanton, 20 Pac. 94.

[d] (Colo. 1889) Counsel may request, in the presence of the presiding judge, or the judge himself may direct, that only good and lawful men be summoned as jurors. But to request the sheriff to discriminate in favor of or against any class of citizens eligible to jury duty would be a wrong which might constitute cause for reversal.—Babcock v. People, 13 Colo. 515, 22 Pac. 817.

[e] (Ga. 1880) The judge presiding cannot indicate in any manner what persons shall be impaneled as jurors.—Hamlin v. Fletcher, 64 Ga. 549.

[f] (Ga. 1890) Under Code, § 3935, providing that the judge may draw talesmen from "the jury boxes of the county," he may draw from the grand jury box as well as from the petit jury box.—Woolfolk v. State, 85 Ga. 69, 11 S. E. 814.

[g] (Ky. 1806) Where the defendant successfully challenged the array for bias of the deputy sheriff who summoned them, it was error for any of the jurors returned upon the first array to be summoned and sworn for the trial of the cause.—Combs v. Slaughter, 3 Ky. (Hardin) 62.

[h] (Ky. 1894) Where the regular panel was discharged as not drawn as provided by Act May 22, 1893, the court was authorized to appoint jury commissioners to draw a new jury under such act.—Risner v. Commonwealth, 95 Ky. 539, 26 S. W. 388.

[i] (La. 1893) Under Acts 1877, No. 44, the district judge has the power to order the drawing of tales jurors by the jury commission.—State v. Chambers, 45 La. Ann. 36, 11 South. 944.

[j] (Mo. 1879) In a trial upon an indictment for murder, the sheriff returned into court a panel of jurors which was challenged by the defendant, on the ground that the jurors had been summoned and brought into court by persons who were neither sheriff's deputies nor sworn officers. The panel was discharged, and an order issued for another venire, which the sheriff executed by summoning the same men. The defendant filed a challenge to the array. Held, in the absence of bias on the part of the sheriff, that the challenge was properly overruled.—State v. Degonia, 69 Mo. 485.

[k] (Mo. 1893) Act April 1, 1891, providing that in counties having a population of between 50,000 and 100,000, when a jury cannot be made up from the regular panel, the judge may deliver to the proper officer a list of jurors sufficient to complete the panel, is substantially complied with when the judge of the criminal court, by his written order, requires the marshal to summon 25 duly-qualified jurors to appear in court to complete the panel, and, on the appearance of such persons, inquires their names, places of residence, and business, and, having satisfied himself in that regard, requires the marshal to summon them. —State v. Sansone, 116 Mo. 1, 22 S. W. 617.

[l] (Mont. 1882) At the time of drawing the jury panel by the county commissioners, they were required by law to draw 18 names from the general jury list. Subsequent legislation (Rev. St. div. 5, § 773) required the commissioners to draw 30 names, and directed the judge at the beginning of the term to examine the jurors present and reduce the panel to 24. Section 246 provides that when the panel is exhausted by challenge, absence, or sickness, the court may cause the sheriff to summon so many persons as might be needed to complete the jury for the pending trial. Held, that the court could not select, before the term, additional names to fill the panel from the 18 drawn by the commissioners to the 24 required by the new law for a full panel.—Kennon v. Gilmer, 4 Mont. 433, 2 Pac. 21.

[m] (N. J. 1858) The jury returned for the trial of an appeal in the common pleas cannot be returned by the sheriff, but must be drawn from the box as in other cases.—Patterson Gaslight Co. v. Brady, 27 N. J. Law (3 Dutch.) 245, 72 Am. Dec. 360.

[n] (N. Y. 1870) Laws 1861, c. 528, requires the clerk of the circuit court, in addition to the box containing the names on the general jury list, to provide a box in which the names of all persons qualified to serve as jurors in the city or town where the court is held shall be deposited, and that from such box the court may draw such number of additional names as shall be necessary. 1 Laws 1870, p. 952, empowers the circuit court and courts of oyer and terminer to draw not over 36 additional jurors from the box containing the jurors from which the petit jurors for the county are drawn, whenever a larger number of jurors is required than had been authorized by previous laws. Held, that the act of 1870, being merely permissive in its terms, did not repeal the act of 1861; and hence an additional panel of jurors was properly drawn from the city box.—Bennett v. Matthews, 40 How. Prac. 428.

[o] (N. Y. 1886) A challenge to the array will not be sustained on the ground that the names of additional jurors were not properly drawn, where they were drawn in open court and from the box directed by the court, the order of the court specifying the box as the "one containing the names of trial jurors for said court," as prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1035.—People v. Kiernan, 101 N. Y. 618, 4 N. E. 130, affirming (1885) 3 N. Y. Cr. R. 247.

[p] (N. C. 1892) The judge in a capital case having power to select jurors for a special venire from a box as in other cases, or otherwise, "at his discretion," under Code, § 1739, defendants, who have no control over the special venire except to secure a jury of freeholders, cannot object that the jurors were drawn from the box; their right to have freeholders being protected by the right to challenge for lack of legal qualification.—State v. Whitson, 111 N. C. 695, 16 S. E. 332.

[q] (Ohio, 1869) In a criminal case, in making up the petit jury, only five of the regular panel were present, and it became necessary to summon seven talesmen to serve. A summary application was made to the court on behalf of the defendants to issue a venire for that purpose. Held, that under Act March 22, 1849, providing that, whenever in any criminal prosecution it shall become necessary to summon talesmen, the court, when so requested, shall issue a venire containing the names of so many discreet and suitable persons as the court shall deem expedient, the court was authorized to select the persons to be summoned, of his own knowledge, without having them drawn from the box or otherwise selected by the clerk and sheriff, as juries are usually selected.—Dayton v. State, 19 Ohio St. 584.

[r] (Ohio, 1882) Code, § 7275, provides that in a capital case, if a full panel be not obtained or the panel be set aside, the court may call talesmen. Act April 18, 1881, adds a proviso authorizing a special venire on demand of either party as provided in section 5173, which requires the court in such case to name the talesmen. Held, that a motion by accused in a murder case that the special venire be drawn from the wheel was properly denied.—McHugh v. State, 38 Ohio St. 153.

[s] (Ohio, 1883) Rev. St. §§ 7267–7269, require that for the trial of a capital cause 36 persons shall be summoned, and if the full number are not present the court may, and on defendant's motion shall, issue a special venire to fill vecancies. If by reason of challenges a trial jury cannot be obtained from those so summoned, vacancies must be filled as provided in section 7275, as amended by 77 Ohio Laws, p. 181, requiring such vacancies to be filled from the bystanders or, if demanded by defendant, by a special venire containing names selected by the judge. Held, that after exhausting the regular panel summoned for a murder trial and a special venire summoned to fill vacancies therein, without completing the jury, it was error to order another special venire to be drawn from the box.—Bach v. State, 38 Ohio St. 664.

[t] (S. C. 1878) Where additional jurors are required at a circuit court, the jury commissioners, in the presence of the court, should take from the names of jurors legally in the jury box the names of those residing within five miles of the court house, place them in a separate compartment of the box, and draw the additional jurors from such compartment. —State v. Cardoza, 11 S. C. 195.

[u] (Tenn. 1873) The court may designate the persons to be summoned as jurors on a special venire.—Eason v. State, 65 Tenn. (6 Baxt.) 431.

[v] (Tex. 1851) Neither the defendant nor his counsel is required to be present at the drawing of a special venire in a murder case. —Pocket v. State, 5 Tex. App. 552.

[w] (Tex. 1851) Under Acts 15th Leg. p. 82, § 23, providing for special venires, which requires the tickets to be placed in a box, which shall be well shaken, and from which the clerk, in the presence of the judge, shall draw the number of names required, the fact that the clerk did not with his own hand draw the jurors is merely a technical objection and will be disregarded.—Pocket v. State, 5 Tex. App. 552.

[x] (Tex. 1878) Act Aug. 1, 1876 (Laws 1876, p. 83) § 23, provides that when a special venire is ordered and the whole number of jurors selected by the jury commissioners for the term is less than the number required for the special venire, the judge shall order the sheriff to summon the requisite number of suitable persons to supply the deficiency. Held, that on exhaustion of the special venire in a murder case, it not appearing that there were any jurors selected by the jury commissioners left, the court properly made a verbal order that the sheriff summon 20 jurors from which to complete the jury.—Roberts v. State, 5 Tex. App. 141.

[y] (Va. 1880) A prisoner, indicted for murder in the county court, upon arraignment, elected to be tried in the circuit court. A writ of venire for the summoning of a jury, issued by the county court, returnable to the circuit court, was quashed upon motion of the prisoner. The circuit court directed the summoning of another venire, and named the 24 men summoned on the first venire. Held, that directing the same 24 men to be summoned was not error.—Mitchell v. Commonwealth, 33 Grat. 845.

Presumption of exhaustion of jury box on ordering open venire, see post, § 330 [a, b].

[a] (U. S. 1885) Where, under Act Cong. June 23, 1874 (18 Stat. 254) § 4, "in relation to courts and judicial officers in the territory of Utah," in the trial of an indictment, the names in the jury box of 200 jurors, provided for by that section, are exhausted, when the jury is only partly impaneled, the district court may issue a venire to the United States marshal to summon jurors from the body of the district, and the jury may be completed from persons thus summoned. The provisions of section 4 are not exclusive of the ordinary methods of obtaining a jury.—Clawson v. United States, 114 U. S. 477, 5 Sup. Ct. 949, 29 L. Ed. 179, affirming United States v. Clawson (1885) 4 Utah, 34, 5 Pac. 689.

[b] (Colo. 1894) Acts 1891, p. 250, § 4, provides that whenever a new panel of jurors is needed the court shall direct that they be drawn from the jury box, and that whenever talesmen are needed the court in its discretion shall direct that they be drawn from said box or summoned from the bystanders, or may issue an open venire, as theretofore practiced. Held, that the meaning of the word "talesmen" is not confined to persons summoned to supply vacancies on a jury in process of selection for a particular cause, but that the court may authorize the issue of an open venire in advance to fill up a depleted panel from which a jury was to be selected later, and was not bound to have such talesmen drawn from the jury box by the jury commissioners and certified to the court needing them.—Nesbit v. People, 19 Colo. 441, 36 Pac. 221.

[c] (Fla. 1895) Rev. St. §§ 1157, 2803, providing that whenever for any cause sufficient jurors have not been returned for any term, a special venire may issue to the sheriff commanding him to summon a sufficient number from the bystanders or the body of the county, were not repealed by Act June 2, 1893 (Laws 1893, c. 4122.—Jenkins v. State, 35 Fla. 737, 18 South. 182, 48 Am. St. Rep. 267; Shepherd v. State, 36 Fla. 374, 18 South. 773.

[d] (Ga. 1846) It is prejudicial error for the court to draw the names of additional jurors from the grand jury box and give the list to the sheriff to summon them, instead of leaving the selection of the names to the sheriff.—Boon v. State, 1 Ga. (1 Kelly) 631.

[e] (Idaho, 1895) Under Rev. St. § 3961, providing that where no jurors have been summoned, or a sufficient number does not appear, the court may order a sufficient number to be drawn, or cause the sheriff to summon them from the body of the county, where the court, on taking a recess because of the disturbed condition of the county from strikes, riots, and murders, discharged the regular panel, an open venire was properly issued to provide a jury when the recess was over.—Simmons v. Cunningham, 39 Pac. 1109.

[f] (Ill. 1874) The act relating to jurors, in force July 1, 1872, provides (section 8) that the circuit clerk shall go to the office of the county clerk before a term of court, and in the presence of the county clerk draw the names of not less than 24 persons to serve as jurors for each week that the approaching session will probably last. Section 13 declares that if, at any time during the term, the panel shall not be full, the clerk of the court shall draw more jurors in the same manner as at first. Section 14 provides that when, by reason of challenge in selecting a trial jury, or by reason of the sickness or the absence of a juror for any reason, except his discharge from the panel, the regular panel shall be exhausted, the court may order talesmen to be summoned from the bystanders by the sheriff to complete the jury for the pending trial. Held that, where no jury had been drawn for the fourth week of the term, it was error to cause the sheriff to select and summon a panel from the body of the county.—Lincoln v. Stowell, 73 Ill. 246.

[g] (Iowa, 1859) Code, c. 96, § 1647, authorizing the court, where a sufficient number of jurors fails to appear, to direct the sheriff to summon the number necessary to make up the deficiency, was not impliedly repealed by Act March 22, 1858, entitled "An act to amend chapter 96 of the Code," directing the court, where all the jurors fail to appear or were illegally selected or drawn, to issue a precept to the sheriff for summoning a new list from the county, since the amendatory act only provides for the failure of "all" the jurors,—a contingency not recognized by the former provisions of the Code.—State v. Pierce, 8 Iowa (8 Clarke) 231.

[h] (Ky. 1891) Where the court, on a trial for murder, ordered the sheriff to summon 70 qualified jurors from an adjoining county, the fact that the sheriff inquired of those best informed on the subject as to what residents of such county were best qualified to serve was not an irregularity.—Brafford v. Commonwealth, 16 S. W. 710.

[i, j] (Minn. 1890) Under Sp. Laws 1889, c. 34, regulating trials in the municipal court of Minneapolis, which provides in section 13 that jurors drawn at the quarterly drawings shall serve for three months and until their successors are selected and certified, and that jurors in criminal trials shall be selected from the panel so drawn, the fact that the jury for the month has been formally excused by the court, and no new drawing can be had until the next month, does not justify the court in issuing an open venire in a prosecution commenced after the regular panel was excused, since, though excused, they were still subject to recall.—State v. Maben, 45 Minn. 56, 47 N. W. 306.

[k] (Miss. 1879) A sheriff, in executing a special venire ordered under Code 1871, § 2759, may resort to the assessment roll to aid him in making the list, and give it to his deputies, with directions to summon those persons and any others whom the deputies may meet who are suitable, and he is not bound to go out into the county in person or by his deputies and summon every man he meets who is liable to jury service, taking them indiscriminately and by chance.—Cavanah v. State, 56 Miss. 299.

[l] (Mont. 1885) Where the regular panel becomes exhausted, the court may direct the sheriff to summon from the county enough qualified persons to complete the jury.—Territory v. Reed, 5 Mont. 92, 1 Pac. 717.

[m] (Mont. 1886) Laws 12th Sess. pp. 57, 58, provide that the county commissioners shall select from the assessors' books the names of 100 qualified jurors, and from them shall draw 30 names for service as trial jurors; that at the beginning of the term the judge shall examine the jurors present, and discharge by lot those in excess of 24; that, if at any time during the term the full panel of 24 is not present, the clerk shall draw from the commissioners' list, under direction of the court, sufficient additional names to fill the panel. Held, that it was error, after exhausting the regular panel, consisting of only 23 jurors, to issue an open venire, instead of drawing from the names on the commissioners' list.—Dupont v. McAdow, 6 Mont. 226, 9 Pac. 925.

[n] (Nev. 1884) The question of the necessity of summoning an open venire when the regular panel of jurors is exhausted rests in the discretion of the judge.—State v. Angelo, 18 Nev. 425, 4 Pac. 1080.

[o] (N. J. 1795) There may be a challenge to the array of a special jury, that they were not returned by a sheriff.—Lee v. Evaul, 1 N. J. Law (Coxe) 283.

[p] (N. Y. 1865) Laws 1858, c. 322, § 1, provides that all jurors summoned in Kings county shall be summoned by the commissioners of jurors; and section 41 provides that the method of summoning jurors provided in the act shall be exclusive. Held, that a challenge to the array of a special venire, because not summoned by the sheriff, was properly overruled.—Kenny v. People, 31 N. Y. 330.

[q] (Tex. 1852) It is not a valid objection to a petit juror, not summoned as a bystander, that his name is not on the list which the law requires should be made out by the county court. The proviso in the first section of the act of 1848 (Hart's Dig. art. 1667) is to be taken simply as a qualification of that section.—Sayle v. State, 8 Tex. 120.

[r] (Tex. 1877) Act Aug. 1, 1876, § 13, provides that if for any cause jury commissioners shall not be appointed, or shall fail to select jurors, or the panel selected shall be set aside, or the jury list returned shall be lost or destroyed, the court shall forthwith order proceedings to supply a sufficient number of jurors, and, if necessary, may appoint commissioners for that purpose. Held that, where no jurors had been selected for the term, it was error to issue an open venire to the sheriff, since the court should have appointed commissioners and caused them to select the jurors.—Elkins v. State, 1 Tex. App. 539.

[s] (Tex. 1889) The statutes provide that if a sufficient number of jurors are not in attendance, or the panels are reduced below the adequate number, the sheriff may, after oath, be directed to supply the deficiency, but no court is given power to order a venire for the trial of a civil cause. Held, that a special judge, on demand for a jury, and the refusal of the regular judge, who is holding court, to furnish jurors from the regular panel, has no authority to direct the sheriff to summon a venire to serve as jurors, but the cause should be adjourned until the proper jury lists can be obtained.—Daniel v. Bridges, 73 Tex. 149, 11 S. W. 121.

[t] (Tex. 1890) After the discharge of the regular jury selected by the jury commissioners the county court has no power to direct the sheriff to summon a jury to try a civil case.—Lewis v. Merchant (App.) 16 S. W. 173, following Daniel v. Bridges (1889) 73 Tex. 149, 11 S. W. 121.

[u] (Tex. 1891) Under Willson's Cr. St. § 2248, providing that when the special venire has been exhausted, and a jury not selected, "the court shall order the sheriff to summon any number of persons it may deem advisable for the formation of the jury," a defendant in a criminal case cannot object because the list of talesmen thus summoned has not been drawn by the jury commissioners.—Brotherton v. State, 30 Tex. App. 369, 17 S. W. 932.

[v] (Tex.) Under Rev. St. art. 3022, providing that if, from any cause, jury commissioners should not be appointed, the court shall supply a sufficient number of jurors under the provisions of title 57, art. 3054, providing that if the requisite number of jurors be not in attendance the court shall direct the sheriff to summon persons to make up the requisite number, the court has authority, in all cases where jurors were not summoned by commissioners, to cause them to be summoned by the sheriff.—(1894) Smith v. Bates (Civ. App.) 28 S. W. 64, reversing on rehearing 27 S. W. 1044; (1895) Western Union Tel. Co. v. Everheart, 10 Tex. Civ. App. 468, 32 S. W. 90.

[w] (Utah, 1885) Act Cong. June 23, 1874, provides that in January of each year the clerk of the district court and the judge of probate shall make a jury list, from which they shall select 200 names; that the names selected shall be deposited in a box, from which the jurors for each term shall be drawn; that the names drawn shall not be returned to the box until a new list is made; and that if, during the term, additional jurors shall be necessary, they shall be drawn from the box by the marshal. Held, that where, during a criminal trial, all the names had been drawn from the box without obtaining a jury, the district court properly issued a venire to the marshal, directing him to summon additional jurors from the body of the district, since the court, having common-law jurisdiction, had also common-law powers to obtain a jury after exhausting the manner prescribed by statute.—United States v. Clawson, 4 Utah, 34, 5 Pac. 689.

[x] (Va. 1817) If a jury cannot be formed from the original panel, nor from the bystanders, the court may award a venire facias commanding the sheriff to summon a specified number to attend the court then in session, and, upon a return of the process, the prisoner may be compelled to elect a jury, saving his right of challenge. Such process may be awarded on the report of the sheriff that there are no other bystanders; nor will the court hear proof afterwards that there were other qualified bystanders who were not called.—Gibson v. Commonwealth, 2 Va. Cas. 111.

[y] (Va. 1892) Under Code, § 4019, which provides that, in any case of felony, where a sufficient number of jurors to constitute a panel of 16, free from exception, cannot be had from those summoned, "the court may direct another venire facias, and cause to be summoned from the bystanders, or from a list to be furnished by the court," so many persons as may be necessary, bystanders may be summoned to complete the panel without a list furnished by the court.—Robinson v. Commonwealth, 88 Va. 900, 14 S. E. 627.

[z] (Va. 1893) Where, in a criminal case, a special venire facias is ordered to be directed to the sergeant of another city to summon jurors, under the authority of Code 1887, § 4024, it is not necessary that a list of names of the persons to be summoned be furnished such officer, as is required by sections 4018 and 4019 when jurors are summoned from the county or corporation in which the case is tried.—Clark v. Commonwealth, 90 Va. 360, 18 S. E. 440.

[zz] (Wyo. 1888) Where, on trial for murder, both the petit and general jury boxes are exhausted before completing the trial jury, Rev. St. § 3395, providing that where the panels are for any reason incomplete, or there are no names in the jury box, the court may order the county clerk, probate judge, and a justice to prepare another list of names to put in the box, is not applicable, and, in the absence of any other statutory provision, the district court has power to issue an open venire to complete the jury.—Carter v. Territory, 3 Wyo. 193, 18 Pac. 750, 19 Pac. 443.

See ante, §§ 259 [c], 324 [p].

Disqualification of member of panel quashed for irregularity to serve on special venire as ground of challenge to array, see post, § 362 [g].

—— to supply the deficiency, see ante, § 324 [z, j, y].

Exemption from service on special venire, see ante, § 261 [v].

Qualifications for jurors in general, see ante, §§ 243–264.

[a] (Kan. 1883) It is no ground of challenge to a juror when called from the bystanders by the sheriff, or summoned by the court on a special venire, that he was one of an array which had been successfully challenged as being irregularly drawn.—State v. Yordi, 2 Pac. 161.

[b] (Neb. 1876) On a trial for murder, the court ordered the sheriff to summon a special panel of 96 men from a particular portion of the county, which, on defendant's challenge to the array, was quashed, and a direction given to the sheriff to summon jurors from the "body of the county." In the execution of this order the sheriff summoned 47 of those who had been on the special panel so quashed, and, after all the regular panel and defendant's peremptory challenges had been exhausted, it appeared that the 12 trial jurors were of the original special panel, and each had been challenged for cause on that ground, which challenge had been overruled by the court. Held, that the jury were legally impaneled.—Smith v. State, 4 Neb. 277.

[c] (N. C. 1884) A juror summoned on a special venire is qualified, if he be a freeholder only.—State v. Carland, 90 N. C. 668.

[d] (N. C. 1885) Code, § 1733, rendering incompetent as a juror one who has served within two years, applies in terms to tales jurors, and does not, therefore, embrace the case of one summoned on a special venire.—State v. Whitfield, 92 N. C. 831.

[e] (N. C. 1885) It is not ground for challenge to a juror, summoned on a special venire in a criminal case, that he had served on a jury within two years; the only qualification required by Code, § 1738, being that he shall be a freeholder of the county where the trial is had.—State v. Kilgore, 93 N. C. 533.

[f] (N. C. 1886) Under Code, § 1738, requiring of jurors summoned on special venire only that they shall be freeholders, it is not ground of challenge to one so summoned that he has served as a juror within two years and has a suit pending and at issue in court.—State v. Starnes, 94 N. C. 973.

§ 327. Who may summon.

Effect of erroneously causing special venire to be summoned by coroner, see post, § 331 [a].

To whom special venire should be directed, see ante, § 321 [k].

[a] (Cal. 1871) Under Cr. Prac. Act, § 337, providing that a challenge may be made to "the panel" on account of any bias of the officer summoning them which would be ground of challenge to a jury, the fact that the officer who summoned a special venire had expressed an opinion that defendant was guilty was good ground of challenge to the array; the word "panel" including those summoned on special venire.—People v. Coyodo, 40 Cal. 586.

[b] (Cal. 1874) When the panel of drawn jurors is exhausted, and the court is about to issue a special venire, it should not, of its own motion and against the objections of the defendant, examine the sheriff as to his bias, and, if it finds him biased, direct the coroner to serve the venire.—People v. Welch, 49 Cal. 174.

[c] (Cal. 1895) Pen. Code, § 1064, provides for challenging a panel formed from persons drawn on a special venire on account of bias of the officer who summoned them. Held, that a deputy sheriff who admitted that he once had an opinion as to the guilt of defendant, but that his opinion had since been dispelled, is not disqualified by bias.—People v. Ryan, 108 Cal. 581, 41 Pac. 451.

[d] (Colo. 1890) In quo warranto, in which the sheriff was relator, the main issue being whether an election was fraudulently conducted, the court properly of its own motion ordered an open venire to issue to the coroner, though the regular panel summoned by the sheriff was still available.—Londoner v. People, 15 Colo. 557, 26 Pac. 135.

[e] (Ky. 1893) Under Cr. Code, § 193, providing that the court may, for sufficient cause, designate some other person than the sheriff to summon petit jurors, the court, in a criminal cause, may designate two persons other than the sheriff to summon petit jurors, needed because of the exhaustion of the original panel.—Roberts v. Commonwealth, 94 Ky. 499, 22 S. W. 845.

[f] (Tex. 1886) Under Rev. St. art. 3056, which requires that whenever it may be necessary to summon jurors who have not been selected by the jury commissioners, a certain prescribed oath must be administered to the sheriff and his deputies, a conviction under a criminal indictment by a jury, part of which had been summoned by an officer to whom the required oath had not been administered, is void.—Wyers v. State, 22 Tex. App. 258, 2 S. W. 722.

[g] (Tex. 1890) Rev. St. art. 3056, provides that, "whenever it may be necessary to summon jurors who have not been selected by jury commissioners under the provision of this title, the court shall administer to the sheriff and each of his deputies the following oath," etc. Held that, where it was shown that the oath had been administered already at the term, it was not error to refuse to again administer it, at defendant's request, upon the issuing of a special venire.—Habel v. State, 28 Tex. App. 588, 13 S. W. 1001.

[h] (Tex. 1893) Rev. St. arts. 3027, 3029, provide that the county court shall at the first term after December 31st and June 30th appoint jury commissioners to select jurors to serve at the term to be held six months after that term shall have ended. Article 3022 provides that the district court may appoint commissioners to select other jurors, where jury commissioners have not been appointed at the time prescribed, or fail to act, or the panels are set aside, or the jury lists lost. Held that, under such statutes, defendant cannot demand that jury commissioners be appointed to select talesmen to be summoned to fill vacancies in the jury by which he is to be tried, merely because he believes the sheriff is prejudiced against him.—Johnson v. State, 31 Tex. Cr. R. 456, 20 S. W. 985.

[i] (Wis. 1890) The mere fact that a sheriff knew that he was liable to be called as a witness on defendant's trial for keeping a bawdy house, and that he had knowledge of facts which would make against defendant if he should be called, does not disqualify him from serving a special venire; there being nothing to show that he was hostile toward, or felt any prejudice against, defendant.—Sullivan v. State, 75 Wis. 650, 44 N. W. 647.

§ 328. Return.

Time when special venire may be made returnable, see ante, § 321.

[a] (Fla. 1893) It is error for the court in a criminal trial, over defendant's objection, to proceed to impanel the trial jury from persons summoned on a special venire before the sheriff has made his return thereon, since such procedure deprives defendant of his right to demand a list of the jurors summoned, and of his right to an intelligent exercise of his peremptory challenges.—Collins v. State, 31 Fla. 574, 12 South. 906.

[b] (Tex. 1894) A motion to quash a writ of special venire in a criminal cause because the return did not show the diligence used in endeavoring to summon certain persons named in the writ was properly overruled where it did not appear that the jurors summoned were not sufficient to enable defendant to obtain a fair and impartial jury.—Parker v. State, 33 Tex. Cr. R. 111, 21 S. W. 604.

[c] (Tex. 1896) The return of a writ of special venire at 2:45 p. m., made returnable at 10 o'clock a. m., was without prejudice, where it appears that it was served on defendant one full day before trial.—Ryan v. State (Cr. App.) 35 S. W. 288.

[d] (Wash. 1893) It is not a ground of challenge that the officer who summoned the jurors by special venire did not make his return till after the trial had begun.—State v. Payne, 6 Wash. 563, 34 Pac. 317.

§ 329. —— Amendment.

[a] (Tex. 1886) A sheriff's return on a writ of special venire, showing seven names contained in the venire to have been stricken out, but no statement as to the reasons why they were stricken out, may be amended by the court, upon motion. Code Cr. Proc. art. 614.—Murray v. State, 21 Tex. App. 466, 1 S. W. 522, 3 S. W. 104.

[b] (Tex. 1887) Trial courts have the right to permit sheriffs to amend their returns to show the diligence used by them in the service of special venires, as required by Code Cr. Proc. art. 614.—Powers v. State, 23 Tex. App. 42, 5 S. W. 153; Rodriguez v. Same, 23 Tex. App. 503, 5 S. W. 255.

[c] (Tex. 1890) It was not material error that the sheriff, under the direction of the court, amended the return of the special venire, where all the jurors had been summoned by officers of the court, except three, who were excused on peremptory challenge.—Williams v. State, 29 Tex. App. 89, 14 S. W. 388.

[d] (Tex. 1891) A special venire facias ordered to be returned "May 22, 189—," should not be quashed because of the omission after the figure 9, but it should be amended by inserting the proper figure.—Suit v. State, 30 Tex. App. 319, 17 S. W. 458.

§ 330. Presumption of regularity.

[a] (Miss. 1891) After the special venire of 30 drawn from the jury box had, on the motion of defendant, been quashed, it was announced to the court that the names in the box were exhausted, and the court ordered the sheriff to summon a special venire of 30 in defendant's case, and overruled defendant's motion that the court direct the clerk to make up a jury box by depositing therein the names appearing on the jury list for the year. Held, that there was no error, as, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, it must be assumed that the officers had discharged the duties imposed on them by law, and that the jury box had been legally exhausted.—Story v. State, 68 Miss. 609, 10 South. 47.

[b] (Mont. 1886) The issue of an open venire in a particular case raises no presumption that the list of 100 names drawn by the county commissioners has been exhausted.—Dupont v. McAdow, 6 Mont. 226, 9 Pac. 925.

[c] (Tex. 1886) Code Cr. Proc. art. 610, provides that when a special venire is ordered the names of all the persons selected by the jury commissioners shall be placed upon tickets, and the tickets placed in a box, from which the clerk, in open court, shall draw the number of names required, and shall attach a list of the names to the writ. Held that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, it will be presumed that the names which appear on the list attached to the writ were properly drawn.—Smith v. State, 21 Tex. App. 277, 17 S. W. 471.

[d] (Tex. 1890) Where no objection was taken in the trial court that the record did not show an order for a special venire, it will be presumed on appeal that such order as the law prescribes was made and entered, or that it was waived.—Williams v. State, 29 Tex. App. 89, 14 S. W. 388. CONTRA, see (1886) Steagald v. Same, 22 Tex. App. 464, 3 S. W. 771.

[a] (Cal. 1874) Under Pen. Code, § 1064, providing a challenge may be taken to the panel summoned by special venire for any bias of the officer who summoned them which would be good ground of challenge to a juror, held that, where the court, being about to order a special venire, examined the sheriff, and, erroneously holding him biased, ordered the special venire to be summoned by the coroner, the defendant could not challenge the array, since the section only permits such challenge for the bias of the officer who does the summoning. — People v. Welch, 49 Cal. 174.

[b] (Minn. 1871) Under Gen. St. c. 116, § 4, providing that a challenge to the panel can be made only for a material departure from the forms prescribed for the drawing and return of the jury, and chapter 64, § 17, prescribing only that a special venire shall issue to the sheriff, commanding him to summon from the county at large a specified number of persons to serve as jurors during the term, inquiries by a sheriff into the bias and opinions of persons, in selecting and summoning a special venire for the trial of a particular case, while reprehensible, is no ground for a challenge to the panel.—State v. McCartey, 17 Minn. 76 (Gil. 54).

[c] (N. Y. 1852) That 1 of 24 additional jurors ordered to be summoned by the court was by mistake 1 of the 36 originally drawn, so that but 23 new ones were drawn, is no ground for challenging the array in a capital case; the panel not having been exhausted.—People v. Thurston, 2 Parker, Cr. R. 49.

[d] (S. C. 1883) There is no authority for the issue of a venire to summon additional jurors drawn from the tales box, and hence defects in such a writ are immaterial.—State v. Hill, 19 S. C. 435.

[e] (Tex. 1882) Where it became necessary during a term of court to summon more jurors, and the judge, instead of calling on the jury commissioners formerly appointed, appointed new ones, it was not reversible error.—Roundtree v. Gilroy, 57 Tex. 176.

[f] (Wash. 1890) A venire for additional jurors, ordered before the regular panel was exhausted, is a harmless irregularity where the regular panel was exhausted before any of the special veniremen were drawn. — Blanton v. State, 1 Wash. St. 265, 24 Pac. 439; State v. So Ho Ge, 1 Wash. St. 275, 24 Pac. 442; Same v. So Ho Me, 1 Wash. St. 276, 24 Pac. 443.

§ 332. —— Amendment of record.

[a] (Tex.) Where the order for a special venire in a murder case was not entered in the minutes by the clerk, it was proper, after the return of the venire, to make the minutes conform to the order.—(1893) Rodriquez v. State, 32 Tex. Cr. R. 259, 22 S. W. 978; (1895) English v. Same, 34 Tex. Cr. R. 190, 30 S. W. 233.

[b] (Tex. 1893) The action of the court in directing the clerk to amend an entry that certain deputy sheriffs were sworn to summon jurors as required by Rev. St. art. 3056, by showing, in addition, that they were instructed in regard to their duties, was proper.—Roderiquez v. State, 32 Tex. Cr. R. 259, 22 S. W. 978.

Presumption of exhaustion of regular panel to support call of talesmen, see post, § 347 [b].
Right to exhaustion of regular panel before summoning talesmen, see post, § 350.

[a] (U. S. 1894) Rev. St. § 804, provides that when, from challenges or otherwise, there is no petit jury to determine any civil or criminal case, the court may order the marshal to summon sufficient bystanders to complete the panel. Held, that where the court had summoned a special venire to try an indictment found after the regular panel had been discharged for lack of business, and had exhausted such special venire without obtaining a jury, the court properly ordered talesmen to be called from the bystanders.—St. Clair v. United States, 154 U. S. 134, 14 Sup. Ct. 1002, 38 L. Ed. 936.

[b] (Ala. 1887) Code 1886, § 4324, provides that on a trial for a capital offense, the names of the special jurors for the case and the regular jurors in attendance must be written on slips of paper, and all placed in the same box, and an officer designated by the court must draw them out, one by one, and if from these names a jury be not obtained, the court must direct the sheriff to summon other jurors. The officers who had charge of the drawing of a jury failed to put all the names of those summoned in the box. All the names put in were drawn out, and a jury not obtained. The court ordered the other names to be put in the box, and the drawing to be continued. Defendant insisted that talesmen should be summoned, which the court refused, until all the jurors summoned had been drawn, when talesmen were summoned to complete the jury. Held, that the refusal to grant defendant's request was proper.—Morrison v. State, 84 Ala. 405, 4 South. 402.

[c] (Conn. 1879) Where, in a capital case, the number of regular jurors had been exhausted without making up the panel, and the prisoner's counsel moved that the court order additional regularly appointed jurors to be summoned, instead of appointing talesmen, the court committed no error in denying the motion.—State v. Allen, 47 Conn. 121.

[d] (Ind. 1873) Under Civ. Code, § 314 (2 Gav. & H. St. p. 194), providing that when the regular jury is exhausted, or is insufficient for any cause, the sheriff shall call the bystanders, or fill the jury in such manner as the court shall direct, where nine of the regular panel were engaged in the trial of another cause, the court properly summoned bystanders to fill the jury after exhausting what remained of the regular panel.—Bradley v. Bradley, 45 Ind. 67.

[e] (Iowa, 1884) The district court in a criminal prosecution has power to restrict the number of the panel of jurors to 20, and when a portion only of the number so designated appear, and those present are exhausted without obtaining a jury, it is not compelled to delay a trial until the panel can be filled from the jury lists, and summoned from the body of the county, but may order jurors to be summoned from persons present in the court.—State v. Harris, 64 Iowa, 287, 20 N. W. 439.

[f] (Iowa, 1886) Miller's Code, § 2775, provides that, when the requisite number of jurors cannot be otherwise obtained, the sheriff shall select talesmen from the body of the county to supply the deficiency. Held, that the court, on exhaustion of the regular panel, having filled four vacancies from the bystanders, properly denied a motion to set aside such talesmen and fill the vacancies with jurors drawn from the jury list.—Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 68 Iowa, 530, 23 N. W. 245, 27 N. W. 605.

[g] (Iowa, 1886) Miller's Code, § 4396, provides that, when needed, the court may order the sheriff to summon jurors from the bystanders or other persons for the trial of an indictment. Held that, where the court in advance ordered a special venire to be summoned for service in case they were needed, it was proper, after exhausting the regular panel without getting a jury, to refuse to summon talesmen from the body of the county, and instead to call jurors from the members of the special venire.—State v. Ryan, 70 Iowa, 154, 30 N. W. 397.

[h] (Ky. 1889) Gen. St. c. 62, art. 5, § 4, provides that in criminal cases, where the accused is entitled to more than 3 peremptory challenges, the clerk shall draw from his box 12 names, who shall compose the jury, unless some of them are challenged, in which event he shall draw as many more names as may be required, until a jury be obtained, or the panel exhausted, when the deficiency shall be made up from bystanders. Held, that when the court has furnished all the unoccupied jurors of the regular panel, it should be regarded as exhausted, and bystanders may then be summoned.—McClernand v. Commonwealth, 12 S. W. 148.

[i] (La. 1840) Whether the jurors be absent or sworn in another case, the jury may be completed from the bystanders.—Rondeau v. New Orleans Improvement & Banking Co., 15 La. 160.

[j] (La. 1850) Under Code Prac. § 513, providing that if, on account of absence, the jury should not be complete, the court might order the sheriff to summon a certain number of persons present having the legal qualifications to complete it, the court was not bound to await the return of attachments issued for absent jurors before summoning talesmen.—Barthet v. Estebene, 5 La. Ann. 315.

[k] (Me. 1860) Under Rev. St. c. 82, § 67, permitting a talesman to be taken to fill a vacancy on the regular jury, a juror may be returned from the bystanders for the particular case then to be tried; but, if he is wanted for another case, he must be returned and sworn again as before, since, if jurors are needed for the term, a new venire must be issued.—Wallace v. Inhabitants of Columbia, 48 Me. 436.

[l] (Minn. 1867) Where a general and special venire are exhausted without a jury being secured, the court may summon talesmen to complete the panel.—State v. Brown, 12 Minn. 538 (Gil. 448).

[m] (N. J. 1886) The court is bound to wait until all the veniremen have appeared before calling talesmen.—Patterson v. State, 48 N. J. Law (19 Vroom) 381, 4 Atl. 449.

[n] (N. Y. 1861) In impaneling a jury for the trial of a felony at the oyer and terminer in the county of Kings, it is not erroneous for the court, after failing to get a jury from the 36 jurors summoned for the first six days of the court, under the act of April 17, 1858, applicable to that county, to refuse to summon talesmen, and to proceed to complete the jury from the 36 jurors summoned for the next six days of the court.—Lamberton v. People, 5 Parker, Cr. R. 200.

[o] (N. C. 1896) Under Code, § 1739, providing that, where the regular venire proves insufficient, the judge in his discretion may order a further venire drawn from the box or summoned by the sheriff, where the first special venire drawn from the box has been exhausted without completing the jury, the court may order other jurors to be taken from the bystanders.—State v. Stanton, 118 N. C. 1182, 24 S. E. 536.

[p] (S. C. 1834) On exhaustion of the regular panel, talesmen may be called in a criminal case, as well as in civil cases.—State v. Williams, 2 Hill, Law, 381.

[q] (Tex. 1890) Under Code Cr. Proc. § 640, providing that in selecting a jury no cause shall be unreasonably delayed on account of the absence of a juror who has been summoned, where attachments have been issued for absent veniremen the court properly refused to postpone the summoning of talesmen until return was made on such attachments.—Habel v. State, 28 Tex. App. 538, 13 S. W. 1001.

§ 334. —— Necessity of exhausting regular panel for the week after exhausting venire specially drawn for murder case.

See post, § 351 [n].

Exhaustion of special venire as well as regular panel before resort to talesmen, see ante, § 333 [g].

[a] (Tex.) Less than a full jury having been accepted in a murder case from the 33 special veniremen in attendance, it was error to overrule defendant's motion to place the regular panel drawn for the week in the box for examination, and to order talesmen summoned instead.—(1885) Weaver v. State, 19 Tex. App. 547, 53 Am. Rep. 389; (1889) Cahn v. State, 27 Tex. App. 709, 11 S. W. 723.

[b] (Tex.) Under Code Cr. Proc. art. 612, providing that "when from any cause there is a failure to select a jury from those who have been summoned upon a special venire, the court shall order the sheriff to summon any number of persons that it may deem advisable for the formation of the jury," the court is not bound, in a murder case, to call and exhaust the jury for the week, as selected by the jury commissioners, before directing the sheriff to summon talesmen from the body of the county.—(1890) Weathersby v. State, 29 Tex. App. 278, 15 S. W. 823, overruling Weaver v. State (1885) 19 Tex. App. 547, 53 Am. Rep. 389; Cahn v. Same (1889) 27 Tex. App. 709, 11 S. W. 723; (1894) Thompson v. Same, 33 Tex. Cr. R. 217, 26 S. W. 198.

§ 335. —— Entire jury from talesmen.

[a] (Ind. 1820) Where the entire panel is exhausted by challenges without obtaining a single juror to try the case, talesmen may be summoned to fill the jury.—Fuller v. State, 1 Blackf. 63.

[b] (La. 1880) When the regular venire is exhausted, the entire jury may be formed of talesmen.—State v. Desmouchet, 32 La. Ann. 1241.

[c] (N. C. 1890) Under Code, § 1733, providing that, in order "that there may not be a defect of jurors, the sheriff shall, by order of court, summon, from day to day, of the bystanders, other jurors," and Laws 1889, c. 441, authorizing the appointment by the judge of some suitable person to summon jurors from the bystanders, when the sheriff is a party to or interested in the action, the court may appoint such person to summon a new panel from the bystanders, when a challenge to the array has been sustained because of the irregularity of the sheriff, who was a party to the action to be tried, in drawing it.—People v. Teague, 106 N. C. 576, 11 S. E. 665.

§ 336. Courts that may call talesmen.

[a] (N. J. 1806) A justice of the peace cannot swear any person as a juror who is not on the panel returned by the officer.—Robson v. Archer, 2 N. J. Law (1 Penning.) 107.

[b] (N. J. 1810) Where two jurors were rejected on objection, and two other persons were added by the constable, in a justice's court, this was held error.—Russell v. McClain, 3 N. J. Law (2 Penning.) 649.

[c] (N. J. 1881) A tales may always be awarded by the court of oyer and terminer.—State v. Aaron, 4 N. J. Law (1 Southard) 231, 7 Am. Dec. 592.

[d] (N. Y. 1807) A justice of the peace may award a tales de circumstantibus in case of a default of jurors summoned on the venire.—Zeely v. Yansen, 2 Johns. 386.

[e] (N. Y. 1860) A justice of the peace has no power to summon talesmen for the jury to try a summary proceeding by a landlord to recover possession, because the statute gives him none.—Miner v. Burling, 32 Barb. 540.

§ 337. Order.

[a] It makes no difference that the order to the sheriff to procure the attendance of persons from whom talesmen could be taken was made in anticipation of a demand for talesmen, in the absence and without the knowledge of defendant and his counsel.
—(Ark. 1888) Mabry v. State, 50 Ark. 492, 8 S. W. 823;
(Conn. 1879) State v. Allen, 47 Conn. 121.

[b] (Ala. 1887) An order to the sheriff to summon talesmen to complete the jury in a capital case may be made orally, and need not be entered of record.—Morrison v. State, 84 Ala. 405, 4 South. 402.

[c] (Conn. 1879) Where the court orders talesmen to be summoned in anticipation of the need of them, the order may be either oral or written.—State v. Allen, 47 Conn. 121.

[d] (Conn. 1879) It makes no difference that when an order was made to the sheriff to procure the attendance of persons from whom talesmen might be selected, if required, the order being issued in anticipation of that emergency, the court was holden by only one judge, and the case about to be tried was a capital case, requiring two judges.—State v. Allen, 47 Conn. 121.

[e] (N. C. 1824) An order to a sheriff to summon talesmen need not be returnable on the same day on which it was issued.—State v. Lamon, 10 N. C. 175.

§ 338. Necessity of first calling regular panel at front door.

[a] (Ala. 1867) The court is not bound to have absent jurors called at the court house door before summoning talesmen.—Waller v. State, 40 Ala. 325.

[b] (Ga. 1859) Where a judge ordered a sheriff to summon a special venire and to notify them to attend forthwith, and caused those summoned to be called at the court house door, it was proper to summon talesmen in the place of two in the special venire, who failed to attend, without calling the absent jurors the second time at the court house door.—Lingo v. State, 29 Ga. 470.

[c] (La. 1878) A verdict convicting of murder set aside; the absent members of the regular panel not being called at the court house door before the summoning of talesmen to complete the jury.—State v. Ross, 30 La. Ann. 1154.

§ 339. Summoning in advance.

Necessity of presence of defendant at making of order to summon talesmen in advance, see ante, § 337 [a].

Power of single judge in capital case to order talesmen to be summoned in advance, see ante, § 337 [d].

[a] It was not error for the court to order the sheriff to summon persons qualified to serve as jurors in anticipation of a demand for talesmen after the regular panel should be exhausted.
—(Ark. 1888) Mabry v. State, 50 Ark. 492, 8 S. W. 823;
(Ga. 1859) Cobb v. State, 27 Ga. 648;
(Neb. 1895) Pflueger v. State, 46 Neb. 493, 64 N. W. 1094;
(N. J. 1886) Patterson v. State, 48 N. J. Law (19 Vroom) 381, 4 Atl. 449.

[b] (Conn. 1879) The sheriff may, of his own motion or on order of the court, cause suitable persons to attend in anticipation of the need of talesmen.—State v. Allen, 47 Conn. 121.

[c] (Ga. 1853) The court, knowing several capital cases to be on the docket, is authorized on the first day of the term to direct the sheriff to summon a large number of citizens to be in attendance, ready to serve as talesmen when needed.—Bird v. State, 14 Ga. 43.

[d] (La. 1887) An order made by the judge in course of a trial, in anticipation of the exhaustion of the regular jury panel, directing the sheriff to summon tales jurors, and hold them to serve, if necessary, for the purpose of saving time and avoiding delay, is not illegal, and will not invalidate a jury formed, such talesmen having been tendered only after the exhaustion of the regular panel.—State v. Moncla, 39 La. Ann. 868, 2 South. 814.

[e] (La. 1891) It is a matter within the discretion of the trial judge to order the summoning of tales jurors in advance of the trial.—State v. Green, 43 La. Ann. 402, 9 South. 42.

§ 340. Selection of names or persons.

[a] (Ga. 1879) It is not ground for challenge to the array that the sheriff selected talesmen by taking names alphabetically from the jury list, instead of from the body of the county, since he is not restricted in his method of choice.—Cox v. State, 64 Ga. 374, 37 Am. Rep. 76.

[b] (Ill. 1873) Act April 10, 1872, concerning juries, provides in part that, when talesmen are needed, they shall be drawn from the jury box, and expressly repeals three prior acts relating to the selection and impaneling of jurors, but fails to include Cr. Code, § 178, authorizing talesmen to be returned by the sheriff, and does not contain any general repeal of inconsistent acts. Held, that Cr. Code, § 178, was not repealed by implication.—Gropp v. People, 67 Ill. 154.

[c] (Ind. 1857) The statute of 1853, relating to the impaneling of petit jurors, does not repeal or alter Act 1852, authorizing the court to direct the sheriff to summon a jury from the bystanders when the regular panel has been discharged.—Shaw v. Wood, 8 Ind. 518.

[d] (Kan. 1878) In naming persons to be summoned as talesmen to complete a trial jury, under Laws 1876, c. 104, § 6, the court is not bound to examine the assessment roll to see if the persons to be called are named therein, since, if those summoned are disqualified, it can be discovered on examination.—Trembly v. State, 20 Kan. 116.

[e] (La. 1874) In summoning talesmen, it is not necessary that the formalities prescribed for drawing and summoning the regular panel should be observed, and they need not be drawn by the sheriff from list of registered voters, like the regular panel.—State v. Smith, 26 La. Ann. 62.

[f] (N. Y. 1875) Under 2 Rev. St. 437, § 54, authorizing the court to summon sufficient jurors from the bystanders or the body of the county when a sufficient number do not appear, and Laws 1861, c. 210, restricting the power of the court to summon jurors from the bystanders or the county at large to cases where the parties consent thereto, the court has no power to direct the sheriff to summon additional jurors from the bystanders or the body of the county to fill vacancies in the panel, but must cause them to be drawn from the jury box.—Shields v. Niagara Sav. Bank, 3 Hun, 477, 5 Thomp. & C. 585.

[g] (Ohio, 1880) Under Rev. St. § 6705, directing that the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure which are applicable to the courts of common pleas shall, as far as possible, be applicable to proceedings before justices of the peace, and section 5173, conferring on parties to suits in the court of common pleas the right to have the list of names of the special venire selected by the court, where the jury impaneled in a justice's court is reduced, by challenge or otherwise, it is error for the constable to fill up the panel by summoning talesmen from the bystanders.—Rogan v. Maley, 8 Ohio Dec. 16, 5 Wkly. Law Bul. 51.

[h] (S. C. 1834) Act 1731 (P. L. 127) § 27 (1 Brev. Dig. tit. 106, § 26), provides that, if a sufficient number of the regular panel do not appear, the court may draw the lacking number from the box, and so in case of challenges or nonappearance, until the jury be filled. Act 1769 (P. L. 272) § 17 (1 Brev. Dig. tit. 106, § 37), provides that there shall be "a box containing the names of special jurors, to consist * * * of persons living within five miles of the court house for each district," out of which all tales jurors shall be drawn. Held that, in case of deficiency of jurors, the court could not issue a special venire, but was bound to draw jurors singly from the box, cause each one to be called, and, if he appeared, present him to the defendant for acceptance, and, if he did not appear or was rejected, draw another, and so on till the jury was full.—State v. Williams, 2 Hill, Law, 381.

§ 341. —— Who is eligible.

See ante, § 259 [c]; post, § 342.

Abrogation of sheriff's power to summon jurors, see ante, § 298 [i].

Exemption from service as talesmen, see ante, §§ 261–264.

Liability of juror discharged or excused to be summoned as talesman, see post, § 389 [b].

Necessity of taking names of talesmen from list of registered voters, see ante, § 340 [e].

Qualifications of jurors in general, see ante, §§ 243–264.

[a] The question whether or not a talesman is a qualified juror must be determined as of the time when he is called into the jury box.—(Ga. 1855) McGuffie v. State, 17 Ga. 497; (S. C. 1834) State v. Williams, 2 Hill, Law, 381.

[b] (Conn. 1840) By Act 1837, regarding the qualifications of jurors, a freehold qualification is dispensed with in talesmen.—Ladd v. Prentice, 14 Conn. 109.

[c] (Fla. 1880) Under Laws 1868, c. 1628, § 21, the sheriff may, after the regular panel has been exhausted, call persons one at a time from the bystanders to complete the jury, and need not furnish a full list of the bystanders.—Green v. State, 17 Fla. 669.

[d] (Ga. 1883) Under the express provisions of the constitution and Code, § 5175, one who is on the grand jury list is not incompetent to act as a traverse juror or talesman on the trial of a felony.—McLain v. State, 71 Ga. 279.

[e] (Ind. 1889) Under Rev. St. 1881, § 1395, making it unlawful for an officer charged with the selection of a panel of petit jurors to select any person who has served during the year immediately preceding, and providing that such fact shall be cause for challenge, it is a cause for challenge that one called as a talesman has served in the same court as a talesman some days before, and at the same term.—City of Goshen v. England, 119 Ind. 368, 21 N. E. 977.

[f] (Ind. 1890) It is proper for the court to refuse to direct the sheriff to fill vacancies in the jury by summoning persons outside of the court room.—Boyer v. Berryman, 123 Ind. 451, 24 N. E. 249.

[g] (Iowa, 1880) Under Code 1873, § 239, which provides that it shall be a cause of challenge that a proposed juror "has served on a jury in a court of record within one year, unless he be a member of the regular panel," an objection to a talesman, on the ground that he served as a juror at the "last term" of the court, is not available unless it appears that the last term was within one year.—State v. Miller, 53 Iowa, 84, 4 N. W. 838.

[h] (La.) Where the jury cannot be completed by talesmen from among the bystanders, recourse may be had to other persons not within the presence of the court.—(1859) State v. Bunger, 14 La. Ann. 461; (1874) Same v. Gallagher, 26 La. Ann. 46.

[i] (La. 1876) It is not necessary to be a registered voter in order to be a qualified talesman.—State v. Courtney, 28 La. Ann. 789.

[j] (Mass. 1830) In a capital case, one called as a talesman cannot be sworn, if his name is not in the jury box.—Commonwealth v. Knapp, 27 Mass. (10 Pick.) 477, 20 Am. Dec. 534.

[k] (Mo. 1896) Where an elisor has been appointed by the court for the special purpose of summoning a jury, because the sheriff was disqualified, it is error for the court to call as talesmen members of the regular panel, which had theretofore been summoned by the sheriff, but not by the elisor.—State v. Weeden, 133 Mo. 70, 34 S. W. 473.

[l] (Neb. 1893) Code Civ. Proc. § 665, provides "that no person shall be summoned as a juror in any district court of this state more than once in two years, and it shall be sufficient cause of challenge to any juror called to be sworn in any cause that he has been summoned and attended said court as a juror at any term of said court held within two years prior to the time of such challenge." Held, that the section applied to talesmen who had served as jurors within the prescribed period.—Wiseman v. Bruns, 36 Neb. 467, 54 N. W. 858.

[m] (N. J. 1886) It is not necessary to select talesmen from those actually present in or about the court room. The officer may go out into the county and summon them.—Patterson v. State, 48 N. J. Law (19 Vroom) 381, 4 Atl. 449.

[n] (N. C. 1869) The qualifications required for talesmen are the same as those necessary for the original panel.—State v. Bullock, 63 N. C. 570.

[o] (N. C. 1874) It is no objection to a tales juror, otherwise qualified, that his name does not appear on the jury list made by the county commissioners.—Lee v. Lee, 71 N. C. 139.

[p] (N. C. 1876) Under Rev. Code, c. 31, § 29, requiring tales jurors to be freeholders, it is not essential that such a juror shall have a legal freehold, and therefore the equitable freehold of a mortgagor in possession is sufficient to make him competent as a juror.—State v. Ragland, 75 N. C. 12.

[q] (N. C. 1879) A juror, who was summoned on a special venire within the two years next preceding the term at which he was summoned to serve as a talesman, is not disqualified under Act March 12, 1879, providing it shall be ground of challenge that the juror has acted in the same court as grand or petit juror within two years, though he had attended the term for which he was then summoned; his name not having been drawn, and he having been discharged.—State v. Thorne, 81 N. C. 555.

[r] (N. C. 1880) Tales jurors must own real estate of freehold situate in the county where the court in which they are to serve is held.—State v. Cooper, 83 N. C. 671.

[s] (N. C. 1883) A tales juror is required to possess the same qualifications as one of the regular panel, with the additional one of being a freeholder.—State v. Whitley, 88 N. C. 691.

[t] (N. C. 1884) Talesmen must not only be freeholders, but must have paid their taxes for the preceding year; that is, for the year preceding that in which the tax returns are laid before the county commissioners, but not necessarily for the year preceding the trial.—State v. Carland, 90 N. C. 668.

[tt] (N. C. 1888) A tales juror must have paid taxes, as required of a regular juror by Code, § 1722, to render him eligible; but he need not have paid taxes for the current fiscal year in which he is called.—State v. Hargrave, 110 N. C. 484, 6 S. E. 185.

[u] (Pa. 1873) Act 1805 limited the selection of talesmen to "bystanders." Act 1834 allowed talesmen to be taken from the body of the county as well. Cr. Proc. Act 1860, § 41, authorizes the court to issue a tales de circumstantibus when occasion shall render the same necessary. Held, that Act 1860 did not repeal Act 1834, so as to limit the selection of talesmen to bystanders, but that the phrase "tales de circumstantibus" is used in Act 1860 merely to designate the writ to be issued.—Brown v. Commonwealth, 30 Leg. Int. 382, 1 Leg. Chron. 347.

[v] (S. C. 1834) It is not a good cause of challenge to a tales juror that, since his name was put into the tales box, he has removed, and was then living more than five miles from the court house.—State v. Williams, 2 Hill, 881.

[w] (Tex. 1895) The sheriff may summon as talesmen, on the exhaustion of the special venire, the original venire.—Adams v. State, 35 Tex. Cr. R. 285, 33 S. W. 354.

[x] (Vt. 1894) St. 1884, No. 111, § 1, providing that every person drawn to serve as a grand or petit juror, from any town containing more than 200 inhabitants, shall be disqualified from again serving as a juror for two years from such drawing, applies only to persons drawn on the regular panel, and not to a talesman.—First Nat. Bank v. Post, 66 Vt. 237, 28 Atl. 989.

§ 342. —— Who is a bystander.

Effect of summoning talesmen within court house yard, see post, § 348 [a].

[a] (U. S. 1876) Under Rev. St. § 804, providing that, when the panel is exhausted, the marshal by order of the court shall return jurymen from the bystanders sufficient to complete the panel, persons may be accepted as "bystanders," though not in the court room or about the court house when summoned by the marshal, where they appear in court at the time they are returned as present.—United States v. Loughery, Fed. Cas. No. 15,631 [13 Blatchf. 267].

[b] (La. 1850) Under Code Prac. § 513, providing that if, on account of absence, the jury should not be complete, the court might order the sheriff to summon a certain number of persons present having the legal qualifications to complete it, where the sheriff under such an order has summoned persons not actually in the court house, and such persons have presented themselves in obedience to such summons, there was no irregularity.—Barthet v. Estebene, 5 La. Ann. 315.

[c] (La. 1883) Under Acts 1877, No. 44, § 7, providing that the judge, when he thinks proper, may require the jury commission to draw additional jurors, but that nothing therein shall be considered as limiting the right of the judge to summon talesmen from among the bystanders or persons in the proximity of the court house, where the court has directed the sheriff to summon talesmen from the bystanders in the court house and vicinity, if the sheriff find no available persons at the court house, he may proceed into the town, summoning suitable persons as he meets them.—State v. Revells, 35 La. Ann. 302.

[d] (N. C. 1824) A sheriff summoned as talesmen persons who were not bystanders in the court house. Held, that the calling of them into court was a sufficient summoning, and that, when they came in, they were bystanders and bound to serve.—State v. Lamon, 10 N. C. 175.

[e] (Or. 1879) A juror living several miles from the court house was present at the morning session of the court, in a criminal case, as a bystander. Immediately after adjournment he was summoned on a venire to the county. Held, that after adjournment he was not a bystander and was of the body of the county.—State v. Brown, 7 Or. 186.

[f] (Pa. 1831) A tales de circumstantibus can be taken from those only who are actually present in court.—Simon v. Gratz, 2 Pen. & W. 412, 23 Am. Dec. 33.

[g] (Tex. 1878) A person found in a house fronting on the court house square is not found "in the court house or yard," within the prohibition of Act 1876, § 23, forbidding the sheriff to summon as a juror any person found within the court house or yard, if they can be found elsewhere.—Baker v. State, 4 Tex. App. 223.

[h] (Tex. 1878) Jury Law 1878, prohibiting the summons of tales jurors from persons found in the court house, does not preclude the summoning of such a juror in the street during recess, though he was in the court room when the talesmen were ordered to be summoned.—Johnson v. State, 4 Tex. App. 268.

[i] (Tex. 1879) Under Jury Law 1876, § 23, directing how a special venire could be obtained, it was declared unlawful for the sheriff to summon as a juror any person found within the court house or yard, if they could be had elsewhere. Held, that an uninclosed public square, used as an open market and public resort, about the court house, was not the court house "yard," within the law or spirit of the act.—Matthews v. State, 6 Tex. App. 23.

§ 343. Number to be summoned.

[a] (Ill. 1891) When a case is called for trial, and the regular panel of 24 men is for any cause not full, the court may order it filled from the bystanders; but after the selection of the jury has begun, and this number becomes reduced, so there are not 12 jurors to place in the box, the court should order only enough to be selected from the bystanders to keep 12 men in the box, and need not keep the original panel of 24 full.—Nealon v. People, 39 Ill. App. 481.

[b] (Md. 1809) Where 9 jurors are sworn in a criminal case, and the rest of the original panel is exhausted by peremptory challenges, the court can legally award an order for the summoning of only 3 talesmen, and where 11 are sworn, to summon only 1.—Burk v. State, 2 Har. & J. 426.

[c] (Mo. 1857) When the regular panel of jurors is exhausted, it is not required that any particular number of talesmen be summoned.—State v. Buckner, 25 Mo. 167.

[d] (N. C. 1824) The court may determine what number of talesmen shall be summoned; and, in case the court does not determine, it is left to the discretion of the sheriff.—State v. Lamon, 10 N. C. 175.

§ 344. Who may summon.

[a] (Ala. 1842) Under Act 1826 (Aik. Dig. 298) § 24, providing that, where talesmen were needed, the court might "direct the sheriff, or other attending officer, in case of his absence or inability to serve," to summon a jury, the court cannot appoint the coroner to summon a jury, where the sheriff is incapacitated by illness; the "attending officers" being the deputy sheriffs or bailiffs, who must be appointed by the sheriff to attend on the court.—State v. Monk, 3 Ala. 415.

[b] (Me. 1824) If the sheriff return a talesman, in a cause in which his deputy is a party, it is good ground of challenge to the juror.—Walker v. Green, 3 Me. (3 Greenl.) 215.

[c] (N. C. 1890) Laws 1889, c. 441, authorizing the appointment of some suitable person to summon talesmen, when the sheriff is interested in the action or is a party thereto, is applicable to actions pending at the time of its passage.—People v. Teague, 106 N. C. 576, 11 S. E. 665.

[d] (Pa. 1858) Act April 14, 1834, § 61, provides that, if sufficient competent jurors do not appear, the sheriff or coroner, "or, if the case requires it, two citizens," to be appointed by the court, shall summon a sufficient number of talesmen. Held, that the right of the court to appoint two citizens was not limited to cases where the sheriff and coroner were disqualified by bias, but that the court properly made such appointment where the sheriff was in court as a witness for defendant and the coroner was absent.—Commonwealth v. Carson, 3 Phila. 219.

§ 345. —— Oath of officer.

[a] (Tex. 1889) Under Rev. St. art. 3056, providing that a sheriff, when necessary to summon talesmen as jurors, shall be sworn to summon impartial and sensible men, etc., an oath once taken during the term is sufficient.—Blanton v. Mayes, 72 Tex. 417, 10 S. W. 452.

[b] (Tex. 1893) Where the sheriff is sworn and instructed as to his duties in selecting and summoning talesmen, it is not necessary to have the oath repeated every time new and additional talesmen are to be summoned.—Shaw v. State, 32 Tex. Cr. R. 155, 22 S. W. 588.

§ 346. Summoning during recess of court.

[a] (La. 1883) Under Acts 1877, No. 44, § 7, providing that the district judge may, when he thinks proper, require the jury commission to draw additional jurors, but that nothing therein shall be considered as limiting the right of the judge to summon talesmen from among the bystanders, where the court directed the sheriff to summon talesmen from bystanders in the court house and vicinity, and then adjourned for the day, the sheriff was authorized to summon such talesmen the next morning, before the court resumed its sitting.—State v. Revells, 35 La. Ann. 302.

§ 347. Presumption of regularity.

[a] (Iowa, 1887) After the impaneling of a jury, and the statement of counsel, a juror was excused for cause. Thereupon the parties refused to call another juror to take his place, and the court discharged the jury, giving the parties full power to challenge the jury to be called, and thereupon the 11 remaining jurors were recalled, and one bystander. As nothing appeared from the record to disprove that the court first exhausted the regular panel, and then had a talesman summoned, it will be presumed the proceeding was regular and no error was committed.—State v. Laughlin, 73 Iowa, 351, 35 N. W. 448.

[b] (Mo. 1875) Where the record shows that a jury was summoned from the bystanders, it will be presumed, in the absence of any showing to the contrary, that the regular panel was exhausted or was engaged in trial of other causes.—State v. Jones, 61 Mo. 232.

[c] (Tex. 1868) Where jurors not on the list are permitted to serve, it will be presumed that the facts justifying it existed.—Pauska v. Daus, 31 Tex. 67.

[d] (Wash. 1895) Code Proc. § 339, provides that, where jurors are excused, the court may summon the necessary number of bystanders to complete the jury. Held that, where jurors summoned failed to appear when drawn, it would be presumed that they were properly excused, so that bystanders were properly summoned to complete the jury.—State v. Holmes, 12 Wash. 169, 40 Pac. 735, 41 Pac. 887.

§ 348. Effect of errors and irregularities.

[a] (Tex. 1879) The proviso of section 23 of the jury law of 1876, forbidding the summoning of talesmen within the court house yard, being merely directory, the failure to observe it will not be fatal, unless defendant is shown to be prejudiced thereby.—Matthews v. State, 6 Tex. App. 23.

[b] (Wash. 1890) Although it was error to order the United States marshal to summon a talesman when the sheriff was present, such error was harmless, where the talesman summoned was not challenged or shown to be in any way unfit to sit in the case.—Meeker v. Gardella, 1 Wash. St. 139, 23 Pac. 837.

RIGHT TO JURY OF ORIGINAL PANEL, § 350.
ORDER OF CALLING NAMES, § 351.
—— WAITING FOR RETURN OF ATTACHMENT, § 352.
—— DRAWING FROM JURORS STOOD ASIDE, § 353.
—— CALLING JUROR NOT AVAILABLE WHEN FIRST CALLED, § 354.
RIGHT TO PARTICULAR JUROR OR JURY, § 355.
NUMBER TO BE DRAWN BEFORE PARTY MUST EXAMINE, § 356.
NUMBER TO BE DRAWN OR PRESENTED BEFORE CHALLENGES MUST BE MADE, § 357.
PRESUMPTION OF REGULARITY, § 358.
EFFECT OF ERRORS AND IRREGULARITIES, § 359.

§ 349. Manner of drawing—In general.

Box or wheel from which panel is drawn, see ante, §§ 278–280.

Calling names from list instead of drawing by lot, see post, § 351.

Mode of drawing as infringement of right, see ante, § 230 [k, m].

[a] (Ala. 1870) Under a statute requiring the names of the members of the panel to be written on "separate" slips of paper, and the slips drawn one by one to form the trial jury, the court improperly refused to quash the venire where one slip drawn showed a name on each side, and three other names had not been placed in the box at all; the statute being mandatory.—Brazier v. State, 44 Ala. 387.

[b] (Iowa, 1866) When jurors in addition to the regular panel are summoned for the term, their names should be placed on ballots and drawn by lot. If summoned merely for one trial, it is better to place their names in the box, although no law requires it.—State v. Green, 20 Iowa, 424.

[c] (Me. 1872) In impaneling a sheriff's jury, summoned to assess damages for land taken for the location of a railroad, the parties are not entitled to have the names of all the jurors summoned placed separately in a box, and the jury drawn in accordance with Rev. St. c. 82, § 66, which in terms applies only to civil and criminal cases pending in a judicial court, and relates to the impaneling of ordinary juries.—Davis v. Bangor & P. R. Co., 60 Me. 303.

[d] (Nev. 1867) A jury drawn while the court was in session, in the presence of the court and its officers, must be held to have been drawn in open court, whether it was done in the room where the court usually sits or in any other room of the court house.—State v. Millain, 3 Nev. 409.

[e] (N. Y. 1878) 2 Edm. St. p. 243, relating to jurors in justices' courts, provides (section 100) that the justice shall draw from the receptacle in which the names of the jurors returned on the panel have been placed the names of 6 persons, one after the other, and, if any person so drawn shall be challenged and set aside, "then" such further number shall be drawn as may be needed. Held that, where the justice drew all the 12 names from the box and called them, his refusal to replace the names in the box and draw out 6, one by one, was reversible error.—Becker v. Sitterly, 58 How. Prac. 38.

[f] (Ohio, 1892) Cleveland City Ord. § 733, provides that jurors for a trial in a police court shall be drawn in the presence of such persons interested in the cause as may desire to be present. Section 735 provides that jurors drawn may be required to serve as jurors in the trial of any cause during the term in which they are summoned. Held, that it was not error to permit jurors to sit in a case who had previously been drawn for a prior case, though plaintiff was thereby deprived of the right to be present when they were drawn.—Molitor v. State, 6 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 263, affirming (1888) 20 Wkly. Law Bul. 323.

[g] (S. C. 1844) Under Act 1841, providing that in civil cases each party may challenge two jurors, before they are charged with the trial of the issue, without showing cause, when either party has so challenged, the vacancy must be filled by drawing one of the supernumerary jurors by lot.—State v. Kleinback, 2 Speers, 418.

[h] (S. C. 1878) In trials for misdemeanors, the jury should be drawn anew in each case in the presence of the defendant and in open court from the whole panel of jurors.—State v. Cardoza, 11 S. C. 195.

[i] (Tex. 1879) Acts 15th Leg. p. 82, § 21, provides that the clerk shall write the names of all jurors on separate similar slips of paper, and when a jury is needed the same shall be drawn from the box in which they shall have been deposited and mixed, and further directs the clerk to provide and keep for that purpose "a suitable box with a sliding lid." Section 22 provides that, in ordinary jury trials, the clerk shall draw the names from "the" box. Section 23, providing for special venires, directs that the tickets be placed in "a" box, "which shall be well shaken up, and from this box the clerk shall draw the necessary names." Held, that the box to be used in cases of special venires may be a different box from the one with the sliding lid provided for ordinary juries, and, its structure not being described, an ordinary cigar box was sufficient.—Pocket v. State, 5 Tex. App. 552.

[j] (Va. 1859) Under a statute requiring the jury to be chosen by lot, after the panel of 24 had been selected, the prisoner struck out 8, and the court held it immaterial whether 4 more were selected by lot to be discharged, or 12 were selected by lot to serve.—Bristow v. Commonwealth, 15 Grat. 634.

[k] (Wis. 1851) Where the statute is silent as to the manner in which the clerk shall draw the names of the jurors, it is sufficient if the drawing is fortuitous.—Benaway v. Conyne, 3 Chand. 214, 3 Pin. 196.

[l] (Wis. 1855) Correct practice requires the names of the jurors to be drawn from a box; but, if they are drawn from a hat, the verdict will not be disturbed.—Birchard v. Booth, 4 Wis. 67.

§ 350. Right to jury of original panel.

Effect of improper discharge of juror on challenge for cause, see post, § 598.

[a] (Ga. 1850) Act 1811, § 8, as amended by Act 1816, requires 24 of the jurors summoned to be impaneled for the trial of a slave for a capital offense. Section 9 provides that the owner or manager of the slave may challenge 7, and the state 5, of this number, "and that the remaining 12 shall proceed to the trial of the slave." Held, that where a jury panel, regularly drawn and summoned, was discharged by the court without cause, it was good ground of challenge of the array of another panel called to try the same offense.—Judge v. State, 8 Ga. 173.

[b] (Ind. 1870) The statute (2 Gav. & H. p. 408), which provides that "when a jury trial is demanded the sheriff shall call a jury in the manner prescribed by law, or as directed by the court," does not confer authority on the court to direct the calling of a jury of bystanders against the consent of the party to be tried, when there is a regular panel of jurors in attendance.—Rogers v. State, 33 Ind. 543.

[c] (Ind. 1876) 2 Gav. & H. St. p. 30, § 1, authorizes the court, on the first day of the term, to set aside a panel where one of the officers who acted in drawing it had a cause pending for trial at the same term. Held, that where the regular panel was discharged on the sixth day of the term, and a new panel summoned, because the clerk, who assisted in drawing such panel, had a cause pending for trial at that term, a party to another cause was entitled to demand a jury of the original panel.—Hight v. Langdon, 53 Ind. 81.

[d] (Ind. 1891) Under Rev. St. § 522, which provides that "the court shall have power, when the business thereof requires it, to order the impaneling of a special jury for the trial of any cause," it is proper to order the impaneling of a special jury because the regular panel is out deliberating on another case, and to direct such special jury to hear the case, even though the regular panel is discharged from the other case before the special jury is fully impaneled.—Myers v. Moore, 3 Ind. App. 226, 28 N. E. 724.

[e] (La. 1877) Persons on trial for alleged crimes have a right to demand that all of the regular venire of jurors present, and not then engaged on other jury duty, shall be submitted to their acceptance or rejection, before talesmen are resorted to for the formation of juries.—State v. Atkinson, 29 La. Ann. 543.

[f] (Miss. 1852) In a capital case the prisoner is entitled to a trial by a jury selected from the special venire facias, if a sufficient number can be obtained therefrom.—Boles v. State, 24 Miss. (2 Cushm.) 445.

§ 351. Order of calling names.

[a] (Iowa, 1886) In drawing a jury for the trial of a criminal case from a special venire, it is proper, instead of selecting them by lot, to begin with the first name on the list, and so continue until the jury is obtained.—State v. Ryan, 70 Iowa, 154, 30 N. W. 397.

[b] (La. 1856) The court may commence at a particular number on the list, and call it consecutively until a jury is formed or the panel exhausted.—State v. Kennedy, 11 La. Ann. 479.

[c] (La. 1884) The additional jurors whom, by Acts 1877, p. 57, § 7, the judge is empowered to have drawn, are a part of the regular panel, and their names were properly placed in the jury box for acceptance or rejection along with those drawn before the meeting of the court.—State v. Brooks, 36 La. Ann. 334.

[d] (La. 1891) The action of the court in a murder trial in calling the names of the jury panel from the list, and in refusing defendant's motion to have the names placed in a box and drawn therefrom, was not erroneous; the former being the local practice, and not forbidden by any law.—State v. Woodson, 43 La. Ann. 905, 9 South. 903.

[e] (Md. 1881) It is no ground of objection by a traverser that the persons summoned as jurors or talesmen were not called to the book in the order in which their names appeared in the list or the order in which they may have been drawn.—Johns v. State, 55 Md. 350.

[f] (N. C. 1844) Where, on trial of a capital case, there were only 11 members present of the regular venire, and, a special venire of 75 having been summoned, the names of both venires were placed together in the box, the irregularity was harmless, where all the names on both venires were submitted to the accused for acceptance before a full jury was obtained.—State v. Lytle, 27 N. C. 58.

[g] (S. C. 1829) The fact that the clerk, in calling the jury to be challenged, called their names in the order in which they were impaneled, instead of that in which their names appeared on the venire, is not ground for new trial.—State v. Slack, 1 Bailey, 330.

[h] (S. C.) In organizing a jury for the trial of a criminal case, the practice is to present to the prisoner for challenge the juries Nos. 1 and 2, impaneled and sworn, beginning with the foreman of jury No. 1, and, after these are exhausted by challenge, then to present successively the supernumeraries, as drawn on the first day of the term.—(1830) State v. Sims, 2 Bailey, 29; (1831) Same v. Crank, Id. 66, 23 Am. Dec. 117; (1849) Same v. Brown, 3 Strob. 508.

[i] (Tex. 1875) In impaneling a jury in a capital case, the names of the persons summoned should be called in the order in which they stand on the list.—Horbach v. State, 43 Tex. 242.

[j] (Tex. 1877) Code Cr. Proc. art. 556 (Pasch. Dig. art. 3034), provides that in forming a jury for the trial of a capital case, the names of the persons summoned shall be called in the order in which they stand on the list, and, if present, shall be tried as to their qualifications, and, unless challenged, shall be impaneled. Jury Act 1876 prescribes by section 22 the method of forming juries from the regular venire for the term, but has no reference to special venires; by section 23 prescribes the mode of obtaining names for a special venire, but not the method of impaneling them; and by section 29 repeals all laws or parts of laws conflicting with its provisions. Held, that the act of 1876 did not repeal article 556 of the Code.—Taylor v. State, 3 Tex. App. 169; Garza v. Same, 3 Tex. App. 286.

[k] (Tex. 1880) Under Pen. Code, art. 640, requiring that jurors' names be called in the order in which they appear on the list furnished to defendant, where the list summoned on special venire and delivered to defendant varied from the list returned by the sheriff as to the order of names, the court properly required defendant either to expose his list or to inform the sheriff of the order in which they stood on his list.—Clark v. State, 8 Tex. App. 350.

[l] (Tex. 1887) Code Cr. Proc. art. 617, provides that no defendant in a capital case shall be brought to trial until he has had one day's service of the list of persons summoned on special venire. Section 640 provides that in selecting the jury the names of the jurors summoned shall be called in the order in which they stand on the list served on defendant. Held, that where, before completing the jury in a capital case, the sheriff stated that one of the jurors, who had just been called, had not been summoned, the court erred in completing the jury from the other veniremen, without waiting to have the missing juror summoned and brought in.—Osborne v. State, 23 Tex. App. 431, 5 S. W. 251.

[m] (Tex. 1889) After a cause was ready for trial the clerk handed defendant the list of jurors already prepared. Defendant objected, and demanded that the list be regularly drawn from the box, which the court refused. Held, that the clerk should have drawn the jury one name at a time from the box, as required by statute, and defendant was not required to state any reason for his demand that they should be so drawn.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Keith, 74 Tex. 287, 11 S. W. 1117.

[n] (Tex. 1890) Defendant cannot complain that the court refused, after the special venire was exhausted, to postpone the case till some of the regular panel should be through deliberating on another case, so that they could be passed on in their order, where such jurors were actually called and passed on before talesmen were ordered.—Hudson v. State, 28 Tex. App. 323, 13 S. W. 388.

[o] (Tex. 1892) On a murder trial, where 3 out of a special venire of 100 persons fail to appear, the overruling of a motion to postpone the trial, made by defendant, when he reached the names of the absent jurors, until such jurors should be returned, is not error prejudicial to defendant where, after the special venire was exhausted, the judge stated that he would then delay the organization until the absent veniremen were brought in, and defendant's counsel thereupon stated that they were willing to proceed with talesmen, but that they would not waive their objection to the original refusal of the court to postpone the organization of the jury.—Stephens v. State, 31 Tex Cr. R. 365, 20 S. W. 826.

[p] (Tex. 1895) At the calling of the special venire on a murder trial, two of the jurors failed to answer, and during the impaneling of the jury their names were passed over, in spite of defendant's objection; the court inquiring each time if defendant desired an attachment, to which he replied that he stood upon his rights. On exhaustion of the venire the court ordered the sheriff to summon talesmen, but on request of defendant proceedings were suspended and attachments issued for the two absent jurors, under which they were brought in. On their examination one was challenged by the state, and the other was excused as disqualified. Held, that defendant's rights were not prejudiced.—Sinclaire v. State, 35 Tex. Cr. R. 130, 32 S. W. 531.

§ 352. —— Waiting for return of attachment.

Waiting for return of attachment before calling talesmen, see ante, § 333 [j, q].

—— return of attachment before proceeding with special venire, see ante, § 316 [e].

[a] (Cal. 1895) The absence of a veniremen when his name is called in a criminal case does not necessitate a suspension of proceedings until an attachment can be served, but the court may fill the panel from the veniremen present.—People v. Collins, 105 Cal. 504, 39 Pac. 16.

[b] (Tex. 1892) Where an attachment was issued against an absent veniremen at the instance of both the defendant and the state, the court properly refused to suspend the further impaneling of the jury till the sheriff brought in the veniremen.—Jones v. State, 31 Tex. Cr. R. 177, 20 S. W. 354.

§ 353. —— Drawing from jurors stood aside.

[a] (N. C.) Jurors of the original panel constitute a distinct panel; and, when the same is gone through with without forming a jury for the trial of a capital offense, the jurors stood aside at the instance of the prosecution must be brought forward and challenged, or tendered to the prisoner, before resort can be had to the special venire.—(1836) State v. Benton, 19 N. C. 196; (1843) Same v. Shaw, 25 N. C. 532; (1884) Same v. Washington, 90 N. C. 664.

[b] (Pa. 1895) Where 12 of the 48 jurors drawn were out on another case at the time defendant's jury was called, and when 11 jurors had been accepted, and all the rest of those present had been challenged or stood aside, there was no error in calling a juror from those stood aside, instead of waiting for the return of the jurors out on the other case, especially where defendant's peremptory challenges had not been exhausted.—Commonwealth v. Weber, 167 Pa. 153, 36 Wkly. Notes Cas. 193, 31 Atl. 481.

§ 354. —— Calling juror not available when first called.

See post, § 355 [i].

[a] (Cal. 1895) The fact that jurors summoned on a special venire fail to answer when called in the morning does not render it erroneous to put their names in the box in the afternoon when they appear, though the names of those put in the box in the morning are not exhausted.—People v. Collins, 105 Cal. 504, 39 Pac. 16.

[b] (Fla. 1893) Where a second special venire is drawn in a criminal case because of the exhaustion of a previous special venire, and such second venire is resorted to for a completion of the panel, it is error to put such second venire down, and to resort again to the first special venire, and to put on defendant a juror of the first venire who made his appearance in court after the second venire had been resorted to, since, when the second venire was resorted to, any member of the first venire lost his status as a veniremen and became merely a bystander.—Collins v. State, 31 Fla. 574, 12 South. 906.

[c] (La. 1886) Where, while proceeding with the list of talesmen, a jury previously engaged reports and is discharged, the judge must resume the call under the regular venire before continuing to form a jury from talesmen.—State v. Creech, 38 La. Ann. 480.

[d] (Minn. 1867) The clerk, having called all the names of a special venire without a jury being secured, was ordered by the court to replace in the box and recall the names of those failing to answer. Held, that such proceeding, though not according to general practice, was not ground for reversing the judgment.—State v. Brown, 12 Minn. 538 (Gil. 448).

[e] (N. Y. 1872) A panel of jurors having been regularly drawn and summoned, on the call of the roll in court there were discovered to be several absentees, whose names were not put in the box. The eleventh juror having been impaneled, the names in the box were exhausted, and, the names of the absentees being called, only one was found to be present, who, under exception, took his place in the jury box, and, being found qualified, was sworn in as the twelfth juror. Held no error.—People v. Rogers, 13 Abb. Prac. (N. S.) 370.

[f] (S. C. 1890) Where, in a murder trial, a number of the panel were engaged in the consideration of another case when the drawing of the jury commenced, the court properly directed their names to be placed in the hat on their return to the court room before the completion of the trial jury.—State v. Jackson, 32 S. C. 27, 10 S. E. 769.

[g] (Va. 1853) Where a juror summoned specially to try a prisoner for murder fails to appear at the proper time, but, under a rule to show cause why he should not be fined, appears on another day, he may, if qualified, be put upon the panel.—Wormeley v. Commonwealth, 10 Grat. 658.

§ 355. Right to particular juror or jury.

Effect of improper discharge of juror on challenge for cause, see post, § 598.

Excusing and discharging jurors, see post, §§ 384–386.

[a] (U. S. 1881) The drawing of a juror's name from the jury box to try defendant does not give defendant the right to have the impaneling of the jury stopped until the juror, who left the court room without permission before the jury was impaneled, can be found.—United States v. Byrne (C. C.) 7 Fed. 455.

[b] (Cal. 1893) The fact that a competent juror was excused by the court is not ground of objection; defendant's right to an impartial jury not being a right to any particular juror.—Asevado v. Orr, 100 Cal. 293, 34 Pac. 777.

[c] (Kan. 1887) In an action against a city for injuries from a defective sidewalk, the court instructed the clerk that, in drawing the jury he might omit the names of residents of the city, and he did omit the names of two of such persons, but the jury, notwithstanding, was made up from the regular list of jurors, and an unexceptionable jury was obtained. Held, that no error was committed.—City of Abilene v. Hendricks, 36 Kan. 196, 13 Pac. 121.

[d] (Mich. 1892) How. Ann. St. § 7555, requires the officers who make return of persons for jurors to select such as are not exempt from serving, and section 7571 exempts persons over 60 years of age from jury duty. Held, that when persons over 60 years of age are so returned, it is not error for the court to discharge them on a challenge for cause.—McGrail v. City of Kalamazoo, 94 Mich. 52, 53 N. W. 955, distinguishing People v. Rawn (1892) 90 Mich. 377, 51 N. W. 522.

[e] (Miss. 1882) If the two regular juries are considering submitted cases when a case for grand larceny is called for trial, the court may form a third jury out of members of the regular panels who have been excused or challenged, making up any deficiency with talesmen.—Barnes v. State, 60 Miss. 355.

[f] (N. H. 1856) It is not the right of either party to have a cause tried by a particular jury, as they may happen to be organized when the cause comes on for trial, though the practice may be to try the causes in their order upon the trial list by the two juries alternately, and according to that practice the cause would come in order before that particular jury.—Watson v. Walker, 33 N. H. 131.

[g] (N. H. 1856) In the absence of any statute regulating the organization of traverse juries from the panel of jurors returned, it is within the discretion of the court to organize them in any manner which the court may deem proper, and rearrange and organize them anew at any time, either with or without reference to the trial of a particular cause; and this may be done by removing any number of the jurors from one jury, and substituting others from the other jury, without motion of either party, and when no cause of challenge exists against the jurors so removed.—Watson v. Walker, 33 N. H. 131.

[h] (N. H. 1856) The organization of the trial jury being in the discretion of the court, there was no error in calling a talesman in place of a juror of the regular panel, on representation of the plaintiff's counsel that such juror was an important witness for the plaintiff, so long as an impartial jury was obtained.—Walker v. Kennison, 34 N. H. 257.

[i] (N. Y. 1827) 1 Rev. Laws, p. 331, § 20, directs that, if any juror whose name shall be drawn shall fail to appear, such further number shall be drawn as shall be needed to make up the number of 12, who appear, after all causes of challenge allowed, to be fair and indifferent. Held, that where, on call of the jurors, one did not answer, defendant was not entitled to have him called, on his subsequent appearance before the jury was completed.—People v. Vermilyea, 7 Cow. 369.

[j] (S. C. 1845) A judge may, in his discretion, send a case to either jury. There is no law rendering it imperative on him to send cases in turn to the juries, although it is convenient and usual to do so.—Durant v. Ashmore, 2 Rich. Law, 184.

[k] (Vt. 1884) Where on the adjournment of the court on the first day 11 jurors have been accepted, 5 of them talesmen, it is not error for the court on the next day to discharge the 11 and begin de novo from a panel not present on the preceding day.—Quinn's Adm'rs v. Halbert, 57 Vt. 178.

§ 356. Number to be drawn before party must examine.

[a] (Cal.) Under the various provisions of the civil and criminal practice acts, prescribing the method of forming juries in civil and criminal actions, 12 names must be drawn from the jury box in a criminal action, and those not challenged or excused must then be sworn to try the issue, after which as many more names as will make up the deficiency must be drawn from the box, when the same process must be repeated until the jury is complete.—(1869) People v. Scoggins, 37 Cal. 676; (1880) People v. Iams, 57 Cal. 115.

[b] (Ill. 1865) Scates' Comp. c. 58, § 8, provides that, when a jury is required, the clerk, sheriff, or coroner shall, in presence of the court, draw 12 names from the jury box, which shall designate the 12 to be sworn on the jury, and in like manner for the second jury. Held, that where 2 jurors were drawn, and, after acceptance by plaintiff, were tendered to defendant, who insisted that 4 be tendered to him at once, and the court caused 2 more names to be drawn and tendered the 4 to defendant, defendant's objection to passing on the 2 last drawn until after plaintiff should have done so was properly overruled; there being nothing in the law requiring any particular number to be passed on at one time.—Walker v. Collier, 37 Ill. 362.

[c] (Ill. 1875) Under Rev. Laws 1874, p. 634, § 21, providing that, on the impaneling of the jury in a civil case, the court shall "order the full number of 12 jurors into the jury box, before either party shall be required to examine any of the said jurors," and that the jury shall be passed on and accepted in panels of 4, if the plaintiff by his challenges reduces the number in the box to less than 12, defendant is entitled to have 12 men in the box before he examines them.—Sterling Bridge Co. v. Pearl, 80 Ill. 251.

[d] (Tex. 1886) Under Code Cr. Proc. arts. 595, 646, a jury in the county court is composed of 6 men, and is formed by drawing from the box the names of 12 jurors, "or so many as there may be," etc. In this case there were but 6 regular jurors, and the defendant was required to pass upon them before others were summoned and placed in the box. Held correct, and that the court could not be required to have the panel filled to 12 unless there were 12 regular jurors, nor could it be required to fill the panel to 12 before passing on the 6 in the box.—Goforth v. State, 22 Tex. App. 405, 3 S. W. 332.

§ 357. Number to be drawn or presented before challenges must be made.

[a] (Ala. 1858) Code, § 3474, provides that the clerk shall by lot organize the jurors summoned for the term into two separate juries of 12 each, and, if there are any jurors left over, they may be placed on a third jury, or put on either of the others as needed, and that jurors may be transferred from one jury to another. Section 3475 provides that when, by reason of challenge or otherwise, it is needed, the court may cause jurors to be summoned from the bystanders or the county at large to supply deficiencies in juries, or to form one or more entire juries. Held, that where, in organizing a jury to try a misdemeanor, 3 of the regular panel were objected to by the state, the court properly required the defendant to make his objection to the remaining 9 before filling the vacant places, and then directed the sheriff to summon sufficient jurors from the other regular jury to fill all vacancies thus created.—Wilson v. State, 31 Ala. 371.

[b] (Cal. 1873) A party is not bound in a civil action to exercise his right of peremptory challenge to jurors until there are in the jury box 12 persons whom the court has adjudged competent.—Taylor v. Western Pac. R. Co., 45 Cal. 323.

[c] (Idaho, 1885) Under Cr. Prac. Act, §§ 318–353, regulating the impaneling of juries, defendant may be required to exercise his peremptory challenges as each juror appears and before another is called.—People v. Kuok Wah Choi, 2 Idaho, 85, 6 Pac. 112.

[d] (Ky. 1887) Under the Criminal Code, each party to a criminal prosecution is entitled to a full jury of 12 jurors, found, upon examination, qualified to try the case, before being required to exercise the right of peremptory challenge to the individual juror; and, whenever the number is lessened by challenge of either party, the panel must be again filled before being passed on, and so on until the jury is completed.—Jenkins v. Commonwealth, 4 S. W. 816; Wilson v. Commonwealth, Id. 818.

[e] (Miss. 1884) In a capital case, the court may compel the accused to challenge the jurors as they are presented.—Smith v. State, 61 Miss. 754.

[f] (Miss. 1888) One accused of a crime not capital cannot be required to make peremptory challenges from a jury containing less than 12 men.—Thompson v. State, 58 Miss. 62.

[g] (Miss. 1893) Under Code 1892, § 1423, providing that the peremptory challenge of the state shall be made before the juror is presented to the prisoner, and in all cases the accused shall have presented to him a full panel before being called on to make his peremptory challenge, a prisoner is entitled to have the jury filled to the number of 12 by the state after he has refused any of the jurors tendered him before again exercising his peremptory challenges.—Gibson v. State, 70 Miss. 554, 12 South. 582; State v. Mitchel, 12 South. 710.

[h] (Neb. 1891) An order of the court on a trial for a felony, compelling defendant to exercise his first 3 peremptory challenges before the panel is filled, is an undue exercise of judicial power, since the uniform practice has been not to peremptorily challenge until the jurors have been passed for cause, and 12 men are in the box.—Rutherford v. State, 32 Neb. 714, 49 N. W. 701.

[i] (Ohio, 1889) In a prosecution for murder, the court may require the defendant to decide whether or not he will exercise his right of peremptory challenge to each juror as called and not set aside for cause, and not allow him to wait until 12 persons not challenged for cause were in the jury box before he exercised his peremptory challenges.—Thurman v. State, 2 O. C. D. 466.

[j] (S. C. 1894) Defendant is not entitled to have the panel entirely called over before entering on his right of challenge.—State v. Hallback, 40 S. C. 298, 18 S. E. 919.

[k] (Tex. 1873) No peremptory challenge should be made until the full jury of 12 is in the box.—Cooley v. State, 38 Tex. 636.

[l] (Tex. 1888) Under Rev. St. arts. 3091–3094, when 12 jurors are present, and their names have been drawn and entered on the slips, the parties may be required to exercise their peremptory challenges.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Greenlee, 70 Tex. 553, 8 S. W. 129.

[m] (Wis. 1874) Rev. St. c. 179, providing for a peremptory challenge "when the jury is impaneled," construed to require 12 jurors to be called in the cause before the accused can be put to his challenges, and the jury not to be sworn until the challenges are exhausted or the jury accepted.—Lamb v. State, 36 Wis. 424.

§ 358. Presumption of regularity.

[a] (Ill. 1888) Where there is no showing to the contrary, it will be presumed that the clerk drew the jury in the manner required by law.—People v. Madison County Sup'rs, 125 Ill. 334, 17 N. E. 802.

§ 359. Effect of errors and irregularities.

Disqualified jurors in panel as infringement of right, see ante, § 232 [f].

Effect of service on jury of person not drawn therefor, see post, § 634.

[a] (Ga. 1882) A conviction is not affected because the middle initial of one of the jurors is different from that placed in the jury box, where it appears that the juror was the person summoned.—Williams v. State, 69 Ga. 11.

[b] (La. 1888) An objection that the names of persons summoned as tales jurors were not written on ballots and placed in the venire box, and drawn therefrom, but were called from a list made out and furnished to the counsel by the sheriff, will not prevail, in case it appears that the entire list was exhausted before the panel was completed.—State v. Dorsey, 40 La. Ann. 739, 5 South. 26.

[c] (N. C. 1847) Where 100 tales jurors were summoned, and after the original panel was exhausted, the court ordered the names of 36 tales jurors to be put into the box, which was done, and that number also exhausted, and the court then ordered the remainder of the tales jurors to be drawn from, the prisoner making no objection, it was held that the proceeding was a correct one, as the prisoner had in fact an opportunity to have tendered to him all the tales jurors.—State v. Nash, 30 N. C. 35.

[d] (N. C. 1884) That one "J. L. B.," summoned as a juror, had his name entered on the scroll as "J. S. B.," is immaterial.—State v. Mills, 91 N. C. 581.

[e] (Tex. 1886) Code Cr. Proc. arts. 618–621, requiring the court, in obtaining a jury for a capital case from a special venire, to call the jurors summoned at the court house door, to grant attachments for those absent, to seat those present in the jury box, and to test their qualifications under oath and hear their excuses, are merely directory; and hence, where such directions were not followed, but the court instead proceeded under article 640, by calling the jurors present separately in the order in which they stood on the list, and testing their qualifications separately by the court, the state, and the defense, there was no reversible error, where the whole trial jury was drawn from the special venire originally summoned without exhausting it.—Murray v. State, 21 Tex. App. 466, 1 S. W. 522.

FAILURE TO SUMMON FULL VENIRE, § 360.
—— REPETITION OF NAME ON LIST, § 361.
DISQUALIFIED JURORS SUMMONED, § 362.
EXEMPT PERSONS SUMMONED, § 363.
FULL PANEL NOT PRESENT, THOUGH SUMMONED, § 364.
PART OF PANEL ENGAGED ON ANOTHER CASE, § 365.
PART OF PANEL EXCUSED, § 366.
EFFECT OF ERRORS AND IRREGULARITIES, § 367.

Effect of issuing venire for less than proper number, see ante, § 290.

Right to attachment for absent jurors, see post, § 381.

Special venire to provide full panel, see ante, §§ 310–332.

§ 360. Failure to summon full venire.

Failure to order maximum special venire as asked by defendant, see ante, § 323 [b, j].

[a] (U. S. 1893) In a federal court it constitutes no ground of challenge to the array of jurors that three of the persons named in the venire had died after their names were placed in the wheel, and before the time of the drawing.—Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Harkins, 55 Fed. 932, 5 C. C. A. 326, 17 U. S. App. 22.

[b] (Ala.) The failure of the sheriff to find a person whose name was on the list of jurors drawn and ordered to be summoned by the court is no ground to quash the venire.—(1883) McElroy v. State, 75 Ala. 9; (1884) Jackson v. State, 76 Ala. 26.

[c] (Ala. 1889) Under Code 1886, § 4322, providing that, where there are mistakes in the names of persons summoned as jurors, such names shall be discarded and others summoned, it is not a ground of challenge to the array that one of the names on the venire is that of a deceased person and another that of a nonresident of the county.—Gibson v. State, 89 Ala. 121, 8 South. 98, 18 Am. St. Rep. 96.

[d] (Ala. 1893) A special venire will not be quashed because two of the persons drawn were not summoned, when neither could be found in the county.—Webb v. State, 100 Ala. 47, 14 South. 865.

[e] (Ala. 1893) A venire will not be quashed because a juror whose name has been drawn cannot be found.—Ezell v. State, 103 Ala. 128, 15 South. 818.

[f] (Fla. 1860) Where the court, anticipating the exhaustion of the regular panel, has ordered the sheriff to summon other jurors, it is not ground of objection that the sheriff was unable to summon the full number ordered.—O'Connor v. State, 9 Fla. 215.

[g] (La. 1881) When a venire has been regularly drawn, the failure to summon a juror, resulting from mere mistake or error on the part of the officer, without fraud or collusion, or material injury to the accused, affords no ground upon which to quash the panel.—State v. Dozier, 33 La. Ann. 1362.

[h] (Miss. 1876) Where a special venire of 60 names was returned executed by summoning 32, "the others not being found in the county," the court properly denied a motion to quash the venire, based on the ground that accused was prejudiced by having so small a panel to select from, since the return must be held to be true, in the absence of proof that the officer had not acted in good faith, though perhaps greater diligence might have found more jurors to summon.—Logan v. State, 53 Miss. 431.

[i] (Mont. 1886) Laws 12th Sess. pp. 57, 58, provides that the county commissioners shall select from the assessors' books the names of 100 qualified jurors, and from them shall draw 30 names for service as trial jurors; that at the beginning of the term the judge shall examine the jurors present, and discharge by lot those in excess of 24; and that, if at any time during the term the full panel of 24 is not present, the clerk, under direction of the court, shall draw from the commissioners' list additional names to fill the panel. Held, that it was error to compel defendant to proceed to select the jury from a panel consisting of only 23 jurors.—Dupont v. McAdow, 6 Mont. 226, 9 Pac. 925.

[j] (N. C. 1886) That the sheriff returned a writ for a special venire that he had not summoned one of the jurors because he was dead, and that he had not summoned three others because they could not be found, is not ground for a challenge to the array.—State v. Speaks, 94 N. C. 865.

[k] (N. C. 1886) The fact that one drawn on a special venire was dead, and that another had removed from the county before the time when the commissioners should have revised the jury list, is not ground for a challenge to the array.—State v. Hensley, 94 N. C. 1021.

[l] (N. C. 1893) It is not ground for a challenge to the array that one named on the venire was not summoned, or that, by mistake in copying the list of the venire, the name of one was omitted, so that he was not summoned.—State v. Whitt, 113 N. C. 716, 18 S. E. 715.

[m] (N. C. 1893) The fact that one of the men named on the list of a special venire was dead, and another had removed from the county, is not ground for a challenge to the array.—State v. Whitt, 113 N. C. 716, 18 S. E. 715.

[n] (N. C. 1896) It is not ground of challenge to the array of a special venire that the sheriff failed to summon several persons named thereon.—State v. Stanton, 118 N. C. 1182, 24 S. E. 536.

[o] (Ohio, 1851) Under Act Feb. 9, 1831, § 8, providing that, if any person selected as a juror shall die or remove from the township before the time of drawing for jurymen of any court, when such person's name shall be drawn out it shall be thrown aside, and another taken in lieu thereof; and section 16, providing that, when a petit jury shall be drawn contrary to the provisions of the act, the whole array may be challenged and set aside, and a new venire facias awarded,—if the clerk omit to throw aside the name of the juror who has died or removed, the whole array may be challenged.—Jones v. State, 1 Ohio Dec. 390, 8 West. Law J. 508.

[p] (Pa. 1890) Act March 31, 1860 (Purd. Dig. p. 388), § 53, provides that no conviction shall be set aside for any defect or error in the precept issued by the court or the venire for the summoning or returning of jurors, but that a trial on the merits shall be a waiver of all errors and defects therein. Act April 14, 1834, § 113, requires that no less than 48 jurors shall be summoned to serve in a court of oyer and terminer. Held, that the omission to return the full number of 48 jurors to a court of oyer and terminer was not cured by a trial on the merits; such defect being fatal to the constitution of the court.—Donaldson v. Commonwealth, 95 Pa. 21.

[q] (Pa. 1885) Where the sheriff, in summoning a jury panel for a court of oyer and terminer, failed to serve two of the persons drawn, one of whom he could not find and the other of whom had removed from the county, such failure was no ground of challenge to the array.—Commonwealth v. Seybert, 4 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 152.

[r] (Pa. 1888) In the absence of evidence of improper or corrupt conduct on the part of the officers charged with the duty of filling the jury wheel, and drawing the names of jurors, the fact that, out of the minimum number of 48 jurors whose names were drawn, 1 was found to have removed, and 2 others were dead, is no ground for a challenge to the array.—Showers v. Commonwealth, 120 Pa. 573, 14 Atl. 401.

[s] (S. C. 1895) The failure of the sheriff to serve a summons on a petit juror who had left the county will not affect the array.—State v. Derrick, 44 S. C. 344, 22 S. E. 337.

[t] (Tex. 1886) The fact that one of the men named on the list was dead and another was outside the state is not a sufficient ground for quashing the venire.—Smith v. State, 21 Tex. App. 277, 17 S. W. 471.

[u] (Tex. 1887) It is not required that every person drawn as a juror upon a venire shall be summoned, but only that the sheriff shall exercise reasonable diligence to summon the jurors.—Rodriguez v. State, 23 Tex. App. 503, 5 S. W. 255.

§ 361. —— Repetition of name on list.

[a] (Ala. 1881) A failure of the sheriff to summon the exact number of jurors ordered, through the repetition of one name, is sufficient ground for quashing the venire, and is not a "mistake in the name of a person summoned," declared by Code, § 4876, to be insufficient as such ground.—Roberts v. State, 68 Ala. 515.

[b] (Ala. 1886) The fact that one name appeared twice on the panel of jurors summoned in a capital case and on the copy served on defendant is not ground of challenge to the panel.—McKee v. State, 82 Ala. 32, 2 South. 451.

[c] (Ala.) Where the court orders a special venire of 50 jurors to be drawn, and one of them proves to be on the regular panel, defendant is deprived of his rights to the full number of jurors ordered, and the venire must be quashed.—(1890) Darby v. State, 92 Ala. 9, 9 South. 429; (1891) McQueen v. Same, 94 Ala. 50, 10 South. 433.

§ 362. Disqualified jurors summoned.

See ante, § 331 [c].

Purging panel of disqualified jurors, see post, § 550 [d].

[a] Disqualification of members of the panel is not ground of challenge to the array.—(Ala. 1875) Fields v. State, 52 Ala. 348; (1881) Roberts v. Same, 68 Ala. 515;
(Miss. 1837) Woodsides v. State, 3 Miss. (2 How.) 655;
(Tex. 1875) Mitchell v. State, 43 Tex. 512;
(Wis. 1857) Conkey v. Northern Bank, 6 Wis. 447.

[b] (Ala.) The defendant in a capital trial has no right to demand that the entire list of persons summoned as jurors shall be set aside because some nonresidents of the county have been inadvertently summoned.—(1867) Hall v. State, 40 Ala. 698; (1876) Gray v. Same, 55 Ala. 86.

[c] (Ala. 1878) It is not a ground for quashing the venire summoned for the trial of a capital offense that it included the names of two jurors who on a previous day had convicted prisoner's codefendant, as to whom there had been a severance. Such persons may be challenged for cause.—Wesley v. State, 61 Ala. 282.

[d] (Ala. 1889) It is not ground for quashing a venire that one name on the list was that of a minor, and another of a female, under Code 1886, § 4322, providing that, where there are mistakes in the names of parties summoned as jurors, such names shall be discarded and others summoned.—Gibson v. State, 89 Ala. 121, 8 South. 98, 18 Am. St. Rep. 96.

[e] (Ala. 1893) It is no objection to the venire from which a jury was drawn to try three of four persons indicted for the same crime that the jury which convicted the other was drawn from the same venire, as all the jurors were subject to challenge.—Woodley v. State, 103 Ala. 8, 15 South. 820.

[f] (Ala. 1893) The fact that two persons on the venire had served as jurors within 12 months last past forms no grounds for quashing the venire.—Jones v. State, 104 Ala. 30, 16 South. 135.

[g] (Cal. 1892) The fact that, after a challenge to a panel had been sustained on the ground of bias and prejudice of the deputy sheriff summoning the jurors, a few of the persons composing it were summoned on a second venire, is no ground for challenge to the second panel, but the objections should be made to the individual jurors.—People v. Vincent, 95 Cal. 425, 30 Pac. 581.

[h] (Ga. 1892) It is not ground of challenge to the array that the jurors of the panel put on defendant were in the court room when he was moving for a continuance, and heard part of the evidence to be introduced in the case.—Jones v. State, 90 Ga. 616, 16 S. E. 380.

[i] (Ga. 1893) It is no cause of challenge to the array that 12 out of the 18 jurors constituting the array had just served as a jury for the trial of another person indicted for a like offense growing out of the same transaction, that a verdict of guilty was rendered in that case, and that the witnesses and the evidence in the present case would be the same as they were in the former.—Schnell v. State, 92 Ga. 459, 17 S. E. 966.

[j] (Ga. 1895) An objection to the entire panel of jurors, in a criminal case, on the ground that all of the jurors had heard the evidence on the trial of other persons jointly indicted with accused, and had likely formed and expressed an opinion, was properly overruled.—Brown v. State, 97 Ga. 215, 22 S. E. 403.

[k] (Kan. 1885) The fact that there were unintentionally drawn and summoned on the jury for the June term of court for 1884, previous to the making up of the list for that year, names which were not on the jury list selected in 1883 from the assessment rolls of 1882, is not ground for a challenge to the array.—Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Davis, 34 Kan. 199, 8 Pac. 146.

[l] (Mich. 1884) The fact that two of three talesmen are over 60 years old is ground for challenge for cause, but not to the array.—People v. Bowman, 52 Mich. 584, 18 N. W. 369.

[m] (Mich. 1886) Where, in a proceeding to condemn property for public use, the sheriff has returned a summons of 24 freeholders, the fact that some of them are not competent jurors will not affect the whole array; and, where the jury sworn contains none but resident freeholders, their verdict will be valid.—In re Opening First St., 58 Mich. 641, 26 N. W. 159.

[n] (Miss. 1852) The fact that disqualified persons were summoned on a special venire could not be objected to by a challenge to the array, and is no ground to quash, unless upon proof of partiality or corruption in the sheriff.—Boles v. State, 24 Miss. (2 Cushm.) 445.

[o] (Miss. 1870) It is not ground to quash a special venire in a criminal case that one of the jurors summoned under it was an alien, such objection going only to the poll.—Durrah v. State, 44 Miss. 789.

[p] (Mo. 1892) It is not ground for quashing the panel in a criminal case that, when defendant was applying for a continuance, some of the panel had heard statements of counsel in regard to defendant's efforts to delay the trial, which were calculated to prejudice them against him.—State v. Dusenberry, 112 Mo. 277, 20 S. W. 461.

[q] (Nev. 1866) Act Feb. 8, 1865, § 1, relating to jurors, requires the selection from the assessment rolls of 200 persons qualified to act as jurors. Cr. Prac. Act, § 323, provides that a challenge to the array shall be based only on a material departure from the forms prescribed for drawing and returning the jury, or the willful omission to summon one or more jurors drawn. Held, that a challenge to the array, because some of the panel selected were not registered voters, and hence not competent as jurors, was not well taken, in the absence of any showing of prejudice; the statute being merely directory.—State v. Squaires, 2 Nev. 226.

[r] (N. Y. 1894) Where an objection that a jury in a justice court was not drawn in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 2994, is sustained, the party is not entitled to a new venire on the ground that the jurors may have been prejudiced against him because of his technical objection; such objection going only to the individual jurors.—Bloomingdale v. Adler, 7 Misc. Rep. 182, 27 N. Y. Supp. 321.

[s] (Pa.) It is no cause of challenge to the array in the oyer and terminer that but 48 jurors were summoned, one of whom was not qualified.—(1859) Foust v. Commonwealth, 33 Pa. 338; (1886) McPhilliamy v. Commonwealth, 6 Atl. 704.

[t] (Tenn. 1873) The fact that all the jurors of the panel, except two, had sat in two of three cases in which the same depositions were to be used, entitled the parties to a new panel.—Apperson v. Logwood, 59 Tenn. (12 Heisk.) 262.

[u] (Tex. 1882) A panel of petit jurors will not be quashed because several of the jurors live in the neighborhood of land the subject of the suit, and have relatives living thereon.—Veramendi v. Hutchins, 56 Tex. 414.

[v] (Tex. 1895) It is not ground for challenge to the array of jurors that they had heard and tried a case against another party charged with an offense of the same character.—Staley v. State (Cr. App.) 29 S. W. 272; Anderson v. State, 34 Tex. Cr. R. 96, 29 S. W. 384.

[w] (Tex. 1896) That a jury commissioner selected himself as a member of a jury is not ground for motion to quash the array, whatever its value as ground of challenge to the poll.—McCamant v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 610.

[x] (Va. 1886) Under a statute requiring a jury to be made up of persons residing remote from the scene of the crime, if one juror lives too near, the objection should be made to him, and not to the array.—Lawrence v. Commonwealth, 81 Va. 484.

[y] (Va. 1892) The objection that a juror resides at the place where the offense is alleged to have been committed can only be raised as to the individual juror, rather than to the array.—Prince v. Commonwealth, 89 Va. 330, 15 S. E. 863.

§ 363. Exempt persons summoned.

Effect of replacing in box names of jurors who had already served, see ante, § 282 [o].

[a] (S. C. 1891) It is no ground of challenge to the array on special venire that some of the persons whose names are put in the box are exempt from jury service, since exemption is a privilege personal to the juror, and he may waive it.—State v. Merriman, 34 S. C. 16, 12 S. E. 619.

[b] (Wis. 1857) A challenge to the array on the ground that some of the jurors on the panel served at a previous term was properly overruled, the ground being merely the personal exemption of the jurors.—Conkey v. Northern Bank, 6 Wis. 447.

§ 364. Full panel not present though summoned.

See ante, § 356 [d].

Right to full panel at commencement of selection of jury as prerequisite to issue of open venire on exhaustion of panel, see ante, § 325 [m].

[a] (Cal. 1860) After the sheriff had returned that two absent jurors, for whom attachments had been issued, could not be found, the court properly ordered a jury to be impaneled without any further delay.—People v. Lee, 17 Cal. 76.

[b] (La. 1826) Under Code Prac. arts. 496, 497, 513, requiring that before a cause is tried by a jury, the original venire should be called over, and if 20 of them be present the clerk shall draw 12 of them from the box to try the case, the court erroneously overruled an objection to commencing to draw a jury where only five of the venire were known to be present.—Bayoujon's Heirs v. Criswell, 5 Mart. (N. S.) 232.

[bb] (La. 1874) Where a sufficient number of jurors was present to form the panel, an objection to the absence of part of the jurors summoned at the time and when the case was called for trial cannot be sustained on the ground that defendants were deprived of the opportunity of inquiring into the character and qualifications of the jurors.—State v. Hoozer, 26 La. Ann. 599.

[c] (La. 1880) The fact that jurors summoned are absent is not ground for delaying the trial till the absent jurors could be brought in by attachments, when the jury can be completed from the jurors present.—State v. Rountree, 32 La. Ann. 1144.

[d] (Miss. 1852) It is no abridgment of a prisoner's right to select a jury in a capital case from the whole of the special venire that some of them fail to appear, provided that a jury is obtained from those who do appear.—Boles v. State, 24 Miss. (2 Cushm.) 445.

[e] (N. J. 1886) The list having been duly served in the case, it was not a legal ground of exception that three of the jurors did not answer to their names when the trial proceeded.—Patterson v. State, 48 N. J. Law (19 Vroom) 381, 4 Atl. 449.

[f] (N. J. 1886) It is not a ground of exception that some of the general panel of jurors failed to answer to their names when the case was moved for trial. The statute requires that the 48 jurors shall be summoned for service, and that a list of them shall be served on the defendant. It does not require that all the jurors shall be present when the case is moved.—Patterson v. State, 48 N. J. Law (19 Vroom) 381, 4 Atl. 449.

[g] (S. C. 1880) The whole number of 36 jurors need not be present at the commencement of a murder trial.—State v. Stephens, 13 S. C. 285.

[h] (S. C. 1890) Gen. St. § 2251, declaring that "no more than 36 persons to serve as petit jurors shall be drawn and summoned to attend, at one and the same time, at any court unless the court shall otherwise order," does not make it necessary that the whole number of 36 jurors should be present at the commencement of the trial.—State v. Jackson, 32 S. C. 27, 10 S. E. 769.

[i] (S. C. 1894) Defendant in a criminal case is not entitled to have the panel full, before entering on the selection of a jury.—State v. Hallback, 40 S. C. 208, 18 S. E. 919.

[j] (S. C. 1896) A special venire having been summoned to complete a jury after defendant had exhausted his challenges, defendant had no right to insist that the names of those veniremen who arrived in advance of the others should not be drawn until the others were present.—State v. Kelley, 46 S. C. 55, 24 S. E. 60.

[k] (Tex. 1892) On a murder trial, where 3 out of a special venire of 100 persons fail to appear, the court properly refused to postpone the trial and ordered process to issue instanter for the absentees.—Stephens v. State, 31 Tex. Cr. R. 365, 20 S. W. 826.

[m] (Tex. 1895) As Code Cr. Proc. art. 640, provides that no cause shall be delayed on the ground of absence of persons summoned as jurors, there was no error in proceeding without one whose presence the court sought by due diligence to secure.—Mitchell v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 367.

§ 365. Part of panel engaged on another case.

See ante, § 315 [f].

[a] (Ala. 1878) The fact that one or more of the persons on the venire served on a prisoner charged with a capital offense were on the regular juries for the week, and could not be obtained as jurors for the prisoner's trial, because then engaged on the trial of another cause, held to give the prisoner no right to delay the impaneling of the jury for his own trial, until such persons might be discharged as jurors on the other case, or to otherwise delay the trial.—Kimbrough v. State, 62 Ala. 248.

[b] (Ala. 1882) The court should not delay the impaneling of a jury in a capital case because some of the persons whose names are on the venire served on the prisoner are absent from the court room, engaged in deliberating on their verdict in another case.—Shelton v. State, 73 Ala. 5.

[c] (Ala. 1885) Under Code, § 4874, requiring special jurors to be drawn for the trial of capital cases in addition to the regular jurors, where the trial of two persons indicted for separate capital offenses are set on the same day, and the same persons are drawn or summoned as special jurors for both trials, should one or more of them be engaged in the case of one of the accused, while a jury is being selected for the trial of the other, so as to render him unable to serve on the latter jury, such jury is illegally impaneled, and a conviction must be reversed.—Evans v. State, 80 Ala. 4.

[d] (Ala. 1891) Where it appeared that a certain person was summoned as a regular juror for the week, but did not attend, that the regular jury had been impaneled without him, and that his name was on the venire, a copy of which was served on defendant's counsel, it was not error for the court to order the drawing to proceed, on such juror failing to answer to his name when called.—Johnston v. State, 94 Ala. 35, 10 South. 667.

[e] (Ala. 1894) Under Acts 1887, p. 156, § 10, requiring the drawing of not less than 25 nor more than 50 special jurors "for each capital case" set for the same day, and providing that such jurors, "together with the panel of petit jurors organized for the week, shall constitute the venire from which the juries to try said capital case or cases shall be selected," where a venireman summoned specially to try defendant's case, and whose name was on the list served on defendant, was taken for the trial of another case, the court may properly organize the jury without him.—Cole v. State, 105 Ala. 76, 16 South. 702.

[f] (Ala. 1894) It was proper to require defendant to go to trial, though at the time five of the persons whose names were on the special venire summoned to try him were engaged in considering their verdict in another case.—Goodwin v. State, 106 Ala. 670, 18 South. 694.

[g] (Ala. 1894) Defendant is not entitled to draw a juror who is engaged in the trial of another case.—Prater v. State, 107 Ala. 26, 18 South. 238.

[h] (Ala. 1894) In a criminal case, where a juror who is on the jury in another case is drawn, the judge may properly direct the name to be set aside, and the drawing to proceed.—Dorsey v. State, 107 Ala. 157, 18 South. 199.

[i] (Cal. 1894) Prior to entering on defendant's case, the clerk withdrew from the box the names of jurors out on another case. Pending the selection of defendant's jury, the other jury reported and was discharged, but the clerk did not at once return their names to the box. When 10 of defendant's jury had been accepted and sworn, the clerk's omission was called to the attention of the court, which ordered the names into the box and denied defendant's motion to discharge the jurors sworn and to impanel a new jury. Defendant exhausted his peremptory challenges and was forced to take an unacceptable juror. Held, that the court erred in refusing to discharge the 10 jurors on defendant's motion; defendant being entitled to have all the available jurors to select from.—People v. Edwards, 101 Cal. 543, 36 Pac. 7.

[j] (D. C. 1879) When a cause came on for trial, 12 of the regular jurors were out in another cause. Held, that the defendant had no right, before the impaneling commenced, to have all the array present and subject to his challenge.—United States v. Bowen, 3 Mac Arthur, 64.

[k] (La. 1894) Act 1880, No. 135, § 4, provides that "where a special jury is necessary, the judge shall order the drawing of 30 quallified jurors, who shall be summoned, and, on the trial, * * * talesmen may be summoned as in other cases." Held, that the fact that, from a special venire so drawn, a panel of 12 had been selected for the trial of another case did not render the whole special venire void, as the 18 remaining constituted a sufficient nucleus to which talesmen could be drawn to complete the panel.—State ex rel. Breazeale v. Cannon, 15 South. 626.

[l] (Mich. 1892) Comp. Laws, § 6020, provides that, when a jury has been sworn to try an issue, the ballots containing their names shall be kept apart from the other ballots until the jury is discharged. Held, that it is not necessary to wait until the jury is discharged and the ballots returned to the slip box before proceeding to draw another jury from the slip box for the trial of the next case, whether criminal or civil.—People v. Craig, 48 Mich. 502, 12 N. W. 675.

[m] (S. C. 1890) The refusal of the court to await the return of another jury, which was out on another case, in order that defendant in murder case might have the full panel to select from, was not error.—State v. Jackson, 32 S. C. 27, 10 S. E. 769.

[n] (S. C. 1892) The defendant in a murder trial is not entitled to a delay in drawing the jury until 12 jurors who are sitting in another case come in and make the panel full.—State v. Campbell, 35 S. C. 28, 14 S. E. 292.

[o] (Tex. 1885) Where a special venire has been summoned to try defendant's case, he has just cause of complaint, if five of them are trying another case when his panel is being filled.—Thuston v. State, 18 Tex. App. 26.

[p] (Tex. 1896) Where 12 of the 26 jurymen are out, considering their verdict in a case, a party to another case called for trial is not entitled to postponement until all of the jurymen are in the jury box.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Duvall, 12 Tex. Civ. App. 848, 35 S. W. 699.

[q] (Tex. 1896) Code Cr. Proc. art. 683, provides that the clerk shall draw 24 names, if so many are in the box, or so many as are there, if the number be less. Article 684 provides that, if there are less than 12 names in the box, the court shall direct the sheriff to summon such number of qualified persons as may be necessary to complete the panel. Article 686, provides that, if the number of jurors be reduced below 12 by challenge, the court shall order other jurors to be drawn and summoned, and placed on the lists, to replace those set aside. Held, that where a number of the regular jury were considering their verdict in another case, and the names of 16 jurors, being all then in attendance, were placed in the box, defendant, on trial for theft, was not prejudiced by the refusal of the court to wait until the return of the other jury to complete the panel to 24.—Thurmond v. State, 37 Tex. Cr. R. 422, 36 S. W. 965.

See ante, §§ 314, 315 [f].

[a] (Ga. 1877) Where 2 of the panel of 24 jurors are discharged as relatives of defendant, the petit jury was properly taken from the remainder of the panel, without filling the places of those stricken.—Odom v. Gill, 59 Ga. 180.

[b] (Neb. 1878) Five of the original panel of 24 jurors having been excused for cause, it was proper to proceed with the selection of the trial jury, without first filling the places of those excused.—Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

[c] (N. Y. 1889) Under Code Cr. Proc. § 362, providing that a challenge to the panel shall be founded only on a material departure from the forms prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure for drawing and return of a jury, to the prejudice of defendant, an objection that the court had discharged 12 jurors from the panel for the term is not one that can be taken by such a challenge.—People v. Packenham, 115 N. Y. 200, 21 N. E. 1035.

[d] (Ohio, 1847) On a trial for murder, where one of the panel summoned by the sheriff is excused on his own application, it is not error in the court to refuse to order the sheriff to summon another in his place before exhausting the panel.—Martin v. State, 16 Ohio, 364.

§ 367. Effect of errors and irregularities.

[a] (Ala. 1873) Where defendant had a juror set aside upon the ground that his name was illegibly written on the list furnished to him, it was not prejudicial error for the court to refuse to fill his place by a talesman, where the trial jury was completed without any necessity for calling such a talesman.—Levy v. State, 49 Ala. 390.

[b] (Cal. 1895) Defendant cannot challenge the panel because the names of two jurors were not found on the assessment roll for the preceding years, when they were excused for cause, and no possible harm could have resulted to defendant from their names being placed in the list.—People v. Young, 108 Cal. 8, 41 Pac. 281.

[c] (Tex. 1883) The refusal to quash a venire for failure to summon all the jurors is no ground for reversal, where it does not appear but that the jury was made up of those who were summoned.—Charles v. State, 13 Tex. App. 658.

Requiring struck jury as infringement of right, see ante, § 226 [f, i].
Waiver of right to special or struck jury, see ante, § 191.

§ 368. Qualifications for service on special or struck jury.

[a] (La. 1875) Members of a special jury must possess the general qualifications prescribed for all jurors by Rev. St. § 2125, as well as those prescribed for special jurors by section 2153.—Golding v. Petit, 27 La. Ann. 86.

[b] (N. J.) A struck juror is not a petit juror, within the meaning of Revision, p. 532, § 6, which provides that if any person shall be summoned as a petit juror at any stated term of any court, who served as such at any of the three stated terms next preceding that to which he may be summoned, it shall be good ground of challenge to any such juror.—(1891) Moschell v. State, 53 N. J. Law (24 Vroom) 498, 22 Atl. 50; (1892) Id., 54 N. J. Law (25 Vroom) 390, 25 Atl. 964.

§ 369. Selection of panel in general.

Effect of drawing panel for struck jury from defective jury list, see ante, § 282 [s, v].

[a] (Ga. 1882) A special jury may be stricken from the panel of traverse jurors.—Maddox v. Cunningham, 68 Ga. 431, 45 Am. Rep. 500.

[b] (Mo. 1896) Act March 17, 1885 (Rev. St. 1889, p. 2169, § 29), authorizing special juries, provided that certain other sections of the act, designated by number, relating to the summoning of common juries, should be construed as applying to the summoning of special juries; but the section providing that the names of the jurors should be drawn from the jury wheel was not included in those so designated. Held, that the omission must be construed as an expression of the intent of the legislature that special juries should not be drawn in the same manner as common juries.—State ex rel. St. Louis, K. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Withrow, 133 Mo. 500, 36 S. W. 43.

[c] (Mo. 1896) Rule 37 of the St. Louis circuit court, providing that, when a special jury is ordered, the jury commissioner shall draw the number designated from the jury wheel in the same manner as juries for ordinary service are drawn, is invalid, in that it contravenes the statute authorizing special juries.—State ex rel. St. Louis, K. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Withrow, 133 Mo. 500, 36 S. W. 43, reversing (1896) 133 Mo. 500, 34 S. W. 245.

[d] (Mo. 1896) Act March 17, 1885 (Rev. St. 1889, p. 2169, § 29), provides that special juries shall be selected by the jury commissioner as he may be directed by the court. Held, that the authority given by Const. art. 6, § 27, to the circuit court to make rules, does not empower the court to direct by rule that special juries shall be drawn from the jury wheel, such a method being clearly opposed to the spirit of the statute authorizing special juries.—State ex rel. St. Louis, K. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Withrow, 133 Mo. 500, 36 S. W. 43, reversing (1896) 133 Mo. 500, 34 S. W. 245.

[e] (N. J. 1896) Revision, p. 528, § 18, requires that in making a list from which a struck jury is to be taken defendant shall have notice when and where the sheriff shall attend with his general jury book before the judge, and that then the judge, in presence of the parties, or their agents or attorneys, or such of them as shall attend for that purpose, shall select a list of 48 names from the sheriff's jury book. Held, that an objection that the list was not selected by the judge in presence of defendants or their counsel was untenable; the statutes not requiring their presence, but only that they have notice of the time and place.—Fowler v. State, 58 N. J. Law (29 Vroom) 423, 34 Atl. 682.

[f] (N. Y. 1876) 2 Edm. St. p. 418, § 48, provides that when a struck jury is needed 48 names shall be selected by the clerk from the general jury list as being the most impartial and best qualified to try the cause, from which the parties shall strike. Held, that the written designation of the 48 names was conclusive, and that evidence could not be admitted to show that the name "G. W. S." on the list was a mistake for "J. C. S.," both names representing actual persons.—People v. Tweed, 50 How. Prac. 273.

[g] (Ohio, 1861) The fact that a clerk of a court was formerly of counsel in the case for the plaintiff in error, he making no objection at the time of striking the jury, and such a relation having ceased, is not a disqualification of the clerk to make up a struck jury in the case, of which the plaintiff in error can take advantage.—Beatty v. Hatcher, 13 Ohio St. 115.

[h] (Ohio, 1876) Under 70 Ohio Laws, p. 172, § 16, providing that if either of the officers, whose duty it is to select the list of names from which a struck jury is to be taken, is interested in the cause, or sick, or absent, or related to either party, or does not stand indifferent between them, the judge may appoint a substitute, the officers designated are not disqualified by having expressed an opinion on the cause to be tried.—Webb v. State, 29 Ohio St. 351.

[i] (Ohio, 1880) Neither a deputy clerk of the court of common pleas, nor a deputy county auditor, has any power to act in selecting the names of persons for a struck jury. That duty must be performed by the clerk, auditor, and recorder, in person, except as otherwise provided in the statute.—Hulse v. State, 35 Ohio St. 421.

[j] (Tenn. 1879) Under Code, § 3993, providing that if there is a deficiency of jurors the court shall designate other good and lawful men, and cause them to be summoned by the sheriff, and section 3997, providing that when special juries are allowed by law the sheriff shall summon the jurors from the body of the county as prescribed in section 3993, the judge who orders a special jury has the power to designate the jurors to be summoned therefor by the sheriff.—Clingan v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co., 70 Tenn. (2 Lea) 726.

[k] (W. Va. 1888) Code, c. 159, § 3, provides that "in case of felony 20 jurors shall be drawn from those in attendance for the trial of the accused. If a sufficient number of jurors for such panel cannot be procured in this way, the court shall order others to be forthwith summoned and selected until a panel of 20, free from exceptions, be completed." Held, enough if the sheriff, under the direction of the court, select a panel of 20 from the jurors in attendance, from which the trial jury might be struck; their names need not be put in a box and drawn by ballot.—State v. Hall, 31 W. Va. 505, 7 S. E. 422.

§ 370. Size of panel.

[a] (Ala. 1892) Under Code 1886, § 2752, giving either party the right to demand a struck jury, and be furnished with a list of 24 jurors in attendance, from which each party is to strike alternately, till 12 be stricken, where each of two defendants demands a struck jury they are not entitled to a list of 30 jurors.—Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Greenwood, 99 Ala. 501, 14 South. 495.

§ 371. Summoning the panel.

[a] (Minn. 1886) The provisions of Gen. St. 1878, c. 107, § 8, and Id. c. 71, §§ 4, 15, as to the mode of summoning grand and petit jurors, are both applicable to struck juries; hence leaving a notice at the place of residence of the juror with some person of proper age is sufficient.—Branch v. Dawson, 36 Minn. 193, 30 N. W. 545.

[b] (Pa. 1871) When a case is ordered to be tried by a struck or special jury, no special venire is necessary to summon the jury.—McDermott v. Hoffman, 70 Pa. (20 P. F. Smith) 31.

§ 372. Right to full panel to strike from.

[a] (Mo.) Under Wag. St. p. 1102, § 7, providing that an accused shall not be required to make peremptory challenges until a full panel is obtained, the state cannot, by offering to waive peremptory challenges, force the defendant, in an indictment for murder, to enter upon impaneling a jury, unless a full panel is present.—(1872) State v. McCarron, 51 Mo. 27; (1876) Same v. Waters, 62 Mo. 196, affirming (1876) 1 Mo. App. 7.

[b] (N. Y. 1876) 2 Edm. St. p. 418, § 48, provides that when a struck jury is needed 48 names shall be chosen by the clerk from the names on the general jury list as the most impartial and best qualified to try the cause; that the parties shall alternately strike one name from this list of 48 names till each has stricken off 12 names, and that the clerk shall certify the remaining 24 names to the sheriff, to be summoned as the panel from which the jury shall be drawn. Held, where one of the names certified to and summoned by the sheriff was not on the general jury list, and represented a person not in fact in the minds of the elisors, who acted instead of the clerk, when they made their selection from the jury list, it was good ground of challenge to the array.—People v. Tweed, 50 How. Prac. 262.

[c] (N. Y. 1876) In a struck jury case, after the parties had finished striking from the 48 names selected from the general jury list, it was discovered that one of the 24 remaining names from which the trial jury was to be drawn was that of a person who had been declared exempt from jury duty since his name was placed on the general jury list. Held not to be ground of challenge to the array.—People v. Tweed, 50 How. Prac. 280.

[d] (N. Y. 1876) Nor is it ground for such challenge that another of the names remaining after striking was that of a resident of another county.—People v. Tweed, 50 How. Prac. 280.

[e] (N. Y. 1876) The fact that the elisors, in selecting the list of 48 names from which a struck jury is to be taken, have placed on such list certain individuals who had been on a similar list, made for a prior similar cause between the same parties, from which they had been stricken by the parties, is not ground for challenge to the array in the later cause.—People v. Tweed, 50 How. Prac. 280.

[f] (Tex. 1888) Under Rev. St. arts. 3091–3094, a party to a civil case is not entitled to have the names of members of the panel for the week, who are engaged in another cause, placed in the box in drawing the jury.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Greenlee, 70 Tex. 553, 8 S. W. 129.

§ 373. Filling vacancies in panel before striking.

[a] (Ala. 1890) Where there were only 23 jurors in attendance on the court when defendant demanded a struck jury, the court properly instructed the sheriff to summon another juror, and place him on the list furnished to defendant.—Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. v. Smith, 90 Ala. 25, 8 South. 43, 24 Am. St. Rep. 753.

[b] (Ala. 1893) Where, in selecting a struck jury, after two jurors have been struck from the list by each party, the judge interrogates the remaining twenty, and discharges two for incompetency, six jurors should be summoned to complete the panel, and not two only, to take the place of those discharged.—Smith v. Kaufman, 100 Ala. 408, 14 South. 111.

[c] (Ga. 1880) Under Const. 1877, art. 6, § 18, par. 2, providing that the general assembly shall provide by law for the selection of the most experienced, intelligent, and upright men to serve as grand jurors, and intelligent and upright men to serve as traverse jurors, and that, nevertheless, the grand jurors shall be competent to serve as traverse jurors, the court may not fill up vacancies in the grand jury panel from which a special jury is to be selected, by calling members of the traverse jury panel.—Hamlin v. Fletcher, 64 Ga. 549.

[d] (Mo. 1881) Where one who had been accepted on the panel from which a jury was to be struck was discharged on account of sickness before completion of the panel, and his place supplied by another juror, there was no error.—State v. Baber, 74 Mo. 292.

[e] (N. Y. 1876) Rev. St. pt. 3, c. 7, tit. 4, is entitled "Of the Trial of Issues of Fact." Article 1 contains "general provisions concerning trials and the proceedings preparatory thereto." Article 2 treats "of the return and summoning of juries." Article 3 treats "of special juries," and provides by section 50 that a jury shall be formed, as thereinafter directed with respect to other juries, "from the persons summoned and appearing," who shall try the case in which the struck jury shall have been ordered, but the court shall have the same power to excuse or discharge any such juror as in other cases. Article 4 treats "of the trial and its incidents," and provides by section 53 for the trial of causes "by jurors drawn, summoned, and returned as hereinbefore directed"; that is, by common jury as provided by article 2, or by special jury as provided by article 3. Section 54 provides that whenever a sufficient number of jurors, duly drawn and summoned, do not appear or cannot be obtained, the court may order the sheriff to summon, from the bystanders or from the county at large, so many qualified persons as shall be sufficient. Article 5, § 1, provides for a trial by jurors summoned by one or the other of such processes; and section 2 declares that, "whenever a sufficient number of jurors * * * cannot be obtained, then talesmen can be summoned." Held, that under such statute the court may order the summoning of talesmen to complete the panel of a struck jury.—People v. Tweed, 50 How. Prac. 286.

[f] (Tex. 1888) Under Rev. St. arts. 3091–3094, a party to a civil cause is not entitled to insist that talesmen shall be drawn to fill the places of regular jurors for the week who are engaged in another trial, so long as 12 jurors of such panel remain.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Greenlee, 70 Tex. 553, 8 S. W. 129.

§ 374. Right to strike from panel as against talesmen.

[a] (Mo. 1895) Where the regular panel was insufficient, owing to the engagement of some of the members in another case, and the jury panel from which a jury was to be stricken had been filled up from the bystanders, and the challenges made, but not announced, and the remainder of the regular panel returned with their verdict into court, it was discretionary with the court to refuse to set aside the bystanders summoned to complete the panel in favor of the members of the regular panel just returned.—Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Durrill, 61 Mo. App. 543, 1 Mo. App. Rep'r, 429.

[b] (Tex. 1892) Where talesmen have been summoned to complete a struck jury, sworn touching their qualifications, and a list furnished, the refusal of the court to set aside the talesmen, and complete the jury with regular jurors who had just come in from another case, is not error, though such regular jurors came in before the striking of any of the talesmen.—Prince v. State (Cr. App.) 20 S. W. 582.

§ 375. Order of striking.

[a] (Ala. 1884) Under Code, § 3018, giving "either party" in a civil action the right to demand a struck jury, the right of plaintiff thereto cannot be defeated because the several defendants did not agree among themselves as to the names to be struck off, for the court may, in such case, allow each defendant to strike off a name in rotation.—Montgomery & E. Ry. Co. v. Thompson, 77 Ala. 448.

[b] (Tex. 1879) The provision of Jury Law 1876, § 22, that a copy of the list of jurors shall be handed to the prosecuting attorney, and one to the defendant's attorney, from which each may strike a number of names equal to the number of peremptory challenges allowed, does not import that the defendant is entitled to be furnished the stricken list of the state before being required to strike from his own.—Phillips v. State, 6 Tex. App. 44.

[c] (Tex. 1895) Defendant, in a murder case, was not entitled to wait until the state should make its challenges and furnish him with its list of jurors, before striking from his list.—Vernon v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 864.

§ 376. Number to be stricken off.

Effect of striking too many names, see post, § 380 [c].

Number of peremptory challenges in general, see post, §§ 607–618.

[a] (Ga. 1891) In a civil action against several defendants each is not entitled to strike the full number of jurors, but all of them must join in striking the jury.—Pool v. Gramling, 88 Ga. 653, 16 S. E. 52.

[b] (Md. 1887) Under Code, art. 50, §§ 9, 13, providing that in civil cases before a jury, and in all criminal cases not punishable by death or penitentiary confinement, the clerk shall draw 20 names from the jury box, which shall be written on two lists, and one of said lists shall be forthwith delivered "to the respective parties or their counsel in the cause, and the said parties or their counsel may each strike out 4 persons from said lists," the remaining 12 to be sworn as the trial jury, two defendants on trial jointly for such a crime are entitled to strike off only 4 names between them.—Hamlin v. State, 67 Md. 333, 10 Atl. 214, 301.

§ 377. Filling vacancies after striking.

[a] (U. S. 1797) The court has power to order a tales in special jury causes.—Anonymous, Fed. Cas. No. 443 [2 U. S. (2 Dall.) 382, 1 L. Ed. 425].

[b] (Mo. 1894) Both under the common law and under Act April 1, 1891 (Acts 1891, p. 172, § 6), providing that when a jury for the trial of a cause cannot be made up from the regular panel the judge may make and deliver to the proper officer a list of jurors sufficient to complete the panel, which jurors shall be summoned only for the trial of the particular case, the court has power to order the summoning of certain designated persons to fill vacancies on a special jury caused by absence of the jurors regularly summoned.—Barr v. City of Kansas City, 121 Mo. 22, 25 S. W. 562.

[c] (N. J. 1795) Talesmen may be summoned to fill vacancies on a special jury, though it was summoned from another county.—Lee v. Levaul, 1 N. J. Law (Coxe) 283.

[d] (Ohio, 1880) If the panel for a struck jury is exhausted, a deputy sheriff may, under direction of the court, call a bystander, although the criminal bailiff, provided for in 76 Ohio Laws, p. 54, is present, and competent to perform the service.—Hulse v. State, 35 Ohio St. 421.

[e] (Pa. 1805) Under the jury act of March 29, 1805, the court may award a tales de circumstantibus in case the jurors of a struck jury fail to appear.—Atlee v. Shaw, 4 Yeates, 236.

[f] (Pa. 1878) If a special jury be struck, and, on the trial, some of the jurors are not present, a tales should be ordered.—Carter v. Ramsey (Com. Pl.) 1 Del. Co. R. 423.

§ 378. —— Recalling juror struck off to fill vacancy.

[a] (Ala. 1890) Under Code, § 2752, providing that, where either party demands a struck jury, the sheriff shall furnish a list of 24 jurors, from which the struck jury must be obtained by the attorneys alternately striking 12 from the list, if, after the jury has been thus obtained, one of them is excused, the court cannot replace him by recalling those stricken off, but must have another jury struck from a new list.—Birmingham Union St. R. Co. v. Ralph, 92 Ala. 273, 9 South. 222.

[b] (Mich. 1846) Detroit & P. R. Co. Charter (Laws 1834, p. 44) § 11, provides for the summoning of the 18 freeholders from whom to select a jury to assess the value of lands required for railroad purposes, and that, on their attendance, each party may strike from the panel the names of 3 jurors, the remaining 12 to form the jury of inquest. Held, that the sheriff had no authority to resummon any of the jurors who had been stricken out to fill the place of one of the selected jurors discovered to be incompetent.—In re Detroit & P. R. Co., 2 Doug. 367.

§ 379. Excusing struck juror.

[a] (Ohio, 1852) It is not error to excuse a struck juror for good cause.—Stewart v. State, 1 Ohio St. 66.

§ 380. Effect of errors and irregularities.

Waiver of defects, see post, § 523.

[a] (U. S. 1830) If a special jury list has been struck by the parties before the marshal, and the list has been lost by him so that no venire had issued, the court will direct the striking anew from the same list and a venire to issue, returnable 10 days thereafter, during the term.—Hall v. Perott, Fed. Cas. No. 5,942 [Baldw. 123].

[b] (Ark. 1895) Under Sand. & H. Dig. § 4303, providing that, if either party desire a panel, the names of 24 jurors shall be placed in a box, from which 18 shall be drawn and entered upon a list, and section 4304, providing that each party shall be furnished with a copy of said list, from which each may strike the names of 3 jurors, and return the list so struck to the judge, who shall strike from the original list the names so stricken, and the first 12 names remaining on said original list shall constitute the jury, it is not reversible error for the judge to refuse to let defendant's counsel see the list of the 18 jurors called, after the plaintiff had struck 3 names, in order that he might know whom plaintiff had challenged, where, as a matter of fact, each counsel challenged different jurors.—St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Dobbins, 60 Ark. 481, 30 S. W. 887.

[c] (Ga. 1891) Where the regular number of strikes has been exceeded, and the jury is thus reduced to 11, the last man stricken should be restored to the list.—Pool v. Gramling, 88 Ga. 653, 16 S. E. 52.

[d] (N. J. 1790) Where the judge who had selected the panel from which the jury was to be struck, at the time of striking altered the list by excluding the names of certain incompetent persons who were objected to by plaintiff, his action, though improper, was not ground of challenge to the array of the jury after striking, since it in no way impeached the fitness of the jury selected.—Inskeep v. Lecony, 1 N. J. Law (Coxe) 39.

[e] (N. Y. 1879) Where irregularities have occurred in the striking of the jury, the court may set aside the order, and cause a new jury to be struck.—People v. Dillon, 17 Hun, 1.

2. PUNISHMENT FOR FAILURE TO ATTEND OR SERVE, § 383.
3. EXCUSING AND DISCHARGING JURORS FROM ATTENDANCE, §§ 384-390.

1. COMPELLING ATTENDANCE.

RIGHT TO ATTACHMENT, § 381.
LIABILITY TO ATTACHMENT, § 382.

§ 381. Right to attachment.

[a] (La.) The defendant in a criminal trial has no right to demand attachments for absent jurors, when a sufficient number to form a panel is present.—(1854) State v. Lovenstein, 9 La. Ann. 313; (1874) Same v. Shonhausen, 26 La. Ann. 421; (1880) Same v. Breaux, 32 La. Ann. 222.

[b] (La. 1856) No law authorizes defendant to move for attachments against absent jurors on the list, to bring into court a great number, when there are enough present to complete the panel. It is a matter in the judge's discretion.—State v. Ballerio, 11 La. Ann. 81.

[c] (La. 1883) Where four jurors were absent who resided 25 miles from the court house, a motion for attachments, made after going to trial, was properly refused.—State v. Farrer, 35 La. Ann. 315.

[d] (La. 1885) Refusal to grant attachments, after trial has begun, for members of the regular venire who are absent, is not error.—State v. Saunders, 37 La. Ann. 389; Same v. Washington, Id. 828.

[e] (Miss. 1894) It was not error to refuse to direct compulsory process for a special venireman who had been summoned, but did not appear; Code 1892, § 2386, requiring the jury to be impaneled merely from those "summoned and in attendance."—Hale v. State, 72 Miss. 140, 16 South. 387.

[f] (Tex. 1889) Code Cr. Proc. art. 617, provides that no capital case shall be brought to trial until the defendant shall have had one day's service of a copy of the list of the persons summoned as jurors under special venire. Article 618 provides that a person who, being summoned, fails to attend, may, on motion of defendant, be attached. Article 640 prescribes that in selecting the jury from the persons summoned their names shall be called in the order in which they appear upon the list furnished, and a person summoned, but who does not appear when the examination is begun, may, if he appears before the jury is selected, be examined and impaneled, but a cause shall not be unreasonably delayed for the absence of such person. Out of the list of 60 included in a special venire but 50 were summoned, and of these only 33 attended. Held, that it was error to proceed to select a jury from those in attendance, without first issuing process to compel the attendance of the other 17 veniremen.—Cahn v. State, 27 Tex. App. 709, 11 S. W. 723.

[g] (Tex. 1890) Code Cr. Proc. art. 618, authorizes attachment, at the instance of either party, for jurors who do not appear. Article 640 provides that "no cause shall be unreasonably delayed" for such absent jurors. Defendant demanded attachment; and, after 18 or 20 hours, the officer not having had time to execute the process, the jury was completed. Though defendant exhausted his peremptory challenges, he did not show that any juror sat on the trial against whom such cause for challenge existed as would affect his competency or impartiality. Held, that an abuse of discretion, in refusing to await the execution of the writ of attachment, was not shown.—Hudson v. State, 28 Tex. App. 323, 13 S. W. 388.

[h] (Tex. 1892) Under Code Cr. Proc. § 618, providing that on motion of either party an attachment may issue for any absent defendant summoned, where, on calling the special venire in a criminal case, four veniremen failed to appear, and it was shown that they lived so far distant that it would take several days to bring them in, the action of the court in refusing to postpone the trial and issue attachments for the absentees was not reversible error, in the absence of any showing of prejudice to defendant, since the statute is directory only, and defendant cannot unreasonably delay a trial on account of the absence of jurors.—Jackson v. State, 30 Tex. App. 664, 18 S. W. 643.

[i] (Va. 1891) Under Code, § 4019, providing that, in cases of felony, when a sufficient number of jurors to form a panel of 16 persons free from exception cannot be had from those summoned, the court may supply the deficiency by special venire or summoning talesmen, where only 16 jurors attended out of 20 ordered by the judge to be summoned, the court properly proceeded to procure other jurors on failing to complete the jury from those present, without issuing attachments for the jurors who failed to appear.—Custis v. Commonwealth, 87 Va. 589, 13 S. E. 73.

§ 382. Liability to attachment.

[a] (Tex. 1887) Accused is not entitled to an attachment for a venireman who has not been summoned.—Osborne v. State, 23 Tex. App. 431, 5 S. W. 251; Rodriguez v. Same, 23 Tex. App. 503, 5 S. W. 255.

2. PUNISHMENT FOR FAILURE TO ATTEND OR SERVE.

§ 383. Punishment for failure to attend or serve.

[a] (U. S. 1803) Where a juror is fined for failure to attend court, and at the same term comes in and offers a sufficient excuse, and the court thereupon orders the fine to be struck out, but the clerk neglects to enter such order, the court will, at the next term, on proper affidavits of the fact, order the fine to be struck out.—United States v. Smith, Fed. Cas. No. 16,324 [1 Cranch, C. C. 127].

[b] (N. J. 1838) Under Revision, p. 629, § 22, authorizing a justice of the peace to fine absent jurors "unless some reasonable cause shall be assigned," a justice of the peace may not fine such juror until after notice to appear and show cause why a fine should not be imposed has been given, though the statute makes no provision for the issue or service of such a notice, and allows no costs therefor.—State v. Hollinshead, 16 N. J. Law (1 Har.) 539.

[c] (N. J. 1838) Under a statute authorizing a justice of the peace to issue an execution against the goods and chattels of a juror, to collect a fine imposed by the justice for non-attendance, he may not issue an execution against the goods and chattels, and, in default of satisfaction, against the body of the juror.—State v. Hollinshead, 16 N. J. Law (1 Har.) 539.

[d] (N. J. 1838) A joint conviction of two or more defaulting jurors is improper.—State v. Hollinshead, 16 N. J. Law (1 Har.) 539.

[e] (N. Y. 1858) A justice of the peace has jurisdiction by statute in the matter of non-attendance of a juror, with authority to try the question and impose a fine; the nonattending juror being present and having an opportunity to be heard.—Robbins v. Gorham, 26 Barb. 586, affirmed (1862) 25 N. Y. 588.

[f] (N. Y. 1858) The justice has authority to issue a warrant to secure the presence of such a person, and has jurisdiction of his person when brought up on the warrant.—Robbins v. Gorham, 26 Barb. 586, affirmed (1862) 25 N. Y. 588.

[g] (N. Y. 1862) The validity of a conviction, under 2 Rev. St. pp. 241, 245, providing for the punishment of a defaulting juror in a justice court, is not affected by the omission of the justice to enter in his docket a minute of the conviction as made up by him.—Robbins v. Gorham, 25 N. Y. 588.

[h] (N. Y. 1862) Under 2 Rev. St. pp. 241, 245, providing a summary proceeding for the punishment of a defaulting juror in a justice court, the justice may issue a warrant to bring the offender before him without a prior summons.—Robbins v. Gorham, 25 N. Y. 588.

[i] (Va. 1885) One exempt from jury service by reason of his membership in a military company is not guilty of contempt if, having been summoned, he does not attend to make excuses.—Miller v. Commonwealth, 80 Va. 33

[a] (U. S. 1821) A juror who has a cause at issue in the circuit court of the District of Columbia, which he expects will be tried at the same term, will be discharged.—In re Claggett, Fed. Cas. No. 2,779 [2 Cranch, C. C. 247].

[b] (Ala. 1853) When a juror is summoned in a criminal case, the sickness of his family, if of such a character as to demand his personal attention, is a sufficient excuse to authorize his discharge, on application to the presiding judge.—Parsons v. State, 22 Ala. 50.

[c] (Ala. 1871) The fact that a juror, after being regularly drawn and summoned, is convicted of an assault, and is, at the time of the trial for which he is summoned, confined in jail, will not, in the absence of a statute making it a ground of discharge, authorize the court to discharge him and draw a substitute, against the objection of the accused.—Boggs v. State, 45 Ala. 30, 6 Am. Rep. 689.

[d] (Ala. 1887) Where special jurors, in addition to the regular panel, are summoned, it is not error to excuse five regular jurors without defendant's knowledge, though they were afterwards drawn on the trial jury.—Fariss v. State, 85 Ala. 1, 4 South. 679.

[e] (Cal. 1860) In a trial for murder, when the court directed the clerk to call and impanel the jury, it was objected that several jurors of the original panel, summoned for the term, had been previously excused without consent of the defendant. Held, that there was no error in overruling the objection.—People v. Lee, 17 Cal. 76.

[f] (Cal. 1867) The court may, for sufficient reason, excuse a qualified person from serving as a juror in a criminal case. This alone, when in other respects the trial is formally and properly conducted, will not be sufficient ground for a reversal.—People v. Arceo, 32 Cal. 40.

[g] (Cal. 1890) Where, before entering on the selection of a jury in a murder trial, the court granted the motion of the state that those members of the panel who had served on a jury which tried a prior murder case at the same term should be discharged from further service as jurors, on the ground that their verdict in such case was so entirely against the evidence as to show them to be unworthy to serve, a challenge to the panel on that ground was properly overruled, since, the panel not having been summoned for any particular case, or for any particular length of service, the court was entitled to discharge the whole panel, or any part thereof, for any reason which seemed to him sufficient, or for no reason.—People v. Murray, 85 Cal. 350, 24 Pac. 666.

[h] (D. C. 1891) Under Rev. St. § 874, permitting a person to be excused from service on a jury when his interests or those of the public will otherwise be materially injured, or when he is to be a party in a jury trial at that term, or where his own health or death or sickness in his family require his absence, a juror may be excused at any time before the jury is impaneled and sworn, though defendant has exhausted all his peremptory challenges.—United States v. Heath, 20 D. C. 272.

[i] (Ga. 1892) That some of the jurors drawn, but not impaneled, were excused by the court for causes not expressly provided for by the statute, is not ground for challenge to the array.—Fulton County v. Amorous, 89 Ga. 614, 16 S. E. 201.

[j] (Mass. 1829) One who has served on a grand jury within three years will be excused from serving as a traverse juror, although it is a little more than three years since he was drafted.—Ex parte Brown, 25 Mass. (8 Pick.) 504.

[k] (Mich. 1884) The court may exclude a juror who is unfitted to serve owing to the excessive use of intoxicating liquor.—Torrent v. Yager, 52 Mich. 506, 18 N. W. 239.

[l] (Miss. 1852) A circuit judge cannot, without sufficient cause, discharge one of the jurors summoned by a special venire.—Boles v. State, 24 Miss. (2 Cushm.) 445.

[m] (Mo. 1827) The court may, on the day of trial, excuse a member of the panel in a murder case, on the ground of his wife's illness.—King v. State, 1 Mo. 717.

[n] (N. J. 1893) For reasonable cause, a juror whose name is on the list of 48 names served upon the prisoner may be discharged by the court.—Aarenson v. State, 56 N. J. Law (27 Vroom) 9, 27 Atl. 937.

[o] (N. C. 1845) Jurors may be excused for a good cause when summoned to serve on a capital case.—State v. Craton, 28 N. C. 164.

[p] (S. C. 1866) Excusing a juror should always be done publicly, in open court. The time when, and the reason why, should be put in writing and left with the clerk, and the fact should be entered on the minutes.—State v. Whitman, 14 Rich. Law, 113.

§ 385. —— Discretion of court.

[a] (Ala. 1889) The discharge of two of the jurors drawn for the special venire before the case is called for trial, and in the absence of the defendant, and also of one who had been drawn for the regular panel, is impliedly authorized by the Jefferson county act (Act Feb. 11, 1889); and, if not, the discharge would involve no reversible error.—Maxwell v. State, 89 Ala. 150, 7 South. 824.

[b] (Ala. 1893) Under proviso to Act Feb. 21, 1887, § 10, that, should a juror drawn to complete the jury, after the list of those summoned and appearing has been exhausted, reside more than two miles from the court house, the court may, in its discretion, relieve him from attendance, it cannot pass over or excuse any one living at a less distance.—Ezell v. State, 102 Ala. 101, 15 South. 810.

[c] (Cal. 1896) Overruling a challenge to the panel of a special venire, based on the ground that such special venire was made necessary by the court's liberality in excusing members of the regular panel, is not ground of reversal, in the absence of a showing of an abuse of discretion in granting such excuses.—People v. Hickman, 113 Cal. 80, 45 Pac. 175.

[d] (Ga. 1892) Under a statute requiring jurors to be drawn separately for each week of a term, it is not ground of challenge to the array that the court, in its discretion, temporarily excused certain jurors at their own request, and stood them over to a later week of the term, in the absence of any showing of injury to any of the parties.—Fulton County v. Amorous, 89 Ga. 614, 16 S. E. 201.

[e] (La. 1881) A judge, in his discretion, may excuse jurors of the regular venire.—State v. Somnier, 33 La. Ann. 237.

[f] (La. 1883) Under Acts 1877, No. 44, § 7, vesting in the judge discretionary power to order the summoning of talesmen, there was no abuse of discretion in the judge's discharge of 40 talesmen, summoned for the fourth week of the term, where the regular panel of 40 jurors, drawn for that week, was in attendance; power to discharge, when apparently no longer needed, being implied in the power to summon.—State v. West, 35 La. Ann. 28.

[g] (Me. 1883) The court, in its discretion, may exclude from the panel one who is not legally disqualified to sit.—Snow v. Weeks, 75 Me. 105.

[h] (Mich. 1881) The fact that a juror in a criminal case is a witness in a case next on call warrants the judge in excusing him, since the judge may grant an excuse for any reason personal to the juror which to the judge seems sufficient.—People v. Carrier, 46 Mich. 442, 9 N. W. 487.

[i] (Mich. 1896) The court may excuse a juror, before he is sworn, for any reason personal to the juror which seems sufficient to the court, even though counsel for defendant is not present.—People v. Thacker, 108 Mich. 652, 66 N. W. 562.

[j] (Neb. 1893) Excusing a juror for cause is not ground for reversal, unless there has been an abuse of discretion.—Omaha Southern Ry. Co. v. Beeson, 36 Neb. 361, 54 N. W. 557.

[k] (N. H. 1879) Juries are organized under the discretion of the court, and, for cause, the name of a juror may be excluded before the drawing begins.—Rowell v. Boston & M. R. R., 58 N. H. 514.

[l] (N. Y. 1865) Where the judge, without cause shown, discharged 764 out of an extra panel of 1,000 jurors, it was no abuse of discretion; more than the usual number remaining, and no prejudice being shown.—People v. Ferris, 1 Abb. Prac. (N. S.) 193.

[m] (N. Y. 1888) Under Code Cr. Proc. § 358, providing that the jury shall be formed as prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure, which, by sections 34, 1058, allows the court of oyer and terminer to summon jurors when deemed necessary, and, by section 1033, allows the court to excuse a juror in its discretion, the court may discharge a panel of jurors who have served for four weeks, preparatory to summoning another panel for an adjourned term.—People v. Jackson, 111 N. Y. 362, 19 N. E. 54.

[n] (N. Y. 1892) The fact that a number of jurors are excused before adjournment of court, on Saturday, to allow of their reaching home before Sunday, that only 10 of the regular panel remain, and 2 therefore have to be taken from the bystanders, cannot be urged as an objection, so long as the jurors finally impaneled are all competent, impartial men.—Cotton v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co., 65 Hun, 625, 20 N. Y. Supp. 347.

[o] (N. C. 1893) The court may, in its discretion, excuse a juror, at his own request, as a favor to him, and before he is accepted as one of the panel.—State v. Barber, 113 N. C. 711, 18 S. E. 515.

[p] (S. C. 1866) Whether a juror shall be excused is a matter of discretion with the circuit judge.—State v. Whitman, 14 Rich. Law, 113.

[q] (Vt. 1867) No exception can be taken to the decision of the county court in excusing a juror on the ground that he is a member of a regularly organized fire engine company in the city where the court is in session.—State v. Ward, 39 Vt. 225.

§ 386. —— Conflicting public duties.

[a] (Ala. 1892) A policeman summoned as a juror may be excused by the court, under Cr. Code, § 4335, allowing the court to excuse a juror for any "reasonable or proper cause."—Pierson v. State, 99 Ala. 148, 13 South. 550.

[b] (Fla. 1889) It is not error for a court, in the exercise of a sound discretion, to excuse an assessor of taxes from jury duty, though such office constitutes neither an exemption nor a disqualification, when the interests of the public require the exercise of such discretion.—Ellis v. State, 25 Fla. 702, 6 South. 768.

[c] (Mass. 1835) A member of the legislature was properly excused from serving on a jury while the legislature was in session, though not exempt by statute.—Commonwealth v. Walton, 34 Mass. (17 Pick.) 403.

[d] (Mich. 1889) The court exercised a reasonable discretion in excusing one summoned as a juror, on the ground that service on the jury might interfere with his duties as a justice of the peace.—Michigan Condensed Milk Co. v. Wilcox, 78 Mich. 431, 44 N. W. 281.

[e] (Miss. 1894) It was a proper exercise of discretion for the court to set aside a jailer who had been summoned as a special venireman in a criminal case.—Hale v. State, 72 Miss. 140, 16 South. 387.

[f] (Ohio, 1852) That a juror summoned is postmaster is ground for excusing him from service.—Stewart v. State, 1 Ohio St. 66.

[g] (Pa. 1811) The court will excuse one from the jury if he holds a public trust that cannot be deputed. Contra, if the trust is private, or if it can be deputed.—In re Piper, 2 Browne, 59.

§ 387. Who may excuse.

[a] (N. Y. 1831) Where a sheriff or other officer is authorized to select and summon a jury, he cannot, after summoning a person to serve as a juror, discharge him from attendance, and summon another in his stead; after the juror is summoned, the court only can discharge him.—Village of Brooklyn v. Patchen, 8 Wend. 47.

§ 388. Application for excuse or discharge.

Liability of exempt person to process for contempt for failure to appear when summoned, see ante, § 383 [i].

[a] (Ala. 1853) Clay's Dig. p. 459, §§ 53–55, provide that in capital cases the prisoner shall have 20 peremptory challenges, and that the court shall order the sheriff to summon not less than 50 or more than 100 persons to serve as jurors, including the regular panel, and that the prisoner should be furnished a list of the jurors two entire days before his trial. Held, that where the list of jurors summoned under a special venire had been served on the accused, the court erred in excusing, two days before the trial, 2 of the panel so summoned, on the ground of sickness in their families, though it might have been otherwise if such jurors had appeared on the day of trial, and then requested to be excused on the same ground.—Parsons v. State, 22 Ala. 50.

[b] (Ala. 1893) The fact that a sheriff supposes or knows that a person whose name appears on the venire is exempt or disqualified as a juror does not excuse his failure to summon him; the questions of exemption and qualification being for the court.—Ezell v. State, 102 Ala. 101, 15 South. 810.

[c] (Ark. 1894) A juror may be excused for a cause made known to the judge out of court.—Vaughan v. State, 58 Ark. 353, 24 S. W. 885.

[d] (Ga. 1891) The court may excuse a juror selected, but not sworn, if he has become sick, without calling a physician to prove the sickness.—Ozburn v. State, 87 Ga. 173, 13 S. E. 247.

[e] (Ill. 1876) Proof of sickness of a juror, to warrant the court in discharging him and filling up the panel with another person, may be made by testimony of a person who is not a physician. The mere fact of sickness does not need expert testimony.—City of Shawneetown v. Mason, 82 Ill. 337, 25 Am. Dec. 321.

[f] (La. 1812) A juror irregularly summoned, may be discharged on his own motion.—In re Auzan, 2 Mart. (O. S.) 124.

[g] (Tex. 1879) The court has no power to excuse jurors summoned on a special venire until they have appeared at the time and place designated in the venire facias. The fact that on calling them in another case they had shown themselves exempt, and had given notice that they would claim the exemption in this case also, is immaterial.—Robles v. State, 5 Tex. App. 346.

[h] (Tex. 1885) Only on the most satisfactory evidence of absence from unavoidable necessity should the court excuse a juryman in his absence.—Thompson v. State, 19 Tex. App. 593.

[i] (Tex. 1894) After the jury had been impaneled, one of the jurors failed to appear, but the judge, on receiving a telegram stating that said juror was sick, excused him. Held that, there being no dispute that said juror was sick, no error was committed.—Houston City St. Ry. Co. v. Ross (Civ. App.) 28 S. W. 254.

§ 389. Liability of excused or discharged juror to recall.

See ante, § 325 [j].

[a] (Ind. 1880) It is in the power of a court to recall at any time during the same term, without summons, the regular panel of jurors, even after having discharged them.—Telford v. Wilson, 71 Ind. 555.

[b] (La. 1868) Where a juror has been excused from serving on the jury, he cannot be summoned to serve as a talesman juror in the same panel from which he was discharged.—Golding v. The Castro, 20 La. Ann. 458.

[c] (S. C. 1866) After a juror has been excused, he ceases to be a juror, and cannot be recalled.—State v. Whitman, 14 Rich. Law, 113.

[d] (Tenn. 1859) After the court has discharged a juror because of his persistent refusal to be sworn, the court has no power to recall him and force him on the prisoner, without the latter's consent.—Isaac v. State, 39 Tenn. (2 Head) 458.

[e] (Utah, 1880) After the court has once discharged jurors from service, they cannot be again placed upon the panel, except as provided in the act of congress of June 23, 1874.—Anderson v. Wasatch & J. V. R. Co., 2 Utah, 518.

§ 390. Presumption of regularity.

[a] (Ala. 1894) Where the court, on excusing, of its own motion, jurors summoned on a regular panel, whose names were on the special venire from which the jury to try defendant was to be impaneled, stated in the orders that they were excused "for reasons that seemed sufficient by the court," it will be presumed that it was for sufficient reasons; and, the contrary not being shown, it will be held that there was no error.—Moseley v. State, 107 Ala. 74, 17 South. 932.

[b] (La. 1880) In the absence of any showing why the judge excused 2 jurors of the 30 drawn for the week in which defendant was tried for murder, it will be presumed that he acted on sufficient grounds.—State v. Breaux, 32 La. Ann. 222.

[c] (Neb. 1895) It will be presumed that the court, in excusing a juror on the ground that he was a party to an action then pending in the trial court, acted advisedly as to whether the juror was such a party.—Gran v. Houston, 45 Neb. 813, 64 N. W. 245.

[d] (S. C. 1881) In the absence of any showing to the contrary, it will be presumed that the action of the court in excusing two jurors was based on affidavits, as required by statute.—State v. Gill, 14 S. C. 410.

(G) TERM OF SERVICE AND COMPENSATION.

1. TERM OF SERVICE, § 391.
2. COMPENSATION OF JURORS, §§ 392-399.

1. TERM OF SERVICE.

Fees and expenses of juror as costs in criminal cases, see "Costs," vol. 13, cc. 1081, 1082, §§ 1175, 1176.

—— of coroner's jury, see "Coroners," vol. 11, cc. 2393, 2394, §§ 26, 27.

Garnishment of fees or compensation, see "Garnishment," vol. 24, c. 2025, § 132.

§ 391. Term of service.

Liability of juror to recall after excuse or discharge, see ante, § 389.

[a] (Ga. 1860) A statute provided that "the judge of the superior court of W. county is authorized and required to draw * * * a panel of petit jurors for each week of W. superior court, so long as the same shall continue, for the space of two weeks." Held, that it was not error to retain a jury drawn one week, for service during the next week, the jurors themselves not objecting.—McAffee v. State, 31 Ga. 411.

[b] (Ga. 1875) When, at the adjournment at the regular term of a court, it is ordered that an adjourned term will be held, a jury is drawn therefor, and the adjourned term continues more than one week, it is competent for the judge to hold the jury for the second week, and it is not a good ground of challenge to the array that this is done.—Brinkley v. State, 54 Ga. 371.

[c] (Ga. 1883) Under Code, § 3938, providing that no person shall serve as juror more than four weeks in one year, held that a juror who had served four weeks in December was not disqualified from serving in the next January, though the same term was continued.—Atlanta & C. A. L. Ry. Co. v. Ray, 70 Ga. 674.

[d] (Ga. 1892) Where a statute requires jurors to be drawn separately for each week of the term, it contemplates that the jurors drawn for a given week shall be impaneled for the service of that week; but the court may, with the consent of the jurors concerned, excuse them from serving in the week for which they were drawn, and assign them for service in a succeeding week.—Fulton County v. Amorous, 89 Ga. 614, 16 S. E. 201.

[e] (Ind. 1859) A final adjournment of the court for the term operates as a legal discharge of a jury, and terminates their functions as such.—Ashbaugh v. Edgecomb, 13 Ind. 466.

[f] (Kan. 1884) A jury was regularly drawn and summoned to attend the February, 1883, term of the Butler county district court. That county was then a part of the Thirteenth judicial district, and the regular term fixed for the third Tuesday of February. Thereafter, and on February 6, 1883, a law took effect creating the Eighteenth judicial district, and assigning Butler county to that district. The first term fixed by that law thereafter commenced on the first Tuesday of May, 1883. Without any new drawing or summoning, the jury above named appeared at the May term. The act creating the Eighteenth district provided that all proceedings and processes of every kind and character, pending in any of the courts of the counties named in the law, should stand, be returnable, and triable at the first term of the court for said counties, the same as if the change therein contemplated had not been made. Held, that a challenge to the array was properly overruled.—State v. McKinney, 3 Pac. 356.

[g] (Ky. 1822) Where a jury do not return a verdict before the end of the term, the termination of the court is their discharge.—Shearer v. Clay, 11 Ky. (1 Litt.) 260.

[h] (La. 1854) In the First district court of New Orleans jurors serve by monthly terms, beginning the first Monday of each month. This custom began under Acts 1813, No. 12, § 5, in accordance with which Acts 1813, No. 53, is to be construed.—State v. Raymond, 9 La. Ann. 530.

[i] (La. 1878) Owing to the want of a proper saving clause in the jury law of April 2, 1878, the panel for Orleans parish drawn previous to that date could not serve thereafter.—State ex rel. Maurice v. Superior Dist. Ct. Judge, 30 La. Ann. 603.

[j] (Mass. 1880) Under St. 1873, c. 44, providing that "no person shall serve as a traverse juror in the county of Suffolk more than 30 days at any term of court," it is no ground for a challenge to the array that, at the time it was made, more than 30 days had elapsed since the jurors had begun to serve, if during that time the court had been in session less than 30 days.—Provident Ins. for Sav. v. Burnham, 128 Mass. 458.

[k] (S. C. 1871) The presiding judge, at the October term, 1845, of the court for Edgefield district, ordered an extra court to be holden for that district on the fourth Monday in February, 1846. In December, 1845, the legislature extended the judicial term for that district to two weeks instead of one, but omitted to provide for juries for the second week of this extended term. In January, 1846, the judge who had ordered the extra court made an order, at chambers, postponing it to the second Monday in March, which was the second week of the extended regular term. The juries for the extra court had been summoned, and the sheriff, after this order was made, notified them to attend on the second Monday in March. An indictment was found by the grand jury at the spring term, 1846, against a person for murder, and on the second week he was tried and found guilty. Held, that whether the judge had authority or not to postpone the extra court, the jurors summoned for that court could not be regarded as juries of the regular term, and consequently that the trial was illegal and the conviction void.—State v. Harden, 2 Rich. Law, 533.

Recovery as costs of fees of jurors, see "Costs," vol. 18, c. 664, §§ 698, 699.

§ 392. Fixing rate of compensation.

[a] (Ga. 1892) Under Code, § 3940, authorizing the grand jury impaneled at the fall term of the superior court to fix the compensation of jurors for the next succeeding year, when that grand jury continues to serve until the succeeding calendar year has in part expired, it may still fix such compensation; and the use of the words "for the next succeeding year" in the report on general presentments will be construed as applicable to the year touching which that particular grand jury has power to act,—the year succeeding the one in which it was impaneled.—Tanner v. Rosser, 89 Ga. 811, 15 S. E. 750.

§ 393. Right—In general.

[a] (U. S. 1819) If the verdict be below the jurisdiction of the court, the jury is not entitled to the trial fee.—Skinner v. McCaffrey, Fed. Cas. No. 12,024 [2 Cranch, C. C. 193].

[b] (Colo. 1886) A juror who attends a court at a place where there was no legal authority for holding such court is not entitled to his fees.—Coulter v. Routt County Com'rs, 9 Colo. 258, 11 Pac. 199.

[c] (Colo. 1895) A complaint in an action against county commissioners for jury fees which fails to show that in the selection of the jurors the statutory requirements were observed does not state a cause of action.—Pitkin County Com'rs v. First Nat. Bank, 6 Colo. App. 423, 40 Pac. 894.

[d] (Tenn. 1874) Compensation for services as a juror is not a common-law right, the protection which the government furnishes to persons and property compensating in part therefor.—Neely v. State, 63 Tenn. (4 Baxt.) 174.

§ 394. —— What services will be compensated.

[a] (U. S. 1849) Jurors living at a distance, and not receiving mileage during adjournments, are entitled to a per diem for those days during which the jury stands adjourned, and on which the jurors appear and answer to their names.—Parker v. Kempton, Fed. Cas. No. 10,741 [Wall. Jr. 344].

[b] (U. S. 1851) When a person is summoned as a juror, and at the same term is subpœnaed by the United States as a witness, and attends in obedience to each process, and according to the practice of the court makes affidavit of such attendance, he is entitled to compensation for each service.—Edwards v. Bond, Fed. Cas. No. 4,294 [5 McLean, 300].

[c] (Ariz. 1875) Jurors are entitled to full pay though excused from daily attendance.—Woffenden v. Pima County Sup'rs, 1 Ariz. 237, 25 Pac. 647.

[d] (Cal. 1894) Under St. 1871–72, p. 188, § 1, amending Act 1870, § 28, and providing that jurors shall receive a certain sum per diem for "attendance" upon court, a juror is not entitled to fees for the time during which he is dismissed from attendance on the court before his final discharge.—Jacobs v. Elliott, 104 Cal. 318, 37 Pac. 942.

[e] (Cal. 1895) Under Act March 1, 1872, declaring that jurors shall receive three dollars per day "for attendance upon courts of record," a juror who has been impaneled for trial of a case is not entitled to fees for days that he is excused from attendance on account of continuance of the case.—Mason v. Culbert, 108 Cal. 247, 41 Pac. 464.

[f] (Nev. 1865) Under the act of November 29, 1861, regulating fees and costs, a juror is entitled to compensation for every day's attendance upon the court, whether actually impaneled or not, except in the case of jurors in criminal trials who reside within five miles of the court house.—Thornburg v. Hermann, 1 Nev. 473.

[g] (Nev. 1886) Under the fee bill of 1883 (St. 1883, p. 62), as amended by the act of 1885 (St. 1885, p. 25), allowing jurors in criminal cases the same fees as in civil cases "provided they are accepted and sworn to try the cause," trial jurors in the regular panel are not entitled to receive from the county mileage and also per diem, where they are not sworn and do not sit at the trial of the cause.—Phillips v. Eureka County, 19 Nev. 348, 11 Pac. 32.

[h] (N. Y. 1886) Under Code, § 3315, providing for extra compensation to jurors "when the trial occupies more than 30 days," Sundays, days of adjournment, etc., are not to be counted in the 30 days.—De Wolf v. Day, 39 Hun, 484.

[i] (Or. 1893) Under Code, § 2348, allowing a juror two dollars per diem for attendance on a court of record, and providing that a talesman shall be entitled to the same, a person summoned on a special venire, who attends court in obedience to the process, is entitled to juror's fees, though he does not serve.—Bloch v. Multnomah County, 25 Or. 169, 35 Pac. 30.

[j] (Tenn. 1872) Under Code, § 4033, allowing tales jurors "no compensation unless they serve more than one day, in which case they receive the same pay for each day's service as the regular jurors," a talesman remaining undischarged for 10 days is entitled to compensation for 10 days, although not sitting at any time for 2 days consecutively.—Cannon v. Whitthorne, 54 Tenn. (7 Heisk.) 557.

§ 395. Amount.

[a] (U. S. 1808) The jurors in civil cases attending the circuit court of the United States for the district of Pennsylvania are entitled to one dollar and twenty-five cents each for each day's attendance.—Ex parte Lewis, 8 U. S. (4 Cranch) 433, 2 L. Ed. 670.

[b] (Minn. 1895) Laws 1895, c. 304, providing that all jurors in every county shall receive two dollars per day for attendance, and repealing all acts and parts of acts inconsistent therewith, repealed the special law fixing a smaller compensation for jurors in Ramsey county.—State v. Sullivan, 62 Minn. 283, 64 N. W. 813.

[c] (N. Y. 1816) Electors in the grand assize, on a writ of right, are entitled to three dollars a day for going to and returning from the court; being the same fees for attending court which are allowed to the sheriff.—Bryan v. Seely, 13 Johns. 123.

[d] (N. Y. 1841) On the execution of a commission of lunacy, the jury, who should not exceed 23 in number, are entitled to 12½ cents to each juror sworn.—In re Root, 8 Paige, 625.

[e] (N. Y. 1891) Code Civ. Proc. § 2333, provides that the jurors, on an inquisition of insanity, "are entitled to the same compensation as jurors upon the trial of an issue in an action in the same court." Section 3313 provides that "a trial juror, in an action or special proceeding in a court of record, is entitled, except as otherwise specially prescribed by statute in a particular court or a particular county, to the following fees: Twenty-five cents for each cause in which he is impaneled." Held, that the jurors on an inquisition of insanity are entitled to only 25 cents as their compensation, and they are not entitled to a per diem for each day served by them, as is allowed persons attending the same court as jurors by Code Civ. Proc. § 3314.—In re Sanford, 61 Hun, 33, 15 N. Y. Supp. 291; In re Howe, Id.

[f] (N. C. 1800) Where the same jury try ten caveats in three days for different claims to different parcels of land, the caveators being the same persons, while defendants are different persons, each juror is entitled to one day's pay, consisting of eight shillings, in each case, instead of only eight shillings for each of the three days, the statute allowing eight shillings per day in each case.—Harris v. Lenoir, 1 N. C. 304.

[g] (Pa. 1885) Act Feb. 28, 1873, fixing the pay of jurors in the commonwealth at two dollars per day, applies only to regular jurors summoned to attend upon the sessions of the courts; hence jurors in an inquisition of lunacy are entitled to but one dollar a day, as provided for by Act June 13, 1836.—Commonwealth v. Henderson, 1 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 679.

[h] (S. C. 1820) The act of 1816, allowing to a juror one dollar a day for his services, did not repeal the part of the fee bill of 1791 by which jurors were entitled to five shillings for every verdict.—Cleary v. Wells, 2 Nott & McC. 442.

[i] (Va. 1851) Under Code 1849, c. 28, § 50, jurors in criminal cases are entitled to compensation of one dollar for each day they attend on the jury.—Souther v. Commonwealth, 7 Grat. 673.

§ 396. Withholding verdict till payment of fees.

[a] (S. C. 1820) Under Act 1791, allowing jurors five shillings for each verdict, jurors may retain their verdict from the record until this fee be paid.—Cleary v. Wells, 2 Nott & McC. 442.

§ 397. Liability of state, county, or municipality—Juror's fees.

[a] (Cal. 1884) Where a party to a suit is ordered to pay the jury fees, the court has not the power to order the clerk to issue certificates for their payment out of the county treasury on the mere neglect or refusal of the party to comply with the order.—Ex parte Makinney, 3 Pac. 253.

[b] (Ill. 1881) Counties are not liable for the fees of jurors in city courts.—People v. Stookey, 98 Ill. 537.

[c] (Ill. 1891) Rev. St. 1889, c. 37, § 200, provides that the fees of jurors for the law terms of the county court shall be paid out of the county treasury, and Id. c. 53, § 44, provides that jurors shall receive fees "for their services in attending courts of record, including the county court, when sitting for or doing probate business." Held, that the fees of jurors serving in the county court at the trial of a condemnation suit in vacation should be paid out of the county treasury.—Chicago, P. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Eaton, 136 Ill. 9, 26 N. E. 575.

[d] (Me. 1880) The county, and not the city, should bear the expense of a jury and attending officer, when a jury is summoned by the county commissioners to determine the damages sustained by landowners from flowage caused by a dam erected by the city across a river.—Penobscot County v. City of Bangor, 70 Me. 497.

[e] (Mass. 1771) Under St. 4 W. & M. c. 12, authorizing justices of the quarter sessions of each county to raise money for all proper county charges, no money can be raised for an allowance to jurors for services in a criminal trial.—In re Jurors, Quincy, 882.

[f] (Mich.) Jury fees, in municipal courts of record having a seal, are payable from the county treasury.—(1877) Covell v. Kent County, 36 Mich. 332; (1879) People v. Treasurer of Wayne, 40 Mich. 62.

§ 398. —— Expenses of jurors in criminal cases.

[a] (Ark. 1861) Where jurors are locked up in a criminal case, being deprived of the privileges permitted them in civil cases, their board and lodging should be treated as a part of the expenses of the court incidental to the administration of justice, and chargeable to the county.—Bates v. Independence County, 23 Ark. 722.

[b] (Ga. 1858) A county is not liable on an account for food and lodging furnished to a jury in a criminal case at the direction of the court, and by the court ordered to be charged to the county.—Justices of Inferior Court v. State, 24 Ga. 82.

[c] (Mich. 1885) When the court, on trial of a murder case, considers it necessary to have the jury secluded, and by its order they are boarded at a hotel, the county where the case is tried will be held liable for the expense thus incurred.—Stowell v. Jackson County Sup'rs, 57 Mich. 31, 23 N. W. 557.

[d] (Mo. 1873) Board and lodging of the jury, provided in pursuance of an order of the court, are part of the costs for which the county is liable, if liable for costs at all.—Watson v. Moniteau County, 53 Mo. 133.

[e] (Mo. 1879) A county in which an indictment for murder is found cannot be made liable for the expense of boarding the petit jury who tried the case in another county.—Bright v. Pike County, 69 Mo. 519.

[f] (Mo. 1879) The expense of boarding a petit jury in the trial of a criminal case cannot be taxed against the county, in the absence of a statute providing therefor.—Bright v. Pike County, 69 Mo. 519.

[g] (Mo. 1883) Act March 8, 1883, makes the state liable for the board and lodging of a jury unable to agree on the trial of a felony and not allowed to separate. Before the passage of that act the state was not liable for the expense.—State ex rel. Allen v. Walker, 80 Mo. 610.

[h] (Mo. 1884) Act 1883, p. 80, authorizing a court to tax against a county the expenses of boarding and lodging jurors, kept together by order of court in cases of felony, does not validate any such taxation made prior to the passage of the act.—Person v. Ozark County, 82 Mo. 491.

[i] (Mo. 1884) Prior to the act of 1883, the expense of boarding and lodging juries, kept together by order of the court, in cases of felony, was not a proper item of costs.—Person v. Ozark County, 82 Mo. 491.

[j] (N. C. 1877) Under Battle's Revisal, c. 105, § 23, providing that the pay of jurors is whatever the county commissioners shall allow, not exceeding $1.50 per day, the county is not liable for the board of a jury in a capital case during pendency of the trial.—Young v. Buncombe County Com'rs, 76 N. C. 316.

[k] (Ohio, 1850) Courts have power to provide at the expense of the county for the maintenance and care of juries in criminal cases.—State v. Armstrong, 19 Ohio, 116.

[l] (Pa. 1838) The county is liable for the expenses of boarding and lodging a jury impaneled and kept together in a capital case.—Commissioners v. Hall, 7 Watts, 290.

§ 399. Certificates of service.

Fees of clerk, for certificates of attendance, see "Clerks of Courts," vol. 10, cc. 109, 110, § 56.

—— of United States court for certifying fees, see "Clerks of Courts," vol. 10, cc. 135, 136, § 80.

[a] (Ohio, 1880) The clerk of a police court, in issuing jurors' certificates of service, is

(A) COMPETENCY FOR TRIAL OF ISSUES IN GENERAL.

IN GENERAL, § 400.
STATUTORY PROVISIONS, § 401.
WITNESS IN CAUSE, § 402.
OFFICIAL POSITION, § 403.
SPECIAL OR STRUCK JURY, § 404.
DISCRETION OF COURT, § 405.
REMOVAL OF DISQUALIFICATION, § 406.

§ 400. In general.

[a] (Mo. 1894) The fact that one summoned as a juror in a homicide case, on his examination touching his qualifications as a juror in a prior homicide case, showed himself to be incompetent to serve in that case, does not render him incompetent in the case at bar.—State v. Fairlamb, 121 Mo. 137, 25 S. W. 895.

[b] (Pa. 1829) It is a good cause of challenge that a juror has acted as arbitrator in a cause.—Lloyd v. Nourse, 2 Rawle, 49.

[c] (Pa. 1853) It is good cause for challenging a juror who has been already chosen, but not sworn, that he grossly misbehaved himself as a juror on a former occasion, declaring that he had tried to acquit every one whom the judge desired to convict, and would as lief swear on a spelling book as on a Bible, because he was a Tom Paine man.—McFadden v. Commonwealth, 23 Pa. (11 Harris) 12, 62 Am. Dec. 308.

§ 401. Statutory provisions.

[a] (Ga. 1856) All criminal cases must be tried under the act of 1856, relating to the qualifications of jurors, whether the offense was committed before or after that statute was enacted.—Reid v. State, 20 Ga. 681.

[b] (Ind. 1885) The fact that the statute enumerates grounds which will disqualify a juror does not preclude a rejection on other grounds.—Block v. State, 100 Ind. 357.

[c] (La. 1831) The Code of Practice does not repeal Acts 1825, No. 14, by which, when a corporation, public or religious, is a party, its members are good jurors.—City of New Orleans v. Ripley, 2 La. 344.

[d] (Ohio, 1884) Act March 18, 1884 (Rev. St. § 727), which provides that, if a juror has formed or expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused, the court shall proceed to examine such juror, and if he shall say that he can render an impartial verdict notwithstanding such opinion, and the court is satisfied that such juror will render an impartial verdict on the evidence, it may admit him as competent to serve in such case, was applicable to a prosecution for murder, though the crime was committed before the passage of the act.—Palmer v. State (D. C.) 12 Wkly. Law Bul. 258.

§ 402. Witness in cause.

Permitting juror to testify in cause as infringing right, see ante, § 221 [b].

[a] A juror is not incompetent because he is a witness in the case.
—(Ala. 1870) Bell v. State, 44 Ala. 393;
(La. 1840) Rondeau v. New Orleans Improvement & Banking Co., 15 La. 160;
(Tex. 1887) East Line & R. R. R. Co. v. Brinker, 68 Tex. 500, 3 S. W. 99.

[b] (Ala. 1877) It is error not to allow defendant's challenges for cause to jurors summoned as talesmen who have been subpœnaed and sworn as witnesses for the state.—Atkins v. State, 60 Ala. 45.

[c] (Ala. 1895) A juror summoned as a witness both by the prosecution and the accused may be challenged for cause.—Baldwin v. State, 111 Ala. 11, 20 South. 528.

[d] (Me. 1828) The mere fact that a juror was a witness against the defendant on a former trial of the case does not render him incompetent.—In re Fellows, 5 Me. (5 Greenl.) 333.

[e] (Mo. 1884) A juror who has testified for the state on a motion for a change of venue on the ground of local prejudice, in regard to the state of feeling of the neighborhood toward defendant, is not thereby disqualified to sit as a juror on the trial of the defendant for murder.—State v. Wisdom, 84 Mo. 177.

[f] (N. Y. 1887) The fact that a juror was subpœnaed as a witness in the case, and paid his fees as such, does not disqualify him, where he was not sworn on the trial, and had no knowledge of the facts and questions in controversy.—Rankin v. Nelson, 10 N. Y. St. Rep. 337.

[g] (N. C. 1898) It is sufficient ground on which to challenge a juror that he is attending court in the expectation of being called as a witness for the opposite party, the danger of bias not being removed by showing that he expects to testify only as to the character of a defendant charged with felony.—State v. Barber, 113 N. C. 711, 18 S. E. 515.

[h] (Pa. 1838) It is a principal cause of challenge that a juror has been summoned as a witness by the prisoner.—Commonwealth v. Joliffe, 7 Watts, 585.

[i] (S. C. 1892) In a prosecution for larceny, where it was alleged that the money was taken from a certain mining camp, there was no error in allowing one of the jurors trying the case to testify that the mining camp was within the county alleged, and then take part in the verdict.—State v. Vari, 35 S. C. 175, 14 S. E. 392.

[j] (Tex. 1895) The fact that one who has no knowledge of any facts bearing on a material issue in a criminal case has been summoned as a witness will not disqualify him as juror on challenge, under Code Cr. Proc. art. 636, subd. 6, making the fact that one is a witness in a case a challenge for cause against him as a juror.—Seals v. State, 35 Tex. Cr. R. 138, 32 S. W. 545.

§ 403. Official position.

Pecuniary interest, see post, § 407 [e].

Relationship to person in official position, see post, § 416 [g].

[a] (Ind. 1886) The bailiff of a grand jury is not on that account disqualified from acting as a juror on the trial of an indictment returned by them, unless it appears that he was present or knew something of their deliberations in regard to the case.—Spittorff v. State, 108 Ind. 171, 8 N. E. 911.

[b] (Me. 1846) A judge of a town court is not, by reason of holding that office, rendered incompetent to serve as a juror in the supreme judicial court.—Page v. Lewis, 26 Me. (13 Shep.) 360.

[c] (Mass. 1885) A member of the common council of Boston is not eligible as a juror in suits in which that city is a party, since the common council is a branch of the municipal government, and the municipal government has authority and control over all suits prosecuted by or against the city.—City of Boston v. Baldwin, 139 Mass. 315, 1 N. E. 417.

[d] (Pa. 1889) Under Act April 16, 1840 (P. L. 411), which declares that "no person shall be excluded from being a juror in any suit * * * in which any county, city, incorporated district, borough, or township is a party or is interested, by reason of such person being or having been an officer, rated citizen, or inhabitant of such county, city," etc., it is reversible error to exclude a juror on the sole ground that he is a member of the select council of the defendant city.—City of Scranton v. Gore, 124 Pa. 595, 17 Atl. 144, 23 Wkly. Notes Cas. 419.

[e] (Pa. 1895) In an action against a city on a claim which had been presented to the city councils and rejected as not being a valid claim, members of the councils are properly excluded from the jury.—Lancaster County v. City of Lancaster, 170 Pa. 108, 32 Atl. 567.

[f] (R. I. 1889) The fact that one, as constable, is specially charged with enforcing the liquor law, does not disqualify him from acting as a juror on a trial for keeping a liquor nuisance in another precinct.—State v. Cosgrove, 16 R. I. 411, 16 Atl. 900.

[g] (Va. 1891) The persons filling the offices of treasurer and councilman of a city are not disqualified to serve in the hustings court thereof, in a criminal case.—Thompson v. Commonwealth, 88 Va. 45, 13 S. E. 304.

§ 404. Special or struck jury.

[a] (Tenn. 1874) The law, in its provision for a special jury, contemplates the selection of men with reference to their superior competency and fitness to try and determine the particular issues involved in the case, and not with reference to their relation to the parties, as being or not being of their race or color.—City of Nashville v. Sheperd, 62 Tenn. (3 Baxt.) 373.

§ 405. Discretion of court.

As to examination of jurors, see post, § 562.

[a] (Ala. 1884) A motion on behalf of defendant to set aside as a juror the officer before whom defendant's preliminary examination was had, on his own statement that he had not recognized defendant, and that he had a fixed opinion, which would bias his verdict, is addressed to the discretion of the court, where it appears that the officer was summoned as a regular juror, and accepted without objection, after examination by the court in the presence of defendant.—Henry v. State, 77 Ala. 75.

[b] (Conn. 1860) One of the jurors who sat on the case was a second cousin, by blood, of the prisoner. The prisoner relied upon insanity as his defense, and attempted to show that insanity was hereditary in his family, and that there was a constitutional tendency to it in the common relatives of the juror and himself. Held, that the relationship of the juror, in these circumstances, while it might be a proper matter for the consideration of the court, in the exercise of its discretion, was not to be regarded as a positive disqualification of the juror.—State v. Andrews, 29 Conn. 100, 76 Am. Dec. 593.

[c] (Ind. 1860) If a person called as a juror is challenged for cause, the court, after hearing the examination, etc., should exercise a sound legal discretion in determining his competency.—Bradford v. State, 15 Ind. 347.

[d] (Ind. 1883) Under Rev. St. 1881, § 1793, it is within the discretion of the trial court to permit a person called as a juror in a criminal case to act, though he has formed an opinion based only on rumor or newspaper statements.—Stout v. State, 90 Ind. 1.

[e] (Iowa, 1862) Under clause 2, § 3039 of the Revision, if the court, in the exercise of a sound discretion, is brought to the conclusion that a challenged juror will not act with entire impartiality, the challenge should be sustained.—Davenport Gaslight & Coke Co. v. City of Davenport, 13 Iowa, 229.

[f] (Iowa, 1866) In an action to which an incorporated city is a party, the court has the discretion to admit on the jury taxpayers of such city.—Dively v. City of Cedar Falls, 21 Iowa, 565.

[g] (Iowa, 1889) Code 1873, § 4405, subd. 11, provides that a challenge for cause may be made where the juror has formed or expressed such an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner as would prevent him from rendering a true verdict upon the evidence submitted at the trial. Held, that the question whether an opinion formed by a juror, from reading evidence upon the trial of another defendant for the same offense, would prevent his rendering a true verdict upon the evidence in the subsequent trial is for the discretion of the trial court, under section 4409, declaring that "in all challenges the court shall determine the law and the fact."—State v. Munchrath, 78 Iowa, 268, 43 N. W. 211.

[h] (Miss. 1853) It is the duty of the court to see that a competent, fair, and impartial jury is impaneled, and nothing can interfere with this duty but the right of the parties of peremptory challenge, or of challenge for cause good and sufficient in law, to be judged of by the court.—McCarty v. State, 26 Miss. (4 Cushm.) 299.

[i] (Mo. 1887) In an action to recover damages under the statute for causing the death of a person, the competency of a juror who testified that he had no prejudice against this particular case, but that he was opposed to personal damage cases generally, but that, if the evidence showed that the plaintiffs were entitled to damages, then he would be in favor of awarding them, is a question for the determination of the trial court in the exercise of its discretion.—McCarthy v. Cass Avenue & Fair Grounds Ry. Co., 92 Mo. 536, 4 S. W. 516.

[j] (Mo. 1892) The fact that a juror was consulting engineer of the defendant street railway company, and had a prejudice in general against personal injury suits, such as that on trial, is not enough to show error in the trial court in overruling a challenge for cause, since such court has discretion as to grounds of challenge not covered by statute.—Coppersmith v. Mound City Ry. Co., 51 Mo. App. 357.

[k] (Nev. 1895) The allowance of a challege to a juror is a matter within the discretion of the court.—State v. Vaughan, 22 Nev. 285, 39 Pac. 733.

[l] (N. H. 1891) Lndependently of, as well as under, Act 1754 (Prov. Laws 1771, p. 191, § 3), providing that on motion of either party a juror shall be required to answer whether he has given his opinion, or is sensible of any prejudice in the cause, and, if it shall appear that such juror is not indifferent in the cause, he shall stand aside, the fact that a juror has formed an opinion is ground for challenge to the favor only and the question whether the juror is indifferent is one of fact for the trial court.—State v. Sawtelle, 66 N. H. 488, 32 Atl. 831.

[m] (Ohio, 1876) If a juror has formed or expressed an opinion in relation to a portion of the facts embraced in the issue, but not upon the whole issue, and, otherwise, stands indifferent between the parties, the allowance or refusal of the challenge is within the discretion of the court.—Dew v. McDivitt, 31 Ohio St. 139.

[n] (Ohio, 1884) The trial court may, in its discretion, overrule a challenge to a juror, where the juror stated that he worked for the defendant whenever he was sent for, and that he was not on the pay roll, and not then employed by the defendant, where such disclosure was volunteered in answer to a general question put to the whole jury.—Thompson v. Cleveland, C., C. & I. Ry. Co., 9 Ohio Dec. 209, 11 Wkly. Law Bul. 211.

[o] (Okl. 1894) It is not necessarily an abuse of discretion to sustain a challenge to a juror who has formed an opinion based on rumors or newspaper reports, when he states that he will render a fair and impartial verdict, though St. 1890, § 5466, provides that such an opinion shall not disqualify a juror.—Bradford v. Territory, 2 Okl. 228, 37 Pac. 1061.

§ 406. Removal of disqualification.

[a] (Md. 1844) Where it was discovered during the trial that the defendant in an action of ejectment had conveyed his lands to A., who died intestate, and that one of the jurors was brother and heir at law to A., the court permitted the juror to execute a deed of reconveyance and release to the defendant, and then declared him competent.—Isaac v. Clarke, 2 Gill, 1.

[b] (Mich. 1879) One's disqualification as a juror, arising from his having given his note to a party, cannot be removed by stipulation between the parties.—Michigan A. L. Ry. Co. v. Barnes, 40 Mich. 383.

(B) PECUNIARY INTEREST.

Removal of disqualification, see ante, § 406 [a].
Waiver of objections, see post, § 508.

§ 407. In general.

[a] (Conn. 1792) Judgment will be arrested if one of the jurors was interested in the question in controversy, and the verdict is in favor of his interest.—Talmadge v. Northrop, 1 Root, 454.

[b] (Fla. 1884) A holder of municipal bonds is an incompetent juror to try a case involving the liability of the municipality on other bonds of the same issue.—Jefferson County v. Lewis, 20 Fla. 980.

[c] (Ga. 1884) The appellate court will grant a new trial to one convicted of murder, where it appears that one of the jurors had stated that if he got on the jury he would hang the accused, as there was big money in it for him, and that he had been induced by threats of the prosecuting attorney to swear to an affidavit exculpating himself from having made such statements.—Doyal v. State, 73 Ga. 72.

[d] (Ga. 1886) The petitioners for a new road over the land of another are, when objected to, incompetent jurors to pass on the question of damages between the county and the landowner.—Almand v. Rockdale County, 78 Ga. 199.

[e] (Ind. 1888) One employed by the sheriff to serve subpœnas in a prosecution is incompetent as a juror, since the sheriff, not being entitled to fees for serving such subpœnas unless the accused is convicted, is pecuniarily interested.—Zimmerman v. State, 115 Ind. 129, 17 N. E. 258.

[f] (Iowa, 1882) One who has a bet on the result of an election, and has agreed that the bet shall depend on the result of an election case, is incompetent to sit as a juror in the case; and it is immaterial how small the bet may be.—Seaton v. Swem, 58 Iowa, 41, 11 N. W. 726.

[g] (Mass. 1831) It is good ground of challenge to a juror that the same facts which will warrant a verdict for the plaintiff in the suit will support an action on the trustee statute against the defendant, on a judgment against the plaintiff which has been assigned to the juror.—Davis v. Allen, 28 Mass. (11 Pick.) 466, 22 Am. Dec. 386.

[h] (Mass. 1851) In a proceeding against a city or town to assess damages occasioned to adjoining land by the raising or lowering of a highway, a person who, though not residing in the city or town, has a claim against the respondents of like character to that in controversy, and feels himself aggrieved and injured by the alteration in question, is not competent to sit on the jury.—Flagg v. City of Worcester, 62 Mass. (8 Cush.) 69.

[i] (Ohio, 1860) A trustee of a township which ordered an election, at which election he was again elected a trustee thereof, is not an incompetent juror on the trial of an indictment for illegal voting, if no question touching the validity of the juror's proceedings as trustee, or his re-election, came before the jury.—State v. McGinly, 2 Ohio Dec. 398.

[j] (Pa. 1825) A juror not interested in the suit, nor in land where the title depends on the principles to be settled in the suit, is not liable to challenge on the ground that he is interested in another tract held by the plaintiff under the same title as the one in question.—Gratz v. Benner, 13 Serg. & R. 110.

[k] (S. C. 1792) The smallest degree of interest is a decisive objection to a juror.—Lynch v. Horry, 1 Bay, 229.

[l] (Va. 1886) A venireman is properly discharged in a murder case if he has made a bet on the result of the trial.—Cluverius v. Commonwealth, 81 Va. 787.

§ 408. Surety or bail.

In other cause pending, see post, § 434 [m].
Relationship to surety, see post, § 416 [n].

[a] (Ala. 1880) A person who is security on the appearance bond of one charged with an offense is not competent to serve as a juror on his trial.—Brazleton v. State, 66 Ala. 96.

[b] (Ark. 1861) The plaintiffs in a suit for freedom were hired out by the sheriff, under an order of court, and a bond was taken by him under Gould's Dig. c. 75, § 8, for their appearance and hire. Held, that a surety on the bond was not incompetent as a juror in the suit, as the plaintiffs were to be returned, and the hire paid, whatever the issue of the suit.—Daniel v. Guy, 23 Ark. 50.

[c] (Ga. 1879) Where an accused is at large on bail at the time of the trial, his bail is an incompetent juror to try him, if objected to by the state, since it is a ground of challenge for cause.—Anderson v. State, 63 Ga. 675.

[d] (Ill. 1844) The fact that one of the jurors is security for costs in the suit is good cause for challenge.—Bradshaw v. Hubbard, 6 Ill. (1 Gilman) 390.

[e] (Miss. 1840) It is good cause for excluding a juror from the jury that he is surety of one of the parties for a debt not in controversy, which party is insolvent, and that the person considers himself unfit to sit upon the jury.—Ferriday v. Selser, 5 Miss. (4 How.) 506.

[f] (N. Y. 1823) It is a good objection to a talesman who is called as a juror that he is bail for the prisoner's appearance.—People v. McCollister, 1 Wheeler, Cr. Cas. 391.

[g] (S. C. 1887) Under Gen. St. § 2261, providing that "if it appears to the court that the juror is not indifferent in the cause he shall be placed aside, * * * and another shall be called," when, upon the trial of a joint indictment for murder, it appears to the circuit judge, from the fact that the juror in question is surety on the recognizance of one of the defendants, that the juror is not indifferent in the cause, it is his duty to reject the juror, and have another called in his place.—State v. Prater, 26 S. C. 198, 613, 2 S. E. 108.

[h] (Vt. 1803) It is a good cause of challenge to a petit juror, in a civil cause, that he has been recoguized as surety for the plaintiff's costs, though since discharged from recognizance; and although he may have remained on the panel, by consent of parties, yet this shall not conclude him from challenge on a reimpaneling of the jury to try the issue.—Phelps v. Hall, 2 Tyler, 399.

§ 409. Membership in association for prosecution of offenses.

Not involving pecuniary interest, see post, § 433.

[a] (Ind. 1858) That a juror is one of a committee who caused the defendant to be arrested for the offense to be tried, without a warrant, and may be liable to contribute to defend an action for malicious prosecution therefor, is good cause of challenge.—Fleming v. State, 11 Ind. 234; Pierson v. Same, Id. 341.

[b] (La. 1896) The members of an association to aid in the prosecution of a particular class of offenses, and those who contribute money for the purposes of the organization, are not competent jurors to try indictments for that class of offenses.—State v. Moore, 48 La. Ann. 380, 19 South. 285.

[c] (Mass. 1855) The members of any association of men, combining for the purpose of enforcing or withstanding the execution of a particular law, and binding themselves to contribute money for that purpose, are incompetent to sit as jurors on the trial of an indictment for violating that law.—Commonwealth v. Eagan, 70 Mass. (4 Gray) 18.

[d] (Mass. 1856) Members of an association to prosecute offenses against certain laws, who have each, by subscribing a certain sum to the funds of the association, rendered themselves liable to pay, to the extent of their subscriptions, their proportion of expenses incurred in such prosecutions, are not incompetent to sit as jurors on the trial of such a prosecution commenced by the agent of the association, and carried on at its expense, if it does not appear but that they have paid their subscriptions before this prosecution was commenced.—Commonwealth v. O'Neil, 72 Mass. (6 Gray) 343.

[e] (Mass. 1886) A member of the law and order league (a voluntary association, formed for the enforcement of the law against the illegal sale of intoxicating liquor, and the prosecution of liquor sellers) is incompetent to sit as a juror upon the trial of a complaint charging the defendant with maintaining a liquor nuisance where the complainant is an agent of the league, and employed by it to carry out the purposes for which it is formed.—Commonwealth v. Moore, 143 Mass. 136, 9 N. E. 25.

[f] (N. Y. 1892) Persons in a community who contribute to a fund for the prevention of illegal sales of intoxicating liquors are incompetent as jurors in an action to recover penalties for such illegal sales.—Jackson v. Sandman, 64 Hun, 634, 18 N. Y. Supp. 894; Same v. Claudio, Id.; Same v. De Grief, Id.; Same v. McMillan, Id.

[g] (R. I. 1885) Contribution of money for the prosecution of persons generally charged with maintaining liquor nuisances does not render the contributor incompetent as a juror on the trial of such a prosecution.—State v. Hoxsie, 15 R. I. 1, 22 Atl. 1059, 2 Am. St. Rep. 838.

[h] (Tex. 1882) Subscribers to a general fund to secure counsel for the prosecution of a defendant are not private prosecutors within the statute incapacitating such persons from serving on the jury trying the case.—Heacock v. State, 13 Tex. App. 97.

§ 410. Member or stockholder in association or corporation.

Relationship to stockholder, see post, § 416 [a, f].

Repeal of statute, see ante, § 401 [c].

Where not involving pecuniary interest, see post, § 433.

[a] (Ala. 1861) The society of Free Masons being a purely charitable corporation in its financial policy, a member of a subordinate lodge is a competent juror in an action in which the grand lodge is a party.—Burdine v. Grand Lodge of Alabama, 37 Ala. 478.

[b] (Mass. 1809) A remote and small corporate interest is no legal objection to a juror's trying a cause, if, by the necessary construction of the law on the subject, the cause could not otherwise be tried.—Commonwealth v. Ryan, 5 Mass. 90.

[c] (Mass. 1849) The same persons being summoned as jurors to assess the damages severally sustained by two railroad corporations for the taking of their lands lying contiguous to each other by a third railroad corporation for the road of the latter, it was held to be no objection to the competency of one of the jurors to sit as such in the cause first tried that he was a stockholder in the other corporation petitioning, whose cause was to be tried immediately afterwards.—Commonwealth v. Boston & M. R. Co., 57 Mass. (3 Cush.) 25.

[d] (Nev. 1867) Under the act of 1862, providing for the formation of corporations, and making stockholders personally liable for their portion of all debts contracted while members of the corporation, one who was a stockholder when a suit was commenced is disqualified to act as a juror in the case.—Fleeson v. Savage Silver Min. Co., 3 Nev. 157.

[e] (N. H. 1850) A stockholder in a railroad company is disqualified to sit as juror in a cause wherein the company in which he owns stock is pecuniarily interested to any amount.—Page v. Contoocook Val. R. Co., 21 N. H. (1 Fost.) 438.

[f] (N. Y. 1826) In an action against the keeper of a turnpike gate, for the penalty imposed by the act relative to turnpike companies for shutting the gate and taking or demanding toll after the commissioners of inspection have ordered it to be opened, a stockholder of the company is not disqualified to serve on the jury; the company not being responsible in any event on account of the recovery.—Williams v. Smith, 6 Cow. 166.

[g] (N. C. 1829) It is no cause of challenge that a juror and one of the parties are stockholders in the same company, not in any way concerned in the action.—Brittain v. Allen, 13 N. C. 120.

[h] (Tenn. 1871) In actions between the trustees of different religious denominations, involving the right of possession of lands, the members of each denomination are, by reason of interest, incompetent to act as jurors.—Cleage v. Hyden, 53 Tenn. (6 Heisk.) 73.

§ 411. Citizen or taxpayer of municipality.

Discretion of court, see ante, §§ 405 [f], 525 [b].

In case of evenly balanced evidence, see post, § 436 [f].

Infringement of right to trial by jury, see ante, § 228 [i, l–n].

Officer, see ante, § 403.

Omission of names of taxpayers in drawing jury in action against city, see ante, § 355 [c].

Relationship to citizen or taxpayer, see post, § 416 [b, d, e].

[a] A resident and taxpayer of a city is incompetent as a juror in an action wherein the city is interested, and where a verdict against the city would impose additional burdens upon all the taxpaying residents thereof.

—(Del. 1889) Robinson v. City of Wilmington, 8 Houst. 409, 32 Atl. 347;
(Iowa, 1875) Cramer v. City of Burlington, 42 Iowa, 315;
(Kan. 1878) Gibson v. Wyandotte, 20 Kan. 156;
(N. Y. 1873) Diveny v. City of Elmira, 51 N. Y. 506;

(Tex. 1896) Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Bishop (Civ. App.) 34 S. W. 328.

[b] A taxpayer of a municipal corporation is not a competent juror in an action against the municipality.

—(Iowa, 1885) McGinty v. City of Keokuk, 66 Iowa, 725, 24 N. W. 506;
(Mo. 1876) Fulweiler v. City of St. Louis, 61 Mo. 479;
(Or. 1874) City of Portland v. Kamm, 5 Or. 362.

[c] In a suit in which a town is a party interested, the citizens of such town are not competent jurors.

—(Ga. 1872) Johnson v. City of Americus, 46 Ga. 80; (1882) City of Cartersville v. Lyon, 69 Ga. 577; (Mo. 1848) Eberle v. St. Louis Public Schools, 11 Mo. 247.

[d] Jurors are not disqualified by their interest as inhabitants of a town or province from sitting in a civil action brought by it to recover money due it.

—(Mass. 1762) Province of Massachusetts Bay v. Paxton, Quincy, 548.

CONTRA, see
(Ill. 1839) Russell v. Hamilton, 3 Ill. (2 Scam.) 56.

[e] (U. S. 1808) Citizens of a municipality are not competent jurors in an action of debt by the municipality for a penalty under a by-law or ordinance thereof, where such penalty inures to the benefit of the municipality.—Alexandria v. Brockett, Fed. Cas. No. 181 [1 Cranch, C. C. 505].

[f] (Colo. 1892) Civ. Code 1887, c. 13, provides that the interest of a juror as a member or citizen of a municipal corporation shall not be made the subject of a challenge. Gen. Laws 1877, § 9 (Mills' Ann. St. § 1723), relating to the trial of condemnation proceedings, provides that the same right of challenge exists therein as in all other civil cases. Held, that in the trial of such proceedings, instituted by a town, a juror was not subject to challenge on the ground that he was a resident of such town.—Warner v. Town of Gunnison, 2 Colo. App. 430, 31 Pac. 238.

[g] (Conn. 1863) An owner of land and taxpayer of the town was disqualified to sit as juror in an action against the town for an injury from a defective highway.—Bailey v. Town of Trumbull, 31 Conn. 581.

[h] (Ga. 1849) The citizens of an incorporated city who are liable to be taxed for the payment of the verdict are incompetent to sit as special jurors, on the trial of a cause in which the city council are defendants.—City of Columbus v. Goetchius, 7 Ga. 139.

[i] (Ga. 1852) Citizens of a county are competent as jurors to try an issue made on an execution issued against the tax collector and his sureties for the county taxes, not collected and paid over according to law.—Bassett v. Governor, 11 Ga. 207.

[j] (Ga. 1854) Where the interest of the citizens of a county in the event of a suit is of the same kind which the citizens of a county have in the result of an indictment for an offense punishable by fine, they are not disqualified, by such interest, to serve as jurors in that suit.—Justices of Inferior Court of Pike County v. Giffin & W. P. Plank Road Co., 15 Ga. 39.

[k] (Ga. 1879) In a suit relating to land which had been conveyed by a county treasurer to his sureties to cover a defalcation for which the sureties were liable, and which conveyance was attacked by the mother of the treasurer, other citizens of the county had no such interest as to disqualify them as jurors.—Phipps v. Mansfield, 62 Ga. 209.

[l] (Ind.) In an action against a city to recover damages for injury occasioned by a badly constructed sidewalk which the city negligently allowed to be out of repair, held that, by the common law and under the statutes, the fact that a juror was a citizen and taxpayer of the city afforded sufficient cause for his challenge by the plaintiff.—(1875) Hearn v. City of Greensburgh, 51 Ind. 119; (1883) Town of Albion v. Hetrick, 90 Ind. 545, 46 Am. Rep. 230.

[m] (Ind. 1878) The fact that a proposed juror, in an action brought by the city for the violation of a city ordinance, is a taxpayer in the city, does not render him incompetent.—Williams v. City of Warsaw, 60 Ind. 457.

[n] (Ind. 1889) In an action against a city for personal injuries caused by a defective street, it is a good cause for challenge of a juror that he resides in the city, and pays taxes on personal property therein.—City of Goshen v. England, 119 Ind. 368, 21 N. E. 977.

[o] (Iowa, 1883) In an action against a city, defendant has no right to challenge a juror on the ground that, though a resident, he is not a taxpayer.—Hollenbeck v. City of Marshalltown, 62 Iowa, 21, 17 N. W. 155.

[p] (Iowa, 1887) In a suit against a municipal corporation, it is good ground of challenge by plaintiff that the juror is a taxpayer of the corporation; and the fact that he is a nonresident does not remove the disqualification.—Kendall v. City of Albia, 73 Iowa, 241, 34 N. W. 833.

[q] (Iowa, 1887) The fact that one called as a juror in a litigation in which the city is a party is a taxpayer in the city is no ground for challenge by the city.—Conklin v. City of Keokuk, 73 Iowa, 343, 35 N. W. 444.

[r] (Mich. 1895) How. Ann. St. § 466, providing that, in a trial in which a county is interested, the electors and inhabitants of the county shall be competent jurors, does not deprive the party opposed to the county of a trial by an impartial jury, as their interest as taxpayers is too remote to influence their conduct.—Smith v. German Ins. Co., 107 Mich. 270, 65 N. W. 236, 30 L. R. A. 368.

[s] (Mo. 1860) The inhabitants of St. Louis are competent as jurors in a case in which the board of direction of the public schools of that city is a party.—Fine v. St. Louis Public Schools, 30 Mo. 166.

[t] (Mo. 1860) Where the city of St. Louis is interested in the case, the jurors to try it should be summoned by special venire from that portion of the county outside of the city limits.—Fine v. St. Louis Public Schools, 30 Mo. 166.

[u] (Mo. 1879) The city of St. Louis is included within the meaning of the words "any county" in Wag. St. § 7, whereby its taxpaying citizens are competent as jurors in a case where the city is a party.—O'Brien v. Vulcan Iron Works, 7 Mo. App. 257.

[v] (N. J.) In a suit brought by the board of chosen freeholders of a county against a late county collector and his sureties on his official bond, it is not a good ground of principal challenge to the polls that the jurors are inhabitants of the county, and the owners of land and other taxable property therein.—(1845) Peck v. Freeholders of Essex County, 20 N. J. Law (Spencer) 457, reversed (1847) 21 N. J. Law (1 Zab.) 656.

[w] (N. Y. 1807) In an action qui tam to recover a penalty, one moiety of which would go, by statute, to the poor of the town where the offense was committed, it is good cause of challenge against the jury that they are inhabitants of that town.—Wood v. Stoddard, 2 Johns. 194.

[x] (N. Y. 1886) In an action against the city of Troy, a citizen is qualified to sit as a juror by its charter (section 16, c. 1, Laws 1816).—Hildreth v. City of Troy, 101 N. Y. 234, 4 N. E. 559.

[y] (R. I. 1874) In an action against a city for damages sustained owing to its neglect to keep one of its streets safe for public travel, taxpayers of the city are disqualified by interest, at common law and also by Gen. St. c. 189, §§ 1, 2, to serve as jurors in the cause.—Watson v. Tripp, 11 R. I. 98, 33 Am. Rep. 420.

§ 412. —— Criminal prosecutions.

Rejection on court's own motion, see post, § 525 [d].

[a] (Ga. 1859) The citizens of the county are competent to try an indictment for burning the county jail.—Phillips v. State, 29 Ga. 105.

[b] (Ga. 1883) Where an attorney was employed by a city council to prosecute the murderer of a policeman, residents within the corporate limits are not disqualified as jurors because they are liable to taxation for attorney's fees.—Doyal v. State, 70 Ga. 134.

[c] (Iowa, 1877) Residence in the city does not disqualify a person to sit upon a trial for violation of a city ordinance.—State v. Wells, 46 Iowa, 662.

[d] (Me. 1849) On the trial of an indictment for maliciously secreting a book of town records, an inhabitant of the town is not a competent juror.—State v. Williams, 30 Me. (17 Shep.) 484.

[e] (Mass. 1861) An inhabitant of the same town with a complainant who has instituted proceedings under St. 1859, c. 239, relating to the bastardy process, is incompetent to sit as a juror in the trial of the case.—Hawes v. Gustin, 84 Mass. (2 Allen) 402.

Requiring jurors to stand aside, see post, § 501 [u].
Waiver of objections, see post, § 509.

§ 413. Relationship to party or person interested.

[a] (Conn. 1787) The same degree of relationship between a juror and a party as would by statute exclude a judge from sitting in a cause is sufficient ground for arrest of judgment.—Woodbridge v. Raymond, Kirby, 279.

[b] (Ga. 1895) It will not prevent a new trial, for the juror, who was disqualified because akin to the prosecutor, to assert that he did not know of the relationship until after the trial.—Ledford v. State, 75 Ga. 856.

[c] (Ga. 1895) Jurors alleged to have been of kin to the prosecutor, who were not related to him either by consanguinity or affinity, were not disqualified.—Keener v. State, 97 Ga. 388, 24 S. E. 28.

[d] (Iowa, 1885) A juror, having stated that his son was married to defendant's daughter, was challenged and excluded. Held, that although he was not disqualified on the ground of consanguinity or affinity, under Code 1873, § 2772, subd. 4, the relationship stated justified his exclusion on the ground of prejudice.—Wisehart v. Deitz, 67 Iowa, 121, 24 N. W. 752.

[e] (N. Y. 1847) By the common law, it is a good cause of challenge to a juror, that he is of kin to either of the parties, by consanguinity or affinity within the ninth degree.—Paddock v. Wells, 2 Barb. Ch. 331.

[f] (N. C. 1853) The relationship of a juror to the prisoner, whether by consanguinity or marriage, is a good cause of principal challenge on the part of the state, but such relationship must be within the ninth degree.—State v. Perry, 44 N. C. 330.

[g] (Pa. 1852) The relationship of a juror to the plaintiff, in a suit by an administrator, is a good ground of challenge.—Balsbaugh v. Frazer, 19 Pa. (7 Harris) 95.

[h] (Tenn. 1883) A verdict of manslaughter will be reversed, if a juror related to the defendant within the prohibited degree has been passed as competent.—Parrish v. State, 80 Tenn. (12 Lea) 655.

[i] (Vt. 1839) Affinity or consanguinity within the fourth degree, reckoned according to the civil law, disqualifies a juror.—Churchill v. Churchill, 12 Vt. 661.

§ 414. Relationship to party by affinity.

See ante, § 413.
Terminated by death, see post, § 418.

[a] (U. S. 1830) The court will not grant a new trial because one of the jurors was brother-in-law of the plaintiff.—Orme v. Pratt, Fed. Cas. No. 10,578 [4 Cranch, C. C. 124].

[b] (Colo. 1888) Where a juror states that the plaintiff is a sister-in-law of his brother, he should be excused.—Buddee v. Spangler, 12 Colo. 216, 20 Pac. 760.

[c] (Del. 1841) Kindred by affinity is a cause of challenge to a juror.—Armstrong v. Timmans, 3 Har. 342.

[d] (Ga. 1872) A juror who married the widow of the prosecutor's uncle is not, on that account, an incompetent juror.—Oneal v. State, 47 Ga. 229.

[e] (Ga. 1883) Where the wife of a juror and the wife of the propounder of a will both had the same great-grandfather, the juror was incompetent to sit.—McKinney v. McKinney, 72 Ga. 80.

[f] (Ga. 1892) Since marriage relates a husband to his wife's kindred, but does not relate any of his kindred to hers, a man whose brother married defendant's sister is not incompetent as a juror to try defendant for an offense.—Burns v. State, 89 Ga. 527, 15 S. E. 748.

[g] (Ga. 1893) The fact that a juror's grand-uncle married the grandmother of the prosecutor establishes no relationship, either by blood or marriage, between the juror and the prosecutor, where it appears that the latter was not a descendant of that marriage.—McDuffie v. State, 90 Ga. 786, 17 S. E. 105.

[h] (Ga. 1893) A juror is not incompetent to try a case because his stepdaughter married plaintiff's brother.—Central R. & Banking Co. of Georgia v. Roberts, 91 Ga. 513, 18 S. E. 315.

[i] (Ind. 1851) The fact that a juror is related to one of the parties by marriage with his niece is a sufficient cause of challenge.—Trullinger v. Webb, 3 Ind. 198.

[j] (Ind. 1894) A juror whose wife's mother is a first cousin of the mother of defendant's wife is not incompetent.—Tegarden v. Phillips (App.) 39 N. E. 212.

[k] (Ind. 1894) Under Rev. St. 1894, § 240, par. 11 (Rev. St. 1881, § 240, par. 11), providing that when a person is required to be disinterested in acting on any question affecting other parties, "consanguinity or affinity within the sixth degree, inclusive, by the civil-law rules, or within the degree of second cousins, inclusive, shall disqualify such person from acting except by consent of parties," one whose wife is a second cousin of defendant's wife is related to defendant by affinity within the prohibited degree, and hence disqualified to serve as a juror.—Tegarden v. Phillips (App.) 39 N. E. 212.

[l] (Ind. 1895) Husbands whose wives are second cousins are not related by affinity, and one of them is not disqualified as a juror in an action to which the other is a party, under Rev. St. 1894, § 240 (Rev. St. 1881, § 240), prohibiting a person from serving as a juror in a case where he is related to a party by affinity within a certain degree.—Tegarden v. Phillips, 14 Ind. App. 27, 42 N. E. 549.

[m] (Me. 1850) A person related to a party to a suit by affinity in the fourth degree, according to the rules of the civil law, cannot act as a juror in such suit.—Hardy v. Sprowle, 32 Me. 310.

[n] (Me. 1854) A juror is not disqualified by his brother's being the husband of the sister of one of the parties.—Chase v. Jennings, 38 Me. 44.

[o] (N. J. 1794) A juror who married the daughter of a brother of a party is disqualified from serving.—Hinchman v. Clark, 1 N. J. Law (Coxe) 446.

[p] (Pa. 1835) It is no cause of principal challenge that the juror's sister is the wife of the nephew of one of the parties.—Rank v. Shewey, 4 Watts, 218.

[q] (S. C. 1882) It is no disqualification that a juror is the husband of a third cousin of defendant.—Todd v. Gray, 16 S. C. 635.

[r] (Tex. 1880) The fact that the wives of two brothers of a party to a civil action were the sister and the niece of a juror trying the cause, held not to disqualify him.—Johnson v. Richardson, 52 Tex. 481.

§ 415. Relationship to party by consanguinity.

See ante, § 413.
Discretion of court, see ante, § 405 [b].

[a] (Fla. 1860) A person summoned as a juror in a criminal case who states in voir dire that he is related by blood to the prisoner, and that he thinks he is not so nearly related as second cousin, but that he may be a third cousin, is incompetent as a juror.—O'Connor v. State, 9 Fla. 215.

[b] (Ga. 1873) A juror who is a cousin of one of the defendants is incompetent to sit on the trial of the cause.—Rust v. Shackleford, 47 Ga. 538.

[c] (Ga. 1885) In a criminal case, a third cousin of the prosecutor is disqualified to sit as a juror.—Ledford v. State, 75 Ga. 856.

[d] (Mo. 1881) Under Rev. St. 1879, § 1894, excluding all persons of kin to prosecutor or defendant from the jury, held that one who stated that "his father was second cousin to defendant's mother" was properly excluded from the jury.—State v. Walton, 74 Mo. 270.

[e] (N. Y. 1891) Under Code Cr. Proc. § 377, making consanguinity to the complainant within the ninth degree a good cause for challenge in criminal prosecutions, one is not competent as a juror who is a third cousin to the complainant, for third cousins are related in the eighth degree.—People v. Clark, 62 Hun, 84, 16 N. Y. Supp. 473, 695.

[f] (Ohio, 1894) A second cousin, once removed, of a certain person, is not a kin of such person by consanguinity or affinity within the fourth degree, so as to render a juror subject to challenge.—Kahn v. Reedy, 8 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 345.

[g] (S. C. 1895) It is not error to reject a juror when he and plaintiff are fourth cousins, and their wives first cousins.—Sims v. Jones, 43 S. C. 91, 20 S. E. 905.

[h] (Tex. 1895) In trespass to try title against a tenant and grantees of his lessor, where such tenant disclaims, but still has a claim for improvements, which both plaintiffs and defendants have agreed to pay in case of success, a brother of such tenant is incompetent as a juror.—Davidson v. Wallingford (Civ. App.) 30 S. W. 286.

§ 416. Relationship to persons interested but not parties.

Influence on verdict, see post, § 422 [c].

[a] (U. S. 1807) In an action against an insurance company, a nephew of a stockholder is not a competent juror.—Young v. Marine Ins. Co., Fed. Cas. No. 18,163 [1 Cranch, C. C. 452].

[b] (Conn. 1791) Judgment in favor of a town will not be arrested because some of the jurors were related to some of the inhabitants of the town.—Carew v. Howard, 1 Root, 323.

[c] (Conn. 1797) Judgment will not be arrested on motion of the defendant because one of the jurymen was nephew to a creditor in a foreign attachment served upon the plaintiff.—Starr v. Tracy, 2 Root, 528.

[d] (Conn. 1859) Relationship on the part of one of the jurors, in a proceeding for the reassessment of damages for land taken for a highway, to a resident and taxpayer of the town which is the defendant in the highway petition, is not a disqualification of such juror.—Pettis v. Town of Pomfret, 28 Conn. 566.

[e] (Conn. 1872) Where a bastardy complaint was prosecuted by, and in the name of, the mother of the child, without the advice of, or any consultation with, the authorities of the town, except that her counsel requested the selectmen to give bonds for the prosecution of the suit, one of whom gave such bond, but individually, in his own name, the town could not be regarded as legally interested in such proceeding, so as to disqualify a juror who was related to a taxpayer of the town.—Manion v. Flynn, 39 Conn. 330.

[f] (Ga. 1878) The son of a stockholder is incompetent as a juror in a case to which the corporation is a party.—Georgia R. Co. v. Hart, 60 Ga. 550.

[g] (Ga. 1878) On trial of an indictment for homicide, the nephew of a county commissioner who has aided the prosecution by employing counsel and performing other acts not within the legal function of the office is not a competent juror.—Dumas v. State, 62 Ga. 58.

[h] (Ga. 1887) An action was brought by a city to recover the amount of damages it had been obliged to pay on a judgment rendered against it for personal injuries resulting from the defendant's negligence in excavating the public street adjacent to his building. The husband of the party who recovered in the suit against the city was one of the panel from which the jury was drawn. He was objected to on the ground that his wife would be a witness in the case. Held, that the juror was not incompetent, on account of the relationship, to sit in the case.—Faith v. City of Atlanta, 78 Ga. 779, 4 S. E. 3.

[i] (Ind. 1892) In a proceeding to establish a highway, that a juror was related to the wife of one of the landowners whose land was assessed, but who was not a party to the proceedings before the board or to the appeal to the circuit court, is no reason for setting aside the verdict.—Fulton v. Cummings, 132 Ind. 453, 30 N. E. 949.

[j] (La. 1878) A statement by the defendant's counsel, made in a criminal case after the jury is impaneled, that he will impeach a certain witness for the state, may sometimes be a ground for excusing a juror who is a brother of such witness.—State v. Christian, 30 La. Ann. 367.

[k] (Miss. 1884) The court properly set aside a juror in a criminal case who was a cousin of one indicted for the same offense as defendant.—Smith v. State, 61 Miss. 754.

[l] (N. H. 1849) In an action against a sheriff for the act of his deputy, who has been released and has been admitted to testify on the trial, the father of the deputy may properly serve as a juror, not having been prejudiced in the cause.—Seavy v. Dearborn, 19 N. H. 351.

[m] (N. C. 1847) On an indictment of a slave for murder, it is good cause of challenge of a juror, on the part of the government, that he is nearly related to the owner of the slave.—State v. Anthony, 29 N. C. 234.

[n] (N. C. 1859) It is good cause of challenge to a person tendered as a juror in a civil case that he is the son-in-law of one who is the surety for the prosecution of the suit, and where the relation is admitted or found, it is purely a question of law.—Sehorn v. Williams, 51 N. C. 575.

[o] (N. C. 1879) On a prosecution of a jailer for negligently allowing the escape of prisoners, it was proper to reject a juror related to the escaped prisoners.—State v. Baldwin, 80 N. C. 390.

[p] (N. C. 1888) A juror related to the prisoner's wife in the ninth degree is disqualified, on objection by the state for cause.—State v. Potts, 100 N. C. 457, 6 S. E. 657.

[q] (Tex. 1882) Upon defendant's trial for stealing A.'s horse, a juror, after defendant had exhausted his peremptory challenges, was forced upon him, against his objection, who was related within the prohibited degree to B., whose horse defendant, by another indictment, was charged with stealing at the same time and place. Held, that the juror should have been rejected.—Wright v. State, 12 Tex. App. 163.

§ 417. Relationship to persons injured by commission of offense.

[a] (Ala. 1889) In a murder case the fact that one is a cousin of deceased's step-father does not render him incompetent as a juror.—Kirby v. State, 89 Ala. 63, 8 South. 110.

[b] (Tenn. 1850) One called as a juror in a case of murder stated that the sons of his wife by a former husband were second cousins to the deceased, and that his wife was still living. Held, that the juror was not akin to the deceased, and was a competent juror.—Moses v. State, 30 Tenn. (11 Humph.) 232.

[c] (Tex. 1886) Second cousins are related to each other within the third degree; and under Code Cr. Proc. art. 636, subd. 10, disqualifying as jurors those related within the third degree to the person injured by the commission of the offense, a second cousin of the owner of the stolen property is disqualified to sit as a juror on the trial of one charged with the larceny.—Page v. State, 22 Tex. App. 551, 3 S. W. 745.

[d] (Tex. 1889) The brother-in-law of a person from whom cattle were stolen is not a competent juror on the trial of one for the theft, under Code Cr. Proc. art. 636, subd. 10.—Powers v. State, 27 Tex. App. 700, 11 S. W. 646.

[e] (Va. 1853) On trial for arson, the fact that a juror is a nephew of the deceased wife of the person whose house was burned, if she left children, is a cause of principal challenge.—Jaques v. Commonwealth, 10 Grat. 690.

§ 418. Relationship terminated by death or otherwise.

[a] (Conn. 1807) A juror who had married the sister of a party in another case depending on the same principles, though his wife was then dead, was excused from sitting on the trial.—Bank v. Hart, 3 Day, 491.

[b] (Ind. 1858) In an action by a widow, there being issue alive, a juror who would have been incompetent during the life of the husband, by reason of the fact that plaintiff's first husband was a brother of the juror's wife, is still incompetent.—Dearmond v. Dearmond, 10 Ind. 191.

[c] (Mass. 1886) The fact that an uncle of plaintiff married an aunt of the juror, and that two uncles of the juror married aunts of the plaintiff, but that each marriage had been dissolved by the death of one of the parties, and there were no issue of the marriage, does not disqualify the juror from acting as such.—Bigelow v. Sprague, 140 Mass. 425, 5 N. E. 144.

[d] (N. Y. 1827) That a juror's father had married the widow of the defendant's brother, the father being dead at the time of the trial, is not a ground of principal challenge by the plaintiff.—Cain v. Ingham, 7 Cow. 478.

[e] (N. C. 1843) A juror was challenged for cause, and it appeared that his wife was cousin to the prisoner's former wife, who was now dead, leaving no children. Held, that this was no cause of challenge; the affinity having ceased at her death.—State v. Shaw, 25 N. C. 532.

§ 419. Relationship to attorney or counsel.

[a] (Ga. 1879) Where plaintiff's attorneys are to receive part of the money recovered as fees, their relatives are incompetent as jurors.—Melson v. Dickson, 63 Ga. 682, 36 Am. Rep. 128.

[b] (Ga. 1884) A second cousin of an attorney for plaintiff, who has a fee conditional on recovery, is not a competent juror.—Crockett v. McLendon, 73 Ga. 85.

[c] (Mich. 1888) That a juror, in a criminal case, is an own cousin of the prosecuting attorney within the second degree of consanguinity, does not avoid the judgment.—People v. Waller, 70 Mich. 237, 38 N. W. 261.

[d] (Mo. 1877) A juror in a criminal case is not rendered incompetent by the fact that he is the father-in-law of the prosecuting attorney.—State v. Jones, 64 Mo. 391.

[e] (Mont. 1895) A juror who has not on his voir dire shown himself disqualified, under Pen. Code 1895, § 2048, by implied or actual bias, is not disqualified, under section 2046, by the fact that he is a brother-in-law of the prosecuting attorney.—State v. Cadotte, 17 Mont. 315, 42 Pac. 857.

[f] (Pa. 1827) It is no cause of challenge to a juryman that he is brother of the counsel of one of the opposite party.—Pipher v. Lodge, 16 Serg. & R. 214.

[g] (Pa. 1863) It is not ground of challenge for cause that the juror challenged is a brother-in-law of one of the counsel concerned in the cause.—Funk v. Ely, 45 Pa. (9 Wright) 444.

§ 420. Business connection or transactions with party.

Discretion of court, see ante, § 405 [j, n].
Extent of examination, see post, § 569 [m].
In case of evenly balanced evidence, see post, § 436 [b].
Influence on verdict, see post, § 422.
Removal of disqualification, see ante, § 406 [b].
Sufficiency of jurors' answers to questions propounded, see post, § 582 [j].

[a] An employé of a railroad company is an incompetent juror to try an action to which the company is a party.
—(Ga. 1879) Central R. Co. v. Mitchell, 63 Ga. 173;
(Neb. 1884) Burnett v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 16 Neb. 332, 20 N. W. 280.

[b] (Ala. 1888) There is no error in disallowing plaintiff's challenge of a juror who was the servant of a defendant in another action of the same kind, brought by plaintiff and involving the same issues; but these facts are sufficient to support a challenge for favor, the effect of which would be an inquiry by the court as to whether the jury is biased in point of fact.—Calhoun v. Hannon, 87 Ala. 277, 6 South. 291.

[c] (Colo. 1885) One who has business relations with a party indicted jointly with defendant for a crime is incompetent to act as juror.—Minich v. People, 8 Colo. 440, 9 Pac. 4.

[d] (Colo. 1890) Where a juror in an action of replevin is shown to be a clerk in the employ of a firm on intimate relations with one of the parties in interest, and which became their bondsmen upon the instrument which secured them in possession of the property in controversy, he is properly excused.—Hill v. Corcoran, 15 Colo. 270, 25 Pac. 171.

[e] (Conn. 1846) The relation of landlord and tenant between a juror and the bondsman for the prosecution of the suit is not a disqualification of such juror.—Brown v. Wheeler, 18 Conn. 199.

[f] (Miss. 1879) One who is in the service of another as a clerk is incompetent as a juror on the trial of a case wherein his employer is defendant.—Hubbard v. Rutledge, 57 Miss. 7.

[g] (Miss. 1887) The fact that a juror is in the employment of the defendant disqualifies him.—Louisville, N. O. & T. Ry. Co. v. Mask, 64 Miss. 738, 2 South. 360.

[h] (N. Y. 1857) It has always been considered a principal ground of challenge to a juror that he is the tenant of either party. The act of the legislature, abolishing the landlord's right to distrain the goods of his tenant for rent, has not removed this ground of challenge.—Hathaway v. Helmer, 25 Barb. 29.

[i] (N. Y. 1896) It is not reversible error to reject a juror because he was connected with a corporation which manufactured articles for a company of which defendant was a member.—Laidlaw v. Sage, 2 App. Div. 374, 37 N. Y. Supp. 770.

[j] (Pa. 1827) A tenant who holds from year to year as a cropper cannot serve on a jury in a suit in which his landlord is a party.—Pipher v. Lodge, 16 Serg. & R. 214.

[k] (Pa. 1839) It is a good cause of challenge that a juror is tenant of one of the parties.—Harrisburg Bank v. Forster, 8 Watts, 304.

[l] (Pa. 1843) In an action of ejectment by the heirs at law of an insolvent debtor, the executor of a deceased person is not a competent juror, and may be challenged for that cause.—Smull v. Jones, 6 Watts. & S. 122.

[m] (Pa. 1866) A principal challenge to a juror propter affectum is not supported by evidence that the juror lodges at his own expense, temporarily, with the defendant, who is an innkeeper.—Cummings v. Gann, 52 Pa. (2 P. F. Smith) 484.

[n] (Tex. 1887) One who had been in a party's employ a year before is not thereby disqualified to sit as a juror in the case.—East Line & R. R. R. Co. v. Brinker, 68 Tex. 500, 3 S. W. 99.

[o] (Tex. 1895) In an action against a bank, the court may allow plaintiff to ask a veniremen if he is indebted to the bank.—Davis v. Panhandle Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 29 S. W. 926.

[p] (Wash. 1891) Code, § 212, subd. 2, provides that a person standing in the relation of master to the adverse party may be challenged as a juror in civil cases, and section 1078 provides that the law relating to the selection of jurors in civil cases shall apply also to criminal cases. Held, in a trial for murder, that a former master of decedent is disqualified as a juror.—State v. Coella, 3 Wash. St. 99, 28 Pac. 28.

[q] (W. Va. 1891) A juror should not be excluded in a civil case merely because he is indebted to defendant, in the absence of any showing that he is by reason thereof at the mercy of defendant, or that he has been treated with such indulgence as to make him favor him.—Thompson v. Douglass, 35 W. Va. 337, 13 S. E. 1015.

§ 421. Business connection or transactions with attorney.

Extent of examination of juror, see post, § 563 [h].

[a] (Colo. 1890) That a person called as a juror is acquainted with the attorney of one of the parties to the suit, and had employed him at one time to do certain legal business, is not sufficient ground upon which to base a challenge for cause.—Fairbanks v. Irwin, 15 Colo. 366, 25 Pac. 701.

[b] (Ga. 1889) A juror who lodges, as a paying boarder, in the house of an attorney at law during court week, up to the call of a criminal case in which the attorney is counsel for the prosecution, is not, on that account alone, absolutely disqualified to serve as a juror in such case.—Statham v. State, 84 Ga. 17, 10 S. E. 493.

[c] (Ind. 1885) The fact that the statute enumerates grounds which will disqualify a juror does not preclude a rejection on other grounds, as, for instance, that the juror is the deputy of the prosecuting attorney.—Block v. State, 100 Ind. 357.

[d] (Ind. 1892) The fact that a person who is an insurance agent has his office in the rooms occupied by an attorney does not disqualify him to sit as a juror in a case in which the attorney is interested, where there is no other connection between them.—State v. Taylor, 5 Ind. App. 29, 31 N. E. 543.

[e] (N. H. 1879) A juror is not disqualified because counsel in the case is also the prosecuting counsel of the city in which the juror lives; the counsel being paid by the city for his services.—O'Connor v. Bucklin, 59 N. H. 589.

[f] (N. Y. 1888) Under Code Cr. Proc. § 377, enumerating causes of challenge for implied bias, among which is the relation of client and attorney between the juror and an attorney engaged in the trial of the cause, and limiting the causes of challenge for implied bias to the enumerated cases; and section 376, defining actual bias as the existence of a state of mind on the part of a juror which satisfies the court that he cannot impartially try the case,—the exclusion of a juror because he was acquainted with one of defendant's counsel, and had advised with him on an occasion not connected with the cause on trial, is error.—People v. McQuade, 110 N. Y. 284, 18 N. E. 156, 1 L. R. A. 273.

§ 422. Influence on verdict.

Bias and prejudice, see post, § 437.
Formation and expression of opinion, see post, §§ 461–479.
Presumptions and burden of proof, see post, § 584 [h].
Sufficiency of juror's answers to questions propounded, see post, § 582 [g].

[a] (Mo. 1891) Three or four days before the trial defendant negotiated with one juror for a team of mules, and with another for employment in defendant's business. The mule trade was consummated during the trial, and a fair price was paid. The jurors were strangers to defendant, did not know he had a case in court, or that they would be called as jurors therein, and defendant had no reason to believe his case would be tried that term. In the evening of the day before the verdict defendant invited two of his friends to partake of some oysters, and, on the suggestion of some one in a crowd standing near, defendant invited them all to join. Among these was the juror whom defendant had agreed to employ, but he was not aware of this. During the progress of the meal another juror came in, and by all the party, except defendant, was asked to partake of the treat, which he did, and defendant paid the bill for the entire party. There was nothing to show that the jurors were influenced by any of these matters, or that the evidence did not justify the verdict. Held, a new trial was properly refused.—Kennedy v. Holladay, 105 Mo. 24, 16 S. W. 688.

[b] (Neb. 1893) In an action against a railroad company, a juror stated on his voir dire that he was engaged in buying and shipping grain over the railroad; that he had received favors from the company, and desired to retain its favorable consideration; but that he had no personal feeling in the matter, and could render an impartial verdict. Held, that a challenge for cause was properly sustained.—Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Cook, 37 Neb. 435, 55 N. W. 943.

[c] (N. H. 1849) Where a juror upon the panel, on an appeal from an award by the railroad commissioners of damages for land taken for a railroad, was the son of another appellant, and, upon his examination as to his impartiality, denied that he was sensible of any bias, but was excluded because, without any further testimony, it appeared to the court that he had strong feelings in relation to the case, it was not erroneous.—March v. Portsmouth & C. R. R., 19 N. H. 372.

[d] (Wis. 1891) A juror who states on the voir dire that he does not know defendant, and that he has no feeling or prejudice, is qualified, notwithstanding it is shown that defendant, acting as constable, had, years before, served him with legal processes,—a fact that the juror had forgotten.—Carthaus v. State, 78 Wis. 560, 47 N. W. 629.

NATURE OF PRIOR SERVICE IN GENERAL, § 423.
REJECTION AT FORMER TRIAL, § 424.
SERVICE IN SAME CAUSE, § 425.
—— MEMBER OF GRAND JURY FINDING INDICTMENT, § 426.
—— EFFECT OF DISCHARGE BEFORE VERDICT, § 427.
SERVICE IN SIMILAR CAUSE, § 428.
—— OFFENSES BY SAME DEFENDANT, § 429.
—— SIMILAR OFFENSES BY PERSONS OTHER THAN DEFENDANT, § 430.

Hearing evidence at trial, see post, §§ 458–460.
Prior service in other cause, see ante, §§ 259, 326, 341, 391 [a].
Rejection from panel of juror who served at former trial, see ante, § 283 [k].
—— on court's own motion, see post, § 529.
Sufficiency of juror's answer to interrogatories, see post, § 582 [a].
Time to challenge or object, see post, § 558 [d, g, j, t, w].
Waiver of objections, see post, § 510.

§ 423. Nature of prior service in general.

[a] (Conn. 1786) It is not sufficient cause for an arrest of judgment that a jury who tried the cause also sat upon the trial of the same cause in the court below.—Bellows v. Williams, Kirby, 166.

[b] (Tex. 1880) Rev. St. art. 3012, subd. 5, disqualifying as a juror "any person who has sat as a petit juror in a former trial of the same case, or of another case involving the same question of fact," applies to criminal as well as civil cases.—Dunn v. State, 7 Tex. App. 600; Jacobs v. Same, 9 Tex. App. 278; Willis v. Same, Id. 297.

§ 424. Rejection at former trial.

[a] A juror is not rendered incompetent by the mere fact that he was on the panel and was peremptorily challenged by the accused on a former trial.
—(Ga. 1888) Blackman v. State, 80 Ga. 785, 7 S. E. 626;
(Tenn. 1880) Robertson v. State, 72 Tenn. (4 Lea) 425;
(Tex. 1890) Nalley v. State, 28 Tex. App. 387, 13 S. W. 670.

[b] (Ga. 1837) It is not good ground for challenge for cause, that the juror offered was challenged peremptorily when offered at a former trial of the prisoner, in the same indictment, and at the same term.—State v. Henley, R. M. Charlt. 505.

[c] (Mich. 1878) That a juror has already been peremptorily challenged upon the trial of another prisoner for the same crime is no ground for a challenge for cause of said juror.—Cargen v. People, 39 Mich. 549.

[d] (Mo. 1888) It is not ground of objection to a juror that he was summoned on a previous panel ordered by the regular judge, who did not try the case, because of prejudice subsequently alleged against him; nor that he was summoned on the trial of a codefendant, and was then challenged peremptorily.—State v. Mathews, 98 Mo. 119, 10 S. W. 30, 11 S. W. 1136; Same v. Walker, 98 Mo. 135, 11 S. W. 727.

[e] (N. Y. 1876) The fact that a juror on a struck jury was stricken from a list made in a previous trial between the same parties does not render him incompetent to try the issues in the subsequent trial.—People v. Tweed, 50 How. Prac. 280.

[f] (Tenn. 1833) No juror who has been once challenged can be again summoned in that cause.—Garner v. State, 13 Tenn. (5 Yerg.) 160.

[g] (Tex. 1877) On the trial of a criminal action, it is no ground for challenging jurors impaneled that they were peremptorily challenged by the defendant at a former trial, unless they evince bias on their voir dire against defendant on account of such challenge.—Wilson v. State, 3 Tex. App. 63.

[h] (Tex. 1895) The mere fact that a juror had been challenged peremptorily on a former trial is not ground for a challenge for cause on the second trial.—Easterwood v. State, 34 Tex. Cr. R. 400, 31 S. W. 294.

[i] (Va. 1850) Where a prisoner was indicted for advising two slaves to abscond, and on the first trial a person summoned as juror was stricken from the panel by the prisoner, this was held to be no valid objection to his sitting on the second trial.—Smith v. Commonwealth, 7 Grat. 593.

§ 425. Service in same cause.

Influence on verdict, see post, § 470.

[a] (La. 1825) Either party who discovers during the trial that a juror had served on the first trial may demand that another be substituted.—Henry v. Cuvillier, 3 Mart. (N. S.) 524.

[b] (N. C. 1794) A juror who tried the cause below cannot try it again on appeal.—Kaighn v. Kennedy, 1 N. C. 60.

[c] (Va. 1841) A juror who has been sworn and served upon an inquest of damages is not competent to be sworn and serve upon a new jury to try and decide the same matter.—Hunter v. Matthews, 12 Leigh, 228.

§ 426. —— Member of grand jury finding indictment.

Discharge by court pending trial, see post, § 537.

For other offense against same defendant, see post, § 429 [b].

On grand jury not finding indictment, see ante, § 259 [e].

[a] One who served as grand juror on the finding of an indictment is incompetent to serve as petit juror on trial of the offense.
